THE BOER WAR IN S. A. IS OVER PEACE PROCLAIMED ON SATURDAY

The Welcome News Received in London with Great Enthusiasm---Monday Proclaimed a Public Holiday in Many Canadian Towns and Cities

A despatch was received by the Times, yesterday afternoon announcing that Peace had been proclaimed in South Africa. The different Churches were notified and suitable reference was made by the different ministers at the services. The despatch read as follows:

LONDON, JUNE 1ST—An Official Cable from Lord Kitchener, dated from Pretoria at 11 p.m., Saturday Evening, states that a document containing terms of surrender was signed at 10:30 p m. by all the Boer Representatives as well as by Lord Kitchener and Milner.

London, June 1.—A definite announcement of peace in South Africa was received from Lord Kitchener at the War office this afternoon. When it was announced old London went frantic with excitement. Such a celebration has never occurred in the history of the city. The mass of people that throng the streets make it impossible to move about. The people are so wild with excitement that they are almost uncontrolable.

Numerous peace dinners have been arranged by nearly all the aristocracy of the city.

How Toronto Received the News.

Toronto, June 1.—The news was received in Toronto with great rejoicing. The fire bells and church bells rang, and the boat whistles from the Bay told of the good news of Peace. Monday has been proclaimed a holiday for the school children and quite likely a public holiday will be proclaimed.

How it was Received in Montreal.

Montreal, June 1.—In Montreal the city went wild with excitement; bells rang whistles blew, and people thronged the streets; processions were formed, and paraded until a late hour this morning.

1.30 o'clock a.m.

London, June 1.—An official telegram from Lord Kitchener, dated Pretoria, Saturday, May 31st, 11.15 p.m. says: "A document containing terms of surrender was signed here this p.m. at half past ten o'clock by all the Boer representatives, as well as by Lord Milner (The British High Commissioner in South Africa) and myself."

The news of peace in South Africa contained in the foreign despatch from Lord Kitchener was not expected in London. Soon after the receipt of the despatch, however, the news spread to the clubs and hotels and was received with much enthusiasm. The church bells were rung to acclaim the good news. A crowd gathered at the Monoren House and the Lord Mayor of London, Sir Joseph. C. Dimsdale's announcement of peace was announced from balcony that terms of surrender has been signed in South Africa. Lord Kitchener's definite announcement of peace was received at the War Office at 1 o'clock this afternoon and was communicated to King Edward and all the members of the Cabinet before it was given out to the public. Tonight the Sunday evening calm of London street was broken by enthusiastic singing, shouting, and horn blowing. The hotels, clubs, the public houses and the streets were not the only places where people were actively demonstrating their joy. The peace news was announced in churches today and by some congregations it was received with applause. In all the churches of London prayers of thanksgiving were offered and special hymns were sung.

Bulletin.

Pretoria, June 1.—A proclamation which was issued yesterday in connection with the signing of peace terms last night, declares notwithstanding the proclamation of Mr. Kruger that interest on the bonds of the Transvaal Republic would be suspended so long as the war las's such interest shall begin to accrue June 1st.

GOVERNMENT MAJORITY REMAINS AT FOUR

But Official Returns in a Few Days May Increase or Diminish This

The returns which have been received since Saturday from a number of constituencies have caused no change in the immediate result of the election, so that the Government majority remains at four. The fate of the Government appears to hang upon the recounts, which will take place in Lennox, North Grey and Halton, where the Liberal majorities are very small, and in North Perth and Centre Bruce, which the Conservatives have carried by close majorities.

In North Grey there is some doubt as to who really is elected, owing to a difficulty over a return in a polling sub-division in Keppel Township. The Liberals claim the riding by nine and the Conservatives by three, but nothing definite can be decided on until a return is received from the Brown school house in Keppel.

The result in Lennox remains the same as yesterday, and Madole—Liberal—holds the seat by two, although the Conservatives in Napanee claim the seat for Carscallen.

Mr. Smyth, Conservative, is elected in Algoma by 100 majority. The seat was considered to be a doubtful one yesterday but it is now officially in the Opposition ranks.

Frontenac was another seat which was doubtful yesterday, but the latest results confirm the election of Gallagher, the Conservative candidate, by 28 majority.

J. R. Barber, Liberal, carried Halton by 16, his majority being secured in the Tory town of Oakville, which went Liberal by 17.

CANADA'S BECKONING HAND

How Our Government is Working in the United States

The New York World has Something to Say About Canada—Great Rush to the North West

Special to The Times.

New York, May 30—The New York World says: A test instituted to settle a private dispute resulted in Baltimore not long ago in a decision that Canadian school children know more about the United States than pupils on this side of the border know about Canada. If this condition continues it will not be the fault of the Dominion authorities, who are spending money annually to spread information through the States about Canadian resources and advantages. This with a hope of bringing sturdy Yankee settlers over to the broad northern acres.

It has long been held a grievance in Canada that of the emigrants leaving the United Kingdom only 13 per cent. locate in the Dominion. These new citizens would be those preferred in Canada—be they English, Irish or Scotch. Next to them are desired people from the United States, and agents handling a literary fund of $27,000 are after some of these this year.

Possibly as a result of the Canadian missionary work reports come of the contemplated departure of something like 200,000 persons from our Northwest into the Canadian West. The migration will take place, it is said, next year. It will be a march of farmers, and good farmers are the men in demand over the line. The movement will be an important one industrially and perhaps in the end politically. At any rate, unless its size is greatly exaggerated, it will go a long way toward relieving Canada of the burden of being a country rich in all possibilities but new settlers.

The Great American Fair Closed on Saturday Night

Carleston, S.C., May 31.—The South Carolina Interstate and West Indian Exposition ends at 12 o'clock to-night, when President Wagener presses an electric button and the lights in the familiar structures grow dim for the last time. The exposition stands unique among American enterprises of the kind in that it has not been a financial failure. It is confidently believed that when the last claims against the company are settled the balance will be on the right side of the ledger. Since the gates were first opened the attendance has been up to all expectations and during the last three months particularly the crowds have been enormous. The visitors have come by hundreds from all parts of the South and the North also contributed its full share of sightseers during the winter months.

Of even greater moment that the direct financial profits are the benefits the commercial interests of the country will derive from the exposition. The primary object of the enterprise was to advance the friendly relations and commercial intercourse between the United States and the West Indies. In this respect it has been a decided success. The various islands of the West Indies responded heartily to the invitation to send exhibits and their displays have been among the most attractive of the big show. The main purposes of the exposition were furthered, moreover, by the fact that a considerable number of visitors from the North and other distant parts of the country extended their trip beyond Charleston to Cuba and other parts of the West.

The success of the exposition is due primarily to the excellent management and to the hearty co-operation of every citizen of Charleston. Even before the gates were opened it was evident that the scope of the affair had become much larger than originally intended, but the managers were equal to the situation as its subsequent success proved. During the entire period of six months, from the opening to the closing day, there has not been a single untoward happening to mar the successful career of the exposition. The crowds have been well handled and neither the exposition management nor the citizens of Charleston have left anything undone that would contribute to the comfort and entertainment of the visitors.

THE CANADIAN BOYS UNDER HEAVY FIRE

Interesting Letter From Troopr J.R. Baskin, in South Africa

HAS BEEE IN THE HOSPITAL

Exciting Fight With The Boers—How the Boys Behave Under Fire

The following letter from Trouper J. R. Baskin, with the S. A. C. in South Africa, to Major Birdsall, of Asphodel, will doubtless be of interest to our readers:

Dear Friend,—As I have not very much to do this warm afternoon I will drop you a line just to let you know how I am getting along. I wrote you about Christmas but have not received an answer, but perhaps it went astray, as quite a number of my letters both going and coming never reach their destination.

I left the hospital about December 1st and joined my troop. After doing patrol work until about the first of February I went onto one of the block-houses. I like mounted work much better than this, for we got into many a little skirmish which made things exciting. The first time I was under fire was on November 29th, a day I will never forget. We went out on a two hour patrol before breakfast, and just got about six miles from camp when the first thing we knew, about four hundred Boers had surrounded us, and there were only forty of us altogether. We had a smart officer and we held the enemy off all day and got away under cover of darkness with the loss of one man killed and three wounded, also thirty horses and saddles, but we were all thankful to get off so lightly.

The reason I am sticking to block-house work is that riding does not agree with me. The blockhouse I am in now is one of the many which protect the line of communication between Vet River and Hoopstand and is about 15 miles east of the junction of the Zand and Vet Rivers and about two miles south of the latter. It is not built on the S.A.C. pattern of block-houses, i.e., the figure eight, and therefore is not as good. It is built in an octagon shape, having eight sides, with two loop holes in each. We first put up a skeleton frame with corrugated iron which we commandeered from the neighboring farms, and then piled stone and sand up against it to the height of four feet, then made an excavation in the inside of about three feet, making nice standing room. A canvas roof gives us plenty of light and the port holes give us plenty of air. For beds each man has a sheet of iron, so we are quite comfortable. We would not kick, however, if the beds were a little softer. We are going to have a photo taken of it to-day and I will send you one so you will see what it looks like much better than I can describe it. We also have two wire entanglements, one 15 and one 60 yards from the fort, both running around it, so we have no fear of Mr. Boer rushing us. Then there is a good strong barb wire fence connecting us with the next block-house, which is about 1200 yards away, so you can see it is pretty hard for anyone to get through without us knowing it.

There were a couple of horsemen tried it the night before last, but we heard them and opened fire but none of our bullets found a mark, but it is a pretty hard thing to do, to hit

BRITISH COLONIES AND THE EMPIRE

Lord Strathcona Discusses the Future Relations Between Them

COLONISTS TO HAVE SAY

Britons at Home Should Take a Truly Imperial View of the Question

The Subject one Which Should Receive the Favorable Consideration of Canadians

London, June 1—The talk of the abandonment of the wheat and flour duties has subsided, and if the war ends now the income tax will probably be reduced. The monthly reviews deplore the opposition of Lord Rosebery and the Liberal Imperialists as likely to discourage the Ministry from attempting to inaugurate a custom union for the Empire at the Coronation Conference.

COLONIAL REPRESENTATION

Lord Strathcona, writing in the Empire Review for June, opposes the representation of the colonies in the Imperial Parliament, at any rate until a truly Imperial Parliament is established for the purpose of dealing with Imperial affairs. He says the colonies will seriously consider any authoritative proposal to contribute to the cost of the army and navy. No such proposal has yet been made, but he warns Englishmen that the proposition affects the whole problem of Imperial unity and representation in the British Parliament. He further says that the Empire must pay greater attention to the development of Imperial trade and sees no internal reason against regarding the domestic trade of the Empire more favorably than foreign trade. The commercial relations of the Empire should be put on a family footing.

Lightning Remedy for Cramps

Some people have cramps pretty often, others only now and again. But when you do have them it is a mighty quick relief you want. Polson's Nerviline is as sure as death to relieve cramps in five seconds—it's instantaneous, just a few drops in sweetened water and the pain is gone. Buy a bottle of Nerviline to-day, and keep it handy. Nerviline is a common household necessity, and only costs 25c.

THE STRIKE ADJUSTED

The C. P. R. and Telegraphers Come to Ter

For some time a strike of the C.P. R. telegraphers has been threatened, which affects the whole line, Peterborough included. On Saturday, however, the general committee had another lengthy conference with Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, Mr. D. McNicoll, second vice-president, and Mr. Thomas Tait, manager of transportation. It lasted from 11 a.m. until 1 p.m. and was held in the board room. It was officially announced from the second vice-president's office that the matter had been amicably adjusted. The details of the settlement were not given out by the company beyond the fact that the full increase demanded by the men, viz., a minimum of $53 instead of $43 had not been accorded. However, the advance granted had been satisfactory to all parties. The small matters of detail regarding holidays, Sundays and extra work, it is understood, have all been granted.

"We would have liked to get all we asked for," said one of the men, "but we did not want to appear unreasonable, and as we have had a very material advance over our present minimum rate, I think we should feel satisfied. We have been a long time conferring, and we found Sir Thomas reasonable and conciliatory."

The Day of Miracles not Past

A Toronto Star reporter investigated the case of Mr George Warner, and found that after thirteen years of almost total deafness, he had been cured by inhaling Catarrhozone.

This proves that where Catarrhozone treatment is employed, impaired hearing and deafness can be cured. Catarrhozone always brings quick relief, and is warranted to give lasting satisfaction. All sufferers from impaired hearing, deafness, head noises and ringing in the ears are advised to inhale Catarrhozone and derive the great benefit it is capable of affording. MOUNT ROYAL SPURTED LAVA IN DAYS GONE BY

Dr. Frank Adams, of McGill, Deals in Detail with the Monteregian Hills

Toronto, June 1.—Dr. Frank D. Adams, of McGill University, Montreal, presented to Section IV. of the Royal Society of Canada, in session at Toronto, a most elaborate paper on the ancient volcanic hills in the vicinity of Montreal.

This paper is of especial interest at the present time, in view of the general attention which has been directed to the subject of volcanic action by the disastrous eruptions which are now taking place in Martinique and St. Vincent.

D. Adams, after referring to recent eruptions in the West Indies and to the similar occurrence which took place at Krakatoa, in the East Indies, some twenty years since, with even greater loss of life, pointed out that America to the north of the Mexican line is singularly free at the present time from volcanic manifestations. The only active volcanoes in this great continental area, with the exception of those which have just resumed actively in Martinique and St. Vincent, are certain small volcanoes in the Aleutian Islands.

SOME ANCIENT VOLCANIC HISTORY.

Looking back through the history of America in past geological time, there are, however, records in many parts of the area of volcanoes which remained active for long periods.

Thus, in British Columbia and the western United States, during what is known as the tertiary period, there were enormous floods of lava poured out, covering, in many places, thousands of square miles and probably accompanied by terrific earthquakes. There is clear evidence that these volcanic outbursts which gradually becoming less frequent and less intense, did not entirely die out until after the advent of white men in America, for at one place in California there is to be seen to-day a lava stream which has flowed down into a forest, on the sides of which lava stream are to be found the trunks of trees, killed by the lava, but still intact, sufficient time not having as yet elapsed to permit the wood to decay away. It is believed that some of the outbursts in British Columbia have been of equally recent date.

STILL FURTHER BACK.

Going back to very much earlier times, undoubted evidence has been obtained of the existence of volcanoes in the Sudbury district of Ontario, also of a range of volcanoes running down the eastern side of America along the line of the great Appalachian mountain chain, which can be traced from Gaspe to Georgia. There is along this line, in the Notre Dame mountains of the province of Quebec, evidence of intense and long continued volcanic activity.

Dr Adams then stated that intermediate in point of time between the comparatively recent volcanic outburst in British Columbia and the very ancient outpouring of lava in the Eastern Townships are the very interesting volcanic hills about Montreal. These volcanoes were probably active about the time when the great coal deposits in the Sydney district—which have recently led to the development of certain volcanic symptoms on the Montreal Stock Exchange—were being slowly accumulated by the dense carboniferous forests growing on the swampy shores of Cape Breton.

THE MONTEREGIAN HILLS.

The mountains of this series are eight in number. Six of these lie in an almost straight line running about east and west The most westerly is Mount Royal, back of Montreal: then follow in their order Montarville, Beloeil, Rougemont, Yamaska and Shefford. The other two lie in a parallel line, but further south. These are Mont Johnson near St, John's, Que., and Brome Mountain which lies immediately to the south of Shefford.

THESE VOLCANOES ARE IN LINE.

It will thus be seen that these ancient volcanoes were arranged precisely as modern volcanoes are, namely along straight or slightly curving lines. The volcanic forces breaking out first at a point give rise to a volcano, and then as this vent gets more or less plugged up it forces along the line to another point where a second volcano is developed. Sometimes two or more volcanoes of the series may be active simultaneously as in the case of Mont Pelee and St. Vincent, for these lie on one line of weakness traversing the earth's crust—perhaps a long subterranean fissure, to which reference has just been made. It may be that the relief afforded to the igneous forces by the eruption at the two points in the West Indies, to which so much attention has been recently attracted will suffice, but it is quite possible on the other hand that the scene of activity may be shifted to another of the islands before the volcanic forces become once again passive.

EVIDENCE OF VOLCANIC ORIGIN.

The evidence that the Monteregian Hills as Dr. Adams proposes to call the eight mountains in the vicinity of Montreal, deriving their name from Mount Royal ("Monus Regius") were at one time volcanoes, lies in the character of the rocks composing them, and in the peculiar way in which these rocks break through the surrounding strata of the plain from which the mountains rise. The rocks composing the mountains belong in all cases to the class of the igneous rocks, showing in the character that they have been pushed violently up from the earth's interior while in a molten condition. Their molten condition is also shown in the manner in which they have baked and altered the strata through which they were inuded and in the fact that they have sent dykes or sheets of molten rock out from them in all directions through the surrounding rocks. These dykes are seen in all the quarries about Montreal and in almost every rock exposure on the flanks of Mount Royal. Furthermore there is still to be found in the place of the latter extinct volcano, on St. Helen's island, and a number of places along the Back River, remnants of the enormous piles of blocks or rock and ashes which were blown out of the crater of Mount Royal, when it was active, just as similar materials are now being thrown out of Mont Pelee, causing such widespread destruction, and altering the whole face of the country.

In the case of Mount Royal and the other Monteregian hills one point must be remembered. The hills have now quite a different form from that which they originally possessed. All the upper works of the volcano, the great ash piles (except the insignificant remnants just mentioned) and the lava streams which form together the cone, have been long since swept away by the rain, frost and ice, as well as by the wash of the ocean waves, for the sea has at least once since the birth of Mount Royal covered this part of Canada. It is therefore quite useless to look for the craters of these ancient volcanoes, these having long disappeared, the mountains now presenting merely the roots of the old volcanoes which stand up from the surrounding plain because they are composed of much harder rock, which is therefore less readily worn away.

THE SAME KIND OF ROCK.

It was pointed out that all the Monteregian hills were composed of the same kind of rocks. These Dr. Adams described in detail and showed that they are associated in a very curious and interesting manner. From their peculiar association much can be learned of the processes at work in the great subterranean reservoirs of molten rock from which the igneous rocks of these mountains were derived.

Mount Johnson was described in especial detail and was shown to be a portion of one of the passages through which lava rose to the surface, the pipe in fact of an ancient volcano, long since swept away—still filled with the original igneous rock. It is remarkable among other things for the fact that while about one hundred feet higher than Mount Royal, it is nearly circular and only a little over half a mile wide.

Dr. Adams also mentioned that there was not the slightest reason to fear that Mount Royal or any of the other members of the group would ever again become active.

The ancient line of weakness on which they were originally developed has undoubtedly been long since healed.

The mountains have been extinct for ages and the volcanic forces have shifted their scene of operations to other and less fortunate lands.

HONORING A FRIEND ADMIRAL

The United States and France Join Hands over the past

Newport, R. I., May 29.—Citizens of two nations united to-day in paying tribute to the memory of Admiral de Ternay, the fleet which came to the assistance of the American forces in the latter part of the war of the Revolution. While his ship was at anchor in Newport Harbor the Admiral died of fever and was buried here. His grave in Trinity Churchyard was the scene of the commemorative services this afternoon.

The participants included General Brugere, Admiral Forniero, the Comte and Comtesse de Rochambeau and other members of the French mission which came over to attend the monument unveiling at Washington last week. The Americans present included representatives of numerous patriotic societies and other persons of distinction. A feature of the services was the placing on the grave of a magnificent memorial wreath sent by President Loubet.

The grave of the French Admiral is marked by a large marble slab. In the vestibule of the church is a marble monument with an inscription in Latin when was erected in the yard near the grave by the French government, and within the last fifty years was restored and placed in the church by the United States government, Congress making a special appropriation for the purpose.

The services at the grave were preceded this morning by a parade of veterans, Sons of the Revolution and other patriotic orders. Following the services the French visitors were entertained at luncheon at the Casino and afterwards there was a drive about the city to the various places of interest connected with the stay of the French officers during the Revolution.

Those who profess to preach religion should either keep out of politics or show that they are at least reverential. Here is one gentleman, named Meyer, who prefixes "Reverend" to his name, who has been stumping in Western Ontario and telling his hearers that "after the election there will be a recount at the throne of God, and many would be found to have elected or defeated themselves for a place near the throne." The line which divides bathos from blasphemy is apparently a thin one with reverend politicians.

The equilibrium has not been restored in the volcanic territory of Martinique and St. Vincent, and on both these islands the situation is still serious, giving rise to apprehensions of further great disasters. A dispatch from Kingston, the capital of St. Vincent, says that thunder storms of unparalleled violence have hovered over the island for several days, accompanied with clouds of vapor and [illegible] from the Soufriere, doing great damage to life and property. In Martinique the volcano is again in eruption and the people of Fort de France are simply panic stricken. From both islands the inhabitants are fleeing as fast as they can get away.

The cold water people of Ontario do not appear to have been able to quench the political fires.

SIR WILFRID LAURIER'S MISTAKE

Sir Wilfrid Laurier ought now to see the great unwisdom of his hasty and discourteous refusal to even discuss this question. It is marvellous that a man of Sir Wilfrid's ordinary astuteness and ability to take the greatest advantage of popular sentiment on questions of this kind, should have made such a lamentable error of judgment. He has, so to speak, put himself and Canada out of court, so far as the British Ministry is concerned, by his unstatesmanlike reply to a generous invitation at a time when good feeling would mean much to this country, for it is generally believed Mr. Chamberlain sees his way to a proposed modification of his suggestion made in 1896, that free trade within the Empire was an essential to British duties on non-colonial imports.

DETROIT UNITED RAILWAY

The intelligent investor in listed securities having a current market is seeking that which possesses not only intrinsic merit and remunerative income, but future enhancement in market value as well. Conviction on these three important points once firmly established among the investing public concerning a particular security is followed by three results—demand, security of stock and advancing prices.

It is good to know of such opportunities, for it enables the public to invest safely and add to their individual accumulation of this world's goods, thereby increasing in a measure the world's happiness, and the result is satisfactory, not only to the investor, but to his broker as well, particularly if the broker in question happens to be the dispenser of such a bit of happiness.

Detroit United Railway stock is on the eve of an advance in price which will carry quotations from the present level of 71 to par. The advance is inevitable for the simple reason that as a substantial investment of recognized merit the stock is selling at least $25 per share below what it is worth. This statement, made with full confidence, is not an idle boast, but is based on cold existing facts; and if any among my readers are skeptical in my degree let them look into the facts and figures and they will be convinced.

It is although an absurd proposition that the stock of a city traction company having no competition, paying regular dividends of 4 per cent. and earning 6 per cent., should be quoted at any such ridiculously low a figure as the present price.

All that is necessary is for the public to know that a good thing like Detroit United is available, and the disparity between present quotations and real worth will soon be bridged over by the most legitimate means known, and that is by public buying on broad scale. At the present time three separate financial interests are negotiating for the Cleveland holdings around 70. In the meantime it is exceedingly probable that public buying, now well under way, will absorb these holdings at prices ranging from the present level to par, and the syndicates referred to will suddenly wake up to find that they have missed an unusual opportunity by pursuing a penny-wise and pound-foolish policy in regard to price.

HERE ARE THE FACTS

Detroit United Railway is a consolidation of all the electric railways in and about Detroit. There are no competing lines. The total mileage is 380 miles, having a total bonded indebtedness of $16,520,000, which is $41,780.00 per mile, and it may be remarked that this is exceedingly conservative and less per mile than that of any other city road in the United States.

The total authorized and outstanding capital stock $12,500,000, which is $32,895.00 per mile, so that there is 74,684.00 per mile in bonds and stock. Cincinnati Street Railway is bonded and stocked for 130,230 per mile; St. Louis United about $107,000 per mile; Twin City Rapid Transit, $125,643 per mile. These comparisons prove the absence of the customary watering process, more recently known as "Morganizing."

The following figures, showing the earnings, operating expenses, etc., of the Detroit United Railway for two years are conclusive proofs of its merits:

Year Ending—	1900	1901
Earnings, gross	$2,575,276	$2,942,237
Earnings, net	1,150,778	1,346,472

Gross Earnings...4 months July—Oct 1901 $1,120,378

Gross Earnings....January 1—March 31,	1901	1902

I am indebted to Mr. Guy M. Walker, of 25 Broad street, New York, for the following facts in regard to Detroit United Railway stock, as compared to Twin City Rapid Transit common stock, now quoted at 122. First dividend of 1 per cent was paid on Twin City stock in August, 1899; in 1900, 4 per cent.; 1901, 3 1-2 percent.; 1902, February, 2 per cent. It should be borne in mind that Twin City Rapid Transit is not even established as a 4 per cent. dividend payer; that there is a 7 per cent. preferred stock ahead of it, and yet the common stock is quoted at 122, or 350 per share above Detroit, which is absolutely established as a 4 per cent. dividend payer. Either Twin City stock is selling too high or Detroit too low.

"In comparing the intrinsic value of the stocks of the two companies, it should be noted that while the bonded debt of Twin City amounts to $47,889.00 per mile, that of the Detroit United is only $41,780.00 per mile, while the stock per mile of Twin City is $77,894.00 to Detroit United $32,895.00, making the total capitalization of the Twin City Rapid Transit Company $125,643.00 per mile, as against only $74,684.00 per mile for Detroit United. The populations served are almost exactly the same.

"The percentages earned by the two properties for their common stock are almost the same, though the earnings for Detroit United for 1901 show a slightly larger gain over the earnings for 1900 than does the Twin City Rapid Transit Company.

"It should, however, be noted that Twin City is making its present earnings on a cost of operation amounting to only 44.00 per cent of its gross earnings, which is far below normal, and which certainly can not be maintained in the future, while Detroit United is expending for operation and maintenance 54.70 per cent. of its gross earnings, which is slightly above normal, and which ought to be reduced to approximately 50 per cent. within the next year or two.

"It can, therefore, easily be seen that Detroit United promises considerably greater returns to its stockholders for the immediate future than Twin City, and it is unreasonable to suppose that the stock will continue at its present low quotations of 71, while Twin City is considered to be worth and apparently holds firm at approximately $125.00 per share."

FUTURE INCREASED EARNINGS

On the basis of the actual earnings for the first three months of 1902, Detroit United will show for the present fiscal year, in round figures, $3,400,000 gross, equivalent to $1,375,000 net, being more than double the interest on its bonded debt. After deducting fixed charges, now aggregating $720,343, there will remain at least a net surplus available for dividends of $654,657, or an amount in excess of 7 1-2 per cent. on the entire capital stock issue.

A syndicate of Philadelphia capitalists recently made a proposition to form a leasing company, take over the management of the Detroit United, and guarantee dividends, beginning with 4 per cent. per annum and increasing 1-2 per cent. each year until 6 1-2 per cent. annually should be paid and continued during the life of the lease.

This proposition was rejected.

At this writing I am reliably informed that the Bankers' Committee of Cleveland, holding in trust the Everett-Moore Syndicate holdings of Detroit United, have practically concluded negotiations for the sale of 20,000 shares to an Eastern syndicate. The remaining 10,000 shares are to be withdrawn from the market.

The withdrawal of this stock from the market, which has heretofore been the cause of existing sacrifice quotations on Detroit United, marks the present level as the low record prices from now on. It is a noteworthy fact, of interests to the probable purchaser, that during the past week the market for Detroit United has broadened perceptibly. Buying orders for the stock in blocks are in evidence from Eastern purchasers. Heretofore the market has been confined to Detroit, Cleveland, Cincinnati, and Louisville. Now, what will be the effect on current quotations, with demand for the stock from Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburg, Chicago, and St. Louis? I repeat that these actually existing conditions mean a long advance ahead, and those among my readers who want make not only a good investment, but a long profit as well, had better get in the band waggon not later than Monday noon, for late arrivals will have to go way back and sit down if they expect to get any stock under 75.

One of the chief objections to investors heretofore has been the fact that last year the Detroit United accumulated a floating debt of $900,000, resulting, not from any deficit in operating, but from the purchase of 75 per cent. of the capital stock of the Detroit & Port Huron Shore Line and the Windsor Street Railway, both of which properties, though controlled by the Detroit United, are not included in the consolidation. This floating debt has now been entirely eliminated by an issue of $1,000,000 4 1-2 per per cent. bonds, which were sold to N. H. Gay & Co., of Boston, and recently offered by them for public subscription.

This leaves the property in excellent condition financially, with valuable assets in the controlling stocks referred to. Physically the property is conceded to have no superior in any city in the United States or Canada.

Detroit United Railway 4 per cent stock is listed on the Cincinnati Stock Exchange. Telegraph a collect message to my firm for accurate quotations and prices, and prompt reply will be made. During the next few weeks an active market in Detroit United may be confidently anticipated, accompanied by a higher level of prices.

AN ENVIABLE RECORD
THE HEINTZMAN & CO. PIANO
Holds First Place in the Piano World.

Here's a piano that's the cynosure of all eyes. Musical critics know it as an instrument that holds a place by itself among Canadian made pianos—and that ranks with foreign pianos of widest reputation. It is the ideal piano.

At all great functions and musical events it is the choice of the greatest artists. It is the piano that was the choice of Royalty—being used exclusively on the royal train by the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall and York in their journey through Canada.

FRIEDHEIM, The Great Russian Pianist.
BURMEISTER, Famed Pupil of Liszt
AUGUST HYLLESTED, The Great Danish Pianist.
MADAME ALBANI, The World's Greatest Soprano.
POL PLANCON, The Great French Basso.
R. WATKIN MILLS, England's Most Eminent Artist.
MADAME VAN DER VEER GREEN, The Popular Contralto.
SIGNOR ARTURO NUTINI, The Celebrated Blind Italian Pianist.
KATHERINE BLOODGOOD, Soloist to the Plancon Concerts.
HUBERT DE BLANK, Pianist to Mdlle. Trebelli.
MADAME FRIEDA DE TERSMEDAN, Swedish Countess and Famed Pianist.
WILLIAM LAVIN, The Great English Tenor.
MDLLE. ANTOINETTE TREBELLI, The Famed Vocalist.
MADAME SOPHIA SCALCHI, The World's Greatest Contralto.
HAROLD JARVIS, The Popular Tenor.
MR. and MRS. DURWARD LELY, The Famous Scottish Musicians.
BEN DAVIES, The Popular English Tenor.
PLUNKET GREENE, The Great English Basso Cantante.
DAVID BISPHAM, The Great American Basso.
EDWARD FISHER, Director Toronto Conservatory of Music.
F. H. TORRINGTON, Director of the Toronto College of Music.

This is truly a wonderful record and one that has reached still greater heights of success during the present musical season—the New Concert Grand Piano, before which the most celebrated visiting artists have appeared, has been pronounced the most wonderfully constructed piano of the 20th century.

Interesting Items.

Mount Sir Donald, in the Canadian Rockies, which rises to the height of 10,700 feet, has just been conquered for the first time by the foot of woman. Mrs. Berens, the successful climber, is a young Englishwoman hailing from Kent. While at Glacier, on the Canadian Pacific Railway, on her honeymoon trip round the world, she heard that very few men and no woman had ever set foot on the summit of Sir Donald. So she resolved to make the ascent, and was all the more anxious to do so as she heard that a Philadelphia lady had expressed her intention of being the first up. Mrs. Berens successfully accomplished the climb, though she had several very narrow escapes.

The other day, when the jury in a murder trial in the Louisville courts had retired to their room, the foreman said: "Gentlemen, this is a serious case we have to decide. A man's life may be forfeited by our decision. How many Christians are among us?" Nine men raised their hands. "Will one of you pray?" asked the foreman. One of the oldest jurors said he would do his best. All knelt, and a most earnest and impressive prayer was offered. Balloting was then begun. Several jurors were in favor of a life sentence, and others for terms as short as eight years. The jury finally agreed on eighteen years.

John Dillon's outbreak in the House of Commons the other day, when he called Joseph Chamberlain a "damned liar," reminds one of the speech of Mr. Martin, a member for Galway, in 1789, which absolutely defies reproduction. He denounced a fellow-member in language of unprintable disgust, and could not resist the temptation of applying his words also to the member's sister, who sat in the gallery of the House of Commons at the time. "These Ponsonby's," he burst out, "are the curse of my country. They are ——, personally and politically, from that toothless old hag who is now grinning in the gallery, to the white-livered scoundrel who is now shivering on the floor."

A most interesting light is thrown on the approaches toward civilization made by the people who dwelt in caverns in France during the stone age by the discovery of a great number of drawings of animals on the walls of an ancient cave at Combarelles, in South-western France. Many of the drawings, which represent, with surprising skill, reindeer, mammoths and other animals now extinct in Southern and Western Europe, have become covered in the course of time with thick layers of stalagmite. Among the most interesting pictures are some which represent horselike animals belonging to two different species, and some of these animals have halters and other attachments, plainly showing that they had been subjected to the service of man.

It was only a short time ago that the table telephone became an adjunct of Chicago restaurants where business and professional men spend a few necessary moments away from the busy affairs of the day. Now comes another development in the telephone service, which promises to become a universal and indispensable feature of railway trains. The Chicago and North-western Railway recently equipped a new train, known as the "Overland Limited," for service between that city and the Pacific Coast. Amongst its features is a telephone, installed in the observation car, from which connection can be made with any telephone system along the route. A special wire of the local telephone company is dropped over the roof of the car and run through an opening to the instrument in the car, and by means of a "monkey," or wall jacket, connection is made. The passenger desiring to telephone to any part of the city or communicate with a long-distance point is thus enabled to do so, without leaving the cars, while the train stops at a station.

She Got the Potatoes.

The man who forgets the obligations in the way of shopping imposed upon him by the women of his family when he leaves the house is not rare enough to excite curiosity, but the woman with sufficient tact and wit to checkmate this loss of memory is. One such lives in Pennsylvania. The Philadelphia "Record" says that she had labored for several days to impress upon her husband the necessity of sending home a bag of potatoes.

At last, when all her persuasions and injunctions had failed, she surprised him one morning by handing him a sealed letter, and asking him with great seriousness not to open it until he reached his place of business. All the way down town he thought of the strange request, and he no sooner entered his office than he tore open the letter. This is what he read:

"Dear John—For some time past I have thought long and earnestly on what I have to say to you, and I have decided that this is the best method to communicate it. I have hesitated several times about writing to you in this way, but I find that I cannot conceal my thoughts longer. I must and will tell you all."

Here John's hair began to rise, but he heroically turned over the page and read on: "The potatoes have been out for a week. Please send home a bag. I thought by this method you would not be likely to forget."

The potatoes went up to the house that morning.

His Thirteenth Question.

Little Clarence (with a rising inflection)—Pa?

Mr. Callipers (wearily)—Uh?

Little Clarence—Pa, how do angels get their night-gowns on over their wings?—"Judge."

His Non-Progressiveness.

Farmer Dunk—That 'ere hired man of yours is pretty slow, ain't he, Hiry?

Farmer Hornbeak—Yuss. He's too gol-vummed slow to make a successful pall-bearer.—"Judge."

* * *

"Is your husband a good provider?" asked the sympathetic visitor. "Indeed he is, mum. He got me three new places to wash last week."—"Youth's Companion."

Fables For the Fair.

A LITTLE work called "Fables for the Fair," by Josephine Dodge Daskam, is attracting amused notice in London, where it is published. Here is an example of the fables:

"There was once a woman who had the opportunity of marrying either of two brothers she preferred. Since they had both of them good points she decided to consult their sister as to which in her opinion would make the best husband. 'I think,' she said, 'that I shall take John. He is so good.'

"'But,' said the sister, 'he gobbles his soup and sugars his lettuce. To say nothing of buttering his bread in slabs. We have never been able to teach him better.' 'But he reads Browning so beautifully,' cried the woman. 'You will hear him eat soup oftener than you will hear him read Browning,' said the sister."

Then, as to the other brother, "I am sure he would give his life for me," cried the woman. "If you will pause and consider," replied the sister, "you will realise that the probabilities of his being called upon to do that are very few indeed. Whereas the fact that he is very careless about brushing his clothes will be daily apparent to you."

The book is full of good things, among them the fable of a singer who sang "Annie Laurie" in a muslin gown to a country audience. "Goodness alive!" said they, "is that all? Our Jenny knows that piece." But the rival wore silver brocade and sang in German and French, whereupon the country paper remarked that "it was a real pleasure to hear old favorites rendered with such spirit." This teaches us that when in Rome we should do as the Romans don't.

Then there is the fable of the woman who could not help herself:

"There was once a woman who had never learned how to swim, although she went in bathing every day in the summer. She had a friend who had acquired the art with some trouble, and was very proud of her proficiency in it. 'It is absurd,' said this friend, 'to live near the water and not swim. It makes you very attractive to good swimmers if you can go out with them and they do not feel that you are a drag on their pleasures. What would you do in case you fell off the pier? Now watch me!' With these words she dived off into the water and swam about by herself. 'It is a good thing to have a woman swim so well,' said one of the men near by. 'Now if any of the children fall into the water she can rescue them.' Just then the woman who could not help herself uttered a scream and fell into the sea. Instantly five men leaped in to rescue her, and spent the rest of the day resuscitating her and enquiring how she was, leaving the swimmer to dive by herself. This teaches that nothing succeeds like distress."

On the 'Gyptian Railway.

FIRST TOURIST—Isn't this lovely? Just think! Pharaoh lived here, and — and Cheops, and — and Moses! It makes your head swim, doesn't it?

Second Tourist—I expect it's the bad air. It hurts my head, too. Is that the Nile over there?

"Mercy! I suppose so. Isn't it dirty? It doesn't seem as if Cleopatra could have rode in her barge to meet Marc Antony down that horrid stream, does it!"

"No, it doesn't. But that was a long time ago, wasn't it?"

"I believe so. I've seen the play, but I don't remember just when it was."

"See that crocodile basking in the sun!"

"Is he basking? Oh, Maud, that reminds me. How are you going to have your new basque trimmed?"

"Mercy, there's the Sphinx!"

"What's the Sphinx?"

"Why, it's a thing that asked you riddles, you know. Dear me, I'm not sure whether that's the Sphinx or one of the Pyramids. Just look at all those children! They must be going in for swimming."

"No, dear, it's the effect of the mild climate."

"Look there! That must be the desert. But I can't see any caravans. Perhaps it isn't a desert. Perhaps it's a mirage."

"What's a mirage, dear?"

"Oh, it's something they see in deserts. Everything is upside down, you know."

"Isn't that awful? Oh, see that handsome native? What a picture! He must be a sheikh at least. What's he doing?"

"He's playing on the concertina and passing his hat."

"What a shame! Isn't it nice to travel on a railroad where they don't have any smoke or cinders?"

"Yes, and do you notice what a balmy odor comes in at the window?"

"Yes. Isn't it fragrant? So spicy. Can't you smell the cloves? Ah-a-a, I like to breathe it in."

"So do I. I'll ask the conductor what it is. There he is. Conductor, please!"

The conductor—Yes, ma'am?

"Conductor, where does that spicy smell come from?"

"From the locomotive, ma'am. We use nothing but mummies for fuel on this line, ma'am."

One of Tom Reed's Retorts.

"No matter what you may say," declared Representative Babcock of Wisconsin to Chairman Payne of the Ways and Means Committee when discussing the Babcock proposition to put all steel products on the free list, "I am right, and I know it, and when a man is right he is in the majority." "Just so," replied Payne, "but you remember that Tom Reed used to say, 'God and one make a majority, but many a martyr has been burned at the stake while the votes were being counted.'"

The Real Reason.

A visitor to Dublin refused the services of a driver because of his ragged clothing. "Ah, sur," replied the Jarvie's friend, "you must excuse him, sur; he can't help it."

"Why can't he help it? Why does his wife not mend his clothes for him?"

"Ah, your honor, he has no wife."

"Then why doesn't he get another coat?" "He can't sur, I assure you he can't."

"Why can't he?" "Well, sur, it has been tried once or twice, but it can't be done. He is so very ticklesome that divil a tailor in Dublin dare lay a tape on him."

Must be Deadly.

Attention has been called, says a recent issue of The Speaker, to the mysterious plan of warfare invented by Admiral Cochrane, tenth Earl of Dundonald (grandfather of the present Lord Dundonald, our new G.O.C.), early in the last century, which, it was claimed, would result in the absolute annihilation of an enemy. Dundonald himself believed that if his plan was once put into effect it would make war impossible for the future, and there seem to have been some grounds for this belief, although the secret has never yet been divulged. George IV., when Regent, appointed a secret committee to consider it. The committee reported that the method would be irresistible and infallible, but shrank from recommending its adoption. Forty years later a commission was again appointed to consider it. They reported against it on the grounds that if any experiments were made the secret would be at the command of every nation, and also that it would not accord with the feelings and principles of civilized warfare. Twice during the Crimean war Dundonald urged his plan upon the Government. The second time he offered to reduce Sebastopol by his invention, but the War Office laid down stipulations which he would not accept, and the secret remains a secret still. The present Earl of Dundonald, besides being a successful cavalry leader and the possessor of one of the reputations made in the present war, is also an inventor. It would be interesting to know whether he is in possession of his grandfather's secret or whether that secret died with its discoverer.

The President laughed. "I admit," said he, "that there seems to be an extravagant array of cream on the table, but you know, mother, we can afford to keep a cow now."—New York Tribune.

A good story is told in a musical paper of the Principal of a well-known colonial academy of music. He was much pestered with letters from young composers, asking his advice. On one occasion he received a letter from a country organist asking in which of two ways he should write a certain musical passage. The professor, being a blunt man, wrote back on a postcard, "It doesn't matter a ——." His offended correspondent sent the postcard to the Academy Board, who sat in solemn conclave on it, and wrote to the Principal for an explanation. He answered thus : "Dear Sirs,—I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter. I have considered the matter in all its bearings, and it really doesn't matter a ——. Yours, etc."—London Globe.

WEEDS AND FLOWERS.

SERMON BY

GEORGE H. HEPWORTH.

Stand fast in the faith, quit you like men, be strong.—1 Corinthians, xvi., 13.

I have a neighbor in the country who has a garden which he treats in a very peculiar way. His theory is that all forces of nature are good-natured, and that all products of nature should be encouraged. Whatever is natural, he tells me, is admirable. A weed is just as natural as a rose and has just as clear a right to flourish. It is, therefore, unfair to discriminate against the weed by pulling it up and destroying its life.

Wishing to see how his theory worked in practice, I wandered about his enclosure and found a curious state of affairs. The weeds were in a more flourishing condition than the roses; in fact, they had taken possession of the ground and dominated it to such an extent that the flowers had well-nigh given up the struggle for existence, and were on the verge of despair. I vainly tried to convince my neighbor that if he wanted flowers he must pull up the weeds, for the two do not get on well together. They can't be made to harmonize, because weeds are greedy and refuse to give flowers a chance.

My neighbor has another peculiarity. He carries his theory into the education of his boy. All natural impulses are good impulses, he tells me, and it is not right to give a child a bias toward this or that standard. Let him show himself just as he is, giving perfectly free vent to his good and bad qualities of character, and by and bye he will achieve a well-rounded and well-balanced soul. It is the weed theory transferred to human nature, and so far as my observation of the boy goes it works very badly. I rather fear that later on that father's heart will be filled with regrets.

You cannot build a house without a plan. If you attempt to do so you will have a curious combination, whose inconvenience is only equalled by its ugliness. A house without a plan is not worth having. It is not true that all natural impulses are good, for some impulses, when gratified, produce unmixed evil. Not everything that is is right, for some things are wholly wrong and must be held in check at any cost. If you give the weeds as fair a chance as the flowers the time will come when the flowers will die and nothing but the weeds will be left. It is just as necessary to pull up certain natural qualities as to pull up weeds, and unless you do so you will find yourself without any character at all.

There is a stern and awful truth in the injunction to pluck your eye out if it offends you. It is a bold figure, and startling, but it has a profound meaning. If, for instance, you give free rein to your selfishness it will grow apace to rule and ruin. It will creep over your soul like a smouldering fire on the prairie, and burn the life out of everything as it goes. You must treat it as you would a weed, and without any compunction tear it up and hurl it as far from you as possible. And if you have a quick or an ill temper, it is necessary to subdue it if you would have peace or happiness. Your very nature must be conquered, no matter how hard the fight may be. It must be caught, harnessed, bitted, tamed and taught that you are its master and will be obeyed.

You are simply a bundle of possibilities in the beginning, and if you allow them full swing you will become a mass of contradictions. Your business as an immortal soul is to look at all your tendencies, good and bad, squarely in the face, and then set to work to annihilate some of them, to encourage others, and, with a definite purpose in view, to give yourself the shape of honest and virile manhood. This is not an easy, but it is a glorious, task, and it ends in the victory over self, the sublime mastery which brings self-respect and that dignity which comes with poise and conscience.

The object of religion is to teach you that this is the best and noblest thing to do, and that it is the only thing which it will pay you to do. That struggle is worth your while, for when you find yourself well in hand you will possess that quiet kind of power which blesses you and the whole world alike. This life gives you that sort of discipline, and when the lesson is learned you will be ready for any other life that may come to you. Earth will become a stepping-stone to heaven, for a whole man is fitted for any world in God's universe. Plant your garden with flowers and then see that weeds do not interfere with their growth.

Music in the Dark.

Musical Germany has recently been discussing in all seriousness the question whether it is true that a pernicious effect is produced upon music-lovers at public concerts by feminine beauty, with its delightful accessories, as seen in a blaze of artificial light reflected by crystal, gold and glittering diamonds? Germany answers yes, and declares that in future lights must be turned down; in fact, some of the bolder spirits have already put them out and left the audience in darkness.

The idea was first suggested to a concert reformer in Darmstadt, who took to reading Goethe, and came upon a chapter in "Wilhelm Meister," in which an eccentric lover of music is described: "He could not live without music, more especially singing, and he was wont to listen to it without seeing the singers." This quaint individual used to say that music is really intended for the ear only, whereas in concert rooms it is made to minister mainly to the eye, to accompany movements, not sensations. The gentleman from Darmstadt thereupon concluded that the first step in the way of rational reform would be to lower the lights and shut his eyes to the consequences, and as many people jumped at the idea, it has already been realised, first in Darmstadt, and then in Frankfort-on-the-Main. Experiments are about to be continued elsewhere.

A man goes to a concert to hear music. But when he gets there he sees a great deal more than he hears, and his attention is distracted. The pillars, the statues, the lusters, all turn his thoughts away from the strains meant to soothe or inspirit. That is not as it should be, and yet it is not by any means the worst. He looks around at the ladies, many of whom come to be looked at. He sees the luxuriant tresses of one sylph-like figure before him, and as he cannot catch a glimpse of her charming face, he tries to guess at the features. His neighbor, a rich tradesman, is engaged in estimating the cost of the riviere of diamonds round her shapely neck. A third worshiper of Terpsichore finds himself behind the sweetest thing in hats, and must be content with hearing, since he can't see anything because of the beautiful obstruction. Now, all these things were brought to the concert for the purpose of being seen, whereas people come primarily to hear. Suddenly a burst of applause reminds them of this fact—and of the other, that they have not been listening to the sonata.

Kissing the Baby.

There are many mothers who give themselves infinite trouble about the big and obvious things connected with nursery management—who strive bravely to be up to date in the matter of plumbing, ventilation and infectious diseases — who yet fail woefully when it comes to certain details. One of the most important of these is the disgusting and dangerous habit of allowing every comer to kiss and maul the baby, says the "Youth's Companion."

A baby, no doubt, is a delightful object and almost irresistible, but that is no reason why advantage should be taken of his helpless condition to offer him constant hygienic outrages.

Here is a speech a well-meaning goose of a young mother made to the father of her child on his return from business: "Mrs. Smith called to-day, John. She has a fearful cold and sore throat. She thought the baby was just too sweet for anything, and wouldn't let him out of her arms. He took to her wonderfully, too." Naturally the baby developed a bad case of the snuffles in a day or two, and then it was : "The baby has a dreadful cold. We cannot think where he got it, we are always so careful."

This mother and the hundreds like her should be taught the lesson that promiscuous kissing is a bad and vulgar habit, productive of much danger to adults as well as to children. Adults can protect themselves if they like, but infants cannot, and so it is the duty of the mothers to protect them.

Even if they mercifully escape actual infection in babyhood, there still remains the fact that a silly and unclean habit is formed, resulting in schools full of kissing children, and by and by in ridiculous communities of kissing acquaintances. We may learn a useful lesson from the Japanese in this regard. They are not a kissing race, and the little children do not know what it means, except perhaps from their mothers. It is generally acknowledged that the Japanese babies are the healthiest and happiest of youngsters, and who shall say how much wholesome restraint from the kissing habit may have to do with this fortunate state of affairs?

To make too much of children is to spoil them, but in one respect they should be treated like royalty—if they must be kissed it should be only the back of the hand.

Prognostications.

New York "Life" ventures upon the following prognostications regarding Miss Stone.

She will arrive in America.

She will be met by a large delegation of gentlemen interested in collecting funds to send missionaries out of our own country, where they are needed, into other countries, where they are not needed, and where their principal function is to create complications for the United States Government to fight out.

She will be exploited for a few days by the yellow journals.

She will be gushed over by long-haired men, short-haired women and other gushers.

She will probably lecture, at a high compensation, under the management of Major J. B. Pond.

She will sell literature to the cheap magazines at large prices.

She will make money.

She will be lionized by the W.C.T.U.

She will be utilized by local missionary societies to gather funds to provide soft snaps in uncivilized Japan and other heathen places for Americans who can't make a living at home.

She will be an encouragement to others to go into foreign countries and get into trouble minding other people's business, when they might be quite safe at home tending to their own.

She will be convinced that the American nation is an easy thing.

Dr. Boucher vs. F. J. Bell.
R. Waddell vs. H. Armstrong.
E. Brown vs. F. H. Dixon.

GOLF.

Mr. H. D. Burnett, the captain of the Golf Club, has created increased interest in the game by giving two prizes to the club to be presented in the handicap match. The first prize is a dozen golf balls or a $5.00 club, and the second prize is a $3.00 club or the equivalent in golf balls. The first round in this match, which is called the Captain's Handicap, will be concluded by Monday evening, 9th June. Cards must be dropped in the box, plainly marked "Captain's Handicap" and properly initialed. No card will be considered which is not in the box on Monday evening, June 9th, when the round must be concluded. The play is match play, 18 holes, over the long course, and the schedule of the holes upon which strokes are to be taken will be found posted in the men's room. The pairs and the handicaps have been arranged as follows:

BASEBALL.

An interesting game will take place on June 9th, between the Ladies' Champion Baseball Club, of Boston Mass., and Peterborough Club. The Boston Bloomers is the title given this famous Ladies' Base Ball Club. They are justly entitled to the name, as they always appear on the field, to battle for supremacy, dressed in the twentieth century garb—the bloomers. This organization of female players is the only ladies' ball club in America. The team was first originated in 1892. This is their tenth annual tour. The club is under the management of Mr. W. P. Newman, and they travel in their own palace car. During the past nine years this organization of female ball players have travelled extensively and visited all the large cities in America, and both provinces of Canada. The club has been strengthened from year to year, each member selected for her ability to assume and fill her particular position in a manner satisfactory and becoming a member of this, the Champion Ladies' Base Ball Club of the World. Don't fail to see them.

SUMMER ENERGY AND ACTIVITY

If You are Nervous, Despondent, Sleepless, Irritable or Out-of-Sorts in June

Paine's Celery Compound

Will Give You Nerve Force, Fresh Energy, Vigor and New Health

June should be the banner month of the year for the enjoyment of nature and life. If men and women are not physically capable of enjoying the good things of nature and home so bountifully provided by an All-Wise Creator, the fault is their own in the majority of cases.

Our nervousness, insomnia, despondency and irritableness are continual and forcible reminders of ill health and disease. Their continuance in June means unhappiness and misery; their banishment by the use of Paine's Celery Compound means energy, activity, vigor and full ability to enjoy Heaven's best gifts. Thousands are now acquiring rugged health and buoyant spirits through the use of Paine's Celery Compound. The blessings of health, home and nature will be your portion if you wisely use the great medicine this month. It truly makes people well.

DAISY GORDON'S FOLLY

—OR—

The World Lost for Love's Sake

By Laura Jean Libbey

Author of, The Crime of Hallow-Een, The Flirtations of a Beauty, Willful Gaynell, Little Leafy, Only a Mechanic's Daughter a farce —a mockery —for at that time he had a living wife in England, whom he had wilfully deserted —coming over here for the avowed purpose of capturing an heiress, who had plenty of gold.

"His wife searched long and patiently for him, meeting him at last, face to face, but he did not know her —he had not expected she would cross the seas to hunt him down. That woman is Mrs. Carriscourt, the lady whom you brought home from the park that day.

"She heard with horror too great for words your full confession to me in the rose garden, Daisy, dear, and started for an officer to balk St. John's design; but they arrived at the church to late, it seems.

"Do you hear me, do you comprehend, Daisy, darling? —the horrible sin you believed yourself guilty of has fallen from you —you are as you have been from first to last, Aleck's wife!"

The gladdest cry that ever was heard fell from Daisy's lips — a cry that reached Aleck, who was pacing up and down the corridor without while Hetty broke the startling news to Daisy in her own sweet, sympathetic, gradual way, and that glad cry, brought him to her side at once.

He held out his arms to her, and in an instant she was in them, her golden head pillowed on his breast; and then wise little Hetty tip-toed quietly from the room, in the belief her company could be conveniently dispensed with just then.

Out on the porch she met the old squire.

"This affair has nearly killed me, Hetty," he said: "but I thank God everything has turned out so famously. Not a soul save the immediate parties connected with it knows anything of it, and we are saved the worst scandal the papers ever got hold of, my dear.

"And do you know, I am so much indebted to that little widow, Mrs. Carriscourt, for bringing Daisy's vindication and happiness about that I —I have been tempted to do a very foolish thing in my gratitude — in fact, I have done a very foolish thing."

"What is it, papa?" gasped Hetty.

"I have proposed to her, my dear," returned the squire, adding complacently: "And she has accepted me. That St. John was a scoundrel to the poor girl; they have not lived together for years; she has had a hard enough life of it, and needs to be happy at last."

"But, oh, papa," sobbed both of the girls, "we— we never thought of anything like this of —of —you; it is really too awful."

He turned on them sharply.

"Daisy and Aleck are happy —two young men have asked me for the hand of you two girls, and do you suppose I can look on and see all of this happiness without the thought creeping into my heart that I may as well be happy too, as to sit a desolate old man alone by myself in the chimney corner?"

Both Hetty and Olive looked up and smiled through their tears.

Ah, this was the secret then, of the old squire growing so spruce of late. They remembered the old saying:

"No knowing how matters will end when an interesting and beautiful young widow is brought into a widower's household."

So in all due time Mrs. Carriscourt became the old squire's bride, and soon after there was a double wedding in the old family mansion, and both Olive and Hetty on that day bade adieu to the name of Gordon forever.

But they were not more happy than Daisy and Aleck, who fairly worship the lovely bride who was so nearly lost to him.

Five years have passed on golden wings since then, and now a winsome little maid of four, and her sturdy little brother, who is a year younger, call Daisy mamma. They are Daisy's idol and their father's pride.

Laying her white arms around Aleck's neck, Daisy often whispers to her husband:

"When our darling Maud is grown to maidenhood I will tell her the story of my folly, dear, that it may be a grave warning to her to avoid the rock which came so near wrecking my life; and that rock is to never conceal her love affairs from her parents, for therein lies hidden danger; and to hold aloof from handsome strangers she may meet in what young girls consider a romantic fashion.

"And, above all, to fly from a lover who pleads for clandestine meetings and urges an elopement or a secret marriage —for in secrecy there is always guilt —no good ever comes of it."

Already little Maud is a winsome little creature, her great beauty —of which there is much promise, will never carry her astray, for there will be graven on her heart too earnest a lesson when they repeat to her the story of "Daisy Gordon's folly."

The End.

The New York Sun the other day printed a list of "fifty best American poems," whereupon a Princeton professor immediately wrote to the editor complaining of the failure to include any of Dr. Henry Van Dyke's poems. Surely, he wrote, there should have been a place for that exquisite masterpiece of his to which The Sun referred last fall, containing these never-to-be-forgotten lines:

"In spring time, the birds upon the tree
Sing tweedledum, tweedledum, tweedledum dee."

A pretty girl boarded a crowded street car in Washington, and a pompous old gentleman arose and gave her a seat.

After some time a number of passengers got out, and the old gentleman sank into the nearest corner with a weary sigh.

"I wouldn't get up again," he murmured, "for an angel," and then, as he caught the eyes of the girl fixed upon him reproachfully, he added quickly, "I mean, madam, for another angel!"—Harper's Magazine.

Mainly About People.

Dr. Parr, on meeting Lord Chancellor Erskine, with whom he was friendly, once said: "Erskine, I mean to write your epitaph when you die." "Doctor," answered the great lawyer, "it is almost a temptation to commit suicide."

At a ball in the country a gentleman undertook to introduce a companion to a young but somewhat stout lady, who seemed to be pining for a dance. "No, thanks, old fellow; I don't care to waltz with a cart." A few evenings later the same young lady, who had overheard the conversation, beheld the young man seeking an introduction and asking if he might have the honor, etc. "No, thank you," she replied; "I may be a cart, but I am not a donkey cart."

A rich Irish-American, who frequently visits England and dearly loves a lord, loses no opportunity of talking of his great acquaintances. At a recent dinner party in New York, where there were several Roman Catholics, during a conversation on the subject of fasting, this gentleman said: "It is very strange how little Catholics in the higher ranks mind the fast days. I was dining at the Duke of Norfolk's on a fast day, three weeks ago, and there wasn't a bit of fish at dinner." "I suppose," said another Irishman, "they had eaten it all in the dining-room."

John D. Rockefeller recently told the following story: "I don't question the veracity of that story, but I am going to tell you one that I know to be true. It happened down in Washington. A negro was driving a wagon and in going through a street ran against a funeral. With the superstition of his race he thought it would be bad luck to cross behind the funeral, so he tried to cross ahead of it, but the driver of the hearse whipped up his horse, and the two went neck and neck for a time until finally the darkey sang out: 'Say, dah, pull up youah hoss! Mah boss is in a hurry an' yuah's isn't!'"

Judge Pennypacker of Philadelphia tells a story which shows the readiness of the Pennsylvania Dutchman to obey those in authority: In 1864 Sheridan, under orders, burned every barn from a valley above Staunton to a certain point below Winchester. A band of angry rebels followed this raid, watching for a chance to pick up any stragglers. Among others who fell into their hands was a little Pennsylvania Dutchman, who quietly turned to his captors and enquired: "Vat you fellows going to do mit me?" The reply came short and sharp: "Hang you." "Vell," he said, meekly, "vatever is de rule." His good-natured reply threw the Confederates into a roar of laughter and saved his life.

One day last autumn Bennet Burleigh, the noted English special war correspondent, was encountered a few miles outside Pretoria by that volcanic rhetorician, General Tucker. "What the —— —— are you doing out here with that —— thing?" asked the general, pointing to a kodak which was slung round his shoulders. "Well, sir," promptly replied Mr. Burleigh, "I was intending to take some photographs; but had I known that I was to have the pleasure of meeting you I should have brought out a phonograph." At this audacity, it is said that even General Tucker's stock of sulphurous adjectives ran low.

Gilbert Parker, to illustrate the gullibility of some Englishmen in the colonies, recently told the following story: "Once in Australia on my way through the bush, with my friend Cabbage Tree Bill, we were accompanied by a burly and intelligent young gentleman from Devonshire, and as we came along we saw along the road, if it might be called a road, a young kangaroo. Bill said: 'Now wait a minute! you will see him take the letters.' The kangaroo was sitting up as if waiting for something, and Bill said, 'He has his pouch and everything ready to carry them,' but as we came along Bill snapped his whip and said, 'Nothing to-day,' and the kangaroo trotted off, the young gentleman believing for a great part of the rest of the journey that the object of the kangaroo's presence was as Bill had said."

John Philip Sousa, the bandmaster, usually wears his uniform at all times and seasons, and prefers that his men do the same. The practice has led to some very amusing experiences. For example, one night Mr. Sousa was standing in a railway station, on the platform, waiting for a train. A belated traveler ran up to him and asked, excitedly, "Has the nine-three train pulled out?" "I really don't know," responded Mr. Sousa. "Well, why don't you know?" shouted the traveler. "What are you standing here for like a stick of wood? Aren't you a conductor?" "Yes," said Mr. Sousa, pleasantly, "I am a conductor." "A nice sort of conductor, indeed!" exclaimed the man. "Well, you see," smilingly responded the musician, "I am not the conductor of a train, but of a brass band."

London, May 29.— A special from Dublin to The Times says that at a special meeting of Birr Branch of King's County United Irish League, it was unanimously resolved to censure the Birr Urban Council for voting an address of welcome to the local militiamen who returned from South Africa. The chairman of the league meeting declared these militiamen had volunteered to help to deprive the young nation of its freedom.

A correspondent says the results of the county and district elections confirm the intention of Nationalists to deprive Unionists of a voice in public affairs, but Colonel Blake has been successful in Mayo in spite of the efforts of Davitt and O'Brien. Col. Blake was supported by the local Catholic clergy.

New Haven, Conn., May 29.—Sergt. John Martin, who has recently returned from the Philippines, and was in Pekin, China, as a member of the Ninth Regiment, United States Regular Infantry, and the Rev. W. H. Bowdin, a well-known local clergyman, sat together last night, and discussed the charge made by Sergt. Martin that some of the American missionaries in China "are anything but moral characters."

The minister had taken exceptions to Martin's accusations of looting by the American missionaries in China. He wanted names. The soldier told him that the cabin list of the United States transport Logan contained the names. The soldier admitted that there were many good missionaries, but stuck tenaciously to his original statements that the missionaries got silks, silver, gold and precious stones in their looting, for he was an eye-witness to it. He said:

"The missionaries were the first to find out that behind the bronze images in the temples were stored many valuables. When the soldiers found this out there was very little left for them."

Shanghai, May 30.—The negotiations between the Chinese and foreign commissioners in regard to the tariff are at a standstill. It seems certain that the proposition to abolish the likin will be rejected. This result has been anticipated by those who know China best. The abolition of the likin would seriously cripple the provincial Governments.

The rebellious and seditious uprisings in the northern provinces and in Kwang-si are assuming serious proportions. It is feared that they have the passive sympathy of many officials, who regard them as a protest against the payment of a large foreign indemnity.

Pekin May 29.—The English missionaries in Shantung have complained that six Christian students in the provincial college have been expelled for refusing to worship the Confucian tablet. Sir Ernest Satow, the British Minister, has sent a protest to Prince Ching on the subject. This action of the Governor of Shantung is in accordance with the wishes of Chang Po Hsi, President of the Board of Education, and nearly all the high Chinese officials who are opposed to the idea of foreigners controlling the new educational schemes. For this reason Yuan Shih Kai, the Viceroy of Chili, will be unable to carry out his educational reforms in this province and nothing will be accomplished elsewhere throughout the empire in this direction.

London, May 30. — A despatch from Shanghai says that the rebellion in the south is in full activity. The rebels were defeated in a severe battle by Gen. Chu La Hsien, losing 1,500 killed and wounded. The troops pursued the rebels to their intrenchments and villages, cutting off their supplies. The insurgents, who included women and boys, made desperate sorties and forced the troops to retreat. The rebel leader Ching Ting Pin has been killed. The insurgent forces are increasing in strength. Boxers are gathering in large numbers in the Province of Shantung.

Paris, May 30.— Dr. Unschulzkaempfe, the promoter of the recently much discussed submarine polar expedition, has arrived here from Vienna to confer with some French scientists who will accompany the party next year.

Unschulzkaempfe says he elaborated the plan at Munich a year ago and has now perfected and tested the model of a powerful submarine boat capable of rapid progress at a depth of ninety feet, which is sufficient to clear ice in the coldest regions.

He will go as far north as possible in an ordinary Arctic vessel, then with his submarine boat he hopes to reach the pole in four days, breathing oxygen renewed chemically.

The doctor is confident that he will be able to rise to the surface often, openings being numerous in the polar areas. Polar scientists agree that the water at the pole [illegible] is [illegible]. The submarine [illegible] will be b[illegible] [illegible] try m[illegible]

—Everybody in Douro reads The Times, which is by far the most popular paper here.

—Mr. Michael Kennedy is experimenting with a new kind of corn, which he calls the "Maple Leaf," and which he got from Ireland. The experiments are being conducted under the supervision of Mr. John D. Shea.

—Mr. John Condon is erecting a driving shed. Mr. Pat Crowe has the contract.

—The big picnic at Lakefield was largely attended by people from this section.

—We notice the fine weather has started the boys out on Sunday evenings. They are nearly all "on hand" when Sunday evening comes. Good horses and nobby rigs are all the go here.

—The elections excited great interest here, a majority of the people being in favor of electing Mr. Anderson.

Halifax, June 1—Three new war vessels have been appointed to the North Atlantic squadron. The first class cruiser Ariadne, which will be the flagship, will leave Portsmouth June 10 for Halifax, and H.M.S. Fantome will relieve the Thistle. The Admiralty has decided not to withdraw the torpedo destroyer Quail from this station, as was intended. She has been recommissioned, with Lieut. E. H. Morant in command. The powerful and new cruiser Retribution will relieve the Psyche. Captain H. Lyon will be in command. H.M.S. Fantome will be commanded by H. S. Hibbert. The fast cruiser Tribune, which has done such excellent service during the past three years, will be recommissioned, with Captain S. V. Y. DeHorsey in command. The cruiser Ariadne, selected for the flagship, will be the largest that has ever been attached to the North Atlantic squadron. She is a sister ship to the big four-funnelled cruisers that accompanied the Royal yacht Ophir to Halifax. The fleet as composed will be the most powerful that has ever been in these waters.

UNJUST TO VOLUNTEERS

Canada's permanent force should not be awarded one hundred and forty out of the six hundred places in the coronation contingent. Sir Wilfrid Laurier is a loud hater of militarism, but he has permitted his Minister of Militia to crowd the volunteers of Canada out of their rightful places in the coronation contingent in favor of the "militarism" of the permanent force. Canada is not a nation of soldiers. The active militia of Canada is represented in South Africa by Canadians who are doing soldiers' work, and the country wants no better representatives in London. Canadian volunteers are more truly representative of the manhood of this country than Canadian regulars. There is no desire in any quarter to thrust the permanent force unfairly into the background. But there is reason to protest when a little regular army, which is scarcely four per cent. of the defensive force of Canada, monopolizes a horse four or five hundred yards away in the dark. About two weeks ago, when there was good moonlight, seven donkeys, which we took for mounted men, passed along about seven hundred yards to the north of us, we opened fire and killed six out of the seven. Gen. Baden-Powell, who came along the same morning on a tour of inspection, gave us great praise for our good shooting. We had a little fun the first night of this month, All Fool's Day, when somebody fired a shot and all the blockhouses for about five miles in each direction opened fire, all the troops around were standing to arms thinking Dewet with his army was out.

CANADIANS UNDER FIRE

There is not much war news that I I can tell you that would be interesting as you will have it in all the papers. The Boers had the best of the fight in the month of March. Methuen met with a serious mishap but the truth will never be known. Reports say it is the worst disaster which has befallen the British since Buller lost his guns at the Tugela. Some of the officers I believe are being court-martialled for cowardice. There has been some kind of a conference on between Lord Kitchener and the Boer leaders, but we have no idea how it is coming along as everything is done on the quiet.

Major Leader has been doing some great work of late. I suppose you know him, as he comes from Westwood. I have not seen him yet, but expect to shortly, as all the columns are coming down this way after Dewet and Delarey, who are just fifteen miles from us at present. In fact all the Boer army is in this district, the Transvaal being made too warm for their health and so many columns after them. We expect some hot work here in a few days as the troops are being rushed into this corner by the thousands. Part of my troop went out last night to lay on a kopje to watch for stragglers in the early morn and they had good luck, as they have just brought in Field Cornet Dutoit—a good morning's work.

The S.A.C. and other such corps which are acting independently of the imperial forces, are doing far better work than the columns. The way we do is to send out a couple of scouts and if they see anything, report it, and if not too strong out goes the troop and round up Mr. Boer. Of course we have not the audacity to tackle Mr. Dewet with his 1,000 men, but if he is ever out alone or with a few men we will give him a race.

George Humphries has been in hospital for over a month, but is getting all O.K. again. The 2nd M.R.'s are out here some place but I do not know what part of the country they are in at present. I had a letter from J. White a few days ago; he was enjoying the best of health but had not heard from J. Dwyer since our arrival out here. As it is supper time now I will close, hoping you and yours are enjoying good health, as this leaves me, I remain, your friend,

THREE DAYS

Then Postum Saved Him

It makes rather solid friends of people when they discover a liquid food that will save life in extreme cases of need.

Speaking of Postum Food Coffee, a lady in Toledo, O. says, "For over five years now I have used Postum Coffee entirely in place of the ordinary coffee or tea.

I used to have stomach trouble and every time I drank a cup of ordinary coffee suffered the greatest distress. My troubles left when I left off coffee and began using Postum.

The most severe test I know of was when my husband was down with gastric typhoid fever. His stomach would retain nothing; we tried milk and various other drinks. Everything we put into his stomach would come up in less than three minutes. After the third day of this kind of work I concluded to give him some Postum Coffee. He drank it and relished it and retained it, and for four weeks he lived on Postum and nothing else to speak of. You can depend upon it that Postum gained some good friends, for Husband would have died if it had not been for the nourishment afforded by Postum Coffee." TERMS OF PEACE SIGNED BY KITCHENER AND BOERS

Victorious Britain Shows Magnanimity to the Vanquished Boer.

Special to The Times.

London, June 3 — In the House of Commons today the First Lord of the Treasury and Government leader, A. J. Balfour, announced the terms of peace to South Africa as follows:

The burgher forces lay down their arms and hand over all the rifles, guns and ammunition of war in their possession, or under their control.

All prisoners are to be brought back as soon as possible to South Africa, without loss of liberty or property.

No action to be taken against prisoners except where they are guilty of breaches of the rules of war.

Dutch is to be taught in the schools, if desired by the parents, and used in the courts of necessity.

Rifles are allowed for protection.

Military occupation is to be withdrawn as soon as possible, and self-government substituted.

There is to be no tax on the Transvaal to pay the cost of the war.

The sum of three million sterling ($15,000,000) is to be provided for restocking the Boers' farms.

Rebels are liable to trial, according to the law of the country to which they belong. The rank and file will be disfranchised for life. The death penalty will not be inflicted.

Following are the original terms which were offered to General Botha at the former conference with Lord Kitchener at Middelburg in February, 1901:

General surrender.

Amnesty in Transvaal and Orange River Colony; but not in Cape Colony and Natal.

Boer prisoners to be brought back as quickly as transport arrangements can be arranged.

Crown Colony government, with Governor and Executive Council consisting of official members and a body of unofficial members. Afterwards a representative element, and ultimately self-government.

Church property, public trusts, and orphan funds to be respected.

English and Dutch languages to be taught in public schools, and allowed in courts of law.

To set aside £1,000,000 as an act of grace to assist farmers for goods requisitioned. To assist by loans farmers for destruction of farms and loss of stock.

No special war tax to defray the expenses of the war.

Firearms by license allowed to burghers for protection, provided they take the oath of allegiance, also sporting rifles, guns, etc., by license.

No franchise to Kaffirs before representative government in the new colonies. Afterwards a limited franchise, so as to secure the predominance of the white races.

THE GREAT CITY

The Wonders of London Graphically Described

Special to The Times.

London, June 3.—A child is born every three minutes, and a death is registered every five minutes.

The city contains over 700 railway stations, nearly 800 miles of railway line and eleven railway bridges span the Thames. Daily 1,000,000 persons travel on the underground railways, and 2,000,000 in 6000 omnibuses, 7000 Landaus, 14,000 cabs and 7000 tram cars. The total population is between 5,000,000 and 7,000,000.

Four thousand postmen deliver 10,000,000 letters weekly, walking a distance equal to twice the circumference of the globe. Sixty thousand letters are written a day, consuming thirty gallons of ink.

Ten thousand miles of overhead telegraph wires almost shut out the smoky canopy which spreads above the London streets, and the number of telegraph messages received in London last year was over 6,000,000. Ninety million gallons of water are consumed daily.

ESCAPED THE ROPE AGAIN

Execution of a Murderer Postponed for the Fifth Time

Montpelier, Vt., June 3.—For the fifth time the execution of Charles Doherty, for the murder of Fred Murphy, has been postponed. Doherty was convicted in August, 1901, and was sentenced to be hanged at Windsor on the second Friday in March in 1902. Several petitions for a trial and stays of execution have saved Doherty thus far. Tuesday, Nov. 4, was fixed to-day, by the supreme court of Vermont, as the day for the execution.

The case is before the United States court now on an appeal from a decision refusing a new trial on the ground of evidence that Doherty is insane.

Doherty was convicted of murdering Murphy at Bolton Falls in February, 1899, as the result of a quarrel over a girl.

GREAT BRITAIN, WITH HER COLONIES, HAS GIVEN THE WORLD A LESSON.

Special to The Times.

London, June 2.— All England rings to-day with the joyful tidings that the Boer War is over. Flags float to the breeze on every side and the streets of London are jammed with a constantly cheering mass of humanity that makes "Mafeking day" of two years ago, look mild in comparison. In every mouth is the name of Lord Kitchener, that sturdy British soldier who alone was able to subdue the powerful Dervishes of the Soudan, and has now succeeded in bringing peace out of the muddled conditions of South Africa. Huge crowds stood in front of Buckingham Palace all night, frequently singing "God Save the King." A large force of police prevented any serious disorder. The King dined out and did not return to the palace until midnight, else he would have shown himself at the window to the crowds.

In an editorial regarding the conclusion of peace, the Times says: "There has been, and could be, no treaty for substantial settlement without recognition by the burghers of the extinction of the South African Republics and the definite incorporation of their inhabitants into the British Empire."

The Times continues: "We told Botha more than a year ago the terms on which we were ready to accept the surrender of his fellow-citizens and their allies. There is every reason to believe it is upon terms essentially the same that surrender is now made. The attitude toward the nation of all her great self-governing colonies has been above all praise. It has proved we are not unworthy of our past. It has given the world an earnest idea of what we are capable of doing in the future, if we learn the lessons of the struggle aright. No other nation could have made such a military effort at such a distance from the base. Lord Salisbury had put our relations with foreign powers on a footing which made it difficult for those who might be inclined to intervene in the quarrel to indulge their inclinations, without risks which they did not care to face. By his sagacious and conciliatory diplomacy, ably continued by Lord Lansdowne, he had built up that amicable understanding between ourselves and our American cousins which has done much to sober the re-actions of less friendly States."

BRITISH GENERALS

Roughly Handled in the Thunderer's History of the War

Special to The Times.

London, June 2.—The second volume of the London Times' "History of the War," which has just appeared, is attracting unusual attention because of its scathing denunciation of British Generals and the War Office. The criticism is given additional weight by the fact of its appearing under the auspices of "The Thunderer." No enemy of Great Britain could more frankly denounce British blunders. Starting with General White's last fight before he withdrew to Ladysmith, the author says it was in reality a serious defeat of infantry badly handled by the officers in command, who "proved quite unfit to grapple with the situation in which largely by the mistakes of others he was placed." The cavalry was as bad as the infantry, and the situation was only saved by the heroism of the artillery.

The surrender of troops at Nicholson's Nek is described as premature, though "no more humiliating than many surrenders which occurred after it."

Passing to Stormberg, the writer describes the blunders which led to the reverse as "sheer mismanagement on the part of General Gatacre or his staff."

Touching the crowning misfortune at Colenso, the author says:

"Just as in the hour of battle General Buller had failed the men whom he led, so after the hour of battle he was to fail his country, which had placed the fortune of war in his hands. He utterly lost heart. Not only did he despair of doing anything himself, but he despaired for others."

Nervous and Sleepless

There is just one cure and that is plenty of food for the blood and nerves, which is best supplied in Ferrozone, than which no blood builder, nerve tonic or strength producer is better. Ferrozone promotes healthy digestion, which results in improved nutrition. The blood grows rich and red, furnishes stability to the entire system, and the store of nerve force and energy increases daily. A rebuilding of the constitution, new spirits, health and strength, all come from the use of Ferrozone. This marvelous renovator is sold by Druggists for 50c, a box, or six boxes for $2.50. Sold by Ormond & Walsh.

OREGON PROBABLY REPUBLICAN

State Elections Took Place Yesterday, but Result is in Doubt

Portland, Ore., June 2.—The election for governor and other State officers that is being held in Oregon to-day closes one of the most spirited contests in the political history of the state. The final result of the voting is of interest to the country at large inasmuch as the Republicans have conducted their fight almost wholly on national issues. In their platform they came out strongly in favor of the retention of the Philippines, attacked the trusts, advocated protection to domestic industries, declared for the continuation of the exclusion of the Chinese and favored the adoption of a sensible system. The Democrats have confined the contest more to state affairs, attacking extravagance of the state administration, the gerrymandering of the legislative districts and the alleged Republican machine.

Early returns indicate a heavy vote throughout the state. Both sides are claiming victory, the Republicans maintaining that their gubernatorial candidate, W. J. Furnish, will go into office with a majority of not less than 7,000. The Democrats, on the other hand, express equal confidence in the prospects for the success of their tickets, which is headed by George E. Chamberlain.

A Creditable Publication

"Church and Home" is the title of a new monthly publication, which will be devoted to the interests of All Saints' parish. The first number reflects the greatest credit on Rev. Mr. Armitage, the popular Rector. In making its appearance, the Church and Home says:—

In issuing the first number of our magazine "Church and Home" we wish to say that, while we were not able to begin with the opening year and the formation of the new parish of All Saints' yet we hope the current year all the numbers of the current year to make the parish paper coincide with the parish history and be a record of the same. Judging from the experience of other parishes a local publication is most valuable in bringing good tidings to the home and at the same time making known parish happenings in a way not otherwise convenient. Our sole object in issuing the present magazine is that it may accomplish this object and bring messages of comfort and instruction to our readers that may be for the good of the church and homes in our parish and for the glory of God. We ask for the support of our members—the paper should be found in every family in the parish. The subscription is only fifty (50) cents a year."

ORGAN LIGHTS CATHEDRAL

St. Paul's, in [illegible], Made Brilliant By Elec[illegible]

London, June 2.—The system of electric lights in St. Paul's Cathedral, which was donated by J. Pierpont Morgan, was formally inaugurated to-night in the presence of the Cathedral officials and a number of journalists.

The effect of the new lights was magnificent, as they brought out the architectural beauties of the building in a soft and beautiful manner, infinitely better than did the old system of illumination.

It has been decided that an additional installation of electric lights, to cost from [illegible] to [illegible], is desirable. Morgan has offered to supply this.

DEB'S ANARCHY ADVICE

Shoot Down a Coal Operator if any Miner Gets Killed While Rioting

Terre Haute, Ind., June 2.—Eugene V. Debs has written an article on the anthracite strike to the effect that the Pennsylvania coal miners have been betrayed by some of their district officers, whom he calls "political pluggers of the gang of robbers who fleece them, degrade them when they work and have them murdered when they strike." He says that "Pennsylvania, where hell is as active as Mont Pelee and slavery in full blast, has a Republican majority made as quite largely of the poor devils now on strike." The governor, he says, "is already making active preparations to return bullets for ballots."

Debs advises the miners to keep away from the capitalists partnership of priest and politician, to cut loose from the Civic Federation, which has done its worst by causing delay that has resulted in setting the miners by the ears among themselves, and to "stand together and fight it out." He further advises that if the coal police of the governor shoot down any striker without good cause the shot "shall be the signal for war, and that let it be an operator for a miner instead of miners only, as in the past."

Ringing in the Ears

This is an unfailing sign of catarrh, and if not checked will ultimately result in deafness. The simplest remedy is Catarrhozone, which if inhaled a few times daily, prevents the catarrhal condition from spreading. Catarrhozone quickly stops the ringing in the ears, head noises, gives permanent relief to catarrhal deafness. For Catarrh in any part of the system, Bronchitis, Asthma, Lung or Throat Troubles, Catarrhozone is a specific, and is guaranteed to permanently cure or your money back. PERISHED IN THE FLAMES

Woman Ran Back into the Burning House to Save Her Jewellery

Philadelphia, Pa., June 3—In a desperate effort to save her money and jewelry, yesterday, Mrs. Benjamin Lewis, aged 35 years, lost her life in a fire which badly damaged the home that had sheltered herself, her husband and their seven children, at 704 North Second street. Fireman and a patrol sergeant risked their lives in a vain effort to save her.

Lewis kept an oil cloth and matting store in the first floor front of the three story brick building. Yesterday his wife was in the kitchen, when neighbors heard screams and saw smoke issuing from the windows.

Street Sergeant Frank Phillips, of the Fairmount Avenue station, who was passing at the time, turned in an alarm of fire.

Lewis, his wife and children fled to the street, but during the excitement Mrs. Lewis shouted some remark about her money, and ran back into the house.

While the firemen were fighting the flames they were apprised of Mrs Lewis's deed. "Al" Stevens, foreman of Truck No. 7, followed by laddermen George Ford, Frank Hasson and William Williams, of the same company, made a determined effort to climb the stairway leading to the second story, but were repeatedly driven back by the smoke and flames. Then they ran into the adjoining building, No. 706 North second street, made their way to the roof, tore the trap door from the burning house, and descended to the third floor.

Patrol Sergeant Harry Andrews had followed with blankets. Groping their way through the smoke, they found the charred remains of Mrs. Lewis lying near the third story landing of the stairway. Near her lay charred notes amounting to $16, some small change and a gold watch, gold chain and other jewelry, partly melted.

ONE MAD MAN KILLS ANOTHER

Beat Him to Death in the Hospital at Norristown

Norristown, Pa., June 2.—One inmate killed another at the State Hospital for the Insane here. The victim, John Hughes, was 76 years of age, and his assailant, Arthur Dorsey, is somewhat younger. Dorsey is a ward of Philadelphia and very powerful.

Without provocation, while an attendant's back was turned, he sprang upon the feeble Hughes and, after he had felled him to the floor, pummeled and kicked him until overpowered by keepers. An examination of Hughes disclosed that four ribs were fractured and that one of them penetrated his lungs, causing death. Dorsey is now in a [illegible]. Hughes was admitted from Phoenixville 10 years ago, his mind having become unbalanced by worry after he had shot a man who was trying to escape arrest, he (Hughes) being an officer at the time.

Another International Alliance

Detroit, Mich., June 2.—Elaborate arrangements have been completed for the wedding of Miss Martha Palms and the Count Laurent de Champeaux, of Paris, which takes place this evening in the bishop's chapel on Washington avenue. The ceremony will be witnessed by members of the family and very intimate friends only, but more than 500 invitations have been issued for the reception to be held at the home of the bride's parents after the wedding ceremony. The bride will be attended by her sister, Miss Violet Palms, while the Count Louis de Champeaux will act as best man. Count and Countess de Champeaux will make their future home in Paris.

THE CLOSE OF THE WAR

The following spasm was worked off by our junior reporter, when the news reached here of the close o' the war. At the great risk of breaking the press we print it below:

Still freedom is the nation's cry—
The boon our soldiers fought about;
For liberty we still would die,
If it showed signs of playing out.

We'd rather slumber in the grave,
Far from sounds of grief and mirth,
Than wear the shackles of the slave
And bump around on top of earth.

If liberty should be denied
The while I plod life's rugged way,
Let the cold grave gape open wide.
And swallow down this g.f.j.

TAKING PUMPS FROM MINES

While Preparing for Long Seige, There are Peace Rumors—Offer said to Come From Miners—Mitchell Reported as Waiving all Claims Except for Wage Increase

Pittsburg, Pa., June 2.—A report was in circulation yesterday that a conference was held during the morning between Senator Hanna, of the Civic Federation, and George W. Perkins, representing J. P. Morgan & Company, relative to a settlement of the anthracite coal strike. Senator Hanna refused to either deny or confirm the report.

President Mitchell, of the United Mine Workers, in an effort to end the strike, is reported to have waived all demands, with the exception of that for an increase in wages. In connection with other rumors of a possible settlement, it is said the coal companies are considering this proposition.

The State and Executive Departments have commissioned 1000 coal and iron policemen for duty in the anthracite fields. The Reading Coal and Iron Company has officers living on cars ready for transportation to any part of Schuylkill country at a moment's notice.

A despatch from Scranton, Penna., says the Thirteenth Regiment, National Guards, is preparing for duty, pursuant to "orders that are made necessary by the conditions existing in the anthracite coal regions."

The Reading Coal and Iron Company yesterday removed the pumps from the Kohinoor Colliery, in the Mahanoy Valley, and it is said other mines, including those in the Heckshersville Valley, will be permitted to flood should the engineers, pumpmen and firemen quit work.

An anthracite mine operator said yesterday in Wilkesbarre that the operators will not treat with the miners as a body, even though this policy would involve a year's idleness at the collieries.

COMMUNICATIONS.

A communication was received from Mr. Wright regarding reports in circulation of the presence of diphtheria in the school. It appears to have been simply a false alarm, but the Board of Health will be requested to look into the matter.

The next question under discussion was in reference to the local and county assessments. The matter was gone over with considerable detail, but no action could be taken.

A bylaw for the exemption from taxes of the Canadian Ultimator Company to Dec. 31st, 1902, was laid over till the next meeting of the Council.

A contract for water service for the village was under consideration, but it was thought advisable to make further inquiries, several changes being suggested.

The question of putting down a concrete walk on both sides of Elizabeth street, from Lake street to Mark street, was taken under consideration and the price compared with that of a board walk. The matter will be brought up at the next meeting.

The council adjourned at 9.30.

TOBACCO, LIQUOR AND DRUGS

Dr. McTaggart's Tobacco remedy removes all desire for the weed in a few weeks. A vegetable medicine, and only requires touching the tongue with it occasionally. Price $2. 75 Yonge street, Toronto.

Simply marvellous are the results from taking his remedy for the liquor, morphine and other drug habits. Is a safe and inexpensive home treatment; no hypodermic injections; no publicity; no loss of time from business, and a certainty of cure.

THE OTONABEE RIVER WILL BE DREDGED

The Hon. Geo. A. Cox Met the City Fathers Last Night

CEREAL CO. TO SPEND $30,000

And the Government $30,000 in Making the Otonabee Navigable—and in Improving the Water Front.

The Town Council met in regular session last night when there were present Mayor T. H. G. Denne, and Ald. Cockery, Batten, Clinkscale, Morrison, Turner, McGregor, Roger, Rush, Shortly, Edgecombe and Best.

Before convening council met in committee Hon. Senator Cox, Messrs. Macdonald and Kearns of the Cereal Company and Mr. R. M. Dennistoun, to discuss a proposal from the American Cereal Company for dredging a portion of the river and improving the water front lots recently conveyed by patent to the town.

Senator Cox explained that the Hon. J. Israel Tarte, Minister of Public Works, had arranged for an appropriation of $30,000 toward dredging the river, providing the town appropriate a like amount. He had been assured by the Minister of Public Works that this sum would be included in this year's supplementary estimates. Regarding the other $30,000 which must be supplied to make up the $60,000 necessary for the works in question he understood the town was not prepared at present to assume that liability. The Cereal Company, however, are willing to contribute the required sum of $30,000 in order to have the work proceeded with at once, in return for which they are prepared to accept a conveyance of the land along the water front in question, or repayment by the Town in cash within a given period of the actual cost to them (the Cereal Company) of the improvements. The hon. gentleman explained that although representing the American Cereal Co., his interest in the Town of Peterborough was greater than his interest in the Cereal Co.

Ald. Best remarked that he would rather convey the land to the company at once than enter into a dual agreement.

Senator Cox replied that the Cereal Company would willingly agree to that. Their object in giving an option to the town of assuming the property in a given time was to render the agreement as satisfactory as possible to both parties.

After considerable discussion a committee was appointed to go thoroughly into the matter and report to the Council.

In the mean time council met and the Notice of Agreement between the Peterborough Radial Railway Company and the Town was, in compliance with the act in reference to such matters, read by Town Clerk Armstrong.

No objection being raised to this agreement for the operation of a street railway in Peterborough, council adjourned.

Council met pursuant to adjournment at 10.30, when Ald. Morrison moved, seconded by Ald. J. J. Turner, "That an agreement be entered into with the American Cereal Company for the work in question, providing the Company, under the direction of the Dominion government's engineer, dredge the river from Murray to Dalhousie street and filling in the water front from Hunter, on the west side of the river to King street, raising the land up to high water line. Due precaution is to be exercised for protecting Hunter street bridge, and the cribbed portion between King and Charlotte streets is to be filled in so as to be suitable for docking. The town is also to have the privilege of extending Charlotte and King streets to the water front. Unless the council is willing within eighteen months to pay to the Company their actual cost in making these improvements the land in question to be conveyed to the American Cereal Company, subject to the rights of the Wm. English Co. and Mrs. M. A. Rogers, and reserving to the Town the land between King and Charlotte streets lying east of the C.P.R. reserve for public purposes and docking.

The resolution was carried unanimously, which means that unless some unlooked for hitch in the proceedings occurs the government, through the instrumentality of the Hon. Israel Tarte, with the co-operation of the Hon. Senator Cox, will appropriate $30,000 to be expended, with $30,000 or more from the Cereal Company in making the river navigable up to this company's works and improving the water front and providing docking accommodation.

Council adjourned until tonight at 8 o'clock.

UNION LABEL

CANADA AT THE CORONATION

Canada will make a good showing at the Coronation. Sir Wilfrid Laurier will give the notion of grace and dignity; while the body of troops by which he will be surrounded will convey an idea of free spaces—big, tall, deep-chested fellows, with the fearless look, which only come with intimate relations with nature in all her large and careless aspects. There may be a little of the smugness of the large centre in the dandy officer, but the representation will tell of the North-west, of a country large, strong and promising. And the contingent will prove a capital advertisement for the Dominion. For John Bull is a little thick in the head, and needs the object lesson pressed home. And when he sees these fine fellows, with the breadth and the courage and the look of health and prosperity, he will desire to make closer acquaintance with that country which breeds such splendid types of men. Sir Wilfrid is already well known in England. He may disappoint in one important particular, but his personality will win its way. He will offer the classic ideal; he will contribute an eloquence which would be welcome in the most important debates in the mother of Parliaments; he will suggest a perfect dignity which leaves nothing to be desired. And though we, who have been brought up under democratic conditions, may feel like laughing at archaic ceremonies which answers to nothing in the life of the present, yet we must concede a unique impressiveness and solemnity to the occasion. For the King to be crowned is no petty potentate whose distinctions are trivial, but the sovereign of the mightiest empire in the world—an empire which has always stood for the righteous ideal in the life of the individual and the nation—an empire whose decline and fall would be an immeasurable blow to humanity. Sir Wilfrid surrounded by his ministers, and escorted by troops, will present a picture which will give a new notion of the Dominion, will attract a great deal of attention, and the Dominion will be in evidence in the most flattering way. The great council which will be held after the coronation may, in spite of the attitude of the Premier, be momentous in its consequences. For the question of Imperialism will not down. Perhaps the colonies are now quite ripe for the past, which must come if the empire is to hold together, but at least the subject is so urgent that it must be discussed by the brightest and most influential minds in the empire.

THE EMPIRE'S GRANARY

To surmount the Canadian Coronation arch with the legend "Canada, the future granary of the Empire," was a stroke of genius.

When the full force of the conspicuousness of the arch is utilized to impress one fact upon the minds of the millions who will see it, that fact will sink in far deeper than would any group of facts, each helping to hide the other.

"Canada, the future granary of the Empire." It will come to the minds of most with the vividness of a new idea. For years, the British people have been worrying about this or that Imperial granary scheme which should guarantee them against famine in case of war. And here is the solution blazoned across the thronged street. Not merely an indefinite assurance that the wheat fields of the colonies will contribute ;but the confident assertion that one definite colony—Canada—will be an abundant granary for the whole Empire.

Our representatives in London are to be warmly congratulated upon their spectacular presentation of so timely and important a truth.

BOER EDUCATION

It may be well to note that whereas the Transvaal government before the war broke out had, on its own showing, only 14,700 children in its public schools, last month there was already 28,700 children upon the school registers in the newly acquired colonies, teachers having been sent out from Canada as well as from the mother country and Australia. A great portion of a population, mainly pastoral, must naturally always live far from any centre where a school could be maintained. A system of visiting teachers has accordingly been devised, by which farms will be separately treated in circuits. The British intention is that education in secular subjects shall be given in English, but Dutch will be recognized for religious instruction, since the ideas of the people are closely bound up with the words of the Dutch Bible.

Apart from that we are reminded that the true vernacular is the Taal, a barbarous patois, in which literary or scientific education is impossible, and which is as unintelligible to an educated Dutchman as to an educated Britisher. Dutch is no more the language of the Boer than French or German.

France keeps on building canals. Since 1880 she has expended $120,000,000 in extending her internal system of cheap water transportation, and she will expend $100,000,000 more in the completion of projects already begun. The resulting extremely economical movement of heavy material of manufacture no doubt contributes largely to the industrial prosperity of the nation. It is quite possible that the general abandonment of canals in many of the States of this country will prove in the end a mistaken policy notwithstanding the extraordinary reductions which have been effected in the cost of rail transportation.

The powers have given another twist to the screw that is squeezing the life out of unhappy China, and Secretary Hay has protested in the name of the United States as usual. The claim is set up that China must pay the indemnity in gold at the rate of exchange prevailing at the time the periodical payments shall be made. The previous understanding has been that China should pay at the rate of exchange prevailing at the time the treaty was signed. The price of silver is steadily falling, and this change in the terms of the treaty would add $70,000,000 already to the indemnity. Nobody knows how much farther silver may fall, and the indemnity debt may increase faster than it can be paid. The people are restless under taxation now, and realization of an absolutely hopeless burden of debt would probably bring on revolution and anarchy. This would suit the policy of some of the powers, but not our policy.

Tuberculosis Discussed

New York, June 2.—The conference of the American Congress of Tuberculosis, which was postponed from last month, began its sessions to-day at the Hotel Majestic. There were present to take part in the discussions eminent physicians and surgeons, health authorities and other persons from nearly every part of the United States and Canada. The sessions are to continue three days, during which time the subject of the dread disease, its prevention and treatment, will be discussed from every point of view. Particular attention is to be paid to recent discoveries of so-called cures for the disease and also to the subject of government aid in the establishment and maintenance of institutions for scientific treatment.

DETROIT UNITED RAILWAY

The intelligent investor in listed securities having a current market is seeking that which possesses not only intrinsic merit and remunerative income, but future enhancement in market value as well. Conviction on these three important points once firmly established among the investing public concerning a particular security is followed by three results—demand, security of stock and advancing prices.

It is good to know of such opportunities, for it enables the public to invest safely and add to their individual accumulation of this world's goods, thereby increasing in a measure the world's happiness, and the result is satisfactory, not only to the investor, but to his broker as well, particularly if the broker in question happens to be the dispenser of such a bit of happiness.

Detroit United Railway stock is on the eve of an advance in price which will carry quotations from the present level of 74 to par. The advance is inevitable for the simple reason that as a substantial investment of recognized merit the stock is selling at least $35 per share below what it is worth. This statement, made with full confidence, is not an idle boast, but is based on cold existing facts; and if any among my readers are sceptical in any degree let them look into the facts and figures and they will be convinced.

It is although an absurd proposition that the stock of a city traction company having no competition, paying regular dividends of 4 per cent. and earning 6 per cent., should be quoted at any such ridiculously low a figure as the present price.

All that is necessary is for the public to know that a good thing like Detroit United is available, and the disparity between present quotations and real worth will soon be bridged over by the most legitimate means known, and that is by public buying on broad scale. At the present time three separate financial interests are negotiating for the Cleveland holdings around 70. In the meantime it is exceedingly probable that public buying, now well under way, will absorb these holdings at prices ranging from the present level to par, and the syndicates referred to will suddenly wake up to find that they have missed an unusual opportunity by pursuing a penny-wise and poundfoolish policy in regard to price.

HERE ARE THE FACTS

Detroit United Railway is a consolidation of all the electric railways in and about Detroit. There are no competing lines. The total mileage is 300 miles, having a total bonded indebtedness of $14,280,000, which is $41,730.00 per mile, and it may be remarked that this is exceedingly conservative and less per mile than that of any other city road in the United States.

The total authorized and outstanding capital stock $12,500,000, which is $32,893.00 per mile, so that there is 74,634.00 per mile in bonds and stock. Cincinnati Street Railway is bonded and stocked for $90,330 per mile; St. Louis United about $167,000 per mile; Twin City Rapid Transit, $125,643 per mile. These comparisons prove the absence of the customary watering process, more recently known as "Morganizing."

The following figures, showing the earnings, operating expenses, etc., of the Detroit United Railway for two years are conclusive proofs of its merits:

Year Ending—	1900	1901
Earnings, gross	$3,075,276	$3,642,237
Earnings, net	1,150,773	1,365,473
Per cent. of operation		64.70
Fixed charges	636,317	675,344
Surplus for stock	612	670,129
Per cent on stock	4.10	5.36
Price of stock		73 1-2
Population served	400,000

Gross Earnings...4 months July—Oct 1901 $1,120,376

Gross Earnings, January 1—March 31.	1901	1902
	$643,071	$705,681

I am indebted to Mr. Guy M. Walker, of 25 Broad street, New York, for the following facts in regard to Detroit United Railway stock, as compared to Twin City Rapid Transit common stock, now quoted at 122. First dividend of 1 per cent was paid on Twin City stock in August, 1899; in 1900, 3 per cent.; 1901, 3 1-2 percent.; 1902, February, 2 per cent. It should be borne in mind that Twin City Rapid Transit is not even established as a 4 per cent. dividend payer; that there is a 7 per cent. preferred stock ahead of it, and yet the common stock is quoted at 122, or $50 per share above Detroit, which is absolutely established as a 4 per cent. dividend payer. Either Twin City stock is selling too high or Detroit too low.

"In comparing the intrinsic value of the stocks of the two companies, it should be noted that while the bonded debt of Twin City amounts to $47,250.00 per mile, that of the Detroit United is only $41,730.00 per mile, while the stock per mile of Twin City is $78,394.00 to Detroit United $32,893.00, making the total capitalization of the Twin City Rapid Transit Company $125,643.00 per mile, as against only $74,634.00 per mile for Detroit United. The populations served are almost exactly the same.

"The percentages earned by the two properties for their common stock are almost the same, though the earnings for Detroit United for 1901 show a slightly larger gain over its earnings for 1900 than does the Twin City Rapid Transit Company.

"It should, however, be noted that Twin City is making its present earnings on a cost of operation amounting to only 44.00 per cent of its gross earnings, which is far below normal, and which certainly can not be maintained in the future, while Detroit United is expending for operation and maintenance 64.70 per cent. of its gross earnings, which is slightly above normal, and which ought to be reduced to approximately 60 per cent. within the next year or two.

"It can, therefore, chiefly be seen that Detroit United promises considerably greater returns to its stockholders for the immediate future than Twin City, and it is unreasonable to suppose that the stock will continue at its present low quotations of 74, while Twin City is considered to be worth and apparently holds firm at approximately $125.00 per share."

FUTURE INCREASED EARNINGS

On the basis of the actual earnings for the first three months of 1902, Detroit United will show for the present fiscal year, in round figures, $3,500,000 gross, equivalent to $1,575,000 net, being more than double the interest on its bonded debt. After deducting fixed charges, now aggregating $730,343, there will remain at least a net surplus available for dividends of $844,657, or an amount in excess of 7 1-2 per cent. on the entire capital stock issue.

A syndicate of Philadelphia capitalists recently made a proposition to form a leasing company, take over the management of the Detroit United, and guarantee dividends, beginning with 4 per cent. per annum and increasing 1-2 per cent. each year until 6 1-2 per cent. annually should be paid and continued during the life of the lease.

This proposition was rejected.

At this writing I am reliably informed that the Bankers' Committee of Cleveland, holding in trust the Everett-Moore Syndicate holdings of Detroit United, have practically concluded negotiations for the sale of 30,000 shares to an Eastern syndicate. The remaining 10,000 shares are to be withdrawn from the market.

The withdrawal of this stock from the market, which has heretofore been the cause of existing sacrifice quotations on Detroit United, marks the present level as the low record prices from now on. It is a noteworthy fact, of interests to the probable purchaser, that during the past week the market for Detroit United has broadened perceptibly. Buying orders for the stock in blocks are in evidence from Eastern purchasers. Heretofore the market has been confined to Detroit, Cleveland, Cincinnati, and Louisville. Now, what will be the effect on current quotations, with demand for the stock from Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburg, Chicago, and St. Louis? I repeat that these actually existing conditions mean a long advance ahead, and those among my readers who want to make not only a good investment, but a long profit as well, had better get in the band waggon not later than mighty soon, for late arrivals will have to go way back and sit down if they expect to get any stock under 75.

One of the chief objections to investors heretofore has been the fact that last year the Detroit United accumulated a floating debt of $800,000, resulting, not from any deficit in operating, but from the purchase of 75 per cent. of the capital stock of the Detroit & Port Huron Shore Line and the Windsor Street Railway, both of which properties, though controlled by the Detroit United, are not included in the consolidation. This floating debt has now been entirely eliminated by an issue of $1,000,000 4 1-2 per per cent. bonds, which were sold to E. H. Gay & Co., of Boston, and recently offered by them for public subscription.

This leaves the property in excellent condition financially, with valuable assets in the controlling stocks referred to. Physically the property is conceded to have no superior in any city in the United States or Canada.

Detroit United Railway 4 per cent stock is listed on the Cincinnati Stock Exchange. Telegraph a collect message to my firm for accurate quotations and prices, and prompt reply will be made. During the next few weeks an active market in Detroit United may be confidently anticipated, accompanied by a higher level of prices.

A Fighting Schoolmaster.

The experience of a college graduate named Levenworth, who taught for a year in a little Western town, is an example of the way in which a teacher sometimes wins the admiration of his pupils quite unexpectedly.

Levenworth was not a teacher by nature or profession; but, as many men have done, he spent a year teaching to get money enough to help himself through the law school. He was a hearty, clear-minded fellow, who kept rather aloof from the townspeople. The local paper spoke of him as having "had a promising career in college."

Part of this promising career had, as it happened, been spent in athletics. He had learned to box and wrestle, and had won his class championship in the art which, from its unfortunate association with the prize-ring, has not so good a reputation among the peaceful as, in its legitimate form, it deserves.

His school was quiet and orderly from the start, but he found it hard work to get on intimate terms with the twenty boys under him. They obeyed at a distance, but did not show much personal friendship for him.

One day at recess, when the schoolyard was a clamor of voices, the young master heard a sudden lull. Looking out the window, he saw the children lined up against the fence watching a teamster, who was stupidly trying to whip his horse up the hill that ran past the school. The wagon was loaded heavily with garden-stuff, and the horse was doing his best to no purpose.

Suddenly one of the boys went into the street, and evidently remonstrated with the driver. For answer he got an ugly slash of the whip, and reeled back, holding his hands over his eyes.

This was too much for Levenworth. He ran downstairs and out across the playground. Coolly pushing a stone under the wheel with his foot, he commanded the teamster, a gaunt, sinewy man, to come off his seat.

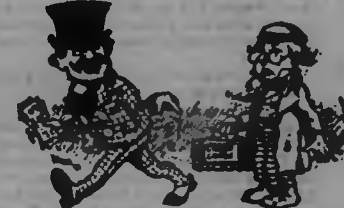
The fellow grew hostile at once, and obeyed. Jumping down, he approached the schoolmaster, ready and eager for a fight, and heated to dangerous anger by his struggle with the horse.

It was a real, old-fashioned fight, with the power of anger and excitement on one side, and skill, backed by those almost infallible allies, right and justice, on the other.

There was enough left of the teamster to drive his horse, while a dozen boys put their shoulders to the wheels and pushed the wagon to the top of the hill.

The pupil whose task it was to ring the bell for the end of recess was a minute late that day. The teacher was late, too. It took him a little time to put his clothes in order and wash his face and hands. Meanwhile the school assembled, not without some noise and excitement, and took their seats. They were subdued and orderly when Levenworth came in and walked to his desk.

Before he had time to be seated, and as if by a preconcerted signal, the pupils began to applaud. Discipline and modesty made the teacher try to stop them. It was useless, so he smiled. Then they cheered. The disorder of the next minute was quite against the rules, but nobody received a black mark on the schoolmaster's deportment book; and after that, to Levenworth's surprise, there was a new and warm friendship in the bearing of the boys toward him.



A Popular Novel—"Tarry Thou Till I Come."—New York "Life."

Not Guilty.

"Who made the world?" snapped out a rather testy inspector years ago to a class of very small boys. No answer. Several times he repeated the question, getting louder and more incensed each time. At last a poor little fellow, kneading his eyes vigorously with his knuckles, blubbered out, "Please, sir, it wadn't me."

Why Linn Quit the Newspaper.

James Weber Linn, whose novel, "The Second Generation," a story of newspaper life and political corruption in Chicago, has brought him into the public eye, is a nephew of Miss Jane Addams of Hull House, Chicago.

How this young author came to quit newspaper work is an interesting story. He secured a position on the staff of a Chicago daily immediately on leaving college. All went well until one night, about three months after he took up the life of a reporter, when the city editor assigned him to make a midnight call at a home where the head of the household, a prominent man, had committed suicide. "Get a good talk out of the wife and the girl," were the parting instructions. As Linn approached the house he was overcome by a sense of the intrusiveness of his mission. Suddenly the glamor and charm of newspaper work vanished. In vain he attempted to force himself to go up the steps of the house. The traditional incentive of the newspaper office, the argument that he must not "fall down" on his assignment, failed to stimulate his interest or his courage, and the longer he stood staring at the black streamer of crape that fluttered from the door the greater became his repugnance for his disagreeable task. Finally he turned on his heel, took a car back to the office, and handed in his resignation with the explanation that some other man would have to get that interview. This episode ended his newspaper experience and he soon secured a position as an instructor in rhetoric in the University of Chicago, where he is still engaged.

Mr. Linn's book was written in six weeks, while spending a vacation in Europe. His success affords another example of the fact that much of the literature of the day is being made by the young, for he is only twenty-five years of age.

For the Farmer.

For the destruction of fungus growth use the fungicides, such as Bordeaux mixture. For sucking insects use the kerosene emulsion. For biting insects use Paris green.

The Globe has been favored by Secretary F. D. Coburn with the last quarter's report of the Kansas State Board of Agriculture. It contains about 400 pages of interesting information about the production, marketing and milling of wheat in Kansas.

Meat is dear, says The Chicago Live Stock World, not so much because of a shortage in supply as on account of a phenomenal demand. The whole country is prosperous, and is consuming meat in unusual quantities. Chicago has received this year about 4,700 cars of live stock more than in the same period of 1901.

The report of the Connecticut Agricultural Experiment Station for 1901 on food products is just to hand, and contains a good deal of useful as well as much disquieting information. The station ordered visits to forty-three towns and villages and has purchased samples of food products from each. The results showed that the custom of adulterating with chemical preservatives and chemical dyes is more prevalent than is generally imagined. Of 246 samples of milk bought, twenty-one were adulterated with chemical preservatives. Of 116 samples of tomato catsup, sauce, etc., 98 were adulterated with dyes of coal tar origin, and of 60 samples of jams and jellies, 21 were adulterated in a similar manner. Many of these dyes are most injurious to health. The chemicals commonly employed as preservatives were salicylic acid, salicylate of soda, benzoic acid, and benzoate of soda, all of which are hurtful. Several of the firms mentioned as having employed adulterants of the kind do business in Canada. The public will do well to avoid highly colored tomato catsup, and chili sauce, and to buy no jams and jellies that are not manufactured by reputable firms.

Raising Good Cows.

I like to fuss with calves. I like the calves because I like good cows and realize the fact that the foundation of a good cow is a good calf. Sometimes I come across a good cow that can be bought at a reasonable price, but the surest way to get a good cow is to raise her from a calf of known parentage. There are people who yet believe they can feed butter fat into milk. My experience, however, is that when you have a cow that gives blue milk, blue milk she will make, even on the richest kind of food, and when it is given to her in fullest supply. And when you have a cow that gives rich, creamy milk that butter-makers and milk-consumers like, rich milk she will give, even if she has nothing but cornstalks or poor hay to eat. Feed determines the quantity of milk, while the blood of the animal determines the milk's richness. For that reason it does not pay to bother with calves of blue milk stock (unless for selling milk, and hardly then). Nor does it pay to fuss with a calf that for any reason is lacking in individual vigor.

But any vigorous heifer calf of good stock is too good for the butcher when it is so easy to make a good cow out of it in not more than two years' time. The Guernseys and Jerseys have the reputation of giving the richest milk. But there is yet a great difference in this respect in individual cows, or, perhaps, rather, in cow families. Just at present I am raising a calf from a Jersey dam, whose milk contains more butter fat than I have ever seen in milk before. Not having much milk on which to bring this calf up, I have tried milk substitutes, especially clear flaxseed meal and a calf meal. I began giving flaxseed meal on the third day by the teaspoonful, gradually increasing to two handfuls at a feed in the fifth or sixth week. The meal was put into a pail, and boiling water put on it, making a thin soup, which was mixed with what skim milk I could spare for the purpose and fed blood warm. At six weeks of age the calf meal—which seems to consist mostly of flaxseed meal or oil meal—was substituted for the flaxseed meal, two good handfuls at a feed. This calf also receives dry bran and other ground grains, and eats several handfuls out of its pail, some cut clover hay, etc., and has done so well that I believe it possible to bring up good calves practically without milk, except for a short time on the start.—T. Greener, in Farm and Fireside.

Orchard and Garden.

At the Nova Scotia Fruit Growers' meeting Prof. L. H. Bailey of Cornell University said that the fifteen years last past were marked by three distinct improvements in the methods of caring for orchards. The first was the introduction of spraying, which had now become so universal a practice that it was not thought necessary to advocate it at the meetings. The second was the tillage of orchards, and that was so well settled now that the farmers do not ask, "Shall we cultivate?" but "What are the best methods for clay or sandy soil?" whichever the orchard was on. Now the prime question seems to be upon the use of a cover crop for the orchard, and he believed that within five years they would be discussing the merits of special cover crops for special soils. Where the soil is not in condition to grow better crops he would use rye as a starter, and gradually work the soil up until it was rich enough to grow crimson clover, which he thought the best cover crop.

But it is quite possible to get the soil too rich with peas and clover if plowed under each spring, and thus it would be well to change occasionally to buckwheat or rye. He would plow them with gang plow, and cover only three or four inches deep. This he would do early in the spring, that they might decay. Would not use commercial fertilizers, or but a little, until the trees came into bearing. After the first four years the orchard should not need plowing, but the disc or cut-away harrows should be sufficient for cultivation. He urged setting two-year-old trees, and said that when two-year-old and six-year-old trees were set at the same time they were of equal size after five years. He is setting in his own orchard the Northern Spy, and top-grafting them with scions from bearing trees that produce fruit of known excellence, as he believes in the individuality of trees.

The Poultry Yard.

Qualities of the Andalusian.

The Andalusian is a member of the Mediterranean family; it might be called a Blue Laced Minorca or Leghorn, as one might wish, since it is formed like them. Some follow the more gamey type of the Leghorn or Spanish, while others are built on the exact lines of the Minorca. These fowls undoubtedly came from the union or cross of the solid white and solid black fowl. In early days when we had the old time pure white and pure black Spanish with but small white lobes or face, they came of that type, and now we have them of both the Leghorn and the Minorca type.

The slate-blue colored hen can be seen in almost every flock of barnyard fowls. Some of them are laced like the Andalusian. The same manner of color and lacing is seen in the Jersey Blues. The shade of color and style of marking are not unusual, but the real beauty is best shown as cultivated in the well bred Andalusians of to-day, for the elegance of which, as seen in this country, much credit is due Mr. Newton Cosh, who has done so much for this breed in the way of cultivating size, shape and color to American notions of beauty.

The Andalusians are a fine sized fowl; the females range from 4 1-2 to 6 pounds in weight, the males from 5 1-2 to 7 pounds, with an inclination for those that have the Minorca type to range a little larger in size than the others. They are wonderfully good egg producers; their eggs are large and white in color of shell. We should class the Andalusian among the best of our Leghorns for egg producers, and might be called a general-purpose Leghorn, for they are not only good egg producers, but are equally good table poultry, and will bear confinement in yards and do well.

Learning Wisdom From Mistakes.

The first and greatest mistake I made was to get every new breed that I could hear or read about, when the fact was I only had enough room for a few of one breed. I did not pay enough attention to the health of my chicks, and the result was that cholera got among them, and my young chicks died faster than I could bury them. I got heartsick, and let my stock run down to only a few for family use. I took all the poultry papers I could read, but they did not help me. I let my chickens run where they pleased and forage where they could find food; only, they were not allowed inside of my barn or waggon house under any circumstances.

When Plymouth Rocks came into prominence I sent to Massachusetts and got a pair of high up, pure blood, registered Rocks. These I kept one year and got perfectly sick of them, as the egg production was not what I expected, and the meat was tough and [illegible]. But I know now where I failed.

Eggs are what the farmers want of poultry. If an amateur wants information along these lines he naturally turns to the poultry paper editor, but how often he gets disappointed! Many an ignorant beginner has sought for light where he was led to expect light, and got it not; dropped the musket and deserted the army, when a few words of counsel and advice would have made him a good fighter.

You must have bones to cut to make the bone cutter of use, and many farmers are not so situated that they can obtain them; to such the commercial crushed bones, or meat, are more advantageous. I pound up with a stone sledge all I can get, and the hens relish it much. As to vegetable cutters, the farmer who keeps only a few hens does not feel like putting out cash for a hand cutter. But do not deprive your hens of chopped vegetables. Take a common hand hoe to the blacksmith, and have him rap it out of the handle and straighten it out perfectly straight and put it back into the handle, and sharpen the edge if it needs it. Take an old butter tub or a wooden pail and put in your vegetables to be chopped. Chop your cutter around the sides of the tub, and you will be surprised how quickly you can reduce any kind of vegetable to a fine feed fit to mix with your hot mash.

Also for chopping clover. Take good, clean clover, all you can grasp tightly in the left hand, sweep away a clean place on the floor, and with a square-bitted hand axe chop off the cuts as short as you want, and as near the hand as you dare and be safe, and in two minutes you can chop a pailful of nice,fine clover. I feed one day chopped vegetables and the next day chopped clover in my hot mash.

Some have trouble with hens eating their eggs in cold weather. Poultry papers tell us if hens are fed a proper ration they will not eat their eggs. Admitting this, how many common farmers can or will go to the trouble to feed their hens a proper ration. And those who will not feed a scientific ration to hens I am advising.

Take a boot or shoe box at least twenty inches deep, make a partition in it large enough for your hen's nests; for big hens twelve inches square, for smaller hens ten inches square, will be big enough. Cut a round hole at the top six or seven inches in diameter, according to the size of your hen; nail the top on tight, stop all cracks where light can come in, put a step on the outside low enough so the hen can stand on it and look in and see the eggs, but not so she can reach them with her bill, and when she hops into the hole the nest will be dark, and if she drops into the nest it is not so large that she can reach the egg. She will fly out and off, and go to work and forget the egg, and you have saved it for your own use. The hen must needs stand on something in order to peck the egg. These boxes I nail up around the henhouse about two feet from the floor. Some farmers let the hens roost on poles at different heights, but nests want to be all on a level. Put a floor of poles or loose boards about three feet above the roost and cover with straw, and you will not have frosted combs if your house is anywhere reasonably warm, even if the air on the floor is below freezing.

If these thoughts are of value, and more are wanted I will be glad to benefit my fellow-farmers. I write of what I know, and have tried.—D. Dole, New Idea Poultry Yard, Ellenburg Centre, N.Y.

Beating a Gambler at His Own Game.

If every one who has a system for beating the bank at Monte Carlo attempts to float a public company, as the young Earl of Rosslyn is doing, to invite the world to share in the profits, there will not be much available capital left for any other enterprises. Whatever may be the peculiar merits of the scheme evolved by the English peer, who has recently been selling dog biscuit, the fact remains that despite the daily attack on the Monte Carlo bank by mathematicians with new systems the Casino continues to pay its large dividends.

Not only does the Prince of Monaco welcome the distinguished scientists who come to deprive him of his wealth, but he even goes so far as to pay their railway fare home, when their money is gone, and to provide for them, if desired, one of the most picturesque spots in the world in which to blow their brains out. But pistol practice on the grounds is very distasteful to the prince; hence his readiness to provide funds to place the unlucky system player in some other part of the world, where he may take his life in whatever manner he pleases, without disturbing the other players at the tables.

One of the recreations of a well-known New York banker, who has no need to "break the bank" at Monte Carlo to provide funds for himself, is to play imaginary roulette on a complicated system of his own invention. Although a yearly visitor at Monte Carlo, he has never staked a sou on the spin of the ball at the Casino. Back in his college days he was an honor man in mathematics, and he still delights in odd computations that have no connection with dividends and money rates. One day last spring at Monte Carlo he amused himself by making a "graphic chart" of the "rouge et noir" croupier for five hundred consecutive rolls. Governed by the immutable laws of chance, the zigzag line, tracing the variations from one color to the other, appeared to have certain subzigzags of similar outline occurring at irregular intervals. Taking the daily record sheets of the roulette wheels, the New York banker plotted more charts, all of which showed the same characteristic zigzags, with "high levels," "low levels," "criss-crosses," "runs" and "chutes," and other peculiarities, for which the mathematical American has an elaborate nomenclature.

Coming back to New York, he privately engaged, in another part of the office building in which is his banking house, a small room, which he fitted up as a miniature Monte Carlo. Six young women spent three weeks there spinning the roulette wheels and making charts of the fall of the balls. These charts represent the equivalent of a year's play at one of the tables at Monte Carlo. The banker keeps them in a safe-deposit box, marked "strictly private;" the wheels he has destroyed. These charts, too, have the same easily recognized zigzags. From the study of them the New Yorker has evolved a "graphic system" of "beating the bank" which has met with marvelous success, although the major part of the winnings has been made in imaginary play. At odd moments he and several club friends played the charts. Starting with a capital of $1,000, they won a small sum every "day," and at the end of the "year" had won $234,000 without plunging. Had they given a larger increment to their wagers they would have "broken the bank." They are all satisfied that the chart system is based upon good mathematics and will "beat the bank."

While he was at the Carlton, in London, the banker met a Dutch diplomatic officer, on his way to America, to whom he gave the results of his observations at the tables at Monte Carlo. The nobleman from Amsterdam, who is greatly respected among the baccarat players of Paris, had just had some very costly lessons in American poker from his New York friends. He was delighted with the mathematical beauties of the "graphic system" and offered to furnish a capital of £10,000 if the banker would go with him to Monte Carlo and instruct him how to make his wagers. The American, of course, declined, but he gave the Dutch official enough of an outline of the method of play so that when he made a recent visit to America he spent several profitable nights in a well-known gambling house near Fifth avenue. The first night he won $250, the second $440, the third $1,200, and the fourth $370. The one fault he found with the system was that the winnings were made at the expense of brain tissue. He said he would not attempt to follow it longer. Meanwhile the secret of the "graphic system" of "breaking the bank at Monte Carlo" lies in a safe-deposit box in Broad street, and the man who has the key refuses to indulge in public gambling.—"Leslie's Weekly."

A Golf Sermon.

To illustrate his text, "Thou art not far from the Kingdom of God," an Edinburgh minister the other day drew upon familiar golf expressions. He said:

"'Not far from the Kingdom of God' is not within it. That is how I would put it. 'Never up,never in.' I dare say those of you who are golfers know what that means, and I am sure if you have ever paid any attention to the game you will be struck by the way in which the game of golf seems to reproduce the common scenes of life. Those of you who don't play may know that the great object is to put the little white ball into the little hole. So long as you are short of that, if you don't do it—well, the other man does it before you. He has won the hole. And in doing this, when you come to what is called the 'putting green,' and you take your putt—it may be a beautiful putt, it may run straight to the hole, but if it stops short you will say to yourself, and your partner will say to you, 'Never up, never in. It is a beauty, but it wants legs.' And that is just exactly the situation here—'not far from the kingdom.' You may be 'lying dead,' as we say. The next shot is sure to do it. 'Never up, never in.'"

Mr. D. Speptic—My dear, I wish you would prepare something occasionally to tempt my appetite. His Wife—The idea! Why, you have not any appetite to tempt.—"Waverley Magazine."

Have Women Intuition?

In a recent magazine article William S. Walsh discussed the question, "Have Women Intuition?" He does not throw bouquets to feminine vanity, for he writes:

Literature is the final expression of human thought. If women can lay claim to a special faculty of intuition, why do they not manifest it in their writings? Intuition, if it means anything, means the faculty that gets down to the germ of actions and characteristics and focuses external traits into a central verity recognizable to the general public. Now there are more female writers than male. No woman poet has ever written an inevitable line, a line that flashes spontaneously out of the unknown and casts an illuminating light upon the abyss. Woman has added practically nothing to our stock of familiar quotations. Take down your Bartlett or your anthology, and you may be surprised to find that from Mrs. Browning to Mrs. Meynell women have never coined a phrase which has passed into the common currency of speech. Mrs. Browning has indeed written fine lines, but nothing of hers can be said to have become a household word.

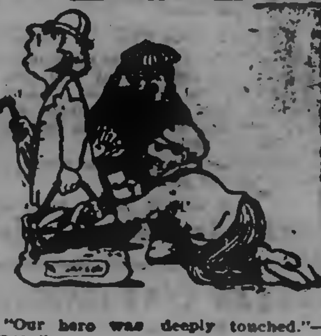
Nor has any woman novelist created any character that is generally recognized as typical. George Eliot has come closest with her Tito Melema and Mrs. Poyser. You would appeal only to the educated few if you described a person as a Tito or a Poyser. But call a man a Don Quixote, a Micawber, a Dogberry, a Falstaff, a Colonel Newcome, a Blifil, a Parson Adams, a Bob Acres; call a woman a Mrs. Malaprop, a Becky Sharp, a Beatrice, a Diana Vernon, a Meg Merrilies, and even the illiterate will mentally classify the individual as you wish him or her to be classified.

"Ah, but," you say, "in real life women are the true intuitions. They size up a man or a woman at a glance. They are never mistaken when they trust to their instincts."

I can only testify to my own experience. I have not found that women's snap judgments of character are imbued with any special verity. They form likes or dislikes quicker than man does because they are quicker on the trigger of conjecture. They can only be one of two things—right or wrong. If time proves that they are right, as they must be in fifty per cent. of cases, the right guess is remembered and treasured up by the slower-minded man as an extraordinary instance of intuition. The wrong guess is forgotten.

Mary Anderson's Advice to Stage-Struck Girls.

Mrs. Antonio de Navarro, better known as Mary Anderson, has written a striking preface to Clara Morris's "Life on the Stage," which is on the eve of publication in England. In a glowing tribute to the American actress, Mme. de Navarro declares: "She is the greatest emotional actress I ever saw," and adds the significant warning to stage-struck girls: "I hope she who writes this work will help to stem the tide of girls who so blindly rush into a profession of which they are ignorant, for which they are unfitted, and in which dangers innumerable lurk on all sides. If, with Clara Morris's power and charm, so much had to be suffered, what is, what must be, the lot of so many mediocrities who pass the same fires with no reward in the end?"



"Our hero was deeply touched."—"Life."

Paris, May 29.—The governor of Martinique, M. L'Huerre, cables from Fort De France, under date of to-day, May 28, confirming the Associated Press despatches announcing that a fresh eruption of Mont Pelee occurred during the evening of Monday, May 26, causing a great panic at Fort De France.

The cinders and scoria, however, the governor adds, did not touch the town, falling entirely on the north of the island. Calm is now restored.

Several craters, the governor further reported, were vomiting thick smoke.

Another eruption of Mont Pelee occurred as the French cruiser Tage passed St. Pierre recently, resulting in a sudden flow of mud from the bed of the river Blanch.

CANNOT IMAGINE DESOLATION.

The governor concluded that his latest visit to St. Pierre confirms the previous reports that the southern portion of that town was apparently destroyed by an explosive hurricane, which swept from north to south. The fall of scoria formed a layer a foot deep. The northern part of the town is buried under a bed of mud. It is impossible to imagine or describe the desolation at St. Pierre.

Fort De France, May 28. — The volcano is puzzling all the scientists, some of whom say the mountain has thus far made only a beginning.

Morne Rouge was saved from destruction last night only by a miracle, says a priest who was there.

Two correspondents, believing the volcano had, for a time at least, subsided, planned an expedition to the mountain for the purpose of securing photographs. Several natives were employed as guides. Morne Rouge was reached in the evening. The correspondents were welcomed by a priest, who insisted upon a pause being made for refreshments and in his humble home food was prepared. It was this generosity of the priest that saved the expedition from destruction. The original plan was that the visit should be made to the crater as soon as possible and a quick return be made to Fort De France, to avoid all danger.

While the evening meal was being prepared, the priest pointed out the work of ruin that had been accomplished. He said he had refused to leave his post, though he was not at all certain Morne Rouge would not be swept from existence as was St. Pierre. It was while he was talking that the explosion came.

PEOPLE IN A PANIC.

From their homes the inhabitants of the village ran in a panic. Some did not wait to see what was happening, but hurried off over the mountains in the direction of Fort De France. Scores went into the church and fell upon their knees, but the greater number ran without daring to look behind.

The display of lightning was terrific and awe inspiring.

When the start was made on the return trip to Fort De France, the guides and servants were gone. The correspondents had to find their way across the hills as best they could. Behind, Mont Pelee continued to belch forth ashes, smoke and mud. The detonations were of sufficient strength to make the ground tremble. It seemed to the weary travellers as if the mountain top swayed above their heads.

PERSONS WHO ARE MISSING.

Prof. Robert T. Hill of the U. S. geological survey, who left here for Mont Pelee Monday Afternoon, has not yet returned, nor has he been heard from. He planned to try the ascent from Morne Rouge.

The Great Medicine For Building Up Weak and Sickly People in Summer

Paine's Celery Compound

Gives a Lady the New Life She So Earnestly Sought For and Adds 41 Pounds to Her Weight

The surest and speediest banisher of disease and sickness known to medical men is Paine's Celery Compound.

The peculiar virtues of Paine's Celery Compound enables it to reach all the centres where disease is working; it quickly banishes all pain and trouble.

At this time, Paine's Celery Compound is a veritable boon to every nervous, weak and debilitated man and woman. The ailments and diseases that have held people in bondage and suffering up to the present, can be permanently banished by the use of a few bottles of Paine's Celery Compound this month. Mrs. Joseph Lloyd, Gananoque, Ont., tells of her complete cure as follows:

"I was always a sufferer from nervous debility and very bad headaches, and found it impossible to obtain regular rest and sleep. I read of your Paine's Celery Compound, and bought a bottle of it. After I used it, I got rest and sleep. I have used altogether seven bottles, and am completely cured. Your medicine purifies the blood and regulates the system; I would not be without it if it took my last dollar. Before using Paine's Celery Compound my weight was only 100 pounds; now I weigh 141 pounds. Five of my friends are using the Compound since they have seen what it has done for me."

No Comparison

A sense of proportion is an excellent thing, and an old soldier who writes to The Globe upon the subject of the recent defeat of Lord Methuen makes a very good point as to some of the comments passed by certain newspapers. He signs himself as "one who saw this brave brigade from start to finish on October 25, 1854," and writes as follows:—

"I read the account of the Boer charge on General Methuen's rear-guard taken from The Standard newspaper, London, and published in The Globe of the 18th. The Standard compares the ride of the Boers with the charge of the Light Brigade at Balaclava. The editor of The Standard must know well there is no comparison. General Methuen's column or field force of all ranks was only about 700 or so. The Light Brigade, with the brave Cardigan leading, went right through the centre of thirty thousand Russians, with sixty guns, in a commanding position, blazing away on the brigade as they were advancing down to the guns, where they had to put the Russian gunners out of the way. They tried to get away the guns, but found it impossible. Every man had to fight for his life back through cavalry and artillery, as they all closed in on them with the intention to capture or kill what was left on the retreat. The brave Cardigan, who obeyed his chief's order to advance and take the guns, knowing well at the time it was impossible, was about the last to return. From the time the brigade started until what was left returned—about 180 when the roll was called after the return—twenty minutes would cover the time. Bear this in mind: it was every man for himself to fight his way back, as they were all broken up in the rush at the guns by the Russian artillery firing on the whole, Russian and British, at the same time. Every volley carried off as many Russians as British. This statement is correct about the Russians firing on their own men. It was a surprise to see any return from the dreadful artillery fire they got from the Russians."

Brave, dashing and skilful Delarey's charge certainly was; it was exactly such a rush as many times before in the history of war has carried cavalry to victory. To persons accustomed to think of the Boers as unable to attack, accustomed also to think of the day of cavalry as over, it must be a surprise to read of such a charge. But the Boers have been moulded by two years of warfare into excellent soldiers, able to attack as well as to defend, and the loose formations of modern war offer peculiarly good opportunities to good cavalry trained to shoot from the saddle. To compare such a charge to the Balaclava charge, or to Von Bredow's "death-ride" at Vionville, when a few German squadrons shook the whole French line of battle and saved their overmatched infantry, is absurd, as my old soldier correspondent convincingly points out.

In this connection a personal reference to Lord Methuen may be introduced, showing him in a light possibly unfamiliar to the majority of newspaper readers. Lord Methuen, as is indicated in the paragraph which is quoted, is a man of a deeply devotional turn of mind. The quotation is from The Daily Graphic, and is as follows:—

"A largely attended public meeting was held last evening at Corsham (near Bath, in England)—the home of Lord Methuen—for the purpose of passing a resolution to be sent to the wounded General, expressing his fellow-townsmen's high admiration for his distinguished services to the country during the South African campaign, and their sincere sympathy with him in being wounded. The Rev. J. D. Dunlap, vicar of Corsham, presided. The following telegram was sent:—

"'Dunlap, Corsham. To Lord Methuen, Klerksdorp: Enthusiastic public meeting. Resolution sincere sympathy and speedy recovery. Shall sing your hymn Sunday.'

"Mr. Dunlap explained that the hymn referred to was 'Lead, Kindly Light,' Lord Methuen's favorite hymn, which he promised his Lordship should be sung in church the first Sunday in every month. He had received a letter from the General speaking of the comfort it gave him to know that he was remembered on the first Sunday in the month, and also in their prayers. The resolution was carried by acclamation, and it was also agreed to telegraph to Lady Methuen informing her of the terms of their message to her husband."

Some dispute has arisen as to Lord Methuen's nationality. It cannot be appraised with absolute accuracy; the family was originally Scotch, it is said, from Perthshire, and has for many years been settled in England, living in Wiltshire, at Corsham. Lord Methuen's grandfather was elevated to the Peerage in 1838; prior to that he had for many years been M.P. for his county. It may be added that Lord Methuen pronounces his name in three syllables, with the accent on the first.

The Culture of Celery.

"Celery Culture" is the title of another of the popular publications of the United States Department of Agriculture now in press, known as Farmers' Bulletins. "Little more than twenty-five years ago," says the bulletin, "the celery crop, which now forms such an important factor in market-gardening interests, was cultivated by few growers only. Celery was to be found on the menu of a few of the leading hotels, but not in many homes. Its use has spread until at present, with the output reckoned by the carloads, it is classed as a wholesome and palatable addition to the fare of all classes. All of the cultivated varieties now in use," continues Mr. W. R. Beattie, the author of the bulletin, "have been derived from the wild celery, a native of the marshes of southern England. This wild celery was for a long time considered poisonous, which was a natural supposition, as it belongs to the same family as poison hemlock." Mr. Beattie, after reviewing the value of celery from a commercial standpoint, notes the nutrition contained in the plant, which, by the way, is not so very great, but it adds a most palatable addition to the table in the winter season, when a great quantity of meat is eaten and few vegetables. It is generally considered as one of the most wholesome of vegetables.

Curious Bits of News.

All princes are not drones. Duke Karl Theodor of Bavaria recently performed his four-thousandth operation for cataract at his clinic in Munich. His wife acted as his assistant.

The English stockholders in Marconi's wireless telegraph company value the inventor's life so highly at this critical period of his experimentation that they have had him insured for $750,000.

The sale of oleomargarine in the United States is increasing rapidly, and one of the causes of the growing sales is said to be the large amount of free advertising that it has received from the debates in Congress and the State legislatures and the newspapers, in consequence of the efforts made to suppress it.

A much-valued distinction has been conferred upon the proprietors of a large cigar factory at Havana. The firm have received an order from England to furnish the cigars for the royal banquet which is to be held after the coronation of King Edward. The order includes three sizes and amounts to several thousand cigars. A unique feature is that there is no stipulation whatever as to the price, this matter being left entirely to the judgment of the manufacturers.

Court etiquette and religious scruples have had an amusing tussle at The Hague. The trouble arose when the daughters of Dr. Kuyper, the Premier, were invited to the first court ball of the season. Low-necked dresses were commanded, but the Misses Kuyper decided that decollete dresses were inconsistent with their religious principles. They applied for a dispensation, but received a curt reply from the mistress of the ceremonies, who declared that time-honored customs of the Dutch court must be adhered to. Dr. Kuyper made direct representations on the subject to Queen Wilhelmina, with the result that a compromise was arranged. The Misses Kuyper will stay away from the ball, but will take tea with their sovereign in high-necked dresses the same afternoon.

The "Tailor and Cutter," which has been accustomed to describe Joseph Chamberlain as the pink of fashion, has this to say of the Colonial Secretary in a recent issue: "We are sorry to note that Mr. Chamberlain is developing quite a stoop, and fear he is losing some of his old-time smartness. It is true that his monocle is still in the old place, but we miss the familiar orchid, and, as we have examined his garments, we could not but feel that conservatism was sadly apparent, for there was much in them that was not up to date." Mr. Chamberlain's coat lapels, says the "Tailor and Cutter," are plain, heavy, and disfigured by a long, gaping breast-pocket, like some ugly wound, calling for assistance. The washing vest of Mr. Chamberlain, the paper adds, was quite out of harmony with his coat, while his trousers were wide and unshapely.

The Millionaire and the Pie.

One time a millionaire found himself at nightfall in a small town that was ministered to by no railroad. And he had in his pocket a one-hundred-dollar bill and in his stomach a dozen of hunger.

And he went to the only store in the town to buy food for himself. Now the keeper of the store was a man of much caution and narrow mind.

"I am as hungry as my stomach knows how to be," said the millionaire affably. "Sell me that veal pie."

As he spoke he laid down the hundred-dollar bill.

The cautious storekeeper picked it up and looked at it with doubt mingled with distrust and accompanied with dubiety. Then he said: "My veal pie is worth ten cents to me, but I never heard of such a bill as that. Give me one with another picture on it, for this one is not worth a veal pie, I am sure."

And the millionaire said:

"My friend, it so happens that this evening finds me with no other picture bills upon my person nor yet any coin. The bill is surely worth a hundred of the ordinary, every-day kind. But that is neither here nor there."

But the storekeeper shook his head sourly.

"Nothing will recompense me for the veal pie but money that I can understand. There may be hundred-dollar bills, but I never saw one before. I know the worth of my veal pie, and if you have ten cents you can eat it, but if you haven't you can't."

"But I have not ten cents," said the millionaire; "so let us put it on another basis. Give me the veal pie out of charity, for my stomach is not used to being put off."

"Now we're on familiar ground," said the storekeeper, as he sliced a piece of cheese and ate it; "I have seen beggars many times, and as I never saw one so well dressed as you are I doubt you. You cannot be a beggar. Your clothes betray you, and even if you were one I would not help you as I do not believe in encouraging mendicancy."

"You are difficult beyond a doubt," said the millionaire, raising his eyebrows and shaking his head. "I have it. Let me work for the veal pie. I am strong. Have you no boxes that need unpacking, no goods that need to be shelved?"

Said the storekeeper, looking at the clock: "I have never insulted the frame that the Lord gave me by calling in others to do that which I can do myself. My boxes are unpacked and my goods are shelved. If you have ten cents you can take the veal pie, but be quick, for it is the hour of closing."

Then the millionaire felt in his vest pockets and found a counterfeit dime which he had received in change the day before. And rendered desperate by his hunger he gave the storekeeper the dime and received in exchange the veal pie. For to the near-sighted storekeeper the coin looked good.

As for the millionaire, he ate the pie like a shipwrecked mariner. And the near-sighted storekeeper dropped the counterfeit into his till with contentment.—Charles Battell Loomis in "Saturday Evening Post."

prints an interview with the United States Consul vindicating the management of the concentration camps. The Consul says—

"I believe that if my countrymen would investigate the question they would not be led astray by designing men making false statements to get their sympathy and their money, which they are sending to me to buy comforts for the women and children in the concentration camps."

The Counsel adds that the occupants of the camps have declared themselves satisfied. They are well cared for, well clothed and well fed. He favors saving the money sent for their relief in order to purchase cows for the Boers after the war.

New Orleans, June 2.—The British steamer Louisianian of the West India Line arrived here to-day from Trinidad and Colon. Capt Edwards reports that the vessel passed through the storm of ashes precipitated by Mont Pelee, the Louisianian being covered several inches deep by them.

The ashes were first observed on the afternoon of May 7 when the vessel was between Barbadoes and Trinidad. The sky began to darken by degrees and at a distance a black pall was seen slowly mounting into the heavens and this gloomy bank of far-away clouds was rent and illumined by constant and vivid flashes of lightening. The storm gained rapidly on the ship.

At 4 o'clock P.M., the atmosphere was so thick with clouds and a strange haze that it seemed as if night had set in. Capt. Edwards took an observation of latitude and longitude and found that he was about 187 miles from Martinique. The wind blew from that direction in gusts. When the storm finally broke, at 6 o'clock P.M., with continuous thunder and lightning, there was very little rain. On the windward side of the ship a gray curtain of ashes seemed to gather, and it began to slowly descend. The ashes covered the superstructure and decks.

Until 7 or 8 o'clock the next morning the storm continued, and when the ship had passed beyond its influence, it was found that the deck was covered with fine pearlgray dust to the depth of several inches. The dust was as fine as wheat dust from the mill, but it had a gritty texture and smell of saltpetre and sulphur. It was difficult and oppressive to a large extent to remain on deck while this dust was settling. It caused those who remained on deck to cough and gasp and it burned the eyes and nose.

Orange, N.J., June 2.—Thomas A. Edison said to-day that he had solved the problem of long-distance pleasure driving, as well as of trucking, by his new storage battery. He said he had achieved a source of power for running automobiles which will give a good mileage without renewal, which will not require expensive care, will not depreciate and will not weigh more than the vehicle it propels. Since he invented his storage battery a year ago, he has been at work improving it and in the new battery he believes he has obtained something which will be commercially practicable. The announcement was made after final tests, which were made last Friday and on Monday. Mr. Edison believes that now it is an assured fact that an automobile may run 100 miles without recharging the battery.

"I sent my two men," said Mr. Edison to-day, "out on the road and told them to run the machine over some rough roads and tackle a few bad hills. Well, they did it. They ran 62 miles, took 75 hills, with grades ranging from 2 to 12 per cent, went through some big holes and came back with 82 per cent of the speed they went out with and the voltage had only dropped seven volts from the original 39.

"That was fairly good, but it did not satisfy me. I told them to go out again and they started on Monday, when the roads were heavy from the rain. My instructions were to run the blamed machine until she stopped and they did 85 miles before she slowed down."

The battery can be charged for a run of twenty miles in 45 minutes, Mr. Edison says, or a whole night may be taken to charge it for a long run. He will equip several pleasure carriages as well as heavy trucks with the battery and subject them to every conceivable test. He proposes taking up the question of street car traction, believing his battery will also be applied to launches and possibly to small yachts.

New York, June 2 — Great Britain and her colonies, out of a total of the whole world of 29,091 ships, aggregating 30,600,818 gross tons, possesses 10,889, with a total tonnage of 14,768,298 tons, one-seventh of which is composed of sailing ships. The United States own 3,286 vessels, with a gross tonnage of 3,077,344 tons, of which two-fifths are sailing vessels; and then follow Germany with 2,085,782, of which one-sixth are sailing vessels; Norway with 1,077,220 tons, one-half of which are sailing vessels; France, with 1,400,853 tons, a quarter of which are sailing vessels, and Italy, with 1,117,538, of which two-fifths are sailing vessels.

There is much food for thought in the fact that about the year 1860, Great Britain possessed under 800 vessels, whose aggregate registered tonnage was less than 750,000 tons, and that during this period the aggregate tonnage of the steamships owned by the United States was 155,000 tons, or 5,000 tons more than that owned by Great Britain. That was in the days of wooden shipbuilding, and before the advent of steel, and more particularly before Bessemer steel, had given that wonderful impetus to British shipbuilding, the influence of which still enables her to maintain such a commanding lead.

London, May 31 — By order of the Colonial Office a commission of engineers, experts in textiles, etc., sailed for South Africa to-day to investigate and report immediately on the requirements of that country under the new conditions, and the prospects for the extension of British trade. The prompt action of the Colonial Office is believed to be the result of information recently received regarding the activity of American firms, chiefly engineering, electrical and mining concerns, who are preparing to despatch heavy shipments to South Africa as soon as the cessation of hostilities is ensured.

[illegible]morrow will be the 101st anniversary of the birth of Brigham Young and arrangements have been made for the customary observance of the day. During the day a reunion will be held at Saltair and interesting exercises carried out. It is expected that the gathering will be attended by six or eight of his widows and a dozen sons and daughters and their families.

New York May 31 — Lieut. Richmond P. Hobson is here ready to begin his new duties as superintending constructor in the shipyards of Lewis Nixon, at Elizabethport. He will enter on his work next week, succeeding Lieut. Spear. He will superintend the construction of the four government vessels now building at the Nixon yards. These include one submarine boat, two torpedo boats, the cruiser Chattanooga and the Monitor Florida.

The well and favorably known S.S. Campana, 1,700 tons, lighted with electricity and with all modern comforts, leaves Montreal on Mondays at 2 p.m., 2nd, 16th and 30th June; 14th and 28th July; 11th and 25th August; 8th and 22nd September for Pictou, N.S., calling at Quebec, Father Point, Gaspe, Perce, Grand River, Summerside, P.E.I., Charlottetown, P.E.I.

The finest trip of the season for health and comfort.

New York, June 2 — Arrangements are being made at Fort Hamilton for mounting the new 16-inch gun which has been in course of construction at the Watervliet arsenal for the past four years. The gun will be placed at the fort as soon as it has been officially tested at the Sandy Hook proving ground. The test is eagerly awaited by all the gun makers of the world. It is claimed the gun will hurl a shell twenty-one miles. In order to discharge the gun it will require 1,000 pounds of powder and a 2,000 pound projectile. The weight of the gun is 150 tons.

—The O[illegible] excursion takes place on Thursday to Burleigh Falls.

—The Board of Education will meet this evening.

—Have your family group taken at Whiten's before you get separated.

—The government barge "Trent" was towed to Rice Lake, where she will work for a few weeks.

—Five [illegible] in the west end have been poisoned during Sunday night. It will go hard with the offender if he is caught.

—The Montreal Star prints a photo of Miss E. Maud Macfarlane, of town, one of the Canadian teachers in South Africa.

—Now that the election is over, it is to be hoped that all good citizens will bury their political differences and settle down to business.

—Professional nurse, many years experience. Charges moderate. Apply at 47 Chamberlain Street, care Mr. George Wood.

—It is feared that the strawberry crop will not be as large as at one time supposed. A great many of the plants which blossomed early were frozen, and will not yield a full crop.

—The very latest creations in ladies' stationery, sealing sets, playing cards, engraved visiting cards, wedding invitations, society emblems, etc. Headquarters for "the best" in athletic goods, carbon papers, typewrite

—It is said that a certain teacher in our local public schools is such a pronounced Boer sympathizer that he occasionally gives vent to his feelings in the presence of his pupils. It is bad enough for any citizen to show disloyalty to the flag of the country they live in, but it is inexcusable in a teacher of the young to do so.

—The Campbellford Herald, refering to the reported capture of a 44 lb. maskinonge in the Bay of Quinte last summer, goes the narrator several better by stating that a 72 lb. 'lunge was caught in Bradley Bay, near that village, some years ago. This is nothing: Mr. Deuch, of Lakefield, says, back in the 60's he hooked a 'lunge so large that when he pulled it out of the water, Stony Lake fell two inches, and several steamers became stranded.

—The New Ontario Edition of the Toronto Daily Star is one of the best things of the kind ever published by a Canadian paper. It presents with all the typographical neatness possible the resources and development now going on, in what has come to be called New Ontario. Whatever the Toronto Star undertakes it carries through in the very best way, and this last evidence of its enterprise is another proof of the growing strength of that up-to-date paper.

—Throwing banana peeling upon the sidewalk is a practice every person should avoid, as it is positively dangerous, many an instance having been recorded of persons having slipped by stepping upon them and suffered from dislocation or a broken bone. Throw your banana peeling anywhere but on the sidewalk.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Letters from the People on Interesting and Timely Topics.

—Mr. Henry Johnston, Hastings, was in town yesterday on business.

—Lindsay Post:—Mrs. Bryce, of Peterborough, and Miss Branch, of Smith township are guests of Mrs. (Dr.) Harriman, Cambridge st.

—Mrs. W. B. Bletcher, nee Miss Grayce Kendry, will be "at home" to her friends on Tuesday and Wednesday afternoon and evening, June 3rd and 4th, at 380 Hunter street.

—The many friends throughout eastern Ontario of Mr. Joseph Henderson, Inspector of the Bank of Toronto, will be pleased to learn that he has been promoted to the position of Assistant General Manager of that great financial institution. The Times joins in extending its congratulations.

—The many friends of Mrs. C. Clemence Walton street, will be pleased to learn that she has returned home, after having undergone a long seige of sickness in Toronto. She is doing nicely, and it is hoped will soon be entirely well.

Cobourg Post: Bishop O'Connor came to town on Friday evening last and was the guest of Rev. Father Murray until the following day when he drove to Grafton and held confirmation in St. Mary's church on Sunday. The Bishop returned to town on Monday when he visited the Convent School and expressed himself well pleased with the excellent manner the Sisters conducted the school and the bright intelligent appearances of the children.

Clarke's Store Robbery

The vigilence of the officers of the law has at last been fruitful in landing Harry May, as having been connected with the robbery in Clarke's fur store last winter. May was arrested in Toronto on Friday last. A sealskin jacket which was among the things stolen was found in a Toronto pawn shop some time ago. May will be brought here today for trial.

A meeting will take place in the Ladies' parlor of the church on Friday evening at 8 o'clock to which all young men in any way connected with the church are cordially invited to attend.

SUMMER COMFORT

Get Ready For Warm Weather

By a complete change in breakfast. At this time of the year, one can put the body right to go through the summer comfortably.

Leave off meat, potatoes and heavy body heating foods, and use the food that will nourish the body and give reserve force to the brain and nervous system.

A most appetizing and healthful breakfast can be made on Grape-Nuts and cream, some fruit and perhaps two soft boiled eggs—this meal will furnish full strength and nourishment up to the next and has a remarkable effect on the body during hot weather. Remember the cells of the body you are now building will last you into summer, so be sure and build the kind that tend to keep up a cool body and level head.

One pound of Grape-Nuts has more nourishment — that the system will absorb — than ten pounds of meat, without any of the internal heat of meat that a person wishes to enjoy during the warm season; the rich, nutty flavor added to the delicate sweet of the grape sugar makes a dish pleasing to the most critical taste.

You receive Grape-Nuts from the grocer ready to serve, as it has been thoroughly cooked at the factory by food experts, and this saves heat from cooking, and time and exertion necessary in preparing ordinary food.

A change from the old breakfast to one like this will refresh and invigorate the system in a surprising manner and permit you to enjoy the pleasures of summer in a cool, comfortable fashion when your neighbors, differently fed, will be "hot."

PETERBORO'S BIG CELEBRATION LAST NIGHT

CROWDS OF ENTHUSIASTIC PEOPLE THRONG THE STREETS

And Join in Celebrating the Good News of Peace

Peterborough turned out last night to celebrate the good news of peace and about 8.45 a procession was formed at the drill sheds and the regiment, headed by the brass and bugle bands followed by a crowd of enthusiastic and patriotic people filled with the good news, took possession of the town. Firecrackers and rockets illuminated the line of parade and when these were exhausted bon fires were made on the street corners. After parading the principal streets of the town the procession proceeded to central park where stirring and patriotic addresses were delivered by the clergymen and prominent citizens of the town.

PRETTY HOME WEDDING

Nuptials of Miss Estelle Thornton and Mr. Edwin Wood

A very pretty home wedding was celebrated at the residence of the bride's father, Mr. Robert Thornton, Harvey st., yesterday morning, when Mr. Edwin Wood, of Toronto, was united in marriage to Miss Estelle, his second daughter, the ceremony being performed by Rev. D. O. Crossley.

The bride was charmingly attired in a gown of white organdie, and wore a wedding veil. She was attended by her sister, Miss Ethel, who was costumed in white organdie over pink. The groom was supported by Mr. Walter Gooding, of Toronto.

At the conclusion of the ceremony the party sat down to a sumptuous wedding breakfast. The happy couple left on the 11.35 G.T.R. train for Toronto, where they will reside.

The many costly and beautiful presents received testified to the popularity of the bride, the groom's present being a handsome piano. The Times joins in extending its hearty congratulations.

GRAND ORANGE LODGE MEETS

The Grand Orange Lodge of British America meets tomorrow at Niagara Falls, Ontario. The following members of Peterborough Lodge left this morning for Niagara: Robert Weir, Past Grand Master, R.B.K.; J. B. McWilliams, D. Grand Lecturer of B.A.; Sydney B. Weir, P. District Master. The Grand Lodge of the United States is meeting on the American side. There will be a joint meeting of both Canadian and American lodges on each side of the river.

This is the first meeting since the death of the late Hon. Clarke Wallace, Grand Master, and much interest is being taken in the proceedings.

A Hot Time

This g. t. j. appreciates the compliment paid it last evening by the members of No. 4 Co., 57th Regiment, by giving a grand display of fireworks in front of the office. The Times certainly appreciates the boys' efforts.

RETROSPECT OF THE LONG DRAWN-OUT WAR

It Commenced on Oct. 11, 1899, When the Boers Invaded British Territory

The London Times Says That There Could be No Peace

Until the Two Republics Were Extinct and Harmless

Brief History of the Greatest War Britain Ever Undertook

LORD KITCHENER.

The war began on October 11, 1899, when the Boers invaded British territory. The British troops upon the spot, weak in number, were hard put to it to hold their own. In the west the towns of Mafeking and Kimberley were at once invested by the enemy in overwhelming strength. In Natal Sir P. Symons was attacked by a large force at Talana on October 20. The enemy were defeated and heavy loss was inflicted upon them, but the British general was killed. The victory was quite fruitless, as the troops had forthwith to retreat, abandoning their baggage and wounded.

A day later, at Eland's Laagte, the Boers were again defeated and severely handled, while on October 24, at Rietfontein, yet a third action was fought. Next day the British army in Natal effected its concentration, but was compelled to offer battle at Ladysmith on October 30 against overwhelming strength. The issue of this fight was disastrous. The enemy cut off and captured 1,000 men at Nicholson's Nek, and on Nov. 2 isolated Ladysmith.

On Nov. 12 the first troops of the army corps landed in Natal, in which quarter Gen. Buller had decided to take personal charge. He divided his force and took with him only 15,000 men for the relief of Ladysmith. As the magnitude of the struggle was now becoming apparent to all, a fifth division had been mobilized in England on Nov. 11, and Sir C. Warren placed in command of it.

THE CAPE IN DANGER

Meantime in Cape Colony the position was one of great danger. The Colony was garrisoned by only a mere handful of troops and was known to be profoundly disaffected. A bold advance would undoubtedly have carried the Boer flag in triumph to the very gates of Cape Town. But, for some unexplained reason, the Boers did not press forward. They crossed the Orange, occupied Colesburg and Stormberg, but then remained inactive for some most critical days.

With the arrival of the first reinforcements at Cape Town, two columns were formed to drive back the invaders. The first was placed under Lord Methuen, and was ordered to make its way to Kimberley. It concentrated at De Aar and on Nov. 21 began the northward advance from the Orange. Ill equipped with mounted men, it could do nothing but assault the successive Boer positions which barred its route. On Nov. 23 it stormed the strong position of Belmont, with a loss of 298 men, and two days later repeated its achievement at Graspan, with a loss of 194.

MAGERSFONTEIN

The Boers brought Gen. Cronje down from the seige of Mafeking to oppose it, and on the 28th a severe encounter took place at Modder River, in which, with a loss of 485 men, the British succeeded in dislodging the enemy. But the Boers only retired a few miles to Magersfontein, and there waited in an even stronger position. Lord Methuen was reinforced by the Highland Brigade, and on the night of Dec. 10 sent in this brigade to assault the Boer lines. The Highlanders were within an ace of success. They got close to the enemy undiscovered, but then they were received with a terrible fire and lost their general, Wauchope, finally recoiling in great disorder. The total casualties numbered 970.

Nor was this the only disaster of a melancholy month. Gen. Gatacre had advanced from Queenstown in December against Stormberg with a small force. On the 10th he attacked the enemy, and was completely repulsed with the loss of 722 men and two guns.

DEFEAT AT COLENSO

On Nov. 15 the Boers wrecked an armored train near Chievely, and in the next few days pushed well to the south of the Tugela, railing and looting. On Nov. 23 they were attacked by the British under Gen. Hildyard at Willow Grange, and an indecisive action was fought, as the result of which the enemy retired north to Colenso. The British under Gen. Buller followed and bombarded the Boer positions at Colenso. On Dec. 15 Gen Buller attacked without fully reconnoitring the terrain, and met with a disastrous repulse, abandoning ten guns and losing 1,125 men. He despaired of relieving Ladysmith, even instructing Sir George Whyte to burn his cipher and make the best terms he could.

In December two successful sorties were made from Ladysmith and three Boer guns were destroyed.

In England the news of these reverses caused great alarm and indignation. The war office had at an earlier date refused the offer of large mounted contingents from the colonies, and had telegraphed that "unmounted men were preferred." It had also declined to allow irregular forces to be raised in England. But now the cabinet met and decided to order out a seventh division (a sixth had been mobilised previously), to accept large contingents from the colonies, to raise a force of mounted men (to be known as Imperial Yeomanry), to augment the artillery in South Africa, to send out a number of militia battalions, to form a special service force of volunteers, and to replace Gen. Buller in the supreme command by Lord Roberts, who was given Lord Kitchener as his chief of the staff. And the commander-in-chief was empowered to raise as many mounted men as he could in South Africa.

UNDER LORD ROBERTS

The second stage of the war now begins. In the first the British had been inferior in numbers to the enemy and badly handled. The reinforcements in process of preparation or on the way out would change all this and give Lord Roberts a distinct advantage. (But owing to the plight of Ladysmith it was impossible to mark time till the fresh forces arrived, and Gen. Buller had to make another attempt to relieve that hard-pressed place. The fifth division had joined him, but before he was ready to move the Boers delivered a fierce assault on Ladysmith Jan 6, 1900, and were only repulsed after the most desperate fighting, in which the British losses reached a figure of exactly 500.

On Jan. 9 Gen. Buller began his famous flank movement, which was to end in such sorrow on Spion Kop. The extraordinary lethargy of the move aroused misgivings from the very first.

The Tugela was passed at Potgieter's Drift, and Sir. C. Warren, on the night of Jan 23, captured Spion Kop, but the mountain could not be held in face of the Boer artillery fire and the vigorous attacks of the burgher skirmishers, though there was a moment when the enemy were on the point of abandoning the fight. Finally the British retired with a loss of 1,733 men.

On Feb. 5 Gen. Buller attacked the Boer position at Vaal Kranz, but was again repulsed. It was now that he asked Lord Roberts whether he thought the relief of Ladysmith worth the sacrifice of "from 2,000 to 3000 men." Lord Roberts replied that Ladysmith must be relieved at all cost.

In England the news of these repeated reverses had increased the general disquietude, and further reinforcements had been ordered out. In the House of Lords on Feb. 15 Lord Rosebery besought the Government to face the possibility that further troops might be needed, but Lord Lansdowne professed that all that was necessary was being done. The opinion of the press was strongly expressed to the effect that the crisis demanded greater energy.

LORD ROBERTS' STRATEGY.

In Cape Colony Lord Roberts had been busy all January preparing an advance into the Free State and reorganizing the transport. He was compelled by the sad news from Natal to move before he was quite ready. Gen. French, who had been continuously harrying the Boers in the Colesberg district, with great success, broken only by a disaster to the Suffolks, was quietly withdrawn and placed in command of a large cavalry force at Modder river.

After a feint against Gen. Cronje's right, Lord Roberts began a turning movement against the Boer left. On Feb. 12 Gen. French pushed rapidly forward to Kimberley, which was relieved on the 15th. The British infantry followed the mounted column.

Cronje, menaced with the risk of being enveloped, hesitated till escape was almost out of the question; but then, swiftly hurrying east to Paardeberg, was brought to a standstill by the relentless determination of Lord Kitchener, who attacked him on Feb. 13. Though the Boer position was not stormed, in spite of a British loss of 1,543, time was secured for the rest of Lord Roberts' men to arrive and envelop the Boer force. After a protracted bombardment, on Feb. 27, Cronje surrendered with 4,000 men.

Meanwhile, in Natal, at Lord Roberts' order, Gen. Buller had once more gone forward. From Feb. 14 for a fortnight onwards he was continually marching and fighting, and the fighting was the severest of the whole war. The final effort and the greatest victory was achieved on Feb. 27, when Pieter Hill was captured by a splendid assault. The British loss in this series of battles was heavy, reaching 1,895 men, but the blood was not poured uselessly away, as the end was achieved, and Ladysmith was at last relieved. The retreating enemy were not pursued by Gen. Buller and this was the great blot upon his success.

In the Free State Lord Roberts pushed forward rapidly to Bloemfontein, fighting on the way the actions of Poplar Grove and Driefontein, the latter a fiercely contested battle. On March 13 the capital of the Free State was entered. Then followed a long halt, in which what were called "regrettable incidents" were numerous. At Sanna's Post seven guns were taken by De Wet on March 31, and a few days later, at Reddersburg, the same Boer general captured a detachment of British troops, numbering 462. A small success at Karree did not atone for these reverses, which marked the first beginning of that peculiar Boer warfare against detachments with which we have since become so painfully familiar.

The Boers continued active and actually laid siege to Wepener, but were beaten off. During the halt at Bloemfontein peace overtures were made, but as it appeared that the Boers would be content with nothing short of independence, these had no result.

On May 3 Lord Roberts resumed the advance towards Pretoria, reaching Kroonstad on May 12 without any serious fighting. A few days earlier Col. Mahon had moved out from Kimberley to the relief of Mafeking, where Col. Baden-Powell had been holding his own against the Boers since the beginning of the war. On May 16 the relief column defeated the enemy near Mafeking and immediately after entered Mafeking, to the great joy of the empire.

Lord Roberts resumed his advance from Kroonstad to Pretoria and crossed the Vaal on May 24, the Boers abandoning position after position before him, almost without resistance. On May 31 Johannesburg was entered, and on June 5, after a sharp action with Botha, Pretoria was occupied.

The general impression in England now was that the war was over. Unhappily, however, De Wet had been able to score several successes in the Free State against the British troops on the line of communications, capturing a battalion of Yeomanry at Lindley, a convoy at Heilbron, and a battalion of militia at Roodeval. He also repeatedly cut the railway.

These events gave the Boers fresh courage, on on June 11-12, Lord Roberts had to fight another action with Botha at Diamond Hill, without decisive result. Natal had been cleared in the meantime by Gen. Buller and a strong Boer position at Alleman's Nek captured. But the enemy still kept the field. More regrettable incidents occurred at Uitvals Nek and elsewhere. In the Free State, however, a distinct success was won when Gen Hunter captured Prinsloo and 4,000 Boers at the opening of August.

The advance was once more resumed in the Transvaal. Gen. Buller pushing up from the south and Lord Roberts advancing from the west. On Aug. 27 Gen. Buller captured the Boer position at Bergendal, and shortly afterwards occupied Lydenburg. At the same time Lord Roberts' troops advanced to Komati Poort. Mr. Kruger had already fled to Delagoa bay. Again it was said that the war was over; again this assertion proved to be wrong. We Wet had escaped from Lords Kitchener and Methuen, who were operating against him, and with Botha still remained in the field potent to strike.

HAVE EVERYTHING REQUIRED

How Fool American Boer Sympathizers Get it on the Neck

Special to The Times.

New York, June 4.—Our Consul at Cape Town has declared that the money sent him from America to buy comforts for the women and children in the South African concentration camps will not be needed for that purpose, the intended beneficiaries having everything they require; that they are well cared for, well clothed, well fed and quite content with the provision made for them. The Consul proposes to use the relief fund in buying cows for Boer families after the war. Somebody ought to call down this recreant official. A resolution in Congress denouncing him as a British agent would be the mildest punishment for such heresy as he has been uttering.

ALFONSO WILL VISIT FRANCE

Elaborate Festivities Will Greet the Spanish King

Special to The Times.

Paris, June 4.—King Alfonso, preparatory to floating a huge issue of Spanish bonds next year, has secretly notified the Government of this Republic that he contemplates a visit to France next September, providing nothing happens to prevent.

The French Government will send a special envoy to Madrid to say that France will be most pleased to receive a state call, implying that the same sort of official festivities will be arranged as when the Czar comes here or the French President goes to Russia.

FALGE GEMS IN BRITISH CROWN

Royal Jewels Pawned or Sold by Victorias' Predecessors

London, June 4.—Two jewel experts who have examined the regalia used at the coronation of England's sovereign, have made the astounding discovery that nearly one-half of the "gems" in the regalia are spurious. Many large stones have been replaced by imitations.

The discovery confirms statements made in various memoirs that Queen Victoria's two immediate predecessors, William IV and George IV, resorted to the expedient of selling or pawning the crown jewels when they found themselves in financial difficulties.

King Edward refuses to be crowned with paste jewels and has ordered that the imitation stones in the regalia be replaced by real gems.

STREET IMPROVEMENTS

PROVIDED FOR BY THE TOWN COUNCIL LAST NIGHT

A By-Law to Authorize a Grant to the Gravenhurst Sanitarium Referred Back to Committee—Finance Report.

The Town Council met in special session last night when there were present Mayor T. H. G. Denne, and Ald. Edgecombe, Turner, Morrison, Clinkscale, Batten, Cockery, Best, Shortly and Roger.

The minutes of the two preceding sessions were read and confirmed.

From W. J. McColl, rector of St. Peter's Cathedral, complaining that the sidewalk and crossing in front of the R.C. Presbytery are much in need of repair, and asking attention in the matter.

He believed a new sidewalk is necessary and preferred a granolithic one on the usual conditions.

Referred to the Board of Works with with power to act.

From S. R. Armstrong, Secretary-Treasurer for Peterborough Water Commissioners, saying that at a meeting of the Peterborough Water Commissioners held the afternoon of June 2nd, he was instructed to pay to the Town Treasurer another amount of $1,000 on surplus revenue account.—Received.

From Geo. Schneider, asking that as he cannot get any reimbursement from the insurance company for his loss through the neighboring wall falling on his store occupied by P. Simons, the night following the fire, he would respectfully ask council to at least remit the taxes on the building from time of accident until he can have it repaired again.—Court of Revision.

Pro. T. A. S. Hay, Secretary of the Historical Society, inviting the council to join the Society in giving the delegates to the Annual Convention of the Provincial Society a hearty welcome to Peterborough, and also to participate in the entertainment.—Received, and as many of the Aldermen as possible will accept the invitation.

From J. G. Hutchinson formerly Market Clerk, asking a rebate of $14.97 upon last year's market tolls. He claims that the market was considerably inconvenienced by reason of snow being drawn upon it by town teams.—Finance Committee.

From D. W. Dumble, ex-officio registrar enclosing account for expenses of registering under the Manhood Suffrage Act amounting in all to $190—Referred to the Legal Committee with power to act.

From Miss Woodgate, resident superintendent of the Barnado Home, complaining of the bad condition of a sidewalk near that institution.—Referred to teh Town Engineer for attention.

From L. K. Jones, Secretary of the Department of Railways and Canals, replying to a letter of inquiry from the Town Clerk, stating that Mr. R. R. Hill is the applicant for the grant of a lease of surplus water power at dam No. 4 on the Peterborough—Lakefield Division of the Trent Valley Canal.—Received.

STREET IMPROVEMENTS.

Ald. Best submitted the following:

Gentlemen,—Your Board of Works beg leave to report as follows:

1. We received a letter from the Auburn Power Co., asking permission to place two poles on the south side of Sherbrook street, between Bethune street and Stewart street and recommend that the request be granted, subject to the approval of the Town Engineer.

2. We recommend that the Town Engineer be authorized to purchase the plank and scantling as required for work ordered to be done.

3. We recommend that the clerk be instructed to write to the Water Commissioners and inform them that the Council expects the Commissioners to keep the stand pipes in repair and turn the water off an on when required.

4. We recommend that F. J. Jamieson be paid $22.46 for gravel in accordance with a certificate of the Town Engineer.

5. Having made an inspection of the streets on April 21st, we recommend as follows:

London street from Water to Bethune street—Loose stones to be raked off.

Rubidge street, between London and Edinburgh street—Water tables to be formed and culvert at Edinburgh street to be renewed.

London street, between Park and Gilchrist streets—To be graded and tabled.

McDonnell street—Bridge channel to be cleaned out and deepened.

Elm street—To be raised and tabled at place where required.

Cedar street—Low places near Cambridge street to be raised and tabled.

Park street, from McDonnell to Sherbrooke street—loose stones to be raked up and taken away.

Sherbrooke and Rubidge streets—A new 6 foot wooden sidewalk in front of All Saint's church.

Lansdowne street, between Haggart and Lock street—to be tabled.

Kirk street—to be water tabled and road graded.

Reid street, between Brock and Murray streets—to be graded and water tabled.

McDonnell street — sidewalk on north side, between Stewart and Bethune street to be raised and rebuilt, Mr. Carlisle to provide the material for raising.

McDonnell street—north side, between George street and Water street, sidewalk to be repaired unless a petition for a granolithic sidewalk is received.

Smith street—at corner of Aylmer street side ditches to be deepened and road graded.

Barnardo Avenue—gravel to be laid in low places near Chemong railway.

Barnado Ave.—sidewalk 2 planks wide to be extended across the track to the first house on Wolsley street and ditch opened.

Water street—gravel to be placed where required in places between Smith and Argyle streets, and ditches deepened to turn water into river via Inverlea street.

Smith street—the east side of the bridge to be jacked up and truss rods tightened.

Dunco Road—sidewalk petitioned for on the west side from Lisburn street to Smith street to be reported on by the Engineer.

Water street—ravine levels to be taken and estimates prepared for the extension of the sewer from Dublin to Smith.

Antrim street—Mr. E. Green to be allowed to move sidewalk outside tree line, the Town to provide enough plank for an approach to the yard.

Sheridan street—sidewalk and steps on east side to be moved out to the line of he street on hill.

Hunter street—sidewalk on South side to be repaired from Water to Queen street and from C.P.R. crossing to the bridge.

That the following streets be graded and covered with broken stone:

Aylmer street from Brock to Perry streets, Hunter street from George street to the bridge, Simcoe street from George to Water street, Parry street from George to Aylmer streets, and Water street from Hunter to Murray streets.

6. An application was received from the Peterborough Light and Power Co. for permission to place two poles on Dublin street between Reid and Rubidge streets, to straighten out their line on King street, not placing any poles other than those now on the street, and to complete their line on Sherbrooke street with new poles. We recommend that the application be granted subject to the approval of the Town Engineer.

7. We recommend that as soon as the Good Roads Machinery Company furnish the whiffletrees and neck yoke for the street cleaner the Company's account for $168 be paid, less $2 for setting the trees of the street cleaner.

8. We recommend that the wages of the foreman of street work be increased

9. We recommend that John Howe's application for a street crossing on Sherbrooke street be granted.

10. We have asked for tenders for the breaking of the stone in the yard and delivering it upon streets where required.

11. We recommend that James English's salary be increased to $400 a year payable quarterly, from June 1st, 1902, and that he be required to act as engineer for the road roller, flush sewers, etc.

12. We recommend that Ald. Clinkscale be authorized to purchase a dump cart.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Ald. Shortly understood that it had been decided in Committee that James English's salary was to be $425 a year, and he moved, seconded by Ald. Clinkscale, that the clause regarding James English's salary be referred back to the Property Committee. Carried.

The report was then adopted as amended.

GRAVENHURST SANITARIUM.

A bylaw to authorize a grant of $100 to the Gravenhurst Sanitarium for Consumptives was referred back to the committee of the whole council for further consideration.

$50 FOR THE CONVENTION.

A bylaw authorizing a grant of $50 to the town and county of Peterborough Historical Society passed its several readings.

This grant is to go towards entertaining the Provincial Historical Society's delegates convening in town today and tomorrow.

PAID IN BOTH PLACES.

Mr. H. Porter here addressed council and complained that he had been assessed for a house in 1901 both in Peterborough and in Otonabee. As a matter of fact he did not live in town but on a farm in Otonabee, and merely visited his daughter here each week. As he had a receipt for personal taxes in the former place on personal property he thought the town assessment should be remitted him.

Council then adjourned.

ST. VINCENT ISLAND

An Exciting Trip Disclosed a Terrible Condition of Affairs

DEATH IN WORST FORMS

People Had No Warning of Impending Danger Until the Calamity Came

Panic Still Continues Upon Martinique—Uncertainty as to What Will Result Should Mt. Pelee Break Forth with Renewed Force

Special to The Times.

Fort of Spain, Trinidad, June 4.—Conditions in the stricken district of the Island of St. Vincent are almost beyond description. I have just returned from a visit to Georgetown and the ruined country around it, where it was quickly found that the explosions of the Soufriere were at least as violent as those of Mont Pelee in Martinique.

That the destruction of human life was not so great as at St. Pierre was due only to the fact that no large city was near Soufriere. Had there been a St Pierre near that awful volcano there would have been the same appalling loss of life as on Martinique. As it was 2,000 inhabitants of the sparsely settled country around the Soufriere have been killed, and to these must inevitably be added very many of those who escaped alive but terribly burned, and who can not survive.

NINETEEN QUAKES.

Nineteen shocks of earthquake were felt at Wallibou on Saturday, May 3, and at other places the ground appeared to be oscillating almost continually. The crater showed signs on the morning of April 29 of having awakened from its long slumber, and by 3 o'clock in the afternoon a column of heavy smoke with a jet of lurid flame was seen to issue from the summit of the mountain. That jet of flame with its sinister looking column of funeral smoke was the death warrant of 2,000 human beings, doomed to perish miserably within a few hours.

Although the estates of Wallibou and Richmond on the leeward side of the island were entirely destroyed and a large part of the district is covered by a thick bed of lava, there appears to have been little loss of life there, most of the inhabitants having escaped before the eruption. Unfortunately those inhabiting the Carib country, to the windward, probably believing themselves safe, did not in most cases make any attempt to get away until the last moment, with the result that nearly every one in that district has perished.

It was only on the afternoon of May 8 that Residents of Kingstown, the capital, began to gain some idea of the disaster which had befallen the country of the Carib, as the northern portion of the Windward Coast is called. Georgetown is the centre of that once fertile and beautiful district now a desolate waste of ashes.

It is almost impossible to convey in writing any idea of the desolate appearance of the country beyond the fifteen-mile post; that is, 15 miles from Kingstown and 7 from Georgetown. The whole place looked as if millions of barrels of cement had been emptied over the land, covering every inch of ground with a coat of dismal gray. As we proceeded I noticed that the small stones scattered about were of larger size and that the bed of dust became thicker until we reached Georgetown, where the streets were covered to a depth of three feet. The roofs of the thatched huts, unable to bear the weight of volcanic dust cast upon them, had in many cases caved in, while the trees were burnt and bare of leaves, imparting a dreary appearance to the landscape.

It was only when we reached the center of the town, however, that we began to realize the horrors caused by that fatal eruption. We passed three houses from which there arose heart-rending wails of suffering. It was in these houses that the injured, for few of whom there was any chance of recovery, were being slowly tortured to death by the inexorable hand of nature.

PILED IN A HEAP.

We hurried on through Georgetown and the country beyond, where most of the inhabitants had perished. The first place we got to was the overseer's house in Langley Park, where 37 bodies had been found. They had also been buried, but as many dead animals, the working stock of the estate, lay scattered about. The stench was unbearable.

At every step we encountered [illegible] ruined works at Waterloo a band of men who had been at work from the early morning were dragging the last corpse to the trench, in which 37 bodies had been buried.

There was only one way in which their gruesome work could be performed. One of the men, having first tied a handkerchief saturated with carbolic acid over his face, leaving only his eyes uncovered, would rush into the ruins and slip a rope around an ankle of one of the corpses; then the other man would drag the body by a long rope to the trench, into which it was bundled and rapidly covered over. Fortunately the loose nature of the dust made the digging of the trenches easy work.

In the schoolroom close to the Waterloo works 22 bodies had been found, and they had been buried in a separate trench close by. A few oxen and donkeys, more or less injured, were wandering about in search of water or food, but the men were too busy to attend to their wants.

DEATH EVERYWHERE.

Death was everywhere—death in its worst form. From under the shop at Rabaka two corpses were dragged while we were passing by. As we went along mounds were pointed out to us which contained 10, 20, 30, 40 or more bodies. In one shop 40 persons had taken refuge

THE ELECTION AFTERMATH

Every Conservative scrutineer in South Ontario has sent a report to Frank Roche, barrister, Toronto, giving all particulars as to spoiled and rejected ballots, and other irregularities of every kind.

• • • •

The Belleville Intelligencer publishes a story to the effect that the Liberals in Bancroft, a village in North Hastings, opened up a secret polling place on election day, at which it is alleged many fraudulent votes were polled.

The Conservatives claim they will carry North Grey, where A. G. McKay has nine of a majority, on a recount. They are also laying claims to Lennox, where the majority is two, and to Halton, where it is sixteen. The Liberals claim to have a good case in North Perth, where the majority is two for Monteith, and in Center Bruce.

• • • •

A protest is contemplated by the Conservatives in North Wentworth.

Halton Conservatives are much worked up about the result in Oakville. They say they expected a majority of thirty for Nixon, but Barber got seventeen, and they are making insinuations in consequence. They also say that the use of a blue pencil was permitted in some booths, thus spoiling the ballots.

GERMANY FARES BETTER THAN BRITAIN

From a national standpoint German steamship lines have made better terms with the Morgan syndicate than the British lines. There is to be no transfer of ownership and the syndicate will not, indeed, own any of the stock in either the Hamburg-American or North German Lloyd lines. German ships will still remain German. There is thus a very vital difference between the arrangements made with the German and British lines. The former agree to a pooling arrangement and the latter have parted with their control over their stock.

In brief, the German lines agree to pay the combine an annual sum equal to a dividend of 25 per cent. on their capital stock. The syndicate in return pledges itself to pay the Germans 6 per cent. on a corresponding amount of capital and not to send any ships to a German port without the consent of the German companies. The latter are bound to limit their traffic from British ports. They can, however, continue the existing services. The Germans are not precluded from including in their ports to call, hereafter, British ports from which the combine does not run service, nor from running their South American, Mexican and West Indian services from British ports, even though the combine utilizes the same ports. The combine, on the other hand, undertakes to allow almost two ships weekly in each direction to touch at French ports. The Germans are debarred from touching at Belgian ports with ships running to and from North America, and agree not to touch at English ports exceeding seventy-five times for each company each way, making an aggregate of 300 calls. The Germans are free to increase their sailings from French ports, in which case the combine is entitled to an increase proportionately.

The establishment of new lines or the extension of the existing service, if so large as to double the present number of sailings, must, before being carried out, be submitted before a joint committee of the contracting parties. Neither will have the power to prevent such an extension. It is agreed that in the event of either party desiring to effect such extension or establishment of new lines, it is bound to give the other the option of participating to the extent of one-third. This provision does not affect coastal or similar minor services. The North Atlantic cabin passenger traffic of both parties is to be regulated by a special pooling arrangement and it is agreed to maintain the present pool regarding steerage passengers. The freight business will be conducted under the existing agreement, excepting mutual precautions against outside competition. The agreement further provides for the arbitration of differences and it becomes inoperative in the event of war between the United States and Germany, Great Britain and Germany, or the United States and Great Britain.

KRUGER'S PREDICTION

When Paul Kruger declared, at the outset of the war, that the Boers could not be overthrown except at a cost that would stagger humanity, it was considered throughout the British Empire to be the foolish boast of an ignorant and narrow-minded old man.

But after two and a half years of warfare the Boers are overthrown, and the cost has been such as to justify the boast. Humanity has been almost staggered by the immense cost in men and money that the war involved.

It is estimated that when Kruger made his boast he had in readiness for action 60,000 mounted men, hard riders and good shots—probably the largest body of horsemen that ever fought at one time under one flag. He foresaw—there can be no doubt of it—that men on horseback, armed with modern long-range rifles, were to be the effective fighters in the contest, and his nation was readier than any in Europe for such a war as was imposed by the use of modern arms with the wide veldt as the scene of operations.

The outer world did not understand what a revolution in warfare had been produced by the quick-firing, long-range rifle and the far-reaching field gun, which, taken together, have almost prohibited the pitched battles of preceding wars.

What the Boers did not understand was the illimitable extent of the resources of the British Empire in men, money, and transportation facilities. Great Britain sent the wrong army, but if it was not suited to its purpose, it held its ground, until the right army followed after it. The time lost by the Boers around Ladysmith enabled Great Britain to learn its lesson, and to act on it.

Now that it is all over, British institutions must prove their worth, and so win and keep South Africa. Such another war would probably never be undertaken with a hostile Europe looking on.

Complete Conditions of Boer Surrender

London, June 3.—In the House of Commons yesterday the First Lord of the Treasury and Government leader, Mr. A. J. Balfour, announced the terms of peace with the Boers as follows:—

"His Excellency Lord Milner, in behalf of the British Government; His Excellency Mr. Steyn, General Brenner, General C. R. De Wet and Judge Hertzog, acting on behalf of the Orange Free State, and General Schalkburger, General Reitz, General Louis Botha and General Delarey, acting in behalf of their respective burghers, desiring to terminate the present hostilities, agree to the following terms:—

"The burgher forces in the field will forthwith lay down their arms and hand over all their guns, rifles and ammunition of war in their possession, and desist from further resistance and acknowledge King Edward VII. as their lawful sovereign.

"The manner and details of this surrender will be arranged between Lord Kitchener and Commandant-General Botha, assisted by General Delarey and Chief Commandant Dewet.

"Second. All burghers outside the limits of the Transvaal and Orange River Colony, and all prisoners of war at present outside South Africa, who are burghers, will, on duly declaring their acceptance of the position of subjects of His Majesty, be brought back to their homes as soon as means of transport can be provided and means of subsistence assured.

"Third. The burghers so returning will not be deprived of their personal liberty or property.

"Fourth. No proceedings, civil or criminal, will be taken against any burghers surrendering, or so returning, for any act in connection with the prosecution of the war.

The benefits of this clause do not extend to certain acts contrary to the usages of war, which had been notified by the Commander-in-Chief to the Boer generals, and which shall be tried by court martial after the close of hostilities.

"Fifth. The Dutch language will be taught in the Public schools of the Transvaal and Orange River Colony, where the parents desire it and will be allowed in the courts of law, for the better and more effectual administration of justice.

"Sixth. Possession of rifles will be allowed in the Transvaal and Orange River Colony to persons requiring them for their protection, on taking out a license, according to laws.

"Seventh. The Military administration of the Transvaal and Orange River Colony, will, at the earliest possible date, be succeeded by a civil government, and as soon as circumstances permit representative institutions, leading up to self-government, will be introduced.

"Eighth. The question of granting the franchise to natives will not be decided until after the introduction of self-government.

"Ninth. No special tax will be imposed on landed property in the Transvaal or Orange River Colony to defray the expenses of the war.

"Tenth. So soon as the conditions permit it a commission on which the local inhabitants will be represented will be appointed to each district of the Transvaal and Orange River Colony under the Presidency of a magistrate or other official for the purpose of assisting in the restoration of the people to their homes, and supplying those, who, owing to war losses, are unable to provide for themselves, with food and shelter and the necessary amount of seed, stock and implements, etc., indispensable to the resumption of the normal occupants.

"His Majesty's Government will place at the disposal of these commissions the sum of three million pounds sterling ($15,000,000), and will allow all the notes issued under the law of 1900 of the South African Republic, and all receipts given up to officers in the field of the late republics or under their orders, to be presented to, a judicial commission which will be appointed by the Government, and if such notes and receipts are found by this commission to have been duly issued in return for valuable considerations, they will be received by the first-named commissions as evidence of losses suffered by the persons to whom they were originally given.

"In addition to the above-named free grant of three million pounds sterling, His Majesty's Government will be prepared to make advances on loan, for the same purposes, free of interest, for two years and afterwards repayable over a period of years, with three per cent. interest. No foreigner or rebel will be entitled to benefit under this clause."

THE REBELS.

After he had concluded reading the peace agreement Mr. Balfour proceeded: There are certain important points not dealt with in the document I have just read, and which was signed on Saturday night. Therefore, it may be convenient if I read a despatch from Lord Kitchener to the Secretary of State for War, dated May 30, as follows:

"After handing the Boer delegates a copy of the draft of the agreement, I read them a statement and gave them a copy of it, as follows:

"'His Majesty's Government must place on record that the treatment of the Cape and Natal colonists who have been in rebellion, and who now surrender, will, if they return to their colonies, be determined by the Colonial Courts and in accordance with the laws of the colonies, and any British subjects who have joined the enemy will be liable to trial under the law of that part of the British Empire to which they belong.

"His Majesty's Government are informed by the Cape Government that their views regarding the terms to be offered to British subjects in Cape Colony now in the field, or who have surrendered or been captured since April 12, 1901, are as follows:

"'With regard to the rank and file they should all, after surrender and giving up their arms, sign a document before the resident Magistrate of the district in which they surrender, acknowledging themselves guilty of high treason, and the punishment to be accorded them, provided they are not guilty of murder or acts contrary to the usages of civilized warfare, shall be that they are not entitled for life to be registered as voters or vote in any Parliamentary or Provincial Council or municipal election.

"'With reference to Justices of the Peace, field coronets, and all others who held official positions under the Government of Cape Colony, or who have been occupying a position of authority, or who have held commands in the rebel or burgher forces, they shall be tried for high treason before the ordinary courts of the country, or such special courts as may be constituted, their punishment to be left to the discretion of such court, with the proviso that in no case shall the penalty of death be inflicted.

"'The Natal Government are of the opinion that the rebels should be dealt with, according to the law of that colony."

"These arrangements," concluded Mr. Balfour, "the Government have approved."

DETROIT UNITED RAILWAY

The intelligent investor in listed securities having a current market is seeking that which possesses not only intrinsic merit and remunerative income, but future enhancement in market value as well. Conviction on these three important points once firmly established among the investing public concerning a particular security is followed by three results—demand, security of stock and advancing prices.

It is good to know of such opportunities, for it enables the public to invest safely and add to their individual accumulation of this world's goods, thereby increasing in a measure the world's happiness, and the result is satisfactory, not only to the investor, but to his broker as well, particularly if the broker in question happens to be the dispenser of such a bit of happiness.

Detroit United Railway stock is on the eve of an advance in price which will carry quotations from the present level of 74 to par. The advance is inevitable for the simple reason that as a substantial investment of recognized merit the stock is selling at least $26 per share below what it is worth. This statement, made with full confidence, is not an idle boast, but is based on cold existing facts; and if any among my readers are skeptical in my degree let them look into the facts and figures and they will be convinced.

It is although an absurd proposition that the stock of a city traction company having no competition, paying regular dividends of 4 per cent, and earning 6 per cent., should be quoted at any such ridiculously low a figure as the present price.

All that is necessary is for the public to know that a good thing like Detroit United is available, and the disparity between present quotations and real worth will soon be bridged over by the most legitimate means known, and that is by public buying on broad scale. At the present time three separate financial interests are negotiating for the Cleveland holdings around 70. In the meantime it is exceedingly probable that public buying, now well under way, will absorb these holdings at prices ranging from the present level to par, and the syndicates referred to will suddenly wake up to find that they have missed an unusual opportunity by pursuing a penny-wise and poundfoolish policy in regard to price.

HERE ARE THE FACTS

Detroit United Railway is a consolidation of all the electric railways in and about Detroit. There are no competing lines. The total mileage is 300 miles, having a total bonded indebtedness of $45,880,000, which is $41,780.00 per mile, and it may be remarked that this is exceedingly conservative and lean per mile than that of any other city road in the United States.

The total authorized and outstanding capital stock $12,500,000, which is $32,395.00 per mile, so that there is 74,084.00 per mile in bonds and stock. Cincinnati Street Railway is bonded and stocked for $90,250 per mile; St. Louis United about $167,000 per mile; Twin City Rapid Transit, $125,643 per mile. These comparisons prove the absence of the customary watering process, more recently known as "Morganizing."

The following figures, showing the earnings, operating expenses, etc., of the Detroit United Railway for two years are conclusive proofs of its merits:

Year Ending—	1900	1901
Earnings, gross	$2,676,276	$2,942,237
Earnings, net	1,150,773	1,346,473
Per cent. of operation		54.70
Fixed charges	626,217	675,344
Surplus for stock	512	670,129
Per cent on stock	4.10	5.36
Price of stock		72 1-2
Population served	400,000

Gross Earnings...4 months July—Oct 1901 $1,129,376

Gross Earnings......January 1—March 31.	1901	1902
	$643,071	$765,631

I am indebted to Mr. Guy M. Walker, of 25 Broad street, New York, for the following facts in regard to Detroit United Railway stock, as compared to Twin City Rapid Transit common stock, now quoted at 122. First dividend of 1 per cent was paid on Twin City stock in August, 1899; in 1900, 3 per cent.; 1901, 31-2 percent.; 1902, February, 2 per cent. It should be borne in mind that Twin City Rapid Transit is not even established as a 4 per cent. dividend payer; that there is a 7 per cent. preferred stock ahead of it, and yet the common stock is quoted at 122, or $50 per share above Detroit, which is absolutely established as a 4 per cent. dividend payer. Either Twin City stock is selling too high or Detroit too low.

"In comparing the intrinsic value of the stocks of the two companies, it should be noted that while the bonded debt of Twin City amounts to $47,580.00 per mile, that of the Detroit United is only $41,780.00 per mile, while the stock per mile of Twin City is $78,304.00 to Detroit United $32,395.00, making the total capitalization of the Twin City Rapid Transit Company $125,643.00 per mile, as against only $74,084.00 per mile for Detroit United. The populations served are almost exactly the same.

"The percentages earned by the two properties for their common stock are almost the same, though the earnings for Detroit United for 1901 show a slightly larger gain over its earnings for 1900 than does the Twin City Rapid Transit Company.

"It should, however, be noted that Twin City is making its present earnings on a cost of operation amounting to only 44.00 per cent of its gross earnings, which is far below normal, and which certainly can not be maintained in the future, while Detroit United is expending for operation and maintenance 54.70 per cent. of its gross earnings, which is slightly above normal, and which ought to be reduced to approximately 50 per cent. within the next year or two.

"It can, therefore, easily be seen that Detroit United promises considerably greater returns to its stockholders for the immediate future than Twin City, and it is unreasonable to suppose that the stock will continue at its present low quotations of 74, while Twin City is considered to be worth and apparently holds firm at approximately $125.00 per share."

FUTURE INCREASED EARNINGS

On the basis of the actual earnings for the first three months of 1902, Detroit United will show for the present fiscal year, in round figures, $3,500,000 gross, equivalent to $1,575,000 net, being more than double the interest on its bonded debt. After deducting fixed charges, now aggregating $720,343, there will remain at least a net surplus available for dividends of $854,657, or an amount in excess of 7 1-2 per cent. on the entire capital stock issue.

A syndicate of Philadelphia capitalists recently made a proposition to form a leasing company, take over the management of the Detroit United, and guarantee dividends, beginning with 4 per cent. per annum and increasing 1-2 per cent. each year until 5 1-2 per cent. annually should be paid and continued during the life of the lease.

This proposition was rejected.

At this writing I am reliably informed that the Bankers' Committee of Cleveland, holding in trust the Everett-Moore Syndicate holdings of Detroit United, have practically concluded negotiations for the sale of 30,000 shares to an Eastern syndicate. The remaining 10,000 shares are to be withdrawn from the market.

The withdrawal of this stock from the market, which has heretofore been the cause of existing sacrifice quotations on Detroit United, marks the present level as the low record prices from now on. It is a noteworthy fact, of interests to the probable purchaser, that during the past week the market for Detroit United has broadened perceptibly. Buying orders for the stock in blocks are in evidence from Eastern purchasers. Heretofore the market has been confined to Detroit, Cleveland, Cincinnati, and Louisville. Now, what will be the effect on current quotations, with demand for the stock from Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburg, Chicago, and St. Louis? I repeat that these actually existing conditions mean a long advance ahead, and those among my readers who want to make not only a good investment, but a long profit as well, had better get in the band waggon not later than Monday noon, for late arrivals will have to go way back and sit down if they expect to get any stock under 75.

One of the chief objections to investors heretofore has been the fact that last year the Detroit United accumulated a floating debt of $800,000, resulting, not from any deficit in operating, but from the purchase of 75 per cent. of the capital stock of the Detroit & Port Huron Shore Line and the Windsor Street Railway, both of which properties, though controlled by the Detroit United, are not included in the consolidation. This floating debt has now been entirely eliminated by an issue of $1,000,000 4 1-2 per per cent. bonds, which were sold to E. H. Gay & Co., of Boston, and recently offered by them for public subscription.

This leaves the property in excellent condition financially, with valuable assets in the controlling stocks referred to. Physically the property is conceded to have no superior in any city in the United States or Canada.

Detroit United Railway 5 per cent stock is listed on the Cincinnati Stock Exchange. Telegraph a collect message to my firm for accurate quotations and prices, and prompt reply will be made. During the next few weeks an active market in Detroit United may be confidently anticipated, accompanied by a higher level of prices.

Anecdotal.

Philip II. sent a young nobleman to Rome to congratulate Sixtus V. on his exaltation. Sixtus was dissatisfied at so young an ambassador being sent, and, with his usual frankness, said, "Does your master want men, that he sends to me a beardless ambassador?" "Had my sovereign thought," replied the haughty Spaniard, "that merit consisted in a beard, he would have sent you a goat."

Charles Kean and James Wallack were once playing in the private theater at Windsor Castle, and the actors were somewhat chilled by the lack of hearty applause to which they were accustomed in public. At the end of one act there was a slight suggestion of hand-clapping and exceedingly gentle foot-tapping. Wallack, pricking up his ears, enquired, "What is that?" "That, my dear Wallack," Kean replied, "is applause." "Bless me!" exclaimed Wallack. "I thought it was somebody shelling peas."

Bishop Potter is accused of having given currency to the following anecdote: A Chicagoan had been taken around Boston all day to observe her bulwarks, but had failed to exhibit any of those symptoms of paralysis which are acceptable to the Bostonian mind. "Now confess," said the Bostonian host, after the burden and heat of the day, "isn't Boston a unique town?" "Unique?" mused the Westerner; "I believe that word is derived from two Latin words, unus, one, and equus, horse. I think Boston is a unique town."

Walter Dean, sr., once hired an artist to paint his portrait, with the stipulation that the picture would not be accepted and paid for unless it looked like himself. When the portrait was completed it was sent to Mr. Dean, who did not recognize himself, and absolutely refused to pay the painter. The painter sued, and Joe Strong, the artist, was called in to give an expert opinion. "You see the portrait of Mr. Dean?" the lawyer asked. "No," said Mr. Strong, "I do not." "There it is," said the lawyer, pointing to the big canvas. "I don't call that a portrait; I call that a map of Mr. Dean," said Mr. Strong.

"Down in South Carolina," says Congressman Talbert, "I once attended a colored church. The preacher, one of those negroes with an oily face and big spectacles, was talking about the prophets. He had taken an hour to discourse upon the major prophets, and then he took up the minor ones. In course of time he reached Hosea. 'My breddren,' he exclaimed, 'we come now to Hosea. Let us consider him. Where shall we put Hosea?' At that moment an old negro, who had been peacefully slumbering in one of the back pews, woke up and looked at the pastor. 'Hosea can take my seat,' he said. 'I'm so —— tired that I am going home.'"

The "Evening Post" of New York narrates that on Washington's birthday a well-known New York caterer became the possessor of a pair of English soles and English pheasants, and invited a couple of friends to dine off them at the dog show. It was a great success, but one of the guests, remembering the day, said it was far from patriotic. "Why," he added, "here it is Washington's birthday and we are dining on English sole, pheasant and currant jelly, eating French bread and drinking French wine. Let's have something American. Why don't you serve some oleomargarine?" "Don't worry," was the reply, "you've got it."

"Good Words" prints a little story of the early schooldays of Lord Salisbury, when he was Lord Robert Cecil, which shows how soon in his life his conspicuous disregard for dress began. When he was about seven years old he came into the nursery one afternoon on his return from school, which was held at the old rectory outside Hatfield, and dumped his books into a corner. "Oh, Betty," he said to his old nurse, "I wish I was a cat!" "La, Lord Robert," Betty replied, "how can you wish yourself a beast?" "Oh," he replied, with a sigh, "when I think of how many times I must dress and undress before I die I wish my clothes grew on my back."

Some years ago a Philadelphia preacher inaugurated in his Sunday-school the practice of having the children quote some Scriptural text as they dropped their pennies into the contribution box. On the first Sunday in question, a little shaver walked up and said: "The Lord loveth a cheerful giver," and in dropped his penny. "Charity shall cover a multitude of sins," and in dropped the next. "It is more blessed to give than to receive," quoted the third, and so on. Just then, up walked a little fellow with the unmistakable remnants of molasses candy on his chubby face, and, as he dropped his cent, he bawled out: "A fool and his money are soon parted."

The Wit's Hour of Trial.

Repartee is like tennis. The ball is driven backward and forward from one player to the other, and the one on whose side it last strikes is the loser. It is a terrible thing for an artist at repartee to find that he has no answer. The mere pretender does not care. He will answer something, to the point or not; but the artist will not debase his art with a bad answer; he merely sorrows for a good one.

There was a little Irishman who kept a liquor shop, and he was noted for always having a reply ready. One day a man came in, laid a dollar bill on the bar and called for whiskey. The proprietor set out the bottle and a glass, and the customer filled the glass right up to the top. "Is it a towel you'd be wantin'?" the proprietor asked, implying thereby that the customer had poured out a bath, rather than a drink.

"Look here," said the customer, pointing to the money, "there's a dollar, you can take the price of this drink out of it, and if there isn't enough, tell me how much more you want and I'll pay it but I don't want any talk from a little Mick of a bartender."

The proprietor picked up the dollar and laid down 85 cents. As the customer disappeared he walked around in front of the bar and said to a friend who sat there: "Casey, I'd have given me liquor shop to have knowed what to answer back to that man."

Rhodes as a Phrase-Maker.

Rhodes rather fancied himself as a phrase-maker, says a correspondent of The New York Sun. A writer who saw a good deal of him, describes him as repeating over and over again some saying of his own with which he seemed to have been pleased as soon as he had uttered it.

Perhaps one of the best-known phrases is the "unctuous rectitude" with which he reproved a certain class of his opponents in this country. No one in future who wishes to discuss the traits of the British character will be able to do without those two words. Some other sayings of Rhodes which have been left on record are as follows:—

My life is a temporary one, but the country will remain after me.

If I forfeit my flag, what have I left? If you take away my flag you take away everything.

Remember that sentiment rules half the world.

"It is no use for us to have big ideas if we have not got the money to carry them out," Rhodes once remarked to Gen. Gordon.

It took me fifteen years to get a mine, but I got it. Though my boat may be slow in the race, I know exactly what I am starting for.

I have found out one thing, and that is, if you have an idea, and it is a good idea, if you will only stick to it you will come out all right.

The only awkward thing is the progress of Time. We do get older, and become a little hurried in our ideas because of that terrible Time.

After the raid: "Kruger and I have met twice. The first trick I won (referring to Bechuanaland). he won the second. There is no doubt who will win the odd!"

When timorous friends were begging him to be discreet, and foes were saying he dare not "face the music," he answered both, once and for all: "I am not going to lie about it!"

When Dr. Jameson was convicted and sentenced for the part he took in the raid, Mr. Rhodes exclaimed: "What a tribute to the moral worth of the nation that has jumped the world!"

I will challenge any man or woman, however broad their ideas may be, who objects to go to church or chapel to say they would not sometimes be better for an hour or an hour and a half in a church.

In the Oriel Hall, Oxford, in 1899, he said: "I have been interested in Aristotle's definition of virtue in the 'Ethics' as the 'highest activity of the soul living for the highest object in a perfect life.' That has always seemed to me the noblest rule for a man to follow, and I have made it my rule from the first."

"Life is too short, after all," he used to say, "to worry about previous lives. From the cradle to the grave—what is it? Three days at the seaside. Just that and nothing more. But although it is only three days, we must be doing something. I cannot spend my time throwing stones into the water. But what is worth while doing?"

A Waggon Journey.

After so much about Rhodes one may have a bit of South African life. It is a description of a waggon journey a score of years ago, and occurs in a new novel, entitled "Reversed on Appeal," by John Ross:—

"Pale pink over the trees, and bar gold glittering through the branches saw the large waggon equipped and drawn with open front, facing the kraal gate, towards which extended a double line of shining brown oxen, each with a white streak down its back like fourteen brethren bearing up the flashing chain, noosed at each pair by a heavy pole with wooden yokes for two. At the head of the uneven line of glancing horns and switching tails stood the powerful bronze figure, thong in hand, of a Zulu in a sleeveless blouse and short blue pants, the leader of the horned cavalcade. A Kaffir boy held a grey horse ready saddled, tossing his head and rattling his bit with impatience, a contrast to the droway cattle. . . . There was a din of shrill Kaffir shouts, weeping women, yelping dogs, stamping feet and rattling chains as Mouji flourished his long whip, and the Zulu dragged at the leading strap like a son of Anak, as he guided the string of cattle out of the kraal into the open field.

"Her uncle rode his grey horse within speaking distance behind the waggon, and when they passed the large green orchard, with its brown pears, purple plums, and yellow oranges ripening in the branches, he rode in among the trees and returned with a small basket of peaches, which he handed to Belle at the end of the waggon, as they moved slowly on through prickly cactus hedges, and bushes of red and yellow mimosa blossom. . . .

"She had travelled in the waggon before, with the mid-curtain that was lowered at night, to shut her off into a little nunnery of her own. She knew the bed, so innocently tied on one side, in which she was advised to slumber, and supposed to sleep, during the ceaseless jolts of a moonlight journey. And she remembered how she pitied all men, and women, too, who went down to the sea in ships, if their berths were like her berth, and their tossings like her tossings. She knew the boxes tied with thongs that served for seats and lockers, and that she must fasten up everything, if she did not wish a bruised foot or a wounded head, when the quick mounts and sudden dips came under the irresistible strain of fourteen oxen."

It is estimated that the Kaffirs in the diamond mines at Kimberley, South Africa, steal £250,000 worth of diamonds in a year.

"Take the men of prominence in the United States to-day, and pick out the true gentlemen. I'll wager that nine out of ten of them never had a high school education, let alone a college one." So says Mark Twain.

Gold has been mined in Georgia for nearly three-quarters of a century. Previous to the discovery of gold in California the mines of Georgia furnished the greater part of the gold produced in the United States.

Farm Notes.

Care should be exercised in the use of poisoned solutions for spraying, as many insects that are friends of the farmer may be destroyed. Bees have been exterminated in some sections by spraying, though something depends upon the kinds of plants sprayed.

We clip from an exchange the following directions for killing lice on cattle—Dust the animals thoroughly with fresh insect powder; rub in well, or else part the hair so the powder will reach the pests. In about a week, dust again to kill any mites that might have hatched. The other is: Make a strong tea of cedar twigs; wash the lousy animal with this tea; this last is effectual in cleansing buildings, coops, roosts, poles, etc., of lice.

No greater mistake is ever made than to suppose that by selecting the largest eggs from the basket for hatching improvement of the poultry is sure to follow. There is no makeshift in this industry. Careful selection of the breeding stock, males and females, alone will insure that grading up so desired by every breeder. There is no room today for slipshod methods in poultry culture, and the breeder who does not select a breeding pen from his best birds and keep them by themselves does not deserve and cannot hope to maintain the quality of his stock.

More pigs are lost in the summer season from improper feeding than from any other cause. They are compelled to consume foods that are not conducive to thrift, and which lead to disease in the herds. Some feeders keep slop in barrels, which ferments until sour, having a very disagreeable odor, the pigs being fed largely upon the slop. This kind of food is more injurious in summer than in winter, as it induces bowel disease. The best slop is milk and bran, freshly made, with grass, vegetables and plenty of pure water, which will induce growth and keep the pigs in good condition.

Use a Good Sire.

If there is one thing more than another which pedigree breeding has taught it is the value of using a good sire. It takes a long time before this lesson can be universally appreciated. There are some breeders whom nothing but adversity will teach; others are willing to profit by the experience of the many, and are ready to adopt the lessons which can be obviously deduced. It is a pity that in these times of enlightenment and advanced ideas the simplest lessons cannot be absorbed by small breeders. It is with the small breeder that the future lies, and the sooner he adapts himself to a more successful policy the better will it be for himself and for the breed which he favors. It is not enough to have a well-bred sire. That certainly is a primary consideration, for, as every breeder knows, there is nothing more perplexing in breeding than the frequency with which atavism occurs. It is satisfactory to note, however, that when characteristics have become more fixed by years of registered breeding, breeders are more and more coming to regard it as essential that the trumpeted merits of good back breeding should be displayed in the animal itself. The old principle that like produces like is truer now than it was fifty years ago, because of the increased prepotency of line bred stock. Nothing condemns the policy of a breeder more effectively than the use of an indifferent horse on good mares, or, for that matter, moderate bull on better cows. As a rule, the farmer is not deficient in useful breeding mares or roomy cows, but it would form painful reading to learn how often he had misused his trust by the use of an indifferent sire. It is a very safe rule to patronize a sire better than the females. There is everything to gain and nothing to lose. The initial cost is a mere bagatelle, compared with the difference in price of the progeny. It is a misfortune that many farmers expect too much of their mares or their cows. This, at all events, seems a reasonable deduction from their policy when they use very indifferent sires. The point we wish to accentuate is that it pays to use a good sire. It is short-sighted policy to expect too much of the dams.—Farmer and Stockbreeder.

Sore Mouths in Horses.

A sore mouth in a horse is frequently the cause of his not feeding properly. In cases where a horse has lost his appetite or does not redily eat his food it is well to examine his mouth, if the fact of his being off his feed cannot be traced to any apparent cause. A sore mouth may be due to several causes. In young horses it is generally due to teething troubles, which make the mouth more or less tender and interfere with the feeding. In such cases the only thing to be done is to provide the food in a state which will permit of its being easily chewed and masticated. The oats should be crushed, bran mashes and roots should be given, and the hay should not be hard, and free from woody stems.

In older horses the permanent molars are sometimes the cause of a horse not being able to chew his food, and of his having a sore mouth. The molars sometimes have sharp edges and points which hurt the inside of the cheeks, and cause considerable pain when the horse is eating. In this case they require filing with a rasp, but this operation can only be performed by a skilful hand. At other times a horse may be prevented from masticating his food properly by one of the molar teeth being longer than the rest, which prevents the molars in the upper jaw from coming into contact with those in the lower jaw. In this case again professional advice is required.

Lampas not infrequently is the cause of a horse having a sore mouth. Lampas consists of an inflamed condition of the roof of the mouth or of the palate, and is caused by various means. In young horses it is due often to the growth of the teeth, while in older ones it is caused through indigestion or by irregularities of the molar teeth. The treatment accordingly varies and depends on the cause of lampas. Ignorant grooms and stablemen sometimes suggest burning as a remedy. This is of course a cruel and perfectly inadmissible remedy, and one which should not be adopted on any account.

Another form of inflammation of the mouth is known under the name of "stomatitis."—Farmer and Stockbreeder.

HEROES AND HEROINES.

SERMON BY

GEORGE H. HEPWORTH.

But he that endureth to the end shall be saved.—St. Matthew, x., 22.

Everybody admires heroism. The qualities of character which hurl one to the forefront in a critical moment, careless of danger, reckless of consequences, claim our unstinted applause.

But in the emergency, when the air vibrates with excitement, a man becomes intoxicated with courage, ordinary soldiers do deeds which would grace a god of Olympus, and the coward is so rare an exception that he becomes invisible. Human nature, when impelled by a strong passion or a noble ambition, surprises itself. The poor village lout has a capacity for endurance and brilliant work which needs only time and incentive to become divine. The rattle of musketry is the stimulus to great achievement. The perilous expedition, with sudden death lurking in ambush, will always find volunteers.

Man is a rude, crude, but grand sort of creature, with the making of an archangel in him. There is a mettle in his soul which has not yet been fully called forth. He is a Toledo blade which the hot fire of circumstance will some time temper. He is nobler than he knows or ever can know until he is forced to show himself by opportunity.

So much for physical heroism. It is generally exhibited in the gaze of the world. There is another kind, however, and a higher kind, which never sees the light of day—the quiet heroism of an obscure life. The majority of our heroes and heroines will be unknown to us until we get to heaven. They are not now walking on hilltops, where they can be observed of all men, but are living quietly and sacrificing patiently in their narrow sphere, waiting for the peace and rest which will come "at eventime." I have known many such, and have never looked into their sad faces without thinking that there is a courage to which that of the battlefield is a trivial circumstance, the courage which endures with resignation and meets inevitable suffering and misfortune with a calmness which is God's best gift.

Here, for example, is a woman who on her wedding day saw nothing but blue sky and sunshine. It seemed as though no shadow could throw itself across her path. A light heart and lips of laughter—nothing more. She did not know her own strength, for she had never been tested. But the avalanche swept down the mountain side and crushed and buried all her hopes. The day was turned to night, and even the stars refused to come out. Sickness, death, poverty followed in logical succession. She was face to face with a hard world, her children crying for bread. The friends of other days had their attention called elsewhere, and they saw her not. Alone in the struggle! And yet she bravely set to work, won her way to a livelihood, walked her lonely path in calm confidence that God still lived, brushed away the tears and grappled with fate. The struggle has told on her, for her hair is grey, and there is a look in her face which comes only from sorrow hard to bear.

You do not know her, or perhaps care to know her, but that life is one long list of heroisms, and when we all get yonder and look back on the past we shall see the path she has travelled, the upward climb of her years, and give her the meed of praise which a thoughtless and ignorant world now refuses. There are no nobler qualities of character than her uncomplaining endurance, her persistent patience and her undimmed faith. The future has crowns for such souls, and God and the angels walk with them on their way to the New Jerusalem.

I know a man who has given his life to an aged parent, and another who has been forbidden for years, shut in from the pleasures which we most prize, and still another whose life has been a long sacrifice for his children, and another who—but why continue the list? I do but remind you of a similar instance within your own knowledge.

To meet such a fate as that requires the sublimest courage, not the courage of despair, but the courage of faith. There are flowers even in such byways as these, joys which cheer the heart and spots of happiness like oases in the desert. It is strange, but the presence of God and the conscious companionship of angels can bring bright days and starry nights. It is not our surroundings, after all, that bring peace, for if peace is in the heart it throws its light over all.

The root and foundation of this heroism is religion. There must be faith that above us and around us are helping and cheering influences, that earth and heaven are within telepathic distance of each other, and that what strength we need will be given us for the asking if we are to meet sorrow and misfortune with quiet fortitude. And the more we realize the presence of God, the easier it is to bear burdens. If we could once catch a glimpse of an angel's face—and some tell me they have done this—we should be light-hearted even in the dark. At any rate, we can have faith that loved ones are near, though invisible, and it helps us as nothing else can.

The Poultry Yard.

An English poultry expert says:—Both in the States and in France the system of feeding poultry generally followed is the exact opposite to our own, the fowls getting soft food at night and corn in the morning. The poultry-keeper may well ask which is right, and the answer apparently is that there is very little difference in the result. An experiment recently tried in America, two lots of fowls getting just the same treatment, but one having soft food in the morning and corn at night, and the other the opposite, resulted in the fowls getting soft food in the morning laying slightly better than the others in winter. This is what one might expect. To set against this, however, was the fact that the fowls getting soft food at night voided double the amount of manure. The reason of this, of course, is that soft food is more quickly digested, but in those poultry houses where the droppings from the fowl-houses are systematically collected and utilized, there is a distinct value in feeding soft food at night, in preference to the morning. There is far less trouble to the feeder when corn is given in the morning, and it really seems as though the value of soft food for breakfast has been over-estimated.

Sulphur for Fowls and Swine.

When fowls are attacked with cholera I find that a little sulphur given in the food will check it. One tablespoonful mixed with the morning's food for thirty fowls and given once a month is sufficient when they are in health. When much sulphur is fed, with exposure to a cold and damp atmosphere, it will cause stiffness in the joints. Sulphur put in the dust bath with ashes is a preventive against lice. A little sprinkled in the nests and under setting hens routs these pests.

It is also good to give swine in case of cholera or sickness followed with vomiting caused from overfeeding. It regulates the stomach and liver without further trouble. I have given two teaspoonfuls twice a day in severe cases in sweet milk or sprinkled on some sliced vegetables.—Emma L. Hill, Damascus, N.Y.

To Make Hens Lay.

Many people complain that they cannot get their hens to lay in winter. One very strong complaint comes to us from one of our subscribers. To aid such we give the experience of one who resides in the cold climate of South Dakota.

Many farmers fail to get any eggs during the winter months, and, from the experience of others more successful, it must be concluded that they either do not care about winter eggs, or that they neglect to so manage and feeds the fowls as to induce them to lay. An interesting experiment was made with two lots of pullets, showing influence of feed and care on the production of eggs in winter, by Rose Seelye-Miller, in the cold climate of South Dakota. The trial was reported in a western journal as follows:—

Two pens of pullets were placed in conditions as nearly equal as possible. One pen was designed for breeding, and it was desired that they should not lay until toward spring. The other pen, containing 18 hens, was designed to produce eggs during the winter, and the eggs were not intended at all for hatching.

The experiment began in December. Let it be remembered that the care, temperature and all other things were equal, save the food, and that the pen designed for late laying contained two less fowls.

During December the early layers produced five and a quarter dozen eggs, and the other pen not an egg. In January, the early layers produced ten dozen and three eggs; the late layers seven eggs. In February the early layers produced nine dozen eggs, and the other pen one dozen. In March the early layers produced fifteen dozen eggs, and the late layers three and a half dozen. In April came the change; the early layers laid ten dozen and nine eggs, and the late layers fifteen dozen and four eggs. From this time the breeders were kept laying, and produced in May 28 eggs, the early layers 142 eggs. This shows conclusively that egg-producing may be governed in a great measure. The feeding was very simple, and the early-laying fowls were fed as follows:—In the morning, boiled lean meat, chopped, with scraps from the table, and during the day all the wheat screenings they would eat, with corn twice a week. They were, of course, watered twice daily, and had some milk to drink.

The pen not intended for laying were fed on poor wheat screenings, with corn. These fowls grew and waxed fat, until they seemed too fat, and no doubt were, for laying. As spring came on the food was changed, and as it was the natural time for laying, too, they produced eggs in abundance.

The ordinary poultry raiser feeds too much corn and wheat. Hens are fed liberally twice a day and are fed on a steady diet of one or two things, either corn or wheat, and both fattening. Hence our hens do not pay, and poultry raising is a snare and a delusion to the one who is not wideawake and up to date in caring for the fowls.

Meat is known to be a great egg-producer, and there is now upon the market a feed prepared from refuse which makes an ideal food for fowls. Bones ground and plenty of milk are also very good in egg production.

Cleanliness and warmth are absolutely essential. A hen with a frozen comb might about as well be killed, unless she is a valuable one, whose eggs will make good hatching in the spring.

We feed our cattle for beef, and our hogs for lean or fat; we feed cows for milk or butter. Then why not discriminate in feeding our poultry too?

If thought were used more we should find our purses growing fat. Lean hens and hogs may be desirable, but a fat pocketbook never fails of appreciation, and the need of strenuous labor is decreasing.—The Country Gentleman.

ed parliament and held a general election to obtain a mandate for the settlement of the supposed conquered territories. In September Mr. Chamberlain, in his address to his constituents, said: "The war is now practically at an end." The ministry secured a great majority on the solemn pledge to reform the army and to carry out the settlement in South Africa with firmness.

DE WET THREATENS CAPE COLONY.

But he reckoned without De Wet. From Bothaville that bold guerilla passed rapidly south, and on Nov. 24 captured a British detachment at Dewetsdorp. From that point he headed towards the Orange river to invade Cape Colony. In this he was foiled, but he succeeded in inflicting a sharp check on his pursuers at Lindley on Jan. 3, 1901. While attention was centred upon him, on Dec. 16 a Boer commando, under Kritzinger, had entered Cape Colony. This force was speedily followed by others, and great alarm was caused in the colony. Town guards and local defense forces were hastily enrolled. In the Transvaal also there was a recrudescence of Boer activity, and Gen. Clements was severely defeated by Delarey at Nooitgedacht on Dec. 13.

The idea that the war was over had, however, so strongly possessed the war office that, though it was now plain that reinforcements were urgently needed, there were none to send. Mr. Brodrick, who had succeeded Lord Lansdowne as minister of war, at the end of 1900 ordered out a cavalry brigade, a handful of mounted infantry, drafts and remounts, and then as matters went from bad to worse, finally decided in January, 1901, to recruit a fresh force of Yeomanry at the high pay of 5s. a day. But his force, raised in haste and dispatched without drill or training to South Africa, proved quite unable to take the field at once, and as Lord Kitchener had to send home the earlier batch of Yeoman his force was actually weakened for the time being.

In February De Wet made another attempt to invade Cape Colony, but was closely pursued by Gen. Plumer and driven over the Orange with considerable loss. As it was known that Botha intended to invade Natal, a sweeping movement in the southeastern Transvaal was carried out in the early months of the year, yet the Boers managed to elude capture.

"EASY TERMS" AGAIN REJECTED.

At the same time an attempt was made to induce the enemy to submit by the offer of terms which seemed to the country to be excessively generous. Reports were again current that the war might be considered at an end. However, the enemy rejected the British offer, and the struggle still went on. Plumer advanced to Pietersburg, and Sir B. Blood swept the Central Transvaal, yet resistance did not collapse. In Cape Colony, where the enemy were spreading all over the country and capturing numerous small places, the British troops could do little, though Gen. French was placed in charge of the operations.

A PROCLAMATION AND ITS SEQUEL.

On Aug. 6 a proclamation was issued stating that unless the Boer leaders submitted by Sept. 15 they should be permanently banished and the property of the burghers charged with the cost of maintaining the families of those still in the field.

On Sept. 6 Col. Scobell scored a small success in Cape Colony, accounting for Commandant Lotter and 130 men. As the period appointed by the proclamation drew to an end surrenders did not increase. In fact, the Boers had determined to signalise its expiration by dealing a succession of blows. On Sept. 17 Major Gough was surrounded and captured on the Natal frontier, three guns being lost, and a day later two more guns and a small force of mounted infantry were captured in the Orange Colony. On Sept. 26 Forts Itala and Prospect, both on the Natal frontier, were attacked, and a desperate fight followed, in which seemingly, neither side could claim a victory. On Sept. 30 Delarey attacked Col. Kekewich at Moedwill and inflicted heavy losses upon him.

Since October there has been a great deal of talk of peace, but the fighting has been going on. The Boers made frequent attacks on the blockhouses, but were repulsed. President Kuyper, of Holland, offered his services as mediator, but the British government stated that the negotiations would have to be with the men in the field. On Jan. 26 the British captured Gen. Ben. Viljoen, one of Botha's lieutenants. On Jan. 21 Gen. Methuen's Yeomanry met with a reverse, but the most serious disaster occurred on March 27, between Winburg and Lichtenburg, when Gen. Methuen was wounded and taken prisoner, and the British lost heavily. Gen. Bruce Hamilton and Gen. Kitchener conducted successful drives against the Boers and captured a number of prisoners, but the elusive Boer generals got away from them. It was in the fight at Hart's river on March 31, that the Canadians distinguished themselves. When the recent peace negotiations were entered into no armistice was granted, and as it was evident that the Boers were at the end of their tether there was a hopeful feeling that the negotiations would result in the end of the war.

Scientific Predictions in Fiction.

RECENTLY "Saturday Night" cited a number of cases of remarkable literary prevision of scientific truth. The words in which Calderon, the Spanish dramatist of the seventeenth century, seems to describe wireless telegraphy and the remarkable passage in which Strada, the learned Jesuit historian, writing in 1624, also depicted Marconi's invention, were quoted. But some further cases of the same kind are now brought to light.

In the third part of "Gulliver's Travels," Swift describes the two satellites of Mars. As the London "Spectator" points out, "when Swift wrote, astronomy had not advanced greatly beyond Huygens's contentment with the twelve bodies—six planets and six satellites—which made up the 'perfect number' of the solar system. Certainly no one suspected that Mars had moons of its own. Thus Swift made a very wild guess when he announced of the Laputan philosophers: 'They have likewise discovered two lesser stars or satellites, which revolve about Mars, whereof the innermost is distant from the center of the primary planet exactly three of his diameters, and the outermost five; the former revolves in the space of ten hours, and the latter in twenty-one and a half.' Not only were there no grounds for the prediction of two satellites, but such an estimate of their distance from the planet was unprecedented; it was as if our moon should be within twenty thousand miles of the earth, and rise and set twice or thrice in the twenty-four hours. Nothing could be more improbable. Yet in 1877 Professor Asaph Hall, with the great Washington equatorial, actually discovered two tiny satellites of Mars, whose distances from the planet are 1 1-2 and 3 1-2 diameters, whilst their periods are 7 1-2 and 30 hours respectively. The agreement with Swift's guess is in the main so remarkable that it is hardly possible to ascribe it to mere accident; and yet these satellites are the merest points of light, which no telescope in existence before Herschel's day could possibly have shown."

Many other similar anticipations are chronicled in the Philadelphia "Era." We quote as follows:

"The law of gravitation was announced by Newton in the year 1685. Had it not been foreseen by Shakespeare in 1609? At all events, in 'Troilus and Cressida,' he put these lines into the mouth of Cressida:

> But the strong base and building of my love
> Is as the very center of the earth,
> Drawing all things to it.—Act iv. sc. 2.

"A contemporary of Shakespeare, Ben Jonson, anticipated the modern air-cushion. In 'The Alchemist,' he makes Sir Epicure Mammon, in enumerating the pleasures to be his when in possession of the philosopher's stone, declare that

> I will have my beds blown, not stuffed;
> Down is too hard.

"In another play the same author credits the Dutch with an invention that foreshadows the Holland submarine boat:

> It is an automa, runs under water,
> With a snug nose, and has a nimble tail
> Made like an auger, with which tail she wriggles
> Between the coasts of a ship, and sinks it straight.

"In France, Cyrano de Bergerac showed himself full of scientific prescience. The airship in which the hero of his 'Voyage to the Moon' (1650) made his trip to that sphere was a pretty close foreshadowing of Montgolfier's balloon, as will be seen from our illustration, made for an edition that long antedated the aeronaut.

"In the same book he clearly foreshadowed the phonograph.

"The supernatural being who acted as the hero's guide gave him for his entertainment some of the books made by the inhabitants of the moon. They were enclosed in boxes. This is what he saw and heard:

" 'On opening the box I found inside a concern of metal, something like one of our watches, full of curious little springs and minute machinery. It was really a book, but a wonderful book that has no leaves or letters; a book, for the understanding of which the eyes are of no use—only the ears are necessary. When anyone wishes to read, he winds up the machine with its great number of nerves of all kinds, and turns the pointer to the chapter he wishes to hear, when there comes out, as if from the mouth of a man or of an instrument of music, the distinct and various sounds which serve the Great Lunarians as the expression of language.' . . .

"Among Fenelon's Fables, written in 1690 for the instruction of Louis XIV.'s grandson, is one entitled 'Voyage Supposé,' and among the supposititious marvels of which it is compact we read: 'There was no painter in all the country, but when they wished the portrait of a friend, or a picture representing some lovely landscape of other object, they put water into large basins of gold and silver, and made this water face the object they wished to paint. Very soon the water would congeal and become as the face of a mirror, where the image dwelt ineffaceably. This could be carried wherever one pleased, and gave as faithful a picture as any mirror.' "

"Is not this an anticipation of photography?"

Great men of the imaginative temperament, observes the "Era," build better than they know; and "the world looks back and sees what they were striving for, what they were aiming at, though they themselves knew it not, or only dimly recognised it."

Changed His Mind.

A young officer at San Francisco had been ordered to the Philippines. According to a Western paper, he received the following telegram from the War Department at Washington:

"You can go to New York, and sail on transport that goes by Suez."

The officer replied: "Would prefer to cross Pacific direct."

Then the Department telegraphed him again: "Transport will make good time; has sixty women school teachers on board."

The young lieutenant an[illegible]: "Save me a berth on transport."

Made Good Soldiers.

Writing in The Upper Canada Times, A.W.P. gives an entertaining sketch of the mountaineers of Virginia, in the course of which he tells the following story:—During the war with Spain an attempt was made to enroll a mountain regiment in West Virginia. Indeed these lean, fierce, slouching backwoodsmen should make superb irregular fighters. But red tape demanded that they should be drilled, and drilled they were, at Charleston. But the weather was warm and many were met together, and to a mountaineer heat and society suggest corn whiskey. So after a long and heartbreaking day for perspiring officers and files of the guard, the whole regiment "guessed they'd quit," broke ranks and surged into town—a thirsty wave. A sweeping operation a la Kitchener landed three hundred in the guardhouse before sunrise, and the prospects were bright for the capture of all, when, mirabile dictu, the guard-house rose in air, showed for a moment like a giant centipede, then was tilted over by many willing hands, and the parched three hundred again swept down to spread Chaos and Old Night in Charleston.

"Vatever is de Rule."

This tale, according to The Philadelphia Times, was told by Judge Pennypacker, who has an excellent reputation as a maker of fervid anti-British speeches, in beginning a response to a toast at a Pennsylvania German banquet in Philadelphia. The story, he said, showed the readiness of the Pennsylvania Dutchman to obey those in authority. It also casts some light upon the occurrences of the American civil war, and goes to suggest that even "farm-burning" is not absolutely unprecedented:—

In 1864 Sheridan, under orders, burned every barn from a valley above Staunton to a certain point below Winchester. A band of angry rebels followed this raid, watching for a chance to pick up any stragglers. Among others who fell into their hands was a little Pennsylvania Dutchman, who quietly turned to his captors and inquired:

"Vat you fellows going to do mit me?"

The reply came short and sharp:

"Hang you."

"Vell," he said, meekly, "vatever is de rule."

His good-natured reply threw the Confederates into a roar of laughter and saved his life.

Wanted a Meal.

A visiting Englishman, says The New York Sun, who attended a dinner given last week by a suburban hostess whose hospitality is notoriously inadequate made a reply to her that it will be difficult for her to live down. Her dinners have been referred to as "samples," and invitations to them are not accepted with alacrity the second time. Her wealth is large, however, and her social persistence is untiring, so that her friends are obliged to accept some of her invitations. The Englishman was a big fellow, whose family had been kind to the hostess when she was in London. The dinner was of the usual inadequate kind that her friends expected. It served merely as an appetizer to the hearty Englishman, and when the coffee was served, indicating that the dinner was at an end, his expression of dissatisfaction was amusing to the other guests. The hostess did not notice it, however, and she said to him amiably:

"Now, do tell me when we may have the pleasure of having you dine with us again?"

"Immediately, madam, immediately," was his unexpected reply. Fortunately for the hostess another guest remarked that the weather had been very "funny," and this permitted a burst of appreciative laughter that ought to have stamped the weather as a wag.

Where Rhodes Rests.

The Matoppo Hills stretch in a northeasterly direction from Bulawayo for a distance of a hundred miles, their greatest breadth being thirty-five miles. The place of Mr. Rhodes' burial is situated about thirty miles from the town.

Near by is a part of the hills which bears the important title of "The World's View." The prospect from any chosen summit makes a deep impression on the spectator. It is impressive without being picturesque. As far as eye can see there is spread out before him a panorama of treeless mountains of varied shapes, mostly of abrupt outline, suggestive of a turbulent sea stilled by an omnipotent hand. The base of the hills is fringed with trees, and here and there is a clump of thick bush. In places great gorges draw black lines between the mountains, which, moreover, are punctured with giant caves, where the Matabele took refuge during the rebellion, and could have held out for an indefinite period had not the genius and daring of Mr. Rhodes put an end to the outbreak.

The predominant note is massiveness and stability, for the hills are of granite, but the hardness is toned down by the green of the lower foliage and the soft, velvety azure of the sky above. It was the poet in Cecil Rhodes which impelled him to his choice.

In places the traveller comes upon groups of ruins, which in this out-of-the-world region strangely stir the imagination.

It is difficult to realize that these habitations were occupied by gold-seekers so long ago as 1,000 B.C. When one thinks of Rhodesia, it is invariably of the great possibilities which the future holds for the country. But what of Rhodesia's past? Three thousand years ago men as gold-hungry as the "greenest" prospector of to-day scoured the Matoppos and the surrounding country for the precious metal. These crumbling ruins once contained the furnaces for the retorting and smelting of the gold. In many quarters huge excavations are found, where the ancients dug far down into the bowels of the earth in search of the metal. Several of these mines are still the largest on the earth's surface. The galleries are caked with layers of soot from the torches of the workers. One historian estimates that the ancient miners discovered millions of pounds' worth of gold in Rhodesia.

"What are you in prison for, my friend?"

"Stealin' a pin, ma'am."

"What?"

"That's right, ma'am. It had a diamond fastened at one end of it."—Chicago Tribune

ST VINCENT ISLAND

If the scene of desolation and death outside of Georgetown was appalling, that of anguish and suffering in the hospitals was heartrending. Lying on the ground, close together, was a mass of suffering beings, writhing and moaning. Now and again a wail would be heard of "Oh, God, help us!" "Oh, Lord, deliver us!" Then would arise in agonizing tones, the harrowing chant: "Oh God help us!" "Oh, Lord, deliver us!"

Many of these poor wretches, mad with pain, would try to raise on their mutilated hands and feet, and as they tumbled about they fell over others, who shriek ed with agony when their burned limbs were touched.

BUSY WITH CARTS.

Every quarter of an hour the death cart would pass, for there was sure to be some victim ready for the trenches outside the town.

I met Father Putz in one of the hospitals. "Perhaps one or two will live," he told me, "the rest are doomed."

One poor woman, terribly burned, had a child two years old in her bandaged arms. Regardless of her sufferings she swayed to and fro over her grasping infant, the picture of anguish and despair.

Most of these poor wretches were burned to the muscles, some to the very bones. Faces, hands and feet had suffered most, the flesh hanging in shreds from the tendons.

It was only on the morning of May 4 that 10 persons, survivors of a batch of 15 who had taken refuge in a house in one of the outlying districts, were rescued. Those poor persons had been without water or food from Wednesday, and their sufferings, injured as they were, can be imagined. One of them told me what he could remember of the occurrence.

"We heard the mountains roaring the whole morning, and we did not like to abandon our homes, so we chanced it. At about 1.30 it began to rain pebbles and stones, some of which were alight, but then, although we were afraid, we could not leave. The big explosion must of taken place at about 2.30 o'clock. There was fire all around me, and I could not breathe. My hands and feet got burned, but I managed to reach the house where the others were.

"In two hours everything was over, as though pebbles and dust fell for a long time after. My burns got so painful and stiff that I could not move. We remained until Sunday morning without food or water. Five persons died, and as none of us could throw the bodies out, or even move about we had to lie alongside of the bodies until we were rescued."

Maharajah of Jaipur Travels in Splendour to Coronation

Paris June 3.—The Maharajah of Jaipur, who is here on his way to the coronation of the King of England, is travelling in unparalleled splendor. His suite comprises 20 dignitaries and 123 servants. His luggage weighs more than 100,000 pounds, not including the presents intended for the King.

The Maharajah carries a six months supply of certain delicacies hard to find in the English markets and 30 barrels of sacred water from the Ganges for his own consumption. The party travels in special trains and steamers.

Nervous and Sleepless

There is just one cure and that is plenty of food for the blood and nerves, which is best supplied in Ferrozone, than which no blood builder, nerve tonic or strength producer is better. Ferrozone promotes healthy digestion, which results in improved nutrition. The blood grows rich and red, furnishes stability to the entire system, and the store of nerve force and energy increases daily. A rebuilding of the constitution, new spirits, health and strength, all come from the use of Ferrozone. This marvelous renovator is sold by Druggists for 50c. a box, or six boxes for $2.50. Sold by Ormond & Walsh.

THE ISSUE OVER SEALS WITH GREAT BRITAIN

Ways and Means Report on Alaskan Fisheries

Washington, June 4.—The Ways and Means Committee has made a novel decision to force Great Britain to come to terms on the Alaskan seal fisheries. By a strong majority the committee agreed to report favorably the Beidler bill, which in effect, proposes to kill off the whole race of seals in Alaskan waters, unless England shall come into an agreement to reconsider the condition of the seal rookeries on the Pribilof Islands, for the purpose of providing some way to prevent the gradual extermination of the seals by pelagic fishing.

The bill also asks for a modus vivendi until the representatives of the two countries can come to an agreement, the whole business of seal fishing on land or at sea to be temporarily stopped, except that a few seal may be taken on St. Paul and St. George Islands for food for the natives.

The preamble of the bill sets forth that the regulations of the Behring Sea tribunal made in Paris in 1893, for the protection of seals, as well as the Jordan-Thompson Commission's negotiations of 1896-7, have utterly failed to preserve the seals and prevent their killing; that the United States is reduced, by reason of the failure of these negotiations, to the painful position of being obliged to breed and protect annually some 90,000 female seals on the islands of Alaska for alien hunters to slaughter at sea, while our own people are absolutely prevented by act of Congress, from killing them; and further, that, by the reason of the killing of some 20,000 to 40,000 mother seals every year by alien hunters, thousands of pup seals are starved to death every season.

Further, this ruining of the seal industry of the United States in Alaskan waters compels the Government to support the native inhabitants of the sealing islands by annual appropriations from the Treasury, and to keep a staff of Treasury agents on the islands and maintain an idle patrolling service of revenue marine cutters.

The purpose of the bill is to require that if Great Britain does not agree to a modus vivendi and a reconsideration of the whole subject before the opening of the approaching sealing season, the Secretary of the Treasury shall cause the killing of all male and female seals to be found in the Pribilof Islands, with the exception of 1,000 males and 10,000 females and that the proceeds of the sale of the skins be covered into the Treasury. This would be the wanton killing of about 80,000 seals to spite Great Britain, because that country has been slow in assenting to an understanding which shall adequately protect the seals.

Mr. McCall, of the committee, declared that no self-respecting Government would for a moment be coerced into negotiations on any question in the manner proposed, and believed that Great Britain, last of all nations, would be disposed to listen to overtures for an international agreement couched in such legislation.

FROM AFRICA

Comes the Only King To Attend Edward's Coronation

London, June 4.—Lawanika, King of Barotseland (Northwestern Rhodesia), the only King who will be present at the coronation of Kind Edward, arrived from South Africa to-day. The presents which King Edward will give to the foreign envoys are now ready. Whitelaw Reid, the American Special Ambassador, and his associates will receive pins and brooches of gold, mostly in the form of the initial "E," set with rubies and pearls, with a gold-enameled crown above. In a few cases, perhaps, costlier presents will be made to the heads of special embassies.

A curious precedent in celebrating King Edward's crowning has been set by the corporation of the City of London, which has decided to make a personal gift of £5,000 to the King to use as he sees fit, in token of the continuance of the corporation's ancient loyalty to the sovereign. This is exclusive of the appropriations for decoration and entertainment, or for the King's hospital fund.

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

Local Happenings Picked Up Here and There by the Times.

NOTE—The Times requests its readers to contribute items of news to its columns. Anything that is phoned or sent in writing to the office, of a nature suitable for publication, will be received and published.—Ed. Times.)

—Work on the Street Railway will begin next week.

—The big Douro picnic will take place on June 19th.

—Ashburnham now proposes to go in for concrete walks.

—Rev. Mr. Yule has taken up his residence in Bethany.

—The Chief has a child's gold ring, which was picked up on the street.

—Idyl-wild Hotel has been put in first class shape for the business of the season.

—The annual church parade of the Foresters of Zion, Otonabee, will be held next Sunday afternoon to St. Mark's church, Otonabee.

—A special coronation service will be holden Coronation Day at 11 a.m., at St. John's church, at which Rev. Canon Sweeney, of Toronto, will officiate.

Professional nurse, many years' experience. Charges moderate. Apply at 47 Chamberlain street, care Mr. George Glenn.

—Kitchener will long live in the memory of Peterborough school children as the man who did something that procured them a holiday.

—We received the initial number of the Huntsville Empire, published by Mr. F. J. Brockon, formerly of The Times staff. The paper, as might be expected, is a model of typographical art. We wish our contemporary every success.

—A complaint has been made to The Times that there is no map of the Kawartha Lakes to be had. Surely the Cottager's Association of Stony Lake should be able to supply this.

How they do in Cobourg: The Post says: The Counties' Clerk's office has been improved and refreshed by a handsome new carpet. The Counties Property Committee is determined to have everything nice about their apartments.

—The annual meeting of the Peterborough Presbyterial Society of Women's Foreign Missions opened yesterday in St. Paul's church. An address was delivered in St. Paul's under the auspices of the Society by Rev. Dr. Grant.

—Mr. Dan Foley, of Jubilee Point Hotel, was in town Saturday and gave The Times a call. He states that things are booming down at the point this year, the business for the month of May having been over five times as much as it was any other year.

—The forty-one Canadian teachers, including our Peterborough girls, have arrived safely in Capetown. Their arrival was within a few hours of the arrival of the Castrian, with the last detachment of Canadian reinforcements. The missions of the two are quite dissimilar, while the Canadian boys will be employed in teaching the old the idea how not to shoot, the Canadian girls will be busied in teaching the young the idea how to shoot.

Girls Wanted.

Three girls wanted at once—A laundry woman, assistant cook and dining room girl. Wages from eight to twenty dollars per month. Apply to Wm. Snowden, Snowden House, Peterborough.

Important Church Conference

Chicago, Ill. June 3.—The priests of the Chicago archdiocese of the Roman Catholic church assembled here for an important conference today. It is the second official synod ever held in this diocese and one of the most important church gatherings held in years. Among the questions to be taken up are the naming of officers of the archdiocese, the creating of new irremovable rectors, the suggestion of additional church regulations, and several innovations to be announced later.

The synod opened in the cathedral this morning with the celebration of pontifical mass in the presence of all the prelates of the archdiocese. After the solemn religious services, during which all the priests were present in surplices and cassocks, the deliberations of the synod commenced behind closed doors.

EITHER WAY HURTS

A Cross Fire on Coffee User

The breaking away from coffee is an exceedingly serious problem to many people, especially when headaches follow leaving off the drug, and dyspepsia and bowel trouble grows more and more serious if the coffee is continued. So there you are between two fires.

A comparatively easy way out was taken by a lady from Franklin, Pa., who says, "We had a curious experience with coffee. Husband had been, for many years, a sufferer from dyspepsia, with heart-burn, headaches and general nervous trouble. We tried a great many physicians and a great many remedies but none of them did him any lasting good.

We concluded there must be something about his employment that thus affected him. One day a man told him that probably coffee was the cause of his trouble and advised him to use Postum. The first time I made it I studied directions and made it good. Well that day was a day long to be remembered.

We liked the Postum but we had a hundred headaches compressed into one. You see the trouble was we had both used coffee so long that our nerves were in a state of collapse without the usual stimulant. Until then I did not dream I was such a slave to coffee but we had to do something to quit, so the next morning I used Postum with part coffee and we missed the headaches, then I used less coffee every morning for about two weeks, and then Postum alone for nearly a year now, and I just wish you could see the change in my husband. He has better health than he ever had before, never has the headache, can eat anything he wants, does not have heart-burn or any stomach trouble, and he cannot be induced to drink coffee under any circumstances.

When anybody mentions dyspepsia in his presence he tells them what cured him.

I was almost as bad as he but am now entirely well, and have gone up from 98 pounds to 168 pounds and am so thankful for the blessing of good health.

If my name will do any good, use it, for we stand by Postum always." Mrs. W. A. Bowers, 23—8th Street, Franklin, Pa.

WILL FEED THE EMPIRE

Mr. Robert Meighen, of Montreal, President of the Lake of the Woods Milling Company, said upon his return from a trip through the Northwest that in five years Canada would grow enough wheat to supply the British Empire. He took note of the influx of American settlers, many of whom he identified as really Canadians who had lived for years in the Western States, and who, finding that they could sell their lands at enhanced rates, had done so, and then bought lands in the Northwest equally fertile at about one-third the price of those in the Western States. Coming back, then, to Canada, and occupying admirable lands, they would, with money in their pockets, from the sale of their former possessions, be in a position to become valuable settlers. The first year they would raise coarse grains, as he had seen, but the second year they would raise wheat, and thus the great wheat belt would go on extending. Mr. Meighen has enough faith in the justice and breadth and liberality of our institutions under the British flag, to be well persuaded that the Americans who come to us will be quite content to remain British subjects, under conditions which give them perfect freedom and the opportunity to achieve an independence. He found British Columbia prosperous and was delighted with the signs of progress at Winnipeg. The duty of the hour is to increase the means of transportation, keeping pace, with our facilities, with the inrush of people, who begin to produce a wheat crop in the second year of their settlement. To provide these settlers with clothing, implements, furniture and other manufactured goods will keep thousands of Ontario men and women fully employed, and the railways will have a great deal of westward freight to carry when wheat comes east by hundreds of millions of bushels. Canada's prosperity is just beginning.

RENEWED HOPE FOR MRS. MAYBRICK

Mrs. Florence Maybrick, who May be Included in the General amnesty this Month

Special to The Times.

London, June 5—It is reported that Baroness Roques, the mother of Mrs. Florence Maybrick, found guilty of poisoning her husband and sentenced to prison for life, has received semi-official assurances that her daughter will be pardoned during the coronation celebration this month as a part of the general amnesty to be extended to criminals of good record. At the United States Embassy nothing is known about the matter, and Ambassador Choate declines either to deny or confirm the rumor. Persons conversant with the late attempts to secure the famous prisoner's liberty assert that if at last she is to be given her freedom, this may be regarded as due to the influence of King Edward and may be interpreted as a token of his appreciation of American good will. Ever since the present home secretary came into office two years ago, efforts to secure the release of Mrs. Maybrick have been particularly active and have continued up to the present time. The personal efforts of Ambassador Choate, although made informally, have been unceasing.

The history of Mrs. Maybrick's sad case is familiar to every American newspaper reader. She is the daughter of William G. Chandler, a banker of Mobile, Ala, and was born in that city forty years ago. When 17 years of age she was met and courted by James Maybrick of Liverpool, then about forty years old. Maybrick had lived a fast life and was already declining in health. He died May 11, 1889, in Liverpool, and his wife was charged with giving him arsenic with intent to kill. Maybrick, it seems, was constantly complaining of dyspepsia, of deranged digestion, and of nervous symptoms, which the doctor thought exaggerated. Nervine tonics were the common medicines his doctors ordered. More than that, he was given to dosing himself. That he took actively poisonous drugs was proved by the evidence of Sir James Pool, Dr. Hopper and others.

On April 27 Maybrick went to the races, got wet on the race course, and attended a race dinner, at which he was taken ill, and the result was symptoms of gastritis, the stomach after death presenting the appearance of inflammation. Immediately he was taken ill, physicians were called in by the wife, who attended him until he died, two weeks after being taken sick. Mrs. Maybrick fell into a swoon immediately after her husband's death, and was unconscious most of the time for the next forty-eight hours.

The jury was out only thirty-six minutes and the verdict of guilty was a surprise to everyone. The judge was hissed and hooted in the court room, and it was with difficulty he reached his carriage. The sentence of death which followed this strange verdict was condemned by the press and pulpit throughout the civilized world. There being no court of criminal appeal in England, and the only resort being to the crown for pardon, a monster petition containing more than 500,000 names was prepared requesting a review of the case. Home Secretary Matthews held, with the concurrence of Justice Stephen, that the evidence "does not wholly exclude a reasonable doubt whether death was in fact caused by the administration of arsenic," and commuted the death sentence to life imprisonment.

It is understood that the late President McKinley, through Secretary Hay and Ambassador Choate, asked the English government for a pardon and release of Mrs. Maybrick without reference to the question of her guilt or innocence, as an act of international comity. Should the famous prisoner be included in the general amnesty to be declared two or three weeks hence the fact would occasion no surprise among those best informed as to the status of the case.

KRUGER MAY RETURN TO SOUTH AFRICA.

British Government Offers Kruger Refuge on His Farm--German Jealously Excited

Special to The Times.

London, June 4,— It is reported that friendly advances are being indirectly made by the British Government to Mr. Kruger, with the object of enabling the ex-President to return to South Africa, conditionally on his return to his Rustenburg farm.

Foreign journals already describe it as the King's peace. While he has aided in bringing it about, it is doubtful if he has been unduly influenced by the approach of the coronation.

Trio of Peacemakers.

Lord Kitchener, Lord Milner, and Mr. Chamberlain are the real authors of peace, and have done the work with flexibility and astuteness. While they have made a military convention for the surrender of the Boers still in the field, they have dealt with the responsible agents of the two Republican Governments, and have arranged a compact which binds the British Government to carry out a liberal and just policy to the vanquished. Pro-Boers have little to say against Mr. Chamberlain's peace. There is a continued chorus of congratulation from Ministerial journals.

The King's Congratulations.

King Edward cabled his congratulations on the conclusion of peace to Lord Milner as follows:

I am overjoyed at the news of the surrender of the Boers, and I warmly congratulate you on the able manner in which you have conducted the negotiations.

To this message Lord Milner replied:

I offer my deepest thanks for your Majesty's gracious message. I am profoundly thankful that your Majesty's coronation will be celebrated with peace throughout your South African domains.

The following is the text of King Edward's despatch to Lord Kitchener:

I send you my most hearty congratulations on the termination of hostilities. I also heartily congratulate my brave troops under your command for having brought a long and difficult campaign to so glorious and successful conclusion.

To this message Lord Kitchener replied:

The army in South Africa highly appreciate your Majesty's most gracious message, which I am now communicating to it. I humbly beg to thank your Majesty.

The Graphic today says that amid all the chorus of congratulations and pleasant comment there is only one discordant note. It comes from Germany. The note is full of venomous hatred, shameless envy, and brutal and bitter malevolence. The other newspapers are scarcely unmeasured in assailing Germany's part in leading the popular campaign against England on the Continent.

The Times says it is the fixed German idea that Germany ought to always come in for plunder, no matter who has done the work and fighting, but the Boers will soon learn that they are better off under the British flag, than any German colony under the Kaiser.

TO HOLD BLOCKHOUSES.

London, June 4,—The Times correspondent says: "When the delegates arrived on Saturday night they were inclined to dilate on the difficulties experienced in persuading the Vereeniging delegates to accede to the British proposals. It seemed almost as if some objection might be raised.

"A few privileged all-night pass-holders, guessing what had happened, held a meeting in the market square, and the strains of "Rule Britannia" broke the silence of the streets until the early hours of Sunday. Considerable discussion occurred at Vereeniging when the final offers were laid before the Boers. Their speeches were mostly hostile, but the motion to accept the conditions was carried almost unanimously.

"Until the general surrender of the burghers' rifles and ammunition is accomplished, there will be no breaking up of columns or withdrawal of troops from the posts and blockhouses."

SIR GORDON SPRIGG.

The Times in a despatch from Cape Town, says the Premier Sir Gordon Sprigg, in his speech declared the colony's expenditure by the war and the plague to be fifteen million dollars, but owing to the buoyancy of the revenue the debt was actually eight million, seven hundred and fifty thousand. A loan could easily be raised in London, and the interest defrayed out of the excise. The Premier said he was a free trader, but that the solidarity of the empire is a greater thing than free trade. There might be free trade within the empire and a different principle for the nations outside. This sentiment was greatly cheered.

The Times, in a despatch from Colombo, Ceylon, says the great majority of the prisoners rejoiced that the war was concluded.

AFTER THE WAR.

The Times despatch from Berlin says There are signs that carefully calculated attempts will be made to improve Anglo-German relations, with the object of consigning to oblivion certain inconvenient episodes connected with the war. It is believed that England will be ready if peace promotes trade revival to do business with a power which thinks there is business to be done with England.

QUADRUPLETS BROUGHT RICHES

Mother, Who Was Penniless, Earned $20,000 By Exhibiting Them

Special to The Times.

Chicago, Ill., June 5 — Little did Joseph Ormsby dream when he ran away when his wife presented him with 14 children in 7 years that the set of "quads" born after his base desertion would bring fortune to the prolific Mrs. Ormsby.

September 29 the "quads" were born. Mrs Ormsby was deserted and penniless, and the kind public came to her rescue. Now the "quads" have two maids to look after them. Yesterday they moved into an $6,000 cottage and have brought $20,000 to the mother. They are the biggest museum attractions since the Siamese twins. Mrs. Ormsby draws $300 a week and $100 from the sale of photographs.

COSTS TO MUCH

For Many of the Peers and Peeresses To Attend the Coronation

London, June 5 — It is a fact that quite a number of peers and peeresses won't attend the coronation ceremonies because of the expense. The royal command to attend could not be slighted, and as the invitation sent out is practically a command I learn that only those peers who, in answer to official inquiry, signified their desire to attend received invitations.

I understand that a luncheon for the peers and peeresses is to be served in the painted chamber of the House of Lords at 1.30 o'clock. So it doesn't seem as if the services in Westminster Abbey are to be so long as was at one time anticipated.

It is very funny to hear the growls that have been raised on all sides at what is deemed the extravagant charge of two guineas ($10) a head for this luncheon. Several peers have declared that nothing on earth shall induce them to pay this sum for the luncheon, as it can't possibly cost so much. Then, too, great offense has been given by the intimation given to the peers to apply for permission to attend the House of Lords on this occasion, when it is an established fact that they have a right to be present. There will be a meeting in the near future, when the whole subject will be brought up and discussed.

PHILIPPINE TRIALS

Native Killed An American Soldier Who Vaccinated Him

Washington, D.C., June 4.—The Philippine mail to-day brought to the war department the records of a number of interesting court-martial cases in the Philippines. Private Charles L. Leonard, company G, Sixth Infantry, was assisting an enlisted man of the hospital corps in vaccinating the native inhabitants of Bacong. Among the natives vaccinated was one named Almin, who at first was reluctant to have the operation performed, but who later submitted to it with seeming willingness. He then accompanied the two soldiers on their rounds, apparently friendly and much interested in their work. But Private Leonard was later waylaid by Almin and killed. Almin admitted the crime and said he murdered Leonard because he had vaccinated him. Gen. Chaffee approved the sentence of death imposed by a court-martial.

Basilio Laynes, a native, stabbed to death another native named Diecampo while the latter was seated at breakfast in the public market at Bauan, Batangas. The only motive for the crime appeared to be the fact that Diecampo was in the employ of the United States. Laynes was sentenced to death.

Nicolas Esparia surrendered and took the oath of allegiance to the United States. He was given his liberty, returned to the mountains and resumed his calling as an insurrecto chief and later was captured with arms in his hands and directing his followers in firing upon United States forces. A military court-martial sentenced him to hang and Gen. Chaffee, while declaring that the sentence was fully justified by the laws of war, commuted it to ten years' imprisonment at hard labor on the recommendation of the brigade and department commanders.

Valuable Advice to Rheumatics.

Eat meat sparingly, and take very little sugar. Avoid intoxicants, keep away from dampness, drink water abundantly, and always rely on Nerviline as a quick reliever of Rheumatic pains. Being five times stronger than ordinary remedies, Nerviline's power over pain is simply beyond belief. It cures also Sciatica, Lumbago, Neuralgia, and all pain, whether internal or external. Large bottles price 25c.

GREAT POWER SCHEME

Canal Cutting Through Solid Rock at Sault Ste. Marie

TO DEVELOP AMERICAN SIDE

A Two-Mile Canal to Tap the Roaring Torrent as it Leaps From Lake Superior to Lake Huron

Sault, Ste, Marie, June 4.—Preparations are being made for the formal opening on the Fourth of July of the great new power canal on the American side of the Sault Ste. Marie. A gigantic system of industries has already been built up on the Canadian side of this body of water. Fine improvements of the most substantial nature have been made where what was only a few years ago an uninhabited waste. Some pulp mills and chemical plants have been reared and railroads built, and thousands of persons attracted to the vicinity. This will be now done in the same manner in Michigan, on the American side. The backbone of this promised industrial activity is the canal, which is now rapidly nearing completion. Philadelphia capital is largely interested in the works on both sides of this water, this city being the headquarters of the Lake Superior Consolidated Company, which is doing the work that is making the Sault section the most promising industrial centre in the world.

The fall of this body of water as it passes from Lake Superior to Lake Huron is 19 1-2 feet, and the volume is enormous. It travels here at the rate of seven feet per second.

The canal has a length of two and a quarter miles, with an average breadth of 215 feet and a depth of 27 feet and it is calculated that it will generate 60,000 horse-power. It is the greatest power canal in the world. More than half of its length is cut through solid rock and the balance through gravel and clay. It has been three years in the course of construction, and during that time an army of 1500 men has been constantly engaged on the work. Their labor has been augmented by the services of six channeling machines, six large steam shovels, 16 locomotives and 250 cars. The excavations have been used for making land and piers, and the stone taken from the big trench was utilized in the construction of buildings.

Where the canal passes through the clay and gravel the prismatic form of construction has been followed, the sides being lined with timber, caulked and topped off by a three-foot wall of stone. Where the cutting is through the rocks the sides are vertical, without any facing.

The power house is 1320 feet long and 100 feet wide, and it will be equipped with 80 turbine wheels. The whole work on the American side represents an expenditure of $5,000,000.

A GRANT OF $250,000 FOR LORD KITCHENER

King Edward Refers to the General's Services with Above Recommendation

Special to The Times.

London, June 4.—In the House of Commons today, the Government leader, Mr. A. J. Balfour, presented a message from King Edward as follows:

"His Majesty, taking into consideration the eminent services rendered by Lord Kitchener, and being desirous, in recognition of such services, to confer on him some signal mark of his favor, recommends that he, the King, should be enabled to grant Lord Kitchener £50,000 ($250,000)."

John Dillon, William Redmond, and Swift MacNeill (Irish Nationalists), announced their intention of opposing the grant at every stage. A resolution giving effect to his Majesty's message will be discussed tomorrow.

The Political Situation

The Liberals May be in a Minority in a Few Days

The excitement has abated over the election, and the atmosphere is clearing. The present standing of the parties is as follows:

Liberals	50
Conservatives	47
Vacant by death	1
[illegible]	98
Liberal majority	3

To-day a recount will begin in London, where Madole, the Liberal candidate, had a majority of two. It is said that there are 82 spoiled and rejected ballots to be scrutinized. The Times is of opinion that this seat will go to the conservatives. This will make the score 48 Liberals and 47 Conservatives.

North Grey will also have a recount at once. The official declaration to be made this evening, will be in favor of the Liberal candidate, by a majority of 8 or 10. A recount will probably reverse this, and give the seat to the Conservatives. This would place the government in a minority.

On the other hand there are two close conservative seats—North Perth, with a majority of two, and Centre Bruce with 4. It is possible that these seats may be given to the Liberals, but this is not probable. The chances are rather that the majorities will be increased.

A great deal, therefore, depends on to-day. The government is said will wait to see the result of the recounts before deciding on a line of action. The Times is of opinion that Mr. Ross will hold on, no matter what the recounts may do, until the House meets, in the hope that he will be able to secure a majority on bye-elections. Every Conservative seat that affords any chance, will be protested, and an effort made to carry them in the bye-election for the government.

In West Peterborough the talk which has been indulged in, about disqualifying Hon. Mr. Stratton, will probably die out. Mr. Stratton has little to fear on this head, for we believe he has done nothing but what will bear the closest scrutiny.

The Mail and Empire prints the following from Prof. Goldwin Smith: "Mr. Ross has to choose between the course of resigning at once, if he feels himself defeated, and that of meeting the Legislature. A second appeal to the country before the meeting of the Legislature is out of the question. Mr. Ross is quite at liberty to meet the Legislature with a minority if he thinks fit in the hope of converting it into a majority by his policy, as Sir Robert Peel did in 1834."

On the other hand the Telegram believes that Premier Ross has planned a bold course if the recounts go against him. He will make another appeal to the country.

Pimples, Blotches and Skin Eruptions

How unsightly, sometimes even disgusting, and certainly very mortifying to the sufferer. They are merely an evidence of impure, poisoned blood, and lowered vitality of the elementary organs, which can be quickly changed by taking Ferrozone after meals. Ferrozone cleanses the blood of all poisons and eruptions, makes it rich in red corpuscles that manifest themselves in a healthy ruddy complexion. To have a pure, soft skin and good complexion, simply use Ferrozone regularly. Price 50c. per box, or six boxes for $2.50, at Druggists, or Ormond & Walsh.

SIX VOTES AGAINST PEACE.

Pretoria, Transvaal, June 4.—The ballot of the Boers at Vereeniging resulted in fifty-four votes in favor of surrender and six against it.

Preparations are being made here for the surrender of the Boer commands which will take place on the race course. All the Boers are allowed perfect freedom.

There will be a thanksgiving service Sunday, June 8, on the church square, in which it is hoped the Boers will participate.

The women in the concentration camps are anxious to return to their homes immediately, but this will be impossible until a system of supply depots for the outlying districts is established.

General Baden-Powell is arranging for the distribution of mounted constabulary in various districts. The police, railroads and telegraphs will be handed over to the civil authorities as soon as possible and the restrictions of martial law will be gradually relaxed.

BOERS ARE CORDIAL.

The Boer delegates, who, during the peace negotiations, were stiff, formal and unfriendly, are now extremely cordial. All the commandants are returning to their commands in order to explain the situation.

Gen. Louis Botha, the Boer Commandant-General, has written an open letter to the burghers, thanking them for their obedience in the past and exhorting them to be equally loyal in their obedience to the new Government.

Lord Kitchener's address to the Boer delegates at Vereeniging, in which he said that if he had been one of them he would have been proud to have done so well in the field as they had done, made the best possible impression and drew forth a hearty response from General Beyers, the chairman of the Boer conference who expressed the pleasure the Boers experienced in meeting Lord Kitchener as a friend, adding that they had fought so long against him that they had acquired full appreciation of his worth.

REMARKABLE SCENES.

The departure of the Boer commanders from Vereeniging for their various districts was marked by remarkable scenes of fraternization. The trains conveying the Boers started late and the night being extremely cold, the sentries along the railroad track lighted huge bonfires around which groups of Boers and Britons gathered, forming a highly picturesque scene. The late opponents joined in such songs as "Hard Times Come Again no More," "Old Folks at Home" the British soldiers and the burghers outvieing one another in their demonstrations of joy. In brief the scene with the departure of the train resembled nothing so much as the starting of huge picnic parties. The same signs of rejoicing were witnessed throughout the Rand. Flags were displayed everywhere and thanksgiving services were held in all the towns.

Generals Botha and Delarey and other Boer leaders will start for Europe shortly, for the purpose of raising funds for the distressed burghers.

Gen. Schalk-Burger, who was Acting-President of the Transvaal, joining Gen. Botha in addressing an open letter to the burghers. After referring to the courage which they displayed and their brave deeds in the field he called on them to work together for the social and spiritual advancement of the country.

HAS KITCHENER LEFT?

Durban, Natal, June 4.—The Times of Natal states that Lord Kitchener has left for England, and that General Lyttleton is Acting Commander-in-Chief of the British forces in South Africa.

Charged With Killing Three Women

Special to The Times.

Evansville, Ind., June 5.—The case of former Patrolman Wilbur S. Sherwell, who is charged with the murder of three women, was called for trial in the circuit court to-day. The crimes, which were committed last November, were of the "Jack the Ripper" type and aroused widespread horror. The present trial is for the murder of Mrs. George Bell, whose dead body was found in a ditch in this city Nov. 12 last. On the same day the body of Lena Renner was found in a ditch in another part of the town. Fanny Butler is alleged to have been choked to death by Sherwell in a stable May 15, 1901. In the latter part of November Sherwell was arrested and charged with the three murders. During his long confinement in jail he has maintained an air of indifference.

PEACE AND THE FUTURE

The terms of settlement with the Boers, at last concluded at a conference of the representative leaders, are an admixture of just severity and magnanimity. There could be no less punishment than disfranchisement for rebels, and the fifteen million dollar fund for the restoration of ruined farms is a wise investment of liberality. The British were firm in their refusal to reinstate the Boers in their independence. The burghers may retain a fair measure of self-government under the aegis of the Union Jack. Not again will the Boer flag float over the State House either of Bloemfontein or Pretoria. Hope is indulged that the Boers in resuming their peaceful avocations will settle down as contented subjects of Great Britain to learn its language and conform to its civilization. They have been taught a lesson which will not have to be repeated, as to the might of England. The illusions they were under since 1881 have been dispelled by an experience calculated to teach the most obdurate learner. Whether they will profit by it and fall in with the new regime or trek again to the wilderness who can foretell? Already a large number have gone north to lay the foundations of a new Republic. It will be seen when the prisoners of war return whether they will determine to begin anew upon the ashes of their farmsteads, accepting the political status imposed upon them, or make a fresh start where they may live the free pastoral life of the Transvaal, again lords over all. This is one part of the Boer problem in South Africa. Another is the position of Cape Colony, whose inhabitants are two-thirds Dutch to one-third British. No doubt is felt in many minds that the Afrikander Bond will go on with its propagandum for the independence of that colony. The once master spirit of the Cape, who withdrew from its membership on that account, is no longer a factor in the control of this Dutch organization. He sleeps his last sleep in the Matoppa Hills, while the ideas of political aggrandizement which he did his best to check, will go forward. It was for this that Cecil Rhodes labored to maintain the Capital of South Africa at Cape Town. The Jameson raid was instigated by him for that ultimate object, Rhodes foresaw that as the Outlanders of all nations increased around Johannesburg, the end would be that that city would become the centre of Government, and the control pass into the hands of a mixed people more ready to assimilate with the native Dutch than to maintain allegiance to a flag whose Capital was seven thousand miles away. The raid was made in order to bring the question to a climax while the rich men were ready to co-operate with Rhodes on British lines rather than wait until possibly a new set of rich men should arise with ideas foreign to that policy. The project failed, but the far-seeing policy of Rhodes and his almost fanatical fidelity to the flag of old England, will remain to his credit. His influence is gone. But the Afrikander Bond still flourishes, and it will require all the administrative discretion and tact of Lord Milner to steer the ship of state in safety.

KITCHENER AND CHAMBERLAIN

The two men of iron who have "seen this thing through" are Kitchener and Chamberlain.

Other men have had much to do with it, and have been deservedly honoured. But Kitchener in the field and Chamberlain in Parliament have been the men who, in season and out of it, have pushed steadily ahead with never a lowering of courage or a lessening of firm purpose until the victory of British arms was complete.

They have both stood fire, and have done some fairly effective shooting back. The longness or the hardness of the task has never shown for a moment in the conduct of either of them. They have exhibited the high courage and the dogged perseverance which every Briton dearly loves.

Out of it all, their names will shine brighter. When we look back on the final settlement of the long familiar "open sore" in South Africa, we shall think chiefly of Mr. Joseph Chamberlain and Lord Kitchener in connection with the thoroughly well-done task.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The Liberals are not out of the woods yet. A change over of two seats would place Mr. Ross in a minority of one.

It is highly probable now that Ontario will have another general election before the year is out.

The Philadelphia Record has been sold for over $3,000,000 to a new company. The real estate and plant is worth $800,000, so that the good reputation of the paper is considered to be worth over $2,000,000. It is not inappropriate, in view of recent events, to draw the attention of some of our contemporaries to the value that attaches to a good reputation. It is worth building up.

BOARD OF EDUCATION

Report of Special Committee Re Domestic Science and Manual Training

The Board of Education met last night and considerable business transacted. After the reading of the minutes the following communications were taken under consideration:

From Jno. Parnell, janitor North Ward School, asking for increase of salary.—Committee on Appointments.

From S. A. Morris, Toronto, to the effect that he would be pleased to arrange with the Board to deliver a lecture on Domestic Science—Received.

From Miss E. E. Carey acknowledging with thanks the appointment on the teaching staff—Received.

From Mrs. Henry Denne and family, thanking the Board for their floral tribute in memory of her late husband, Mr. Henry Denne.

From Inspector Walker recommending that Miss Eyres be continued on Central School staff till midsummer vacation —Confirmed.

—From S. R. Armstrong, Secretary-Treasurer for Peterborough Water Commissioners requesting that their accounts be paid more promptly. — On motion accounts were ordered to be paid, on approval of the Chairman of Property Committee.

From Chairman of Property Committee recommending various improvements to be made during vacation in the Public Schools of the town,—Adopted.

From Government Inspector Seath, reporting as to the efficiency of the Collegiate Institute staff and building. He reported that the teaching staff, although too small to permit of efficient organization, is on the whole good. His remarks on the condition of the building were none too complimentary. This matter was referred to the Committee on Appointments and the Chairman of the Property Committee was instructed to give immediate attention to improving the ventilation, etc., of the gymnasium.

The following applications for positions on the teaching staff of the Public Schools were referred to the Committee on Appointments: From Miss Lillie Pratt, town; Miss Ethel G. Brown, Burk's Falls; Miss Harriet Reid, Bird's Creek; Miss Mary E. Payne, Ottawa.

REPORT OF SPECIAL COMMITTEE.

The following report of the Special Committee was read:

Gentlemen,—Your Committee appointed by the Board to investigate and inquire into the subjects of Manual Training and Domestic Science with a view of introducing same into our schools here, beg leave to report, that they visited Toronto, Hamilton and Stratford. While in Toronto, through the kindness of Mr. Wilkinson, Secretary of the Public School Board, and Mr. J. L. Hughes, Inspector of Public Schools, your Committee were shown through several schools where Manual Training was taught. These gentlemen spared no pains to give us every information regarding these schools and the benefit derived therefrom. The boys from the higher classes are given one half a day a week at this subject. The boys seemed to be particularly interested in the work.

Your Committee also visited the Technical School and The Lillian Massey school of Domestic Science. The Superintendent, Miss Norris, took particular pains to explain the working of this school in all its details. She had two classes working at their different subjects.

At the Central Normal School of Domestic Science at Hamilton, through the kindness of Mrs. Hoodless, we were entertained at a Luncheon prepared by the pupils of the school (a copy of the menu with the cost of each article, is attached hereto). Through the kindness of Miss Watson, Superintendent of the School, we were present and heard two Public School classes taught their afternoon lesson, the one in cooking and the other in baking.

In Stratford, which is a Town similar to that of Peterborough, they have erected a separate building for the purpose of teaching the subjects of Domestic Science and Manual Training.

This building is a two storey brick 32 x 52, but should really be 40 x 60.

The Manual Training is taught on the first floor and the Domestic Science on the second floor. The building is situated just beside the Collegiate Institute building and cost, complete, $4500.00. The cost for equipment for Manual Training was about $400.00 outside of Lathes, and for Domestic Science about $300.00.

The Instructor in Manual Training is paid $700.00 a year and the teacher of Domestic Science $500.00, and the annual cost for carrying on this work, including supplies, heating caretaking and etc, is $1900.

From this amount the Government Grant of $1000 can be deducted, leaving the annual cost of the school $900.00. Of this amount the Public School pays 6.10, the Collegiate Institute 2.10 and the Separate School 1.10. The Government Grant last year, being their first year, was $1800.00.

There are six classes from the fourth book of the Public Schools, three classes from the lower forms of the Collegiate Institute and one class from the Separate schools, given one lesson of two hours each week, in all about 300 pupils attending.

The school is under the management of a Committee of the different Boards. Your Committee were greatly pleased and impressed by the interest taken by the pupils in their work, and your Committee is of the impression that these subjects should be introduced into our schools at once. We were informed by Mr. Mayberry, the Principal of the Collegiate Institute, that the pupils who took the lowest positions in their classes in the general subjects as a rule, or in the majority of cases, stood first in Domestic Science or Manual Training.

When the boys of a class are taking the lesson in Manual Training, the girls of the same class are taking Domestic Science.

Mr. A. H. Leake, of Ottawa, Director of the Macdonald Manual Training schools, accompanied us on the trip and gave us a great deal of useful information, and the Committee are certainly indebted to Mr. Leake for his trouble.

Several of the members present gave their views on the subject and the report was received and referred to a special committee of Messrs. Hartley, Jamieson, Fair, Eastland and Langfeldt, who will meet committees from the Ashburnham and Separate School Boards and report to the Boards as to cost of accommodation, etc., for the purposes mentioned.

The meeting then adjourned.

A MARVELLOUS MEDICINE

"No Cure, No Pay," is the Newest Proposal of the Proprietors of Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills

Editor Morning Times

Sir,—We make the following proposition: Any one who is a subject of rheumatism (no matter how long standing), or any blood disease, as enumerated below, and will give Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills a fair trial, and do not find a perfect cure, we will refund the money paid for the pills. If no substantial improvement is observed, we will in addition, pay $10 in cash on satisfactory evidence being supplied as to this effect.

We have yet to know of a single case where these wonderful pills have not been almost entirely successful in effecting a cure. CANADA CHEMICAL CO.

Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills are a positive and certain cure for la grippe, rheumatism, asthma, paralysis, catarrh, eczema, coughs, backache, indigestion, all stomach and liver troubles, female complaints, even when the diseases have been standing for many years, the most stubborn cases will yield. Price 50 cents per box. For sale by Ormond & Walsh. The Canada Chemical Company will forfeit $10 for any case that these pills do not help.

DETROIT UNITED RAILWAY

The intelligent investor in listed securities having a current market is seeking that which possesses not only intrinsic merit and remunerative income, but future enhancement in market value as well. Conviction on these three important points once firmly established among the investing public concerning a particular security is followed by three results—demand, security of stock and advancing prices.

It is good to know of such opportunities, for it enables the public to invest safely and add to their individual accumulation of this world's goods, thereby increasing in a measure the world's happiness, and the result is satisfactory, not only to the investor, but to his broker as well, particularly if the broker in question happens to be the dispenser of such a bit of happiness.

Detroit United Railway stock is on the eve of an advance in price which will carry quotations from the present level of 74 to par. The advance is inevitable for the simple reason that as a substantial investment of recognized merit the stock is selling at least $25 per share below what it is worth. This statement, made with full confidence, is not an idle boast, but is based on cold existing facts; and if any among my readers are skeptical in my degree let them look into the facts and figures and they will be convinced.

It is although an absurd proposition that the stock of a city traction company having no competition, paying regular dividends of 4 per cent, and earning 6 per cent., should be quoted at any such ridiculously low a figure as the present price.

All that is necessary is for the public to know that a good thing like Detroit United is available, and the disparity between present quotations and real worth will soon be bridged over by the most legitimate means known, and that is by public buying on broad scale. At the present time three separate financial interests are negotiating for the Cleveland holdings around 70. In the meantime it is exceedingly probable that public buying, now well under way, will absorb these holdings at prices ranging from the present level to par, and the syndicates referred to will suddenly wake up to find that they have missed an unusual opportunity by pursuing a penny-wise and poundfoolish policy in regard to price.

HERE ARE THE FACTS

Detroit United Railway is a consolidation of all the electric railways in and about Detroit. There are no competing lines. The total mileage is 380 miles, having a total bonded indebtedness of $15,880,000, which is $41,780.00 per mile, and it may be remarked that this is exceedingly conservative and less per mile than that of any other city road in the United States.

The total authorized and outstanding capital stock $12,500,000, which is $32,895.00 per mile, so that there is $74,684.00 per mile in bonds and stock. Cincinnati Street Railway is bonded and stocked for $99,250 per mile; St. Louis United about $167,000 per mile; Twin City Rapid Transit, $125,843 per mile. These comparisons prove the absence of the customary watering process, more recently known as "Morganizing."

The following figures, showing the earnings, operating expenses, etc., of the Detroit United Railway for two years are conclusive proofs of its merits:

Year Ending—	1900	1901
Earnings, gross	$2,675,278	$2,942,237
Earnings, net......	1,150,778	1,345,473
Per cent. of operation...		64.70
Fixed charges...	638,317	675,344
Surplus for stock...	512	670,129
Per cent on stock...	4.10	5.36
Price of stock......		72 1-2
Population served...	400,000

Gross Earnings...4 months July—Oct 1901
$1,129,576

Gross Earnings......January 1—March 31.	1901	1902
	$643,071	$758,631

I am indebted to Mr. Guy M. Walker, of 25 Broad street, New York, for the following facts in regard to Detroit United Railway stock, as compared to Twin City Rapid Transit common stock, now quoted at 122. First dividend of 1 per cent was paid on Twin City stock in August, 1899; in 1900, 3 per cent.; 1901, 31-2 percent.; 1902, February, 2 per cent. It should be borne in mind that Twin City Rapid Transit is not even established as a 4 per cent. dividend payer; that there is a 7 per cent. preferred stock ahead of it, and yet the common stock is quoted at 122, or $50 per share above Detroit, which is absolutely established as a 4 per cent. dividend payer. Either Twin City stock is selling too high or Detroit too low.

"In comparing the intrinsic value of the stocks of the two companies, it should be noted that while the bonded debt of Twin City amounts to $47,330.00 per mile, that of the Detroit United is only $41,780.00 per mile, while the stock per mile of Twin City is $78,304.00 to Detroit United $32,895.00, making the total capitalization of the Twin City Rapid Transit Company $125,843.00 per mile, as against only $74,684.00 per mile for Detroit United. The populations served are almost exactly the same.

"The percentages earned by the two properties for their common stock are almost the same, though the earnings for Detroit United for 1901 show a slightly larger gain over its earnings for 1900 than does the Twin City Rapid Transit Company.

"It should, however, be noted that Twin City is making its present earnings on a cost of operation amounting to only 44.00 per cent of its gross earnings, which is far below normal, and which certainly can not be maintained in the future, while Detroit United is expending for operation and maintenance 64.70 per cent. of its gross earnings, which is slightly above normal, and which ought to be reduced to approximately 60 per cent. within the next year or two.

"It can, therefore, clearly be seen that Detroit United promises considerably greater returns to its stockholders for the immediate future than Twin City, and it is unreasonable to suppose that the stock will continue at its present low quotations of 74, while Twin City is considered to be worth and apparently holds firm at approximately $125.00 per share."

FUTURE INCREASED EARNINGS

On the basis of the actual earnings for the first three months of 1902, Detroit United will show for the present fiscal year, in round figures, $3,500,000 gross, equivalent to $1,575,000 net, being more than double the interest on its bonded debt. After deducting fixed charges, now aggregating $730,343, there will remain at least a net surplus available for dividends of $834,657, or an amount in excess of 7 1-2 per cent. on the entire capital stock issue.

A syndicate of Philadelphia capitalists recently made a proposition to form a leasing company, take over the management of the Detroit United, and guarantee dividends, beginning with 4 per cent. per annum and increasing 1-2 per cent. each year until 5 1-2 per cent. annually should be paid and continued during the life of the lease.

This proposition was rejected.

At this writing I am reliably informed that the Bankers' Committee of Cleveland, holding in trust the Everett-Moore Syndicate holdings of Detroit United, have practically concluded negotiations for the sale of 20,000 shares to an Eastern syndicate. The remaining 10,000 shares are to be withdrawn from the market.

The withdrawal of this stock from the market, which has heretofore been the cause of existing sacrifice quotations on Detroit United, marks the present level as the low record prices from now on. It is a noteworthy fact, of interests to the probable purchaser, that during the past week the market for Detroit United has broadened perceptibly. Buying orders for the stock in blocks are in evidence from Eastern purchasers. Heretofore the market has been confined to Detroit, Cleveland, Cincinnati, and Louisville. Now, what will be the effect on current quotations, with demand for the stock from Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburg, Chicago, and St. Louis? I repeat that these actually existing conditions mean a long advance ahead, and those among my readers who want make not only a good investment, but a long profit as well, had better get in the band waggon not later than Monday noon, for late arrivals will have to go way back and sit down if they expect to get any stock under 75.

One of the chief objections to investors heretofore has been the fact that last year the Detroit United accumulated a floating debt of $900,000, resulting, not from any deficit in operating, but from the purchase of 75 per cent. of the capital stock of the Detroit & Port Huron Shore Line and the Windsor Street Railway, both of which properties, though controlled by the Detroit United, are not included in the consolidation. This floating debt has now been entirely eliminated by an issue of $1,000,000 4 1-2 per cent. bonds, which were sold to E. H. Gay & Co., of Boston, and recently offered by them for public subscription.

This leaves the property in excellent condition financially, with valuable assets in the controlling stocks referred to. Physically the property is conceded to have no superior in any city in the United States or Canada.

Detroit United Railway 4 per cent stock is listed on the Cincinnati Stock Exchange. Telegraph a collect message to my firm for accurate quotations and prices, and prompt reply will be made. During the next few weeks an active market in Detroit United may be confidently anticipated, accompanied by a higher level of prices.

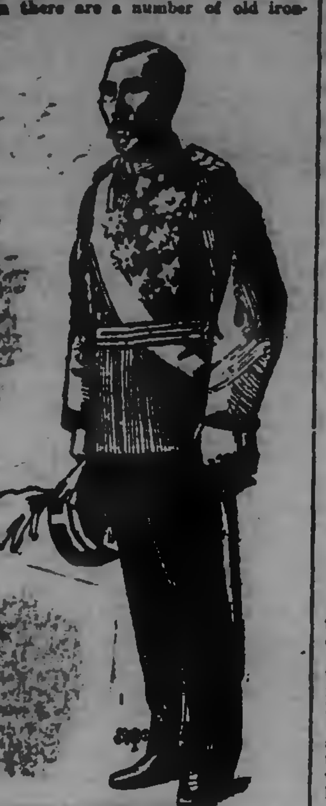
Japan's Army and Navy.

The Anglo-Japanese alliance and the guarded comments upon it from the official spokesmen of the Franco-Russian alliance have set people scanning the military forces of our new ally. One of the best authorities upon Japan's naval strength is Mr. H. W. Wilson, author of the Standard work "Ironclads in Action." In the March number of The Navy League Journal he says:—

"The Japanese fleet consists of the following vessels which may be said to have military value, and in addition to them there are a number of old ironclads, sloops and gunboats, which are of little fighting value:—



FIELD-MARSHAL YAMAGATA.

"Six first-class battleships, all built in England, and similar in design to the Majestics and the Royal Sovereigns, each armed with four 12-inch and ten to fourteen 6-inch guns, steaming eighteen knots, and carrying a good supply of coal.

"Six so-called armored cruisers, all new, which are virtually small battleships. They steam 20 to 23 knots, and carry four 8-inch and twelve to fourteen 6-inch guns apiece. Four of the six were built in England.

"Four protected cruisers of twenty-two to twenty-four knots, all heavily armed and exceptionally powerful ships.

"Thirteen older or smaller protected cruisers, six of which fought at the Yalu.

"Sixteen destroyers.

"About fifty effective torpedo boats.

"It will be seen that these ships in the hands of fine seamen, such as the Japanese unquestionably are, make a very formidable squadron, quite capable at the present time of holding its own against the combined fleets of all the continental powers in the far east."

Mr. Wilson goes on to point out that the personnel of the Japanese navy is rather over 9,000, that the navy is well supplied with bases, dockyards and arsenals and that Japan controls a number of all-important strategic points. "Her naval bases," he remarks, "supplement in a singular degree those of England, and link up in one continuous chain Hong Kong with the Gulf of Pe Chili." The Japanese army on a war footing will be able to place about 750,000 men in the field, when the reorganization now in progress is complete. The field army is organized in divisions and is about 250,000 men strong, with 1,008 guns. The officers and men are excellent, and in the opinion of many the Japanese were the best of all the troops who took part in the advance to Pekin.

While upon this subject, another quotation from The Navy League Journal may be adduced. Commenting upon the recent decision to remove the old Agamemnon from the effective list of the Royal Navy, the journal narrates a singular instance of cool judgment, of self-restraint combined with a grasp of the actual situation. "In the Russian scare of 1885," says the journal, "she was sent to the far east to 'shadow' the Vladimir Monomach. On reaching Yokosuka, ignorant whether war had been declared while he was at sea, her then captain, Long, saw that the Vladimir was so anchored that it was necessary for the Agamemnon to pass close to her, and that the Russian had her heavy guns trained on the water-line of the British ship, while her light pieces were directed at the Agamemnon's deck and bridge. Long, wisely, made no counter-demonstration, feeling that if she fired on him he could at once send her to the bottom with his ram. So the Agamemnon passed without incident after a minute or two of extreme tension, in which peace and war hung upon a thread."

A Young Men's Home.

A curious and very practical line of philanthropic work is about to be tried in London, for the benefit of young men who are living in London on small means. The scheme for providing a central residential club, which has been under the consideration of a special committee of the Y.M.C.A. at Exeter Hall for some time, is now practically settled. It is proposed to provide a superior kind of Rowton House, with about 400 separate bedrooms, and let them at the rate of three shillings, or 75 cents, a week. This will give the resident the free run of the institution, including library, recreation room, baths and gymnasium, together with the use of storage accommodation for bicycles. Meals will be supplied in a comfortable and commodious dining-room at a mere fraction above cost price, and even the laundry will be economically run. It is likely that this hotel for studious youth may cost £25,000, and will soon pay for itself.

His Estimate of Cromwell.

Lieut.-General Sir William Butler recently lectured to the Irish Literary Society on "The Cromwellian war in Ireland." After a sketch of the famous campaign couched in the severest terms, Sir William proceeded to express his view of Cromwell. His appreciation, marked as it is by an enviable power of expression, is as follows:—For some 50 or 60 years, he said, it had been the fashion of the time to speak of Cromwell as one of the greatest of men. For quite 200 years before our time not one historian, not one writer of any eminence, had had anything good to say about him. But we had changed all that. His eulogizers could now be counted by the thousand, his admirers by the million. He had already quoted a letter, written by Cromwell some years before he became famous, in which he said, "Who goeth to war at his own cost?" That was the keynote of Cromwell's character. The two chief objects of his effort were plunder and persecution. He and his were the saints; they were to possess the earth. All the rest were sinners; they were to be despoiled, cast out, persecuted. Who could count the oaths taken by him and broken by him? He swore allegiance to the King, but he cut his head off. He swore to support the Parliament, but he betrayed it and turned it out of doors. He swore to the Scottish covenant, but he destroyed it. He swore to uphold the liberties and rights of his country, but he trampled upon the one and betrayed the other. Standing in his place in the House of Commons with his hand upon his heart, he swore, in the presence of Almighty God, that he knew the army would disband and lay down their arms at the door of the House whenever the Parliament should command them to do so, and within 24 hours he was in the midst of that army inciting them to fresh defiance of that Parliament. Could any instance of hypocrisy match this—that he had prayed on his knees to God for the life of Charles until his tongue clove to the roof of his mouth, by which he saw that God had willed the death of the King? He averred that he was a most upright and conscientious man to his King and he prayed that God would be pleased to look upon him (Cromwell) according to the sincerity of his heart to the King, and at that moment Cromwell had the death of the King planned. He was absolute master of every trick of tongue, gesture, expression by which man could deceive his fellow. He could weep at will, pray, preach, affirm, swear, cajole, belie, act the buffoon with the corporal, play schoolboy tricks while signing the death-warrant of the King, commit the most appalling deeds with the name of God upon his lips and the Bible in his hand. He was the greatest dissembler that history held record of. While raving of liberty he suspended in turn every liberty that Englishmen had ever known—representation in Parliament, trial by jury, taxation with consent, everything that the people had gained and valued. He proposed to sell St. Paul's to the Jews for a synagogue. He sold hundreds of English gentlemen and thousands of Irishmen, women and children to West Indian planters to be slaves. He arrested and locked up in the Tower the three counsel of a London merchant who was prosecuted for having refused to pay taxes which had not been voted by Parliament. When confronted with all this perfidy he fell upon his knees in the House of Commons and took a solemn oath that it was untrue. He was false to his own chosen band of supporters and to the inner circle of his friends; and to each one of those parties whom he deceived in turn he used the same solemn asseverations of rectitude, piling perjury upon perjury such as no age had ever seen before. Did he deceive even himself? That question we could not answer. It was possible that having deceived every one—enemies, friends, comrades—he had come at last to deceive himself. The world held no greater failure in its history than our civil war. The result was that the King lost his head and the Parliament lost every shred of privilege and liberty it had ever possessed. For years Cromwell ruled the land with heavy sword and booted foot. He abolished the House of Lords, and he shut up the Commons. He taxed without representation. He tried without jury. He ruled by martial law. He packed the courts, he arrested counsel, he hanged and beheaded as he pleased. His little finger lay heavier upon the nation, said the people of the time, than the loins of the late King had lain. And then he died, and there came back to a weary and blood-sucked land a King. Cromwell left nothing behind him, no public works, no new system of law, no better policy of land, no clearer conception of justice. "Nothing cried at his funeral," wrote Evelyn, "but the dogs." And that, the dismalest failure of English history, was the man in whose praise to-day histories were imagined and statues inaugurated. Courage, diligence and the most dogged and determined resolution—these things he had to an extraordinary degree. But to what end and at what cost did he use them? It was a cowardly and a base act of the Parliament of 1660 to dig up his remains and hang his mouldering body on the gibbet at Tyburn. It was voted without a dissentient voice in the House of Commons, but history had missed one strange coincidence which resulted from it. They could remember the choice which Cromwell, in the days of his victory, gave the unfortunate Irish:—"Hell or Connaught." He turned to the last page of Cromwell's latest biographer, and this was what he read: "Where Connaught Square now stands, a yard or two beneath the street, trodden under foot and beaten by horses' hoofs, lies the dust of the great Protector." And that was the end.

Charcoal is very valuable as an aid to keeping poultry in good order and preventing bowel disorders. It should be fed in powdered form mixed with the food several times a week; it is harmless, whatever amount is given, as it is not really medicinal but acts as an absorbent, taking up the poisonous gases in the system. It is said that chickens will fatten faster if charcoal is given.

A Temptation Resisted.

It was on the frontier. A woman stood in the door of the house, looking at a distant tendril of smoke that trailed in the sky, the smoke of the eastbound passenger train. She listened to the harsh creaking of the corn, and her face grew set.

"Rick had no right to bring me to such a place," she thought, forgetting how willingly she had come.

A man drove into the yard, tied his horse to the wheel of the wagon and came toward the house.

"Don't you know me, Kate?" he called loudly, to be heard above the wind.

"Why, George Gilbert, is it you?" she exclaimed. She held out her hand. "How did you ever happen to get here? Come right into the house. Rick's gone to town for coal."

The man followed her into the main room of the house, which served the double purpose of parlor and kitchen. In one corner stood the stove; above it a long shelf covered with neatly scalloped papers, on which stood the lamps and tinware. A safe with perforated tin doors was in another corner. A bit of ingrain carpet, a rocking chair and a round table with a red cover made the parlor.

"You see, I'm travelling for a grocery house," the man said, sitting down, "and I make Houston now, and your folks said I must be sure to come out and see you. How are you doing?"

"Doing!" Kate cried, scornfully looking around the room. "Can't you see. Making just enough to keep soul and body together—corn fourteen cents and we're nine miles from market."

"Why don't you come back home?" he asked, leaning forward in his chair and noticing how much Kate had aged since she came west.

"Rick never seems to think of it. Besides, I don't think we've got money enough to take one of us, let alone both. I just long to go. Sometimes it seems like I'd go wild staying here. A man can get along better'n a woman."

"Are you coming?" he asked.

She stood a moment straightening the cover on the table.

"Yes, I'll go," she said decisively. "There are a few things I must take, but I can be ready in half an hour."

"It's four-thirty," George called.

She laid her hat and cloak on the bed.

"I'm glad I baked the bread and dried apple pies this morning," she thought. "Men are so helpless about housework. I must leave some word of where I'm gone. I guess he has tried to be good to me, but he has no right to keep me here."

She found a sheet of the thin blue-lined paper on which she had so often written to her folks. She sat down on the bed with the ink-bottle on a chair near by.

"Dear Rick," she wrote, then hastily crossed it out and began "Rick." Then she was motionless for a time, her eyes fixed on the ceiling. At last she wrote "George Gilbert is here and is going to lend me money to go home on. I cannot stand it here any longer. I hope you will forgive me, for I know you have tried to be good to me and ——"

She threw down her pen and ran into the kitchen. George stood in the doorway smoking and looking down the road.

"Ready?" he asked, without turning.

"Oh, I can't go!" she cried huskily. "I can't go! He has done his best. It would be wicked when he has worked so hard. Poor Rick!" She sat down and covered her face with her hands.

"All right," George answered. "I was willing to take you; but, if you think you'd better not, that's all right. I don't want to interfere, as I said before."

She watched him out of sight. Then she went into the house and laid her clothing back in the trunk. Her letter lay on the floor. She picked it up and threw it into the fire as if it had been something unclean. She watched it blaze and turn to a white ghost, which she crumbled with the poker. When the house had taken on its ordinary look, she put the teakettle on the stove and set the table for supper. As she cut one of her pies she smiled. She was to eat them, after all.

The wind had gone with the sun, and it was dusk when she heard the sound of wheels. She took the lantern from the high shelf, lit it and set out for the barn.

"Is that you, Rick?" she called.

Kate held the lantern while her husband unhitched and fed his horses. Then they walked together to the house. Through the open door a block of light fell on the ground, and within the red tablecloth and white dishes shone pleasant and cheerful.

"I've got some good news, sis," Rick said across the table as he helped himself to a third cut of pie. "Old man Shuts wants to buy this farm; says he don't like the way my land gouges out the corner of his section. He will take up the mortgage and give me six hundred dollars clear. It ain't much, but we can go back home and begin over again—begin over again in a country where a man gets a decent living for his sweat and labor."

Kate laid her head on the table and began to cry.

"Why, sis, ain't you tickled?" he asked. "I did it because I thought this was no place for you."

"I am awful pleased," she answered, "but I was so tired I thought mebbe you didn't care."

In the night the wind came up and set the cornstalks creaking and rustling with a thousand whispers, but they said to Kate, "Years fly, years fly—good-by, good-by." Now the whisper of the wind was sweet to her as she lay listening. "Years fly, years fly—good-by, good-by." — "Waverley Magazine."

"Out of the Mouths of Babes," Etc.

"How is it, my dear," enquired a school teacher of a little girl, "that you do not understand this simple thing?" "I do not know, indeed," she answered, with a perplexed look; "but I sometimes think I have so many things to learn that I have not time to understand."—The "Schoolmaster."

"Let us make the capital stock one billion dollars," said the first promoter. "All right," said the second, who was preparing the prospectus on the typewriter. "Will it be hard to increase that capital?" asked the first. "No, indeed. All I have to do is to hit this 0 key a few more times."—Baltimore "American."

Anecdotal.

Philip II. sent a young nobleman to Rome to congratulate Sixtus V. on his exaltation. Sixtus was dissatisfied at so young an ambassador being sent, and, with his usual frankness, said, "Does your master want men, that he sends to me a beardless ambassador?" "Had my sovereign thought," replied the haughty Spaniard, "that merit consisted in a beard, he would have sent you a goat."

Charles Kean and James Wallack were once playing in the private theater at Windsor Castle, and the actors were somewhat chilled by the lack of hearty applause to which they were accustomed in public. At the end of one act there was a slight suggestion of hand-clapping and exceedingly gentle foot-tapping. Wallack, pricking up his ears, enquired, "What is that?" "That, my dear Wallack," Kean replied, "is applause." "Bless me!" exclaimed Wallack. "I thought it was somebody shelling peas."

Bishop Potter is accused of having given currency to the following anecdote: A Chicagoan had been taken around Boston all day to observe her bulwarks, but had failed to exhibit any of those symptoms of paralysis which are acceptable to the Bostonian mind. "Now confess," said the Bostonian host, after the burden and heat of the day, "isn't Boston a unique town?" "Unique?" mused the Westerner; "I believe that word is derived from two Latin words, unus, one, and equus, horse. I think Boston is a unique town."

Walter Dean, sr., once hired an artist to paint his portrait, with the stipulation that the picture would not be accepted and paid for unless it looked like himself. When the portrait was completed it was sent to Mr. Dean, who did not recognize himself, and absolutely refused to pay the painter. The painter sued, and Joe Strong, the artist, was called in to give an expert opinion. "You see the portrait of Mr. Dean?" the lawyer asked. "No," said Mr. Strong, "I do not." "There it is," said the lawyer, pointing to the big canvas. "I don't call that a portrait; I call that a map of Mr. Dean," said Mr. Strong.

"Down in South Carolina," says Congressman Talbert, "I once attended a colored church. The preacher, one of those negroes with an oily face and big spectacles, was talking about the prophets. He had taken an hour to discourse upon the major prophets, and then he took up the minor ones. In course of time he reached Hosea. 'My breddren,' he exclaimed, 'we come now to Hosea. Let us consider him. Where shall we put Hosea?' At that moment an old negro, who had been peacefully slumbering in one of the back pews, woke up and looked at the pastor. 'Hosea can take my seat,' he said. 'I'm so —— tired that I am going home.'"

The "Evening Post" of New York narrates that on Washington's birthday a well-known New York caterer became the possessor of a pair of English soles and English pheasants, and invited a couple of friends to dine off them at the dog show. It was a great success, but one of the guests, remembering the day, said it was far from patriotic. "Why," he added, "here it is Washington's birthday and we are dining on English sole, pheasant and currant jelly, eating French bread and drinking French wine. Let's have something American. Why don't you serve some oleomargarine?" "Don't worry," was the reply, "you've got it."

"Good Words" prints a little story of the early schooldays of Lord Salisbury, when he was Lord Robert Cecil, which shows how soon in his life his conspicuous disregard for dress began. When he was about seven years old he came into the nursery one afternoon on his return from school, which was held at the old rectory outside Hatfield, and dumped his books into a corner. "Oh, Betty," he said to his old nurse, "I wish I was a cat!" "La, Lord Robert," Betty replied, "how can you wish yourself a beast?" "Oh," he replied, with a sigh, "when I think of how many times I must dress and undress before I die I wish my clothes grew on my back."

Some years ago a Philadelphia preacher inaugurated in his Sunday-school the practice of having the children quote some Scriptural text as they dropped their pennies into the contribution box. On the first Sunday in question, a little shaver walked up and said: "The Lord loveth a cheerful giver," and in dropped his penny. "Charity shall cover a multitude of sins," and in dropped the next. "It is more blessed to give than to receive," quoted the third, and so on. Just then, up walked a little fellow with the unmistakable remnants of molasses candy on his chubby face, and, as he dropped his cent, he bawled out: "A fool and his money are soon parted."

The Wit's Hour of Trial.

Repartee is like tennis. The ball is driven backward and forward from one player to the other, and the one on whose side it last strikes is the loser. It is a terrible thing for an artist at repartee to find that he has no answer. The mere pretender does not care. He will answer something, to the point or not; but the artist will not debase his art with a bad answer; he merely sorrows for a good one.

There was a little Irishman who kept a liquor shop, and he was noted for always having a reply ready. One day a man came in, laid a dollar bill on the bar and called for whiskey. The proprietor set out the bottle and a glass, and the customer filled the glass right up to the top. "Is it a towel you'd be wantin'?" the proprietor asked, implying thereby that the customer had poured out a bath, rather than a drink.

"Look here," said the customer, pointing to the money, "there's a dollar, you can take the price of this drink out of it, and if there isn't enough, tell me how much more you want and I'll pay it but I don't want any talk from a little Mick of a bartender."

The proprietor picked up the dollar and laid down 85 cents. As the customer disappeared he walked around in front of the bar and said to a friend who sat there: "Casey, I'd have given me liquor shop to have knowed what to answer back to that man."

Miss Antique—They say his dissipations are telling on him. Miss Cutting (his loyal fiancee)—No; it's his friends who are doing all that.

Rhodes as a Phrase-Maker.

Rhodes rather fancied himself as a phrase-maker, says a correspondent of The New York Sun. A writer who saw a good deal of him, describes him as repeating over and over again some saying of his own with which he seemed to have been pleased as soon as he had uttered it.

Perhaps one of the best-known phrases is the "unctuous rectitude" with which he reproved a certain class of his opponents in this country. No one in future who wishes to discuss the traits of the British character will be able to do without those two words. Some other sayings of Rhodes which have been left on record are as follows:—

My life is a temporary one, but the country will remain after me.

If I forfeit my flag, what have I left? If you take away my flag you take away everything.

Remember that sentiment rules half the world.

"It is no use for us to have big ideas if we have not got the money to carry them out," Rhodes once remarked to Gen. Gordon.

It took me fifteen years to get a mine, but I got it. Though my boat may be slow in the race, I know exactly what I am starting for.

I have found out one thing, and that is, if you have an idea, and it is a good idea, if you will only stick to it you will come out all right.

The only awkward thing is the progress of Time. We do get older, and become a little hurried in our ideas because of that terrible Time.

After the raid: "Kruger and I have met twice. The first trick I won (referring to Bechuanaland), he won the second. There is no doubt who will win the odd!"

When timorous friends were begging him to be discreet, and foes were saying he dare not "face the music," he answered both, once and for all: "I am not going to lie about it!"

When Dr. Jameson was convicted and sentenced for the part he took in the raid, Mr. Rhodes exclaimed: "What a tribute to the moral worth of the nation that has jumped the world!"

I will challenge any man or woman, however broad their ideas may be, who objects to go to church or chapel to say they would not sometimes be better for an hour or an hour and a half in a church.

In the Oriel Hall, Oxford, in 1899, he said: "I have been interested in Aristotle's definition of virtue in the 'Ethics' as the 'highest activity of the soul living for the highest object in a perfect life.' That has always seemed to me the noblest rule for a man to follow, and I have made it my rule from the first."

"Life is too short, after all," he used to say, "to worry about previous lives. From the cradle to the grave—what is it? Three days at the seaside. Just that and nothing more. But although it is only three days, we must be doing something. I cannot spend my time throwing stones into the water. But what is worth while doing?"

A Waggon Journey.

After so much about Rhodes one may have a bit of South African life. It is a description of a waggon journey a score of years ago, and occurs in a new novel, entitled "Reversed on Appeal," by John Ross:—

"Pale pink over the trees, and bar gold glittering through the branches saw the large waggon equipped and drawn with open front, facing the kraal gate, towards which extended a double line of shining brown oxen, each with a white streak down its back like fourteen brethren bearing up the flashing chain, noosed at each pair by a heavy pole with wooden yokes for two. At the head of the uneven line of glancing horns and switching tails stood the powerful bronze figure, thong in hand, of a Zulu in a sleeveless blouse and short blue pants, the leader of the [illegible] cavalcade. A Kaffir boy held a grey horse ready saddled, tossing his head and rattling his bit with impatience, a contrast to the drowsy cattle. . . . There was a din of shrill Kaffir shouts, weeping women, yelping dogs, stamping feet and rattling chains as Mouji flourished his long whip, and the Zulu dragged at the leading strap like a son of Anak, as he guided the string of cattle out of the kraal into the open field.

"Her uncle rode his grey horse within speaking distance behind the waggon, and when they passed the large green orchard, with its brown pears, purple plums, and yellow oranges ripening in the branches, he rode in among the trees and returned with a small basket of peaches, which he handed to Belle at the end of the waggon, as they moved slowly on through prickly cactus hedges, and bushes of red and yellow mimosa blossom. . . .

"She had travelled in the waggon before, with the mid-curtain that was lowered at night, to shut her off into a little nunnery of her own. She knew the bed, so innocently tied on one side, in which she was advised to slumber, and supposed to sleep, during the ceaseless jolts of a moonlight journey. And she remembered how she pitied all men, and women, too, who went down to the sea in ships, if their berths were like her berth, and their tossings like her tossings. She knew the boxes tied with thongs that served for seats and lockers, and that she must fasten up everything, if she did not wish a bruised foot or a wounded head, when the quick mounts and sudden dips came under the irresistible strain of fourteen oxen."

It is estimated that the Kaffirs in the diamond mines at Kimberley, South Africa, steal £250,000 worth of diamonds in a year.

The Lion Bridge, near Sangang, in China, is the longest in the world, being 5¼ miles from end to end. The roadway is 70 feet above water.

A large house in a Berlin suburb has been rented by several acquaintances, married and single, who are going to try to run the place on the principles of communal life.

"Take the men of prominence in the United States to-day, and pick out the true gentlemen. I'll wager that nine out of ten of them never had a high school education, let alone a college one." So says Mark Twain.

Gold has been mined in Georgia for nearly three-quarters of a century. Previous to the discovery of gold in California the mines of Georgia furnished the greater part of the gold produced in the United States.

Life Is Not Safe When Disease Is Allowed To Run Unchecked In Summer

Paine's Celery Compound

Gives Marvellous Results When Used in June

The majority of people, young and old, too often allow sickness and disease to follow them into the opening of summer. Some have foul and stagnant blood; some recognise the fact that kidney disease or liver complaint have commenced their quiet but deadly work; some are tormented with the agonies of rheumatism and neuralgia; others are made miserable by dyspepsia, constipation, headache, sleeplessness and nervousness.

Life is not safe when such troubles are permitted to run unchecked. The hot days of summer will aggravate all conditions of weakness and sickness.

The ailing and suffering should take advantage of these June days and the life-giving virtues of Paine's Celery Compound to rid themselves of dangers. The work of purifying the blood, bracing the week and flabby nerves and fortifying the system is happily done for all who use Paine's Celery Compound. It has made life joyous and happy for tens of thousands in June; it will do the same good work for you, dear reader. Test its virtues to-day and be convinced

For Duck Keepers.

The largest duck farm in America is located at Speonk, Long Island. Last year over 35,000 ducklings were hatched. Nearly every pound of the flesh was marketed in New York City.

Ducklings for Profit.

Ducklings are wonderfully hardy, and the death rate, even when large quantities are reared, is very slight when the duck raiser knows his business. They must, of course, be kept dry and sheltered from rain, and if their sleeping house is draughty they may get a touch of roup. This shows itself by a froth collecting round the eye, and can easily be got rid of with a little care, and taking precaution to prevent their sleeping in a draught. They fatten not only easily but quickly. In one big duck-rearing establishment no ducklings are kept over eight weeks old, but generally they are fattened for a fortnight longer.

During the last week of incubation the eggs need to be damped, as a rule, two or three times; in incubators they require rather more moisture than hens' eggs, and makers give instructions on the subject. When the stock ducks have their liberty and are strong, healthy birds, the eggs hatch well, and the twenty-ninth morning sees all the ducklings out that are coming. Like chickens, they need no food for twenty-four hours, but just sleep. By the expiration of that time they are thoroughly dried, and their abundant fluff no longer sticks to their skins, but stands out, making them look much larger than they did when first hatched. They are now ready for their first meal, which should consist of hard-boiled egg and breadcrumbs, damped with skim milk or water, given moister than to chickens; the food should be dropped on their backs; they huddle together in a heap when first collected for feeding, and, seeing the food, they peck at it readily enough.

A pan of water should be put down by them, and to let them see it, a few grains of coarse oatmeal should be dropped upon it. Then they peck at the oatmeal, find the water, and drink. It is necessary that at each meal they should have all the water they want, and they want a great deal, for they are thirsty creatures. Pure, fresh water, and plenty of it, is very necessary for successful duck-raising. The water should be supplied in shallow pans at first; as they get bigger it can be given in larger pans or troughs, but they should not have access to a pond. When they have never had the opportunity of swimming they do not pine for it, but if once they get the chance of swimming they fret for access to it.

For the first two or three days nothing should be given but the hard-boiled egg and breadcrumbs, or oatmeal may be substituted. The eggs should be passed through a sieve, the unfertile ones removed on the eighth day of incubation should be reserved for this purpose. They should be fed very frequently—every two hours, at least. It is a good plan, as in the case of goslings, to give them a little tender chopped grass mixed in with their food, but they are not large eaters of green foods, as goslings are. After the first three days the egg food can be dropped, though if there are unfertile eggs this feeding can with advantage be continued a little longer. Biscuit meal, scalded, is an excellent food for ducklings, and can be made the chief article of diet from a week to a month old. Boiled rice is also largely used by some breeders; others rely entirely on biscuit meal and ground meals. The rice should be thus prepared: To one quart of rice add six quarts of water, and let it simmer till the water is all absorbed. A little fat or greaves can be added. On rice thus boiled, biscuit meal and various ground meals, the ducklings can be quickly forced to maturity; meat and fat are also given more or less, and it hastens them on. The meals used are ground oats or oatmeal, maize meal and pollard.

After the first week the meals can be reduced to four a day, giving them all they will eat at a time, but permitting no food to lie by them between meals. The four can be reduced to three when they are seven or eight weeks old. Most fatteners have their own system, and differ in details of management, the object, in all cases, being to keep the ducklings in good health and appetite, so that they eat well, for the more they eat the better they grow. There are certain adjuncts that must be supplied if they are to keep in first-rate condition under the somewhat artificial mantion under the somewhat artificial manner of treatment they receive, and these are plenty of grit, a supply of green food, and strict cleanliness. For bedding them, peat moss can be highly recommended, and, failing it, straw, but straw is getting scarcer than it was. The peat moss, too, when it is finished with, will be a valuable manure for either the field or garden. Later in the season they can sleep on the ground without ill-effect, but not before it is dry.

It is very needful to protect the ducklings from rats, as they highly prefer them to chickens. They must be well netted in at night, and a few traps set near, for rats are sure to be attracted to the vicinity when ducklings are bred for market. It is also necessary to shelter them from the sun, as they get sunstroke very easily if exposed to it, but, of course, this means the July and August sun, when it is really hot.

In case of their going off their appetites when fattening a meal should be missed for a day or two, and the food changed. This will bring back their appetites. A little spice may with advantage be given at this time. Those ducklings intended for stock should be picked out at four or five weeks old, and have more liberty and a certain proportion of corn. Ducklings for table are fed entirely on soft food. They can have a swim just before being killed, as this washes their plumage.—Farm and Stockbreeder.

Hostess (to guests, who have to spend a few days)—We're so glad you've been able to come, Miss Gushington; but I do hope we are going to have better weather, or I am afraid you won't enjoy yourselves much.

Miss Gushington—Oh, but, my dear Lady Boreham, we didn't come here to enjoy ourselves. We came to see you.—London Punch.

For Farmers.

In an experiment conducted in Staffordshire, England, to test the relative value of different root crops for sheep feeding, the results were as follows:—(1) Globe mangels; (2) kohl rabi; (3) Long Red mangels; (4) Tankard mangels; (5) Swedes.

Sir Walter Gilbey considers it "an alarming fact" that American and Canadian breeders are now going to France and Germany to buy their breeding stock. We cannot afford to lose patronage for our studs from abroad, and the whole question deserves the consideration of horse-breeding societies.—Farmer and Stockbreeder.

Currant bushes should be sprayed with white hellebore in order to destroy the currant worm. As hellebore is a poison some growers object to it. It is claimed that if wood ashes are dusted over the bushes, first spraying with cold water, the worms will be destroyed. It is at least a harmless remedy and is worthy a test trial by those having currant bushes.

The Department of Agriculture at Washington, D.C., has issued a statement that there is no such thing as manufactured comb honey. Geo. W. York, President of the Chicago Beekeepers' Association, says:—"The truth is that when you find honey in the comb, you may be absolutely certain that the bees, not man, put it there. It may vary in color; it may vary in quality; all flowers do not yield the same honey; but it was all stored by the bees."

An acre of grass land, according to experiments, gives off not less than 6,400 quarts of water in twenty-four hours, and an acre of sunflowers would give a relatively greater quantity. In fact, swamps have been reclaimed and malarial marshes rendered inocuous by planting sunflowers or eucalyptus trees, which are great pumpers of water, and also exert other influences counteracting baneful conditions of air, earth and water.

Sheep on the Farm.

A correspondent of The Ohio Farmer gives some of the reasons why sheep are a fine thing for the farmer to raise. They pay for their raising in profitable fleeces. They are easily transferred from one inclosure to another and restrained by fences that would not hold cattle or pigs. Their light tread and their dislike to mud warrant their access to fields where the trampling of cattle and tearing of hogs would not be tolerated. They waste less food in proportion to the quantity consumed than any other animal, and will hunt out and utilise much that would otherwise be lost. They work for a living by keeping the farms clean from weeds. No animal returns more fertility to the soil in proportion to the amount exacted for its support. They produce a pound of mutton cheaper than a hog will a pound of pork.—Southwestern Stockman.

Tobacco Stem and Dust.

The waste material from the cigar factories is a good fertiliser, containing both nitrogen and potash, but it has so many other valuable qualities that the farmer and gardener should not fail to obtain some every year. Placed around the squash vines in the hill, it almost surely drives away the fly which is the mother of the borer, and scattered along the onion rows it serves the same purpose for the little black fly that causes the onion maggot. In fact, nearly, if not quite all the insects which damaged our plants and trees by laying an egg of which the larva will be a borer, and thus cannot be reached by poisonous sprays, will be repelled by the use of tobacco stems or dust around the stem of the plant. The claim has been made that the borers that infest our apple and peach orchards can be driven away by winding tobacco leaves around the trunk of the tree, just above where the borers usually enter them. When this is wet the juice that runs down not only makes it unpleasant for the fly to stay there, but if she deposits a few eggs when the tree is dry, the first wet day is likely to send down a decoction strong enough to destroy the vitality of the eggs or kill the young larvae. We do not claim it to be sure, in all of these cases, as something will depend on the weather, but with frequent showers to keep it wet, it will greatly reduce the trouble from these insect pests.—American Cultivator.

The Horse's System.

It may be of use to call attention to the fact that the digestive system of horses differs a great deal from that of our domesticated ruminants—viz., cattle and sheep; whereas the latter are able to consume a large amount of food at one time, the horse—owing to the comparatively small size of its stomach and intestines—is able to consume only a small quantity of food at one meal. In saying comparative size of the horse's stomach and intestines, this refers to the comparison with the stomach of ruminants; as compared with the stomach and intestines of carnivorous animals—such as the dog—the stomach of the horse is large. I have already mentioned the fact that cattle and sheep are able to digest fibre much better and make much better use of it than horses. Besides this difference, there is another important point in which the mode of feeding the former differs from that of the latter. Whereas cattle and sheep are able to live and do comparatively well on poor and bulky foods, such as straw or roots, horses cannot deal satisfactorily with large quantities of these, even when doing no work; they cannot, like cattle, draw the amount of nourishment they require from poor foods by consuming large quantities of them. In their case, the necessary amount of food material must be provided in a more concentrated form. It is in these two points that the chief difference lies in the feeding of horses, as compared with that of cattle and sheep. There is, however, a third point—namely, that in feeding horses we wish to produce work; whereas in feeding cattle, sheep, or pigs we have in view the production of flesh, fat, milk, or wool.

Another Blaze in Lindsay

In Lindsay on Monday night at about 11 o'clock a severe thunderstorm, accompanied by heavy rain and vivid lightning, broke over the town, doing considerable damage. While the storm was at its height the large storehouse on Lindsay street north, owned and occupied by the Flavelle Milling Co., was set on fire. The loss on the Flavelle Milling Co. will be in the neighborhood of two or three thousand dollars, fully covered by insurance. Two brick houses owned by Mr. Hallinan were also damaged. Both buildings and contents are covered by insurance.

The Olympics To-Day

The Olympics will depart for Stony Lake to-day on their annual outing. The party will be accompanied by the band of the 57th regiment. It is expected the Island of Burleigh will tip up a little when the Olympics step off the steamer, but this need cause no uneasiness, as Chief Agitator Lech will have it fastened at the upper end to prevent its overturning altogether. Several unique features are to be introduced this year, which will be announced after the boat leaves the wharf at Lakefield. This great family journal is not permitted to disclose the nature of these innovations. Capt. Scollard will sail under sealed orders. All Olympics are expected to bring their prayer books with them; everything else will be provided, including the appetite and red-herring-thirst-provokers.

FOOD AND GIRLS

Study Don't Hurt If They Are Fed Right

Some time ago one of the ladies' papers published a long list of extracts from letters from mothers, speaking of broken down school girls. True, overwork and too much confinement is largely responsible, but, on the other hand, if the girl is fed on the right kind of food to rebuild the daily waste she can stand more work and the matter of food is the real foundation of the subject.

A 17 year old girl writes from Caro, Mich., about how a change in food helped her. "I am only a school girl 17 years old but I am old enough to appreciate what the wonderful brain food Grape-Nuts has done for me. About two years ago my health became very poor and I was unable to study, and finally obliged to leave school.

I was put on Grape-Nuts Breakfast Food. In about three months I recovered my strength, my mind became much more clear and acute and I was able to resume school work.

I continued to use Grape-Nuts until I discovered that I was getting too fat. I gained so much in weight that I had to discontinue it. It is the best food I ever heard of for building up a broken down system.

I have an aunt who went to India as a missionary and while there she was ill four times with Indian fever and became a mere skeleton. When she returned here her muscles were as flabby as could be. She was put on Grape-Nuts Breakfast Food and quickly recovered. Her muscles grew hard and firm and she entirely regained her health, has greatly increased in weight and never knows a sick day now. She is still eating Grape-Nuts and says she would not do without the food for anything.

I can never say enough in praise of your wonderful food." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

HONORING MR. REILLEY

Employees of the Lock Works Present Him with a Cheque

Mr. M. Reilley, who has for many years been connected with the Peterborough Lock Works, was presented on Tuesday evening with a very flattering address, accompanied by a check for a substantial sum. The affair took place in the hall of St Peter C.O.F., advantage being taken of the occasion of Mr. Reilley's retirement from the works.

The following is the address which was read by Mr A. Weatherhead:

Mr. M. Reilley, Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Sir,—We, the undersigned committee, on behalf of the employees of the Peterborough Lock Mfg. Co., desire to take this opportunity to extend to you our sincere thanks for the interest you have always manifested in our welfare. No words of ours can fittingly express our gratitude to you for the great pains you have taken during the past number of years in assisting us in our work. You freely gave us the benefit of your experience, and at all times manifested the deepest interest in our welfare. Your business and explanatory talks with us upon the works upon which we were engaged proved a wonderful impetus to our efforts and imbued us with new energy and perseverance.

In recognition of the high esteem and as a remembrance of the valued place you hold among us we ask you to accept this cheque, as a slight token of our esteem, and regard, as we understand you are about to sever your connection with us, and retire from business life, on account of ill health.

Signed on behalf of the employees,

A. C. CORCORAN.
A. WEATHERHEAD.
B. TAYLOR.
A. TURCOTTE.
W. McAULIFFE.
R. SHELTON.
Committee.

Mr. Reilley expressed his thanks for the gift in a few appropriate words, after which an enjoyable social evening was spent.

THREE JUNE WEDDINGS

CRAGG—MIGHT

The home of Mr. William Might, George street was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Tuesday evening, when his eldest daughter, Miss Bertha, was united in marriage to Rev. Charles Edward Cragg, S.T.L., of Orono. At six o'clock the bridal party entered the drawing room and stood beneath three large floral bells, where, in the presence of about 40 of the immediate relatives, Rev. Edward Cragg, of Brighton, father of the groom, assisted by Rev. W. J. M. Cragg, B.A., of Philadelphia, brother of the groom, spoke the words that made them man and wife. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a lovely gown of white Japanese tafeta silk with applique trimmings, and carried a boquet of white roses. Miss Emma Might, sister of the bride, who was prettily gowned in white organdie, performed the duties of bridesmaid most effectively, and Miss Helen Stone, of town, made a charming little maid of honor.

The groom was supported by his brother, Mr. Cecil Cragg, of Trinity Medical College, Toronto.

The groom's present to the bride was a crescent of pearls and to the bridesmaid a fleur-de-lis pin with pearl setting. Excellent music for the occasion was rendered by Miss Ethel Crane, of Toronto, cousin of the bride, who presided at the piano. The catering was done by Mr Lane, of town.

The happy young couple left on the 9 p.m. G.T.R. train for a short wedding tour. A host of friends unite in wishing them a happy and joyful journey through life.

BEAUCLERE—BALL

On Tuesday evening the wedding of Miss Charlotte, daughter of Mr. Joseph Ball, of Ashburnham, and Mr. Charles Beauclere, took place. The bride looked charming in white organdie and was accompanied by Miss Jessie Crane, who performed the duties of bridesmaid.

The groom was assisted by Mr. Walter Ball, brother of the bride. Rev. E. A. Langfeldt, rector of St. Luke's, was the officiating minister. A sumptuous wedding repast was served during the evening.

The numerous presents received indicate in a small degree the esteem in which the young couple are held.

PENTZ—GORDON.

"Maple Lodge" Lakefield, the lovely home of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Gordon was the scene of a very happy wedding on Tuesday, June 3, when their daughter, Miss Sarah McLean Gordon, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Charles Everett Pentz, also of Lakefield. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. Bastow, of Murray street Baptist church, Peterborough, in the presence of many immediate relatives and friends.

The bride who was elegantly attired, was assisted by Miss Lillie Fitzgerald, of Ashburnham; and Mr. Herbert R. Montgomery, of Lakefield, performed the office of best man.

Mr. and Mrs. Pentz will spend a short honeymoon in Toronto. They have the best wishes of a multitude of friends that they may have all the happiness this world can bestow.

Mr. Snowden's Bad Luck

"You see it was this way," said the genial proprietor of the Snowden House, as he lighted his corncob pipe, and sat back in his chair in the office of the hotel, "I was waiting on table myself, being short of help, and a stranger asked for sausage. I told him we were out, but if he would wait a little while we would have some.

"Well," said Mr. Tom. Boddy, "but what made him leave the table so suddenly?"

"I will tell you. I then went to the kitchen and accidentally stepped on the dog's tail, sir, and the dog began to howl like he was being killed, and—."

"I see," interrupted Mr. Ed. Brown, and the crowd who sat around took in the story, while the genial proprietor never as much as smiled.

Girls Wanted.

Three girls wanted at once—A laundry woman, assistant cook and dining room girl. Wages from eight to twenty dollars per month. Apply to Wm. Snowden, Snowden House, Peterborough.

THE GREAT GERMAN TRADE INVASION OF BRITISH SOUTH AFRICA HAS BEGUN

The Teutons Hope to Capture the Markets that Britain Has Opened at So Heavy a Cost

Austria Seeks a Footing

Special to The Times.

London, June 6.—The peace terms are well received at Johannesburg, says the Times correspondent. It is recognized that they contain little which would not have been granted anyhow through the generosity of the British Government. Sensible men are satisfied with the language provision, seeing compulsion would have created a grievance, and would have made the study of Dutch a point of honor among the Boers. Although satisfaction is felt that there was no concession with respect to amnesty, no one will criticize spontaneous exercise of clemency.

The correspondent of the Times at Vienna notes early signs of a rush of commercial and industrial classes to South Africa under the English regime. Even easy going Austrians are forming syndicates for that purpose, but the Germans are first in the field, hoping, with the home markets secured by high protective tariffs, and exports encouraged by subsidized shipping, and the rates on State railways reduced to meet the unprotected British trade on more than equal terms.

The correspondent urges consideration of the question whether British manufacturers and the working class, who have been subjected to heavy burden of taxation, should be further handicapped by such unfair competition. The most severe competition is to be expected from that great European nation which confessedly aims at depriving England of her maritime predominance. The correspondent suggests that the precedent set by the action of the British Government in the sugar bounties may be further extended.

LANE SANG ON GALLOWS

Murderer of Ella Jarden and Her Two Little Ones Hanged

DEATH CAME VERY QUICKLY

Sheriff Hartman Deluged With Requests From People Desirous of Witnessing the Execution of the Brutal Colored Man

Special to The Times.

Philadelphia, Pa., June 7.—With the words "Jesus will not refuse me rest" on his quivering lips, William H. Lane, who murdered Ella H. Jarden and her two little children on April 1, met his fate on the gallows yesterday morning. The largest crowd that has ever attended an execution in Moyamensing prison, with the possible exception of the hanging of H. H. Holmes, filled the lower corridor of the convicts' wing at 10 o'clock and waited for the crash of the drop and the last struggle of the doomed man. So great was the crowd that the office, usually reserved for the preliminaries to a hanging, proved entirely too small, and the jury was polled in the reception room of the prison house. The following well-known men responded to the roll-call and subscribed to the Sheriff's inquest report: James McCartney, R. R. Bringhurst, William B. Cunningham, R. F. Dougherty, Mr. Charles H. Slaughter, Jules E. Pereyra, Joseph M. Adams, Robert S. Moore, Dr. Frank W. Galley, Benjamin McCullough and William H. Wright. These men, with Sheriff Hartman, Deputy Miles, Councillor Walton, Coroner Dugan, Dr. Thomas J. Morton, Dr. T. J. Wade and Dr. S. R. Kirby, made up the official party that led the 300 spectators from the court yard to the gallows.

WENT SINGING TO THE GALLOWS.

The "dead man's cell, No. 14, was closed. Lane stood behind the barred and wooden doors between two keepers. His hands were fastened behind his back, and while standing thus he uttered his last prayer. His pastor, Rev. F. T. M. Webster, comforted him, and as the door opened for the short walk to death started the old camp-meeting hymn. "There's not a friend like the lowly Jesus," the refrain of which Lane took up with his high-pitched voice, just as he placed his foot upon the first step leading to the trap.

He was still singing when Keeper Gorman slipped the black cap over his face and adjusted the noose. The first hitch on the noose stopped the singing short and the drop fell before half of the spectators realized that the tragedy of the law was on. Lane left his cell at 10.07, and in 90 seconds he was dangling, twisting, turning and struggling in the black pit formed by the three partitions under the drop. He was pronounced dead 19 minutes later.

His father and brother, with an undertaker, stood just outside the rear entrance to the corridor, within 100 feet of the gallows, and claimed the body as soon as the Sheriff's jury completed the view required by law. Lane will be buried at Delanco, N.J., to-morrow.

The demand for cards of admission to the hanging was most extraordinary. Sheriff Hartman was harassed on every side for tickets and his closer friends were called upon at all hours of the day and night by morbid men who sought to witness the dying agonies of the brute that warred on little children. In addition to the 300 properly accredited men who were admitted to the scene, about 30 ill-kept individuals were admitted with the police of the district after the actual execution had been completed but while the body was still dangling at the rope's end.

Somebody started the story that Charles A. Furbush, the reputed father of the two murdered children, was among the spectators, but this was denied by the prison officials and by attaches of the Sheriff's office. A number of Sheriffs from neighboring counties, some from points as far away as Ohio, were present, and two colored men were conspicuous in the crowd.

STORY OF THE TRIPLE CRIME.

The story of the triple murder for which Lane was hanged is still fresh in the public mind. He was butler in the house No. 652 North Fifteenth street, where Ella Jarden, known to Lane as "Mrs. Furbush," lived with her two children. On March 31 the woman accused Lane of theft, and later the negro learned that his robberies had been reported to the police. At 11 o'clock on the following morning he shot and instantly killed Ella Jarden and Madeline, her eldest daughter. A few minutes later he called Eloise Jarden in from the street, enticed her upstairs, and shot her, inflicting a mortal wound. At 11.10 he admitted two special policemen to the house and, while they were waiting in the parlor for Miss Jarden, Eloise, covered with blood, staggered into the room and said: "Billy killed my mamma and shot me." The child fell unconscious on the floor and died at Hahnemann Hospital the next day.

Lane escaped from the house, but was captured in Camden three hours later. He was arraigned on April 2, indicted April 3, tried and sentenced on April 4, and on April 22 Governor Stone fixed yesterday as the time for his execution. The man gained 22 pounds while in prison.

PEN PICTURE OF ST. PIERRE

Graphic Description of the Town Before the Eruption

Special to The Times.

London, June 7.—A correspondent wires to the London Times: I have been a frequent visitor to St. Pierre, and knew well the bright tropical town nestling under the first rises of Mont Pelee. It had the advantage over many of its sister towns in the West Indies that it retained not a few of the old stone buildings of its early days, dating back from its foundation in 1635, and had thus little of the temporary, rough-and-ready timber and corrugated-iron aspect which so often spoils the towns of those parts. From the sea St. Pierre presented a striking panorama. The white houses, interspersed with clumps of waving palms, the small white dome of the cathedral, an old steeple rising here and there, its quaint frontage of old houses, its busy market, the broad sweeping bay, full of all kinds of craft, from big steamers to small sailing vessels, the towering mountains at the back, on whose crest the clouds caught as they lazily drifted by, all bathed in the golden tropical day, constituted together a delightful impression which is now only a memory.

THE BLACKS

But it was upon entering this busy seaport that one gathered its full charm. There all was bustle and movement, and the negro with his happy knack of adapting himself to his surroundings seemed to have caught much of the vivacity of manner and speech of his French masters. Here the chee-chee, or patois, was "nigger French," indeed the most common of the two patois throughout the Leeward and Windward Islands, and still the language of the black population in St. Lucia and in Dominica. The jabbering negro, with an exuberance of words and gestures, suggestive of other men in other climes, importuned the visitor with his curios—sea eggs, dried skins of the fer-de-lance, the small snake common in the island, whips made of seaweed, small bull-fish, hats made of palm fibre, and strings of shells.

THE WHITES.

The Frenchman, more so than the Englishman, carries his country, so to speak, about with him; and life at St. Pierre was a quaint replica of life in France, with the negro element thrown in. Men met in the cafes discussing business or politics over their absinthes or vermouths, or over their cafe and liqueur according to the hour, in much the same way as in any provincial town in France; but the man who served was black, and, looking out into the street sultry with tropical heat, where the negresses passed, dressed in their classic, short, white frocks, carrying on their heads baskets full of bananas and alligator pears and star apples, and big, green luscious sapodillas, it was easy to realize that the boulevards of Paris were 3000 miles away.

IT WAS COLD MURDER

Horrible Story of American Brutality in Philippines

DUG THEIR OWN GRAVES

After Which Philippine Officials Were Compelled to Kneel and be Shot

Instances of Cruelty That Are Backed By the Reports and Affidavits of the Eye-witnesses

Special to The Times.

Washington, June 6.—The Secretary of War has transmitted to the Senate Committee on the Philippines a copy of a report made by J. G. Livingstone, Governor of the Philippines, Province of Lorangen, of the killing by soldiers of two native officers of the town of Santa Magdalena, of that province. One of the men was the Presidente of the town named, Maldrol Gallanosa, and the other a policeman. The Secretary of the town, Quintin Gamit, also was tortured for the purpose of forcing a confession from him.

Governor Livingstone says that a native who was trusted by the American authorities was sent to the town to spy out men concerned with the "Anting-Anting" movement; that he arrested some such men and took them with their papers before the Presidente, and that while all were there a detachment of troops under a Corporal entered and arrested all as insurgents.

THEY WERE TORTURED

They were then taken before Lieutenant F. W. Harker, of the Fifteenth Infantry, who put them to work on the streets. The report continues:

"The next day the President and Gamitt were asked if they would talk to which till their feet were nearly on the ground and were asked if they would "talk," to which they replied they would, naturally. They were returned to Maling, where the Secretary was again questioned by Lieutenant Larker as to the conduct and character of the Presidente, giving according to his (the Secretary's) statement satisfactory answer. He was returned to the jail and later he, with the Presidente and Ciriaco Funes a policeman of Magdalena, was again taken to the hills, being compelled to carry a rope, a pick and a spade, and on reaching a certain spot the Presidente was put to work digging what would appear to be a grave. Then the Presidente was bound and shot in the back. The Secretary states he saw all of this himself and also saw the policeman bound in the same way and a little later heard shots which he presumed were fired at the policeman as he was also killed."

The report also says: "It is claimed that the Presidente and policeman attempted to escape and the soldiers concerned have made affidavits to this effect, but I believe this to be absolutely untrue."

WAS SIMPLY MURDER.

Governor Livingstone concluded by giving his own opinion of the case as follows:

"Upon careful consideration of the whole question, from my knowledge of the conditions existing at the time and from my personal knowledge of those most directly concerned, I am forced to the opinion that the original order for the arrest of these men was absolutely unwarranted, possibly due to malinterpretation and overzealousness on the part of the Corporal; that the two prisoners killed did not attempt to escape, and that their killing was murder."

Inclosed with the Governor's report are affidavits of the private soldiers who shot the Presidente, and also an affidavit from a native prisoner, saying that the Presidente had allowed him to escape for pay. There also is a report on the case by Captain E. Wittenmeyer, of the Fifteenth Infantry, as follows:

"I wish to call your attention to the fact that at the time this occurred some 400 soldiers had been captured, most of whom were members of the Anting-Anting Society, and I have no doubt this Presidente was a member of this gang. It is a fact that cannot be disputed that a company of Anting-Anting from St. Magdalena was in the fight at Gaal September 7, and some of their wounded were cared for by this Presidente and his subordinates. There is no doubt in my mind but that he was guilty of inciting and sustaining insurrection and opposition against United States forces."

IN FINANCIAL TROUBLE

The Secretary of War has forwarded to the Senate Committee on Philippines the following cablegram from Acting Governor Wright, of the Philippines, concerning the conditions of the Treasury of the Philippine Government:

"After making available in United States money appropriations immediately necessary there is left in the Insular Treasury about $600,000, money of the United States. Practically none is being received from customs or internal revenue. Must very soon face the question of obtaining, next month, funds to pay obligations, payable only in money of the United States. Request suggestions as to method of obtaining money of United States. Can pay for it only in Mexican dollars. Can advertise for bids to furnish gold, payment to be made in Mexican currency, or can raise ratio so high that customs and internal revenue receipts will be gold. Either method highly objectionable, and would greatly deplete Treasury balance. Price of gold in local banks to-day is $1 for $2.41 Mexican, but no large orders can be filled."

REVOLT AGAINST HILL

New York Democrats Trying to Down the Old Leader

New York, 7.—"No reorganizers" is the slogan of the Liberal Democrats who held a state convention in Cooper Union to-day to complete preparations for a vigorous campaign in New York State this Fall. The addresses and the resolutions of the convention all pointed to a avowed hostility to David Bennett Hill and all other state leaders who were lukewarm in their support of Bryan in his two campaigns, or who openly opposed him. In an address to the public the organizers of the new party declares,

"The false leaders of the party in this state David B. Hill were, prior to 1894, in absolute control of the government of this state, but accomplished nothing for the people and betrayed the confidence reposed in them. Having prostituted the party to a debased and degraded mercenary level, they used it simply as a means of granting favors to the few. David B. Hill as the leader of the party in the state led the party from a majority of 192,000 in 1892 to disgraceful defeat in 1894, when, as a candidate for Governor, the people of the state repudiated him and his leadership by 150,000 majority. These men again, under the leadership of Hill, now have the impudence and audacity to ask the confidence of the people."

Among well-informed politicians the new movement is regarded as of more national than local significance. They believe it to be a well-laid plan of Mr. Bryan and his followers to eliminate Hill as a presidential candidate in 1904. Talk about the Democratic factions having agreed on Hill for a leader in the coming campaign in giving the Bryanites great concern. They calculate that Hill can be headed off as a presidential possibility by the nomination of a third state ticket this Fall and the consequent defeat of the regular Democratic candidate for Governor. These views of the situation are strengthened by the fact that Norman E. Mack, New York member of the Democratic national committee, has been in the West conferring the Nebraskan leader. Mr. Bryan recently suggested the nomination of Mr. Mack for governor, and to-day's gathering of the element in revolt is believed to be the first step in an organized fight of the Bryanites to down Hill and defeat his hopes of being the standard bearer of the party in 1904.

CATTLE FOR SOUTH AFRICA

Lot of 600 From Texas Shipped Last Week From Pensacola

Fort Worth, Texas, June 7 — About 630 head of Texas cattle were shipped from Pensacola, Fla., on last Wednesday to South Africa. The shipment was made to Maude & Carrew and is intended as the first of many thousands to be used in restocking the depleted veldts of South Africa.

Walter D. S. Maude was at one time a member of the Sixty-seventh Highlanders. He is the owner of the Moon Ranch in the Texas Pan-Handle. He was a Lieutenant in a British regiment in the Boer war, and at present holds a Major's commission in the British army. Dick Carrew, the other member of the firm, is owner of the Windhorst Ranch in Clay county. It is understood that they have a contract to supply the British Government with young breeding cattle in South Africa.

The shipment from Pensacola consisted of bulls and heifers, high grades and pure bloods, none of which was over three years old. They were purchased at various places in Texas in small lots so as to avoid suspicion and were shipped from Pensacola for the same reason, the Boer war not being over at the time the vessel was chartered.

Should this initial shipment turn out well, it is the purpose of Messrs. Maude and Carrew to follow it with others aggregating 10,000 head.

The point of debarkation will be Natal and the point of shipment in this country will be Galveston. A regular line of steamers will be put on and the movement is expected to continue until 50,000 head have been sent to South Africa.

By virtue of the regulations established by the British Government the whole of the shipment from Pensacola was inoculated for tuberculosis before embarkation.

GREAT PRAISE FOR AFRICAN ARMY.

War Office Cables Congratulations to Kitchener

NATION THANKS AFRICAN ARMY.

Message Refers to the Endurance, Bravery Discipline and Humanity of the Force.

London, June 6.—The War Office has cabled congratulations to Lord Kitchener on the energy, skill and patience with which he conducted the long campaign in South Africa, and has asked him to communicate to the troops the Government's profound sense of their spirit of endurance, bravery and discipline, and also of their humanity, shown throughout the trying period.

Lord Kitchener replied on behalf of the Army in South Africa, tendered its sincere thanks for the congratulations of the Government, which he was sure the troops would receive with great satisfaction.

MAGNANIMITY TO KRUGER.

London, June 6.—The organ of Colonial Secretary Chamberlain, the Birmingham Post, says today that, on account of his age and infirmities, the British Government has waived its claim for the acknowledgement of Mr. Kruger of British sovereignity over the Transvaal, and has guaranteed to all the Boer delegates in Europe a safe conduct to their homes in South Africa.

London, June 6.—The Johannesburgh correspondent of the Times says that the peace terms were well received in that city. It is recognized to contain little which would not have been granted in any case through the generosity of the Government; satisfaction is generally felt with the language provision, since the compulsory study of English would have made the preservation of Dutch a point of honor with the Boers.

London, June 6.—A despatch from St. Petersburg to the Times says the terms of peace caused surprise in Russia. It was generally expected the British Government would be compelled to make far-reaching concessions.

MOORE CANADIAN CASUALTIES.

Ottawa, Ont., June 6.—The death of Percy Leonard Devereux, A Division, South African Constabulary, is reported. He received wounds in a fight at Buffalskloorn, which resulted in his death on May 31st. The report is made by Mr. Chamberlain to Lord Minto. His father is J. Devereux, Ladner's Landing, B.C.

The Governor-General was also advised by cable from the Casualty Department today that Charles Murphy and Edgar Stanley Bonfield of the 2nd Canadian Mounted Rifles, were dangerously ill of enteric fever on May 31st at Cladspontein. Murphy enlisted at Edmonton, N.-W. T., and Bonfield at Halifax, N.S.

OFFICIAL REDUCTION WAS 97,477 MEN.

London, June 5.—An official statement issued by the War Office this evening shows that the total reduction of the British forces in South Africa, up to May 30 of the present year was 97,477. This includes, killed, wounded, prisoners, deaths from disease, and men invalided home. Of these, many have recovered and rejoined their regiments, leaving 22,436 dead or permanently incapacitated. The total number of troops killed in action, or who died from wounds is 7,792, while the total number of deaths from disease is 13,250.

THE CAPE REBELS ARE COMING IN.

Pretoria, June 5.—Reports from the Cape Colony as to the effect of the peace agreement are very satisfactory. Commandant Fouche has surrendered, and many others are coming into the British lines daily.

ADMITTED DEFEAT, TO AID DELEGATES.

London, June 5.—The Times' Pretoria correspondent says the Boers at Vereeniging recorded an acknowledgement of complete defeat in a resolution which was prefixed by the authorization of their delegates to sign the document of surrender. In this resolution it was declared that only in view of the obsolete refusal of the British Government to negotiate further, and in consideration of their own reduction in number, and the impossibility of ever getting back their prisoners of war, and in order to save the existence of their own race, they had brought themselves to consent to relinquish their cherished independence.

The correspondent says the chief concession regarding the language only amounts to granting such reasonable facilities as would be granted anyhow, and does not interfere with the status of English as the sole official language. The concession, allowing the use of arms with permit is not unreasonable in a country where there is a large native population and farms are scattered.

The £3,000,000 Grant.

The generous grant of £3,000,000, which is equal to £100 for each farmer, is not only to the Boers who fought, but generally to all local inhabitants. All such will be represented on repatriation and restocking committees.

The only clause which is not sufficiently clear is that regarding the recognition of Boer notes and requisitions if they are not held to be bona-fide evidence of property losses.

It is estimated by the correspondent that there is a possibility of a small element of irreconcilables with commandoes who will refuse to accept the decision of the delegates, and will begin brigandage. Such action at worst will only cause annoyance to the constabulary.

CABLE FROM CHAMBERLAIN.

Ottawa, June 6.—The Earl of Minto yesterday afternoon made public the following cablegram from the Colonial Secretary, dated London, June 4th; "I have received his Majesty's commands to convey to your Government, and to the people of Canada his sincere thanks for loyal congratulations and good wishes expressed in your telegram of 2nd June,

FRENCH PRESIDENT CALLED A THIEF

A Lively Scene in Paris—One Deputy Says He Struck Another

THE OTHER SAYS IT'S A LIE

And Calls His Assailant a Filthy Name—Prosecution May Follow

Paris, June 6.—During a dispute in the Chambre of Deputies today, M. de Largentaye, a reactionary deputy, from the Cotes du Nord exclaimed: "Yes, you Republicans are swindlers and traitors, and in a way, foreigners. And your President of the Republic is a thief." A scrimmage, during which fisticuffs were exchanged, ensued. Half a dozen deputies, including the Marquis de Dion, M. Millevoye and M. Meslier, participated.

Deputy Bachimont having called M. Millevoye a scoundrel, the latter sent to M. Bachimont his seconds, the Count de Dion and M. Largentaye, who, in their official account of the interview, said "We informed M. Bachimont of our mission. He replied with a filthy expression which is unprintable in English. The Count de Dion retorted by slapping his face."

M. Bachimont published this terse reply to the foregoing. "Count de Dion says he slapped my face. This is a lie."

It is reported that M. de Largentaye will be prosecuted for insulting President Loubet.

CONSUMPTION KILLS ONE IN EVERY FIVE

Startling Statement Made by Dr. Barrick in New York City

MUST WAGE WAR ON THE DISEASE

So Says the American Congress of Tuberculosis Which is Now in Session

"One-fifth of all the people who die in New York City die because of consumption, and it is the duty of the city and State to prevent it," said Dr. E. J. Barrick, of Toronto, in opening address at the Hotel Majestic Monday.

The American Congress of Tuberculosis, in joint session with the Medico-Legal Society of New York, said some startling things. They had come from all the Americas to discuss tuberculosis, and upstairs in the small banquet-room they had 50,000,000 live germs in glass cages.

"To begin with," said Dr. Barrick, "our great cities are breeding places for consumption because the children do not have proper playgrounds and recreation places. They have nowhere to play but in the streets. They catch the germs of diseases there. They inhale the dust. They have not healthful recreation, and so their bodies are only partly developed. Give the children playgrounds.

"Furthermore, it is the duty of all good citizens to demand of the Government that proper steps be taken to blot out disease. When we hear of smallpox at our gates we are horrified, but in our midst is a disease that is a far greater enemy to the State.

"A sum of Government money should be set aside every year to be used under the direction of this society to scatter broadcast information about tuberculosis. Only when the people thoroughly understand the proper precautions to be taken will tuberculosis be blotted out.

"We must have organized methods. The thing must be stamped out systematically.

"The next way is to bring the sanitarium within the reach of every one, rich and poor, and insist that every one, rich and poor, be isolated and properly cared for. This is humanitarianism of a kind, and it is scientific."

Dr. Barrick then introduced the following resolution:

"That it is the duty of every Government, municipality and individual citizen to adopt organized methods for lessening the spread of a disease which is causing, directly or indirectly, probably one-fifth of the total deaths in almost every country in the world."

Dr. Irving A. Watson, of Concord, N. H., seconded the motion, and it was warmly discussed by Dr. Charles T. Davis, of Richmond, Ind, and Dr. Frank Pascal, of San Antonio, Tex.

Dr. Bell, President of the Medico-Legal Society, spoke on the subject of preventive legislation. He favored the education of the masses to the danger of consumption.

The exhibit of germs in the small banquet-room was an elaborate one. It is estimated that there are enough live germs in the sealed glass cases to kill all the people in New York if they were properly inoculated with them.

THREE MEN KILLED EAST OF CALGARY.

Calgary, N.W.T., June 6.—A serious accident occurred on the C.P.R. five miles east of here at half-past 6 this morning. Owing to the recent heavy rains, a culvert had been undermined and a freight train dashed into the culvert, which gave way, precipitating the engine into the artesian. Engineer Chas. Davis, Brakeman Dunn and Car Inspector J. Corsey, were thrown under the engine, and were pinned there in eight feet of water. The train was telescoped and six cars piled on top of the engine. The wrecking crews from east and west went to work removing the debris and traffic was resumed before midnight. Fortunately the passenger train was late, or a much more frightful loss of life would have occurred.

THE ONTARIO SITUATION

"In Ontario the campaign is over," says the Hamilton Herald, "but guerilla warfare has begun."

• • • •

Notwithstanding the instances of individual bravery and the proofs of military skill and British partinacty that have gone upon record, there was not much glory gained in the late war, which cost £222,000,000 and the lives of 21,000 British soldiers. Under modern conditions of warfare, defence is much easier than attack. Britons have no reason to be sorry for that discovery. The Empire is large enough, and old John Bull will do very well to keep it intact. He does not need to take the offensive side in future, and for defence he is well equipped. Now that the Boers are going back to their farms, the British should buckle down to their various industries, and, while paying off the war debt, show Germany and the United States that British skill and British competition are yet important factors in the industrial and commercial world. A quarter of a century of peace will remove all traces of the late unpleasantness.

• • • •

The slender majority in this election may be found a cause of deeper anxiety to a political leader now than was the case in the two last general elections, when there was a goodly sprinkling of Patrons and Independents to work upon. Sir Oliver in 1894 found himself with a majority of one but he had so much pliable material to experiment with that strength was gradually acquired by the arts well known to skilful tacticians. At the following general elections the majority was so small that any member-elect, who was bold enough to "take the bull by the horns," could extort almost anything in reason for the benefit of his Riding, to such a premium had votes climbed under the exigencies of the situation. Once past the election of Speaker, and the test vote on the address, the bye-elections were productive of the needed support in the House. And it was seen by the revelations of the courts some of those elections were marvels of political engineering.

In the present case, the party lines are tightly drawn. There is not an Independent, no teven a solitary Prohibitionist returned to offer either of the leaders a mark for the art of persuasion. Should the recounts result in a tie, there are two courses open, a coalition cabinet or a new general election. The first is not immediately to be thought of. It could only be remotely considered in the event of a second trial of strength before the people giving no different result. In such case, it might be well to weigh whether a coincidence of political interests would not be more for the general welfare than a continuance of party strife on the old lines. But until the province should be confronted with the problem it is hardly worth contemplation.

HOW THE BOER WOMEN FEEL

At the outset of the war the Boer women were said to be more furious for its prosecution than the men. At the close, the cable account says the women of the concentration camps wept for joy over its termination. Here is another view of the attitude of the Boer women, furnished to the London Times by Mr. H. W. Nicholls, formerly of Windsor:—

"Some little time since a lady member of a well-to-do Dutch family called on me, and told me there were 43 representatives of her family in the field, including father, brothers, cousins, uncles, etc. In the course of conversation she waxed rather warm and said how much she hoped they would continue and fight on, saying most emphatically that she would never speak to father or brothers again if they surrendered. She felt that if they fought on for ten years—bad as things looked for them now—they would get their country again; but she said, with tears in her eyes, 'I am afraid they won't fight for more than four or five years at most.' This lady's sister, you may be surprised to learn, is the wife of a British officer. From conversations I have had with different Dutch women at various times, they seem to have very bitter feelings not only of an anti-British nature, but also against their own men should they show any sign of cowardice or weakness. For instance, an Australian, sent recently in charge of some transport stores, had with him a few Boers who had surrendered, and in the course of their trek they passed one of the Boer refugee camps, whereupon the people there, seeing the surrendered burghers and realizing their position, jeered at them and called them 'Hands uppers.'"

If this tone still prevails, the commanders may well be excused for holding out so long at the peace conference. They may be able to bring in their commandos, and fraternize hilariously with Tommy Atkins, but when they come to settle with Tant Sannie, it will make a difference.

SOLD CIGARETTES TO BOYS

It is not alone the tobacco dealers who are responsible for children obtaining cigarettes. These merchants are often wrongly blamed. In one of the publicschools a short time ago a boy made a habit of selling cigarettes to the other boys. He bought a lot of the coffin nails at a time, and retailed them out at 2 cents each. He did a thriving business, and was making money fast. That boy had the business head of a Jay Gould or a Pierpont Morgan, but at the same time he was teaching the pupils a bad habit.

Get Lame Back or Lumbago

No need of that now. That sort of pain can be knocked out in short order, for Polson's Nerviline, which is five times stronger than any other, penetrates at once through the tissues, reaches the source of suffering, drives it out and thus gives relief almost instantly. Not magic, but strength that gives Polson's Nerviline this power. You will think it magic however if you try it, pain goes so quickly. Sold by dealers everywhere.

BRITAIN'S STRONG ARM

Will Take no Back Water From any European Nation

Philadelphia, June 7.—Russia in Manchuria and the Persian Gulf, France in the Mehong Valley, in Northwestern Africa and off Newfoundland, Germany in New Guinea and the Levant, are each certain to find Great Britain in no yielding mood. The British Foreign office is extremely likely to force the note, the Cabinet certain to be in no mood for compromise and the British people just a little anxious to show that the empire is left stronger and not weaker by the Boer war. The mood is perilous.

There is Hope For Even Such As Have Glimpses of the Dark Valley

Paine's Celery Compound

The Medicine That Saves Life and Restores Lost Health

A merciful Province still keeps the spark of life in thousands of wasted and feeble bodies. The fitful, flickering spark will burn with decreased power as the hot days of summer approach. There is still hope for even those who are now catching glimpses of the dark valley. The use of Paine's Celery Compound during the month of June will at once arrest the progress of wasting disease. It will strengthen the weak and inflamed nerves rid the body of morbid waste material, make the blood pure and give healthy action to the stomach, liver and kidneys. Nervousness, sleeplessness, rheumatism, neuralgia, liver and kidney troubles quickly vanish when Dr. Phelps' marvellous prescription is used. Mrs. A. Perry, Port Maitland, N.S., says:

"For two years my system was all rundown, and I suffered more than I can describe from nervous prostration and insomnia; at times I almost lost my reason from severe pain at base of the brain. My husband advised me to try Paine's Celery Compound, which I did, and the effects were wonderful, I soon began to sleep well, the pain left my head, my whole system was strengthened, and I am now enjoying very good health."

INVESTORS ATTENTION.

We wish to call the attention of all classes of investors to the firm of Wm. C. Benson & Co'y of London Ont., as a medium through which both small and large investments can be made to the best possible advantage. We give special attention to Mining and Oil Stocks but handle Industrials as well. We handle only such stocks as we believe to be safe and profitable investments, and make it a rule to investigate as thoroughly as possible all properties for which we act as financial agents. Here is one of the many "good things" we can offer; we have visited this property personally and can fully recommend it; it is an oil property situated in the Lima, Ohio, Oil Fields —the greatest oil fields in America. The Company has over 12,000 acres of leases of proven oil property, with over 75 producing wells, and pay dividends every month. The Company intends to build its own refinery and thereby double its earning power. For this purpose stock (par value $1.00) is now being sold and can be secured up till Saturday, 7th inst., AT 30 CENTS PER SHARE, after which the price will be 50 CENTS PER SHARE. ORDERS BEARING POSTMARK JUNE 7, 02, or earlier date, will be accepted at 30 cents. The Union Oil, Gas and Refining Co. is an established Company, not a prospect, and has a good record behind it.

Secure this stock at 30c. at once, this (Saturday, June 7th) being the last day on which these terms will be offered. Buy at once, and you will not regret it.

DETROIT UNITED RAILWAY

The intelligent investor in listed securities having a current market is seeking that which possesses not only intrinsic merit and remunerative income, but future enhancement in market value as well. Conviction on these three important points once firmly established among the investing public concerning a particular security is followed by three results—demand, security of stock and advancing prices.

It is good to know of such opportunities, for it enables the public to invest safely and add to their individual accumulation of this world's goods, thereby increasing in a measure the world's happiness, and the result is satisfactory, not only to the investor, but to his broker as well, particularly if the broker in question happens to be the dispenser of such a bit of happiness.

Detroit United Railway stock is on the eve of an advance in price which will carry quotations from the present level of 74 to par. The advance is inevitable for the simple reason that as a substantial investment of recognized merit the stock is selling at least $25 per share below what it is worth. This statement, made with full confidence, is not an idle boast, but is based on cold existing facts; and if any among my readers are skeptical in my degree let them look into the facts and figures and they will be convinced.

It is although an absurd proposition that the stock of a city traction company having no competition, paying regular dividends of 4 per cent. and earning 6 per cent., should be quoted at any such ridiculously low a figure as the present price.

All that is necessary is for the public to know that a good thing like Detroit United is available, and the disparity between present quotations and real worth will soon be bridged over by the most legitimate means known, and that is by public buying on broad scale. At the present time three separate financial interests are negotiating for the Cleveland holdings around 70. In the meantime it is exceedingly probable that public buying, now well under way, will absorb these holdings at prices ranging from the present level to par, and the syndicates referred to will suddenly wake up to find that they have missed an unusual opportunity by pursuing a penny-wise and poundfoolish policy in regard to price.

HERE ARE THE FACTS

Detroit United Railway is a consolidation of all the electric railways in and about Detroit. There are no competing lines. The total mileage is 380 miles, having a total bonded indebtedness of $15,880,000, which is $41,789,00 per mile, and it may be remarked that this is exceedingly conservative and less per mile than that of any other city road in the United States.

The total authorized and outstanding capital stock $12,500,000, which is $32,595,00 per mile, so that there is 74,654,00 per mile in bonds and stock. Cincinnati Street Railway is bonded and stocked for $99,250 per mile; St. Louis United about $167,000 per mile; Twin City Rapid Transit, $125,643 per mile. These comparisons prove the absence of the customary watering process, more recently known as "Morganizing."

The following figures, showing the earnings, operating expenses, etc., of the Detroit United Railway for two years are conclusive proofs of its merits:

Year Ending—	1900	1901
Earnings, gross	$2,575,276	$2,942,227
Earnings, net	1,150,778	1,345,473
Per cent. of operation		54.79
Fixed charges	638,317	675,344
Surplus for stock	512	670,129
Per cent on stock	4.10	5.36
Price of stock		72 1-2
Population served	400,000

Gross Earnings...4 months July—Oct 1901 $1,129,276

Gross Earnings......January 1—March 31, 1901 $642,671; 1902 $755,631

I am indebted to Mr. Guy M. Walker, of 25 Broad street, New York, for the following facts in regard to Detroit United Railway stock, as compared to Twin City Rapid Transit common stock, now quoted at 122. First dividend of 1 per cent was paid on Twin City stock in August, 1899; in 1900, 3 per cent.; 1901, 31-2 percent.; 1902, February, 2 per cent. It should be borne in mind that Twin City Rapid Transit is not even established as a 4 per cent. dividend payer; that there is a 7 per cent. preferred stock ahead of it, and yet the common stock is quoted at 122, or $50 per share above Detroit, which is absolutely established as a 4 per cent. dividend payer. Either Twin City stock is selling too high or Detroit too low.

"In comparing the intrinsic value of the stocks of the two companies, it should be noted that while the bonded debt of Twin City amounts to $47,320,00 per mile, that of the Detroit United is only $41,789,00 per mile, while the stock per mile of Twin City is $78,304,00 to Detroit United $32,895,00, making the total capitalization of the Twin City Rapid Transit Company $125,643,00 per mile, as against only $74,-684,00 per mile for Detroit United. The populations served are almost exactly the same.

"The percentages earned by the two properties for their common stock are almost the same, though the earnings for Detroit United for 1901 show a slightly larger gain over its earnings for 1900 than does the Twin City Rapid Transit Company.

"It should, however, be noted that Twin City is making its present earnings on a cost of operation amounting to only 44.60 per cent of its gross earnings, which is far below normal, and which certainly can not be maintained in the future, while Detroit United is expending for operation and maintenance 54.70 per cent. of its gross earnings, which is slightly above normal, and which ought to be reduced to approximately 50 per cent. within the next year or two.

"It can, therefore, easily be seen that Detroit United promises considerably greater returns to its stockholders for the immediate future than Twin City, and it is unreasonable to suppose that the stock will continue at its present low quotations of 74, while Twin City is considered to be worth and apparently holds firm at approximately $125,00 per share."

FUTURE INCREASED EARNINGS

On the basis of the actual earnings for the first three months of 1902, Detroit United will show for the present fiscal year, in round figures, $3,500,000 gross, equivalent to $1,575,000 net, being more than double the interest on its bonded debt. After deducting fixed charges, now aggregating $720,343, there will remain at least a net surplus available for dividends of $854,657, or an amount in excess of 7 1-2 per cent. on the entire capital stock issue.

A syndicate of Philadelphia capitalists recently made a proposition to form a leasing company, take over the management of the Detroit United, and guarantee dividends, beginning with 4 per cent. per annum and increasing 1-2 per cent. each year until 6 1-2 per cent. annually should be paid and continued during the life of the lease.

This proposition was rejected.

At this writing I am reliably informed that the Bankers' Committee of Cleveland, holding in trust the Everett-Moore Syndicate holdings of Detroit United, have practically concluded negotiations for the sale of 30,000 shares to an Eastern syndicate. The remaining 10,000 shares are to be withdrawn from the market.

The withdrawal of this stock from the market, which has heretofore been the cause of existing sacrifice quotations on Detroit United, marks the present level as the low record prices from now on. It is a noteworthy fact, of interests to the probable purchaser, that during the past week the market for Detroit United has broadened perceptibly. Buying orders for the stock in blocks are in evidence from Eastern purchasers. Heretofore the market has been confined to Detroit, Cleveland, Cincinnati, and Louisville. Now, what will be the effect on current quotations, with demand for the stock from Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburg, Chicago, and St. Louis? I repeat that these actually existing conditions mean a long advance ahead, and those among my readers who want make not only a good investment, but a long profit as well, had better get in the band waggon not later than Monday noon, for late arrivals will have to go way back and sit down if they expect to get any stock under 75.

One of the chief objections to investors heretofore has been the fact that last year the Detroit United accumulated a floating debt of $900,000, resulting, not from any deficit in operating, but from the purchase of 75 per cent. of the capital stock of the Detroit & Port Huron Shore Line and the Windsor Street Railway, both of which properties, though controlled by the Detroit United, are not included in the consolidation. This floating debt has now been entirely eliminated by an issue of $1,000,000 4 1-2 per per cent. bonds, which were sold to E. H. Gay & Co., of Boston, and recently offered by them for public subscription.

This leaves the property in excellent condition financially, with valuable assets in the controlling stocks referred to. Physically the property is conceded to have no superior in any city in the United States or Canada.

Detroit United Railway 4 per cent stock is listed on the Cincinnati Stock Exchange. Telegraph a collect message to my firm for accurate quotations and prices, and prompt reply will be made. During the next few weeks an active market in Detroit United may be confidently anticipated, accompanied by a higher level of prices.

The Scientific Crook.

WE seem threatened with a new variety of crook—the scientific. According to very circumstantial reports from Washington, the experts of the Treasury Department have been experimenting with a new chemical compound said to rob steel of its temper, and hence making safecracking easy. This compound, called thermite, is reputed to possess marvelous virtues. When mixed with magnesium powder it will destroy the hardness of a metal, enabling a burglar to cut through the best steel as if it were lead. A five-eighths-of-an-inch tempered steel plate was so pierced. The newspaper accounts do not fail to say quaky things of how cracksmen have already put these discoveries to practical use. Owners of strong-boxes are advised not to sleep too well o' nights. All this is very interesting if it happens to be true. The profession, it may be observed, has never been slow to make improvements. It was a great day for the grafter fraternity when dynamite came to town. They took up with it at once. Popular fancy endows the knock-out fiend with a large knowledge of chemistry. There is hardly any branch of Deviousness that has not participated in the unparalleled advances of the times. And much may be looked for. Sir James Crichton Browne spoke not long ago, in England, on the improvements of the poisoners' art. He pointed out the immense possibilities that lie in cultures of deadly bacteria, to say nothing of some of the recent chemical preparations. The real art, he contended, is not simply in defying detection, but in not arousing suspicion. All the famous poisoners of the Middle Ages were, in his view, a clumsy lot. It was the same old story always—arsenic, arsenic, arsenic. The tales of the magical potions of those days were fables. The Borgias would gurgle with delight before the resources of the present day. The picture drawn by the eminent English physician was not so very reassuring to them as actively cultivate the luxury of enemies, but it is safe to say that whatever be the possibilities, they will never be realized to any great extent. The fact is that any man on vengeance bound who started in to perfect himself in this line would get so interested in his experiments that he would forget all about his plot. That is one of the beauties of modern science.

Some Roycroft Humor.

THERE is a story, writes Elbert Hubbard, that bears upon its features the mellow tinge of time, to the effect that Ralph Waldo Emerson once got up in the middle of the night and, in the course of his gropings, fell over a chair or two and knocked down the family what-not. Mrs. Emerson felt softly for her mate, and finding that he was not there guessed the source of the confusion, and called in alarm, "Waldo, Waldo! are you ill?" And the placid answer was, "No, my dear: only an idea."

So that is the story, but the new version runs this way: Mr. Emerson got up in the middle of the night, and, after falling over the family rocking-chair and knocking a plaster of paris cast off the mantel, was accosted by his good wife thus: "Are you ill, Waldo?" And there was no answer—save the scratching of matches on wall, floor, bureau and chairs. This was in the day when matches came in sticks, and you broke them off.

The lady heard the matches split off, and then she heard the scrape and scratch. "Are you ill, Waldo?" again she called in alarm. "Ill! Ill nothing—why don't you say sick?—there is no one listening. No, I am not ill. I have an idea, and wanted to write it down, but these confounded cheap matches you bought of that Connecticut peddler will not light—plague take everything that comes from Connecticut, say I!" Then there was a final scratch on the wall, and philosophy came to Mr. Compensation's rescue, as he said, "Well, well, it wasn't much of an idea, anyway; besides that, I've really forgotten what it was." And he crawled back into bed. In the morning Mrs. Emerson discovered that every tooth had been broken out of her high-back comb.

Cosmopolitan New York.

The new Cathedral of St. John in New York will, in addition to its main hall, have seven "Chapels of Tongues" where German, Spanish, French, Swedish, Italian, Armenian and Chinese services will be held each Sunday. Nevertheless, by the time the great cathedral is finished it is not unlikely that the crypt and transepts and anterooms will be required for other nationalities. A clergyman called upon Bishop Potter the other day to ask that some provision might be made for religious services for some Mesopotamian immigrants.

"Really," replied the bishop, "cannot a handful of Mesopotamians be provided for in connection with your Armenian congregation?"

The young clergyman of the tenements smiled. "I do not know what you call a handful, sir. There are some eight hundred families of Mesopotamians within ten minutes' walk of where we are sitting this moment; and as for their attendance upon Armenian services, the languages have about as little in common as Greek and Choctaw."

The "Parthians and Medes and Elamites" are, perhaps, yet to come; but the most of the other nationalities mentioned as present in Jerusalem on the first Pentecost after the crucifixion are already represented in New York, and the problem now is the same as it was then.

Couldn't Figure It Up.

"Were there any trillionaires in ancient Rome?" we asked of the astute antiquarian.

"I think not," he replied. "You see, with the Roman system of numerals it would have required a carload of chalk and a blackboard as long as from here to Halifax to enable a man to figure up the interest on a million denarii at eight per cent. for one year, six months and twenty days, and by the time he had summed it up and secured a telescope to see the beginning of his figures the borrower would have died of old age."—"Judge."

Music in the Dark.

Musical Germany has recently been discussing in all seriousness the question whether it is true that a pernicious effect is produced upon music-lovers at public concerts by feminine beauty, with its delightful accessories, as seen in a blaze of artificial light reflected by crystal, gold and glittering diamonds? Germany answers yes, and declares that in future lights must be turned down; in fact, some of the bolder spirits have already put them out and left the audience in darkness.

The idea was first suggested to a concert reformer in Darmstadt, who took to reading Goethe, and came upon a chapter in Wilhelm Meister," in which an eccentric lover of music is described: "He could not live without music, more especially singing, and he was wont to listen to it without seeing the singers." This quaint individual used to say that music is really intended for the ear only, whereas in concert rooms it is made to minister mainly to the eye, to accompany movements, not sensations. The gentleman from Darmstadt thereupon concluded that the first step in the way of rational reform would be to lower the lights and shut his eyes to the consequences, and as many people jumped at the idea, it has already been realised, first in Darmstadt, and then in Frankfort-on-the-Main. Experiments are about to be continued elsewhere.

A man goes to a concert to hear music. But when he gets there he sees a great deal more than he hears, and his attention is distracted. The pillars, the statues, the lusters, all turn his thoughts away from the strains meant to soothe or inspirit. That is not as it should be, and yet it is not by any means the worst. He looks around at the ladies, many of whom come to be looked at. He sees the luxuriant tresses of one sylph-like figure before him, and as he cannot catch a glimpse of her charming face, he tries to guess at the features. His neighbor, a rich tradesman, is engaged in estimating the cost of the riviere of diamonds round her shapely neck. A third worshiper of Terpsichore finds himself behind the sweetest thing in hats, and must be content with hearing, since he can't see anything because of the beautiful obstruction. Now, all these things were brought to the concert for the purpose of being seen, whereas people come primarily to hear. Suddenly a burst of applause reminds them of this fact—and of the other, that they have not been listening to the sonata.

Kissing the Baby.

There are many mothers who give themselves infinite trouble about the big and obvious things connected with nursery management—who strive bravely to be up to date in the matter of plumbing, ventilation and infectious diseases—who yet fail woefully when it comes to certain details. One of the most important of these is the disgusting and dangerous habit of allowing every comer to kiss and maul the baby, says the "Youth's Companion."

A baby, no doubt, is a delightful object and almost irresistible, but that is no reason why advantage should be taken of his helpless condition to offer him constant hygienic outrages.

Here is a speech a well-meaning goose of a young mother made to the father of her child on his return from business: "Mrs. Smith called to-day, John. She has a fearful cold and sore throat. She thought the baby was just too sweet for anything, and wouldn't let him out of her arms. He took to her wonderfully, too." Naturally the baby developed a bad case of the snuffles in a day or two, and then it was: "The baby has a dreadful cold. We cannot think where he got it, we are always so careful."

This mother and the hundreds like her should be taught the lesson that promiscuous kissing is a bad and vulgar habit, productive of much danger to adults as well as to children. Adults can protect themselves if they like, but infants cannot, and so it is the duty of the mothers to protect them.

Even if they mercifully escape actual infection in babyhood, there still remains the fact that a silly and unclean habit is formed, resulting in schools full of kissing children, and by and by in ridiculous communities of kissing acquaintances. We may learn a useful lesson from the Japanese in this regard. They are not a kissing race, and the little children do not know what it means, except perhaps from their mothers. It is generally acknowledged that the Japanese babies are the healthiest and happiest of youngsters, and who shall say how much wholesome restraint from the kissing habit may have to do with this fortunate state of affairs?

To make too much of children is to spoil them, but in one respect they should be treated like royalty—if they must be kissed it should be only the back of the hand.

Prognostications.

New York "Life" ventures upon the following prognostications regarding Miss Stone.

She will arrive in America.

She will be met by a large delegation of gentlemen interested in collecting funds to send missionaries out of our own country, where they are needed, into other countries, where they are not needed, and where their principal function is to create complications for the United States Government to fight out.

She will be exploited for a few days by the yellow journals.

She will be gushed over by long-haired men, short-haired women and other gushers.

She will probably lecture, at a high compensation, under the management of Major J. B. Pond.

She will sell literature to the cheap magazines at large prices.

She will make money.

She will be lionised by the W.C.T.U.

She will be utilized by local missionary societies to gather funds to provide soft snaps in uncivilized Japan and other heathen places for Americans who can't make a living at home.

She will be an encouragement to others to go into foreign countries and get into trouble minding other people's business, when they might be quite safe at home tending to their own.

She will be convinced that the American nation is an easy thing.

Fables For the Fair.

A LITTLE work called "Fables for the Fair," by Josephine Dodge Daskam, is attracting amused notice in London, where it is published. Here is an example of the fables:

"There was once a woman who had the opportunity of marrying either of two brothers she preferred. Since they had both of them good points she decided to consult their sister as to which in her opinion would make the best husband. 'I think,' she said, 'that I shall take John. He is so good.' "'But,' said the sister, 'he gobbles his soup and sugars his lettuce. To say nothing of buttering his bread in slabs. We have never been able to teach him better.' 'But he reads Browning so beautifully,' cried the woman. 'You will hear him eat soup oftener than you will hear him read Browning,' said the sister."

Then, as to the other brother, "I am sure he would give his life for me," cried the woman. "If you will pause and consider," replied the sister, "you will realise that the probabilities of his being called upon to do that are very few indeed. Whereas the fact that he is very careless about brushing his clothes will be daily apparent to you."

The book is full of good things, among them the fable of a singer who sang "Annie Laurie" in a muslin gown to a country audience. "Goodness alive!" said they, "is that all? Our Jenny knows that piece." But the rival wore silver brocade and sang in German and French, whereupon the country paper remarked that "it was a real pleasure to hear old favorites rendered with such spirit." This teaches us that when in Rome we should do as the Romans don't.

Then there is the fable of the woman who could not help herself:

"There was once a woman who had never learned how to swim, although she went in bathing every day in the summer. She had a friend who had acquired the art with some trouble, and was very proud of her proficiency in it. 'It is absurd,' said this friend, 'to live near the water and not swim. It makes you very attractive to good swimmers if you can go out with them and they do not feel that you are a drag on their pleasures. What would you do in case you fell off the pier? Now watch me!' With these words she dived off into the water and swam about by herself. 'It is a good thing to have a woman swim so well,' said one of the men near by. 'Now if any of the children fall into the water she can rescue them.' Just then the woman who could not help herself uttered a scream and fell into the sea. Instantly five men leaped in to rescue her, and spent the rest of the day resuscitating her and enquiring how she was, leaving the swimmer to dive by herself. This teaches that nothing succeeds like distress."

On the 'Gyptian Railway.

FIRST TOURIST—Isn't this lovely? Just think! Pharaoh lived here, and — and Cheops, and — and Moses! It makes your head swim, doesn't it?

Second Tourist—I expect it's the bad air. It hurts my head, too. Is that the Nile over there?

"Mercy! I suppose so. Isn't it dirty? It doesn't seem as if Cleopatra could have rode in her barge to meet Marc Antony down that horrid stream, does it!"

"No, it doesn't. But that was a long time ago, wasn't it?"

"I believe so. I've seen the play, but I don't remember just when it was."

"See that crocodile basking in the sun!"

"Is he basking? Oh, Maud, that reminds me. How are you going to have your new basque trimmed?"

"Mercy, there's the Sphinx!"

"What's the Sphinx?"

"Why, it's a thing that asked you riddles, you know. Dear me, I'm not sure whether that's the Sphinx or one of the Pyramids. Just look at all those children! They must be going in for swimming."

"No, dear, it's the effect of the mild climate."

"Look there! That must be the desert. But I can't see any caravans. Perhaps it isn't a desert. Perhaps it's a mirage."

"What's a mirage, dear?"

"Oh, it's something they see in deserts. Everything is upside down, you know."

"Isn't that awful? Oh, see that handsome native? What a picture! He must be a sheikh at least. What's he doing?"

"He's playing on the concertina and passing his hat."

"What a shame! Isn't it nice to travel on a railroad where they don't have any smoke or cinders?"

"Yes, and do you notice what a balmy odor comes in at the window?"

"Yes. Isn't it fragrant? So spicy. Can't you smell the cloves? Ah-a-a, I like to breathe it in."

"So do I. I'll ask the conductor what it is. There he is. Conductor, please!"

The conductor—Yes, ma'am?

"Conductor, where does that spicy smell come from?"

"From the locomotive, ma'am. We use nothing but mummies for fuel on this line, ma'am."

One of Tom Reed's Retorts.

"No matter what you may say," declared Representative Babcock of Wisconsin to Chairman Payne of the Ways and Means Committee when discussing the Babcock proposition to put all steel products on the free list, "I am right, and I know it, and when a man is right he is in the majority." "Just so," replied Payne, "but you remember that Tom Reed used to say, 'God and one make a majority, but many a martyr has been burned at the stake while the votes were being counted.'"

The Real Reason.

A visitor to Dublin refused the services of a driver because of his ragged clothing. "Ah, sur," replied the Jarvie's friend, "you must excuse him, sur; he can't help it."

"Why can't he help it? Why does his wife not mend his clothes for him?" "Ah, your honor, he has no wife."

"Then why doesn't he get another coat?" "He can't, sur, I assure you he can't."

"Why can't he?" "Well, sur, it has been tried once or twice, but it can't be done. He is so very ticklesome that divil a [illegible] in Dublin dare lay a finger on him."

Interesting Items.

Mount Sir Donald, in the Canadian Rockies, which rises to the height of 10,790 feet, has just been conquered for the first time by the foot of woman. Mrs. Berens, the successful climber, is a young Englishwoman hailing from Kent. While at Glacier, on the Canadian Pacific Railway, on her honeymoon trip round the world, she heard that very few men and no woman had ever set foot on the summit of Sir Donald. So she resolved to make the ascent, and was all the more anxious to do so as she heard that a Philadelphia lady had expressed her intention of being the first up. Mrs. Berens successfully accomplished the climb, though she had several very narrow escapes.

The other day, when the jury in a murder trial in the Louisville courts had retired to their room, the foreman said: "Gentlemen, this is a serious case we have to decide. A man's life may be forfeited by our decision. How many Christians are among us?" Nine men raised their hands. "Will one of you pray?" asked the foreman. One of the oldest jurors said he would do his best. All knelt, and a most earnest and impressive prayer was offered. Balloting was then begun. Several jurors were in favor of a life sentence, and others for terms as short as eight years. The jury finally agreed on eighteen years.

John Dillon's outbreak in the House of Commons the other day, when he called Joseph Chamberlain a "damned liar," reminds one of the speech of Mr. Martin, a member for Galway, in 1780, which absolutely defies reproduction. He denounced a fellow-member in language of unprintable disgust, and could not resist the temptation of applying his words also to the member's sister, who sat in the gallery of the House of Commons at the time. "These Ponsonby's," he burst out, "are the curse of my country. They are ——, personally and politically, from that toothless old hag who is now grinning in the gallery, to the white-livered scoundrel who is now shivering on the floor."

A most interesting light is thrown on the approaches toward civilization made by the people who dwelt in caverns in France during the stone age by the discovery of a great number of drawings of animals on the walls of an ancient cave at Combarelles, in South-western France. Many of the drawings, which represent, with surprising skill, reindeer, mammoths and other animals now extinct in Southern and Western Europe, have become covered in the course of time with thick layers of stalagmite. Among the most interesting pictures are some which represent horselike animals belonging to two different species, and some of these animals have halters and other attachments, plainly showing that they had been subjected to the service of man.

It was only a short time ago that the table telephone became an adjunct of Chicago restaurants where business and professional men spend a few necessary moments away from the busy affairs of the day. Now comes another development in the telephone service, which promises to become a universal and indispensable feature of railway trains. The Chicago and North-western Railway recently equipped a new train, known as the "Overland Limited," for service between that city and the Pacific Coast. Amongst its features is a telephone, installed in the observation car, from which connection can be made with any telephone system along the route. A special wire of the local telephone company is dropped over the roof of the car and run through an opening to the instrument in the car, and by means of a "monkey," or wall jacket, connection is made. The passenger desiring to telephone to any part of the city or communicate with a long-distance point is thus enabled to do so, without leaving the cars, while the train stops at a station.

She Got the Potatoes.

The man who forgets the obligations in the way of shopping imposed upon him by the women of his family when he leaves the house is not rare enough to excite curiosity, but the woman with sufficient tact and wit to checkmate this loss of memory is. One such lives in Pennsylvania. The Philadelphia "Record" says that she had labored for several days to impress upon her husband the necessity of sending home a bag of potatoes.

At last, when all her persuasions and injunctions had failed, she surprised him one morning by handing him a sealed letter, and asking him with great seriousness not to open it until he reached his place of business. All the way down town he thought of the strange request, and he no sooner entered his office than he tore open the letter. This is what he read:

"Dear John—For some time past I have thought long and earnestly on what I have to say to you, and I have decided that this is the best method to communicate it. I have hesitated several times about writing to you in this way, but I find that I cannot conceal my thoughts longer. I must and will tell you all."

Here John's hair began to rise, but he heroically turned over the page and read on: "The potatoes have been out for a week. Please send home a bag. I thought by this method you would not be likely to forget."

The potatoes went up to the house that morning.

Farmer Hornbeak—Yaas. He's too gol-yummed slow to make a successful pall-bearer.—"Judge."

"Is your husband a good provider?" asked the sympathetic visitor. "Indeed he is, mum. He got me three new places to wash last week."—"Youth's Companion."

Cecil Rhodes.

Great a figure as Cecil Rhodes was in the public eye, it may be doubted whether many people have a clear idea as to the steps by which his career was built up. That he went to South Africa for his health and returned to England to take his Oxford degree; that he made a great fortune—though smaller than that of some American multi-millionaires—out of diamonds, in part by means of an amalgamation of interests; that he "acquired" Rhodesia, became Premier of Cape Colony, came to his political downfall through the Jameson Raid, and was shut up in Kimberley; these are the main facts of his career which are well known. But main facts do not invariably supply the key to the motives and purposes of a man's life, and the ideas which filled Cecil Rhodes' mind and governed his actions have had a profound influence upon the development of a country in which we in Canada have within the past three years been forced to take a deep interest.

The question of motive may be glanced at first. The extended biography which The Times published notes the remarkably successful start which Mr. Rhodes made in South Africa, when, starting as a lad of eighteen he in a year or two became a rich man. The Times says:—

"His interest in the country in which he had enjoyed two years of such strangely fortunate experience was by this time keenly stirred, and before returning to Oxford he made a journey into the north, which is of interest, as having first suggested to him the great capabilities for British development of the country lying to the north of the Orange and Vaal Rivers. His trip took him as far north as Mafeking; thence to Pretoria, Murchison, Middleburg and back through the Transvaal to Kimberley. It was made in an ox waggon, at a time when the country was little known, and there were no means of communication. It occupied eight months. The rate of progression of an ox waggon is not more than from fifteen to twenty miles a day. The trip represented a walking tour of eight months through the wide-spreading solitudes of rolling veldt which filled those regions of central Africa.

"In 1872 the Boers had only been established some twenty years in the Transvaal. They were a purely pastoral, hunting, and fighting people, with a strong religious strain, deserving of respect for the sturdy independence and devotion to their own ideals which characterized them, but rude in their customs and primitive almost to the point of barbarism in their habits of life and thought. They were very frugal, very poor, without the conception of a possible development for their country than that represented by the increase of flocks and herds upon the land. Living generally in isolation upon the vast extents of grazing ground best suited to the multiplication of this form of wealth, they were wholly lacking in the intellectual stimulus which results from the interchange of opinion in the urban centres of population. Their political organization was of the simplest, amounting to little more than a patriarchal form of despotism, tempered by the individual liberty almost necessarily enjoyed during the greater part of his existence by the hunter and the herdsman on the plains. Each father of a family made for himself the laws of daily life. The rifle and the stock-whip hung side by side above every hearth. The one serious danger by which the State was threatened came from unnumbered hordes of hostile natives, who hung upon the uncertain limits of white occupation, with perpetual menace of massacre and desolation. The only bonds which drew the scattered homesteads into community were bonds of common faith and self-defence. Political unity could hardly be said to exist among a people who were unwilling to submit to taxation for common purposes. There is no reason for surprise if to a young Englishman already conversant with the methods of a developed civilization the Transvaal of that day presented the aspect rather of a rough new settlement in flux than of any fixed political organization having claim to the dignity of a nation.

"Mr. Rhodes' acquaintance with the agricultural possibilities of the South African soil in Natal, and the practical demonstration that he had received of its mineral wealth at Kimberley, combined with his personal experience of the hygienic properties of the climate to render him more appreciative than the ordinary lad of nineteen of the value of the apparently limitless area suitable to white settlement, of which his solitary trip took him over a small portion. Two years spent far from home produced on him an effect not unknown to travellers of a riper age. The latent patriotism which we all believe ourselves to share with our fellow-taxpayers had grown into a conscious sentiment. England had become a thing to love. During that eight months' silent tramp across the veldt the foundation appears to have been laid of the policy to which Mr. Rhodes' career was afterwards devoted. He has described in intimate conversation the persistence with which the thought accompanied him day by day, that the fine country through which he moved should in the future be thronged with a British population, and that no power but Great Britain should be allowed to dominate in South Africa. He saw enough to convince him of the great value of the unclaimed northern territory, and made up his mind that it must be British. Asked once in later life whether he had at that time conceived any definite scheme for bringing the country under British influence, he answered honestly in the negative. 'No,' he said, 'I only just felt each day as I looked down at the earth and up at the sky that it ought to belong to England.'"

Once upon a time Mayor Low was travelling through Germany with a party of friends. Being an excellent German linguist, he was the spokesman for the company. Upon one occasion he and his friends visited a beer garden, and after seating themselves, preparatory to having some refreshments, the pleasant duty of ordering the same fell upon Mr. Low, as usual. For once, however, he hesitated, his memory seeming to desert him. Finally after vain attempts to recall the missing word, he turned to his waiting friends, appealingly, saying:

"You will have to help me out, for I cannot for the life of me remember the German word for beer."—New York Times.

TE DEMU IN MONTREAL CHURCHES.

Montreal June 5.—In all the Catholic churches of the diocese a solemn Tr Deum will be sung on Sunday next, in thanksgiving, for the cessation of the war in South Africa and the declaration of peace.

MARTIN HAD HALLUCINATIONS.

Montreal, June 5.—Alfred T. Martin, the mining engineer, who was found dead alongside the railway track near Fernie, B.C., was well known in Montreal where he spent some months of last year in the Protestant Hospital for the Insane at Verdun. He evidently came of a good family, and was a gentleman in his conduct and language. He came to this city about eighteen months ago, and told Chief Detective Carpenter a long story of oppression and robbery, which had, he alleged, been committed at Buckingham. He told how certain parties who had been watching him for some time, had attacked him, struck him on the head with some blunt instrument, and stolen all the money and papers he had in his possession, including some important documents relating to an estate at Rome. He was very anxious to have the papers

SWEDEN LOSES A ROYAL JEWEL.

Stockholm, June 5.—A sensation has been created in court circles by the discovery that one of the crown jewels is missing from the Royal Treasury.

It is a beautiful ruby of 255 carats, and is an historic gem that formed part of the royal regalia. It was originally acquired by Queen Christina in 1648, but owing to the vicissitudes of royal fortune it was in pawn for years at Amsterdam.

It was redeemed in 1805, since which time it has been kept in the treasury. There is no suspicion as to how or when the jewel disappeared, but the police of all European capitals have been warned to be on the alert.

FRANCE THANKS CANADA.

Ottawa, June 5.—Hon. Mr. Fielding has received acknowledgement from M. Decrais, French Minister for the Colonies, of the $25,000 voted for the Martinique sufferers. He states that the French people were deeply touched by the gift, and coming from a country like Canada, it would go deep to the heart of every Frenchman.

SIR DANIEL COOPER DEAD.

London, June 5.—Sir Daniel Cooper, formerly acting Agent General for New South Wales in England, is dead.

Sir Daniel Cooper was born in Lancashire in 1821. He was for some years a merchant in Sydney, N.S.W., and was elected to the Provincial Legislature in 1848. He was elected speaker under the new constitution in 1856. He was created a baronet in 1863.

ONLY OF HISTORIC INTEREST.

London, June 5.—Thomas Gibson Bowles (Conservative), in the House of Commons today renewed the attempt to obtain information as to whether Great Britain gave the United States any assurances prior to the war with Spain. The Government leader, A. J. Balfour, deprecated a recurrence to a subject, regarding which he declared a good many questions had already been put with nothing but good results. That matter was now of only historic interest, and Mr. Balfour thought it better if it be allowed to rest.

P. Paris, June 5.—It is learned that Col Arthur Lynch has decided to go to London next week. He will go straight to the House of Commons, attempt to take his seat there, and abide by the consequences.

Teacher—Johnny, can you tell me how iron was first discovered?

Johnny—Yes, sir.

"Well! Just tell the class what your information is on that point."

No Comparison

A sense of proportion is an excellent thing, and an old soldier who writes to The Globe upon the subject of the recent defeat of Lord Methuen makes a very good point as to some of the comments passed by certain newspapers. He signs himself as "one who saw this brave brigade from start to finish on October 25, 1854," and writes as follows:—

"I read the account of the Boer charge on General Methuen's rear-guard taken from The Standard newspaper, London, and published in The Globe of the 18th. The Standard compares the ride of the Boers with the charge of the Light Brigade at Balaclava. The editor of The Standard must know well there is no comparison. General Methuen's column or field force of all ranks was only about 700 or so. The Light Brigade, with the brave Cardigan leading, went right through the centre of thirty thousand Russians, with sixty guns, in a commanding position, blazing away on the brigade as they were advancing down to the guns, where they had to put the Russian gunners out of the way. They tried to get away the guns, but found it impossible. Every man had to fight for his life back through cavalry and artillery, as they all closed in on them with the intention to capture or kill what was left on the retreat. The brave Cardigan, who obeyed his chief's order to advance and take the guns, knowing well at the time it was impossible, was about the last to return. From the time the brigade started until what was left returned—about 180 when the roll was called after the return—twenty minutes would cover the time. Bear this in mind: it was every man for himself to fight his way back, as they were all broken up in the rush at the guns by the Russian artillery firing on the whole, Russian and British, at the same time. Every volley carried off as many Russians as British. This statement is correct about the Russians firing on their own men. It was a surprise to see any return from the dreadful artillery fire they got from the Russians."

Brave, dashing and skilful Delarey's charge certainly was; it was exactly such a rush as many times before in the history of war has carried cavalry to victory. To persons accustomed to think of the Boers as unable to attack, accustomed also to think of the day of cavalry as over, it must be a surprise to read of such a charge. But the Boers have been moulded by two years of warfare into excellent soldiers, able to attack as well as to defend, and the loose formations of modern war offer peculiarly good opportunities to good cavalry trained to shoot from the saddle. To compare such a charge to the Balaclava charge, or to Von Bredow's "death-ride" at Vionville, when a few German squadrons shook the whole French line of battle and saved their overmatched infantry, is absurd, as my old soldier correspondent convincingly points out.

In this connection a personal reference to Lord Methuen may be introduced, showing him in a light possibly unfamiliar to the majority of newspaper readers. Lord Methuen, as is indicated in the paragraph which is quoted, is a man of a deeply devotional turn of mind. The quotation is from The Daily Graphic, and is as follows:—

"A largely attended public meeting was held last evening at Corsham (near Bath, in England)—the home of Lord Methuen—for the purpose of passing a resolution to be sent to the wounded General, expressing his fellow-townsmen's high admiration for his distinguished services to the country during the South African campaign, and their sincere sympathy with him in being wounded. The Rev. J. D. Dunlap, vicar of Corsham, presided. The following telegram was sent:—

"'Dunlap, Corsham. To Lord Methuen, Klerksdorp: Enthusiastic public meeting. Resolution sincere sympathy and speedy recovery. Shall sing your hymn Sunday.'

"Mr. Dunlap explained that the hymn referred to was 'Lead, Kindly Light,' Lord Methuen's favorite hymn, which he promised his Lordship should be sung in church the first Sunday in every month. He had received a letter from the General speaking of the comfort it gave him to know that he was remembered on the first Sunday in the month, and also in their prayers. The resolution was carried by acclamation, and it was also agreed to telegraph to Lady Methuen informing her of the terms of their message to her husband."

Some dispute has arisen as to Lord Methuen's nationality. It cannot be appraised with absolute accuracy; the family was originally Scotch, it is said, from Perthshire, and has for many years been settled in England, living in Wiltshire, at Corsham. Lord Methuen's grandfather was elevated to the Peerage in 1838; prior to that he had for many years been M.P. for his county. It may be added that Lord Methuen pronounces his name in three syllables, with the accent on the first.

The Culture of Celery.

"Celery Culture" is the title of another of the popular publications of the United States Department of Agriculture now in press, known as Farmers' Bulletins. "Little more than twenty-five years ago," says the bulletin, "the celery crop, which now forms such an important factor in market-gardening interests, was cultivated by few growers only. Celery was to be found on the menu of a few of the leading hotels, but not in many homes. Its use has spread until at present, with the output reckoned by the carloads, it is classed as a wholesome and palatable addition to the fare of all classes. All of the cultivated varieties now in use," continues Mr. W. R. Beattie, the author of the bulletin, "have been derived from the wild celery, a native of the marshes of southern England. This wild celery was for a long time considered poisonous, which was a natural supposition, as it belongs to the same family as poison hemlock." Mr. Beattie, after reviewing the value of celery from a commercial standpoint, notes the nutrition contained in the plant, which, by the way, is not so very great, but it adds a most palatable addition to the table in the winter season, when a great quantity of meat is eaten and few vegetables. It is generally considered as one of the most wholesome of vegetables.

Curious Bits of News.

All princes are not drones. Duke Karl Theodor of Bavaria recently performed his four-thousandth operation for cataract at his clinic in Munich. His wife acted as his assistant.

The English stockholders in Marconi's wireless telegraph company value the inventor's life so highly at this critical period of his experimentation that they have had him insured for $750,000.

The sale of oleomargarine in the United States is increasing rapidly, and one of the causes of the growing sales is said to be the large amount of free advertising that it has received from the debates in Congress and the State legislatures and the newspapers, in consequence of the efforts made to suppress it.

A much-valued distinction has been conferred upon the proprietors of a large cigar factory at Havana. The firm have received an order from England to furnish the cigars for the royal banquet which is to be held after the coronation of King Edward. The order includes three sizes and amounts to several thousand cigars. A unique feature is that there is no stipulation whatever as to the price, this matter being left entirely to the judgment of the manufacturers.

Court etiquette and religious scruples have had an amusing tussle at The Hague. The trouble arose when the daughters of Dr. Kuyper, the Premier, were invited to the first court ball of the season. Low-necked dresses were commanded, but the Misses Kuyper decided that decollete dresses were inconsistent with their religious principles. They applied for a dispensation, but received a curt reply from the mistress of the ceremonies, who declared that time-honored customs of the Dutch court must be adhered to. Dr. Kuyper made direct representations on the subject to Queen Wilhelmina, with the result that a compromise was arranged. The Misses Kuyper will stay away from the ball, but will take tea with their sovereign in high-necked dresses the same afternoon.

The "Tailor and Cutter," which has been accustomed to describe Joseph Chamberlain as the pink of fashion, has this to say of the Colonial Secretary in a recent issue: "We are sorry to note that Mr. Chamberlain is developing quite a stoop, and fear he is losing some of his old-time smartness. It is true that his monocle is still in its old place, but we miss the familiar orchid, and, as we have examined his garments, we could not but feel that conservatism was sadly apparent, for there was much in them that was not up to date." Mr. Chamberlain's coat lapels, says the "Tailor and Cutter," are plain, heavy, and disfigured by a long, gaping breast-pocket, like some ugly wound, calling for assistance. The washing vest of Mr. Chamberlain, the paper adds, was quite out of harmony with his coat, while his trousers were wide and unshapely.

The Millionaire and the Pie.

One time a millionaire found himself at nightfall in a small town that was ministered to by no railroad. And he had in his pocket a one-hundred-dollar bill and in his stomach a sense of hunger.

And he went to the only store in the town to buy food for himself. Now the keeper of the store was a man of much caution and narrow mind.

"I am as hungry as my stomach knows how to be," said the millionaire affably. "Sell me that veal pie."

As he spoke he laid down the hundred-dollar bill.

The cautious storekeeper picked it up and looked at it with doubt mingled with distrust and accompanied with dubiety. Then he said: "My veal pie is worth ten cents to me, but I never heard of such a bill as that. Give me one with another picture on it, for this one is not worth a veal pie, I am sure."

And the millionaire said:

"My friend, it so happens that this evening finds me with no other picture bills upon my person nor yet any coin. The bill is surely worth a hundred of the ordinary, every-day kind. But that is neither here nor there."

But the storekeeper shook his head sourly.

"Nothing will recompense me for the veal pie but money that I can understand. There may be hundred-dollar bills, but I never saw one before. I know the worth of my veal pie, and if you have ten cents you can eat it, but if you haven't you can't."

"But I have not ten cents," said the millionaire; "so let us put it on another basis. Give me the veal pie out of charity, for my stomach is not used to being put off."

"Now we're on familiar ground," said the storekeeper, as he sliced a piece of cheese and ate it; "I have seen beggars many times, and as I never saw one so well dressed as you are I doubt you. You cannot be a beggar. Your clothes betray you, and even if you were one I would not help you as I do not believe in encouraging mendicancy."

"You are difficult beyond a doubt," said the millionaire, raising his eyebrows and shaking his head. "I have it. Let me work for the veal pie. I am strong. Have you no boxes that need unpacking, no goods that need to be shelved?"

Said the storekeeper, looking at the clock: "I have never insulted the frame that the Lord gave me by calling in others to do that which I can do myself. My boxes are unpacked and my goods are shelved. If you have ten cents you can take the veal pie, but be quick, for it is the hour of closing."

Then the millionaire felt in his vest pockets and found a counterfeit dime which he had received in change the day before. And rendered desperate by his hunger he gave the storekeeper the dime and received in exchange the veal pie. For to the near-sighted storekeeper the coin looked good.

As for the millionaire, he ate the pie like a shipwrecked mariner. And the near-sighted storekeeper dropped the counterfeit into his till with contentment.—Charles Battell Loomis in "Saturday Evening Post."

Local Happenings Picked Up Here and There by the Times.

[TK—The Times requests its readers to contribute items of news to its columns. Anything that is phoned or sent in writing to the office, of a nature suitable for publication, will be received and published.—Ed. Times.]

—Everybody reads The Times.

—The Peterborough Orangemen will go to Lindsay on the 12th.

—Lindsay Oddfellows are planning a big celebration on Dominion Day.

—Lindsay proposes to build a new school at a cost of $14,000.

—The Sons of England have organized a brass band in Port Hope.

—The regular meeting of the Federal Labor Union took place last night.

—The official declaration of the returning officer, places Mr. Anderson's majority at 443.

—Isn't it about time something was being done in regard to celebrating coronation day?

—A new plank sidewalk is being constructed on Macdonell street, between Water and George street.

—There will be a thanksgiving service in All Saints' church tomorrow morning. Special music will be provided and special addresses given.

—The members of Sherwood Forest Camp Woodmen of the World will parade to Divine Service at All Saints' church tomorrow evening at 6.30 o'clock.

—Mr. T. Brightman and Mr. Jno. Welsh have purchased Mr A. N. Bailey's interest in valuable mining property in North Hastings.

—The authorities of St. John's church are determined to put a stop to acts of vandalism. Yesterday a man was arrested, charged with trespassing, and will appear at the police court this morning.

—If you want a nice hammock, at lowest price in town, come to the Times Bookstore. "Best quality of goods and lowest prices" is our motto. A call to compare prices is all we ask.

—June clearing sale of sporting goods now on, at Times Bookstore. Lacrosse sticks, base balls, base ball bats, catching gloves, base ball masks, and in fact everything in sporting goods going at big reductions from regular prices.

—Col. Hughes, of Lindsay, has received the imperial decoration for long service, ordered for colonial officers by Queen Victoria shortly before her death. It is a silver oval surmounted by a gold crown and suspended from a bar and green ribbon.

—Burglars entered Mr. John Mervin's butcher shop, corner of Hunter and Aylmer streets, on Thursday night. Entrance was obtained by removing a pane of glass. The cash register, containing $3 in change was not noticed by the thieves. The safe had been left unlocked, but it contained no cash.

—The attention of The Times has been called to the alleged fact that there are no police court cases in town to deal with on the days of the Olympic excursion. Our informant says he has noticed this for several years, and asks for an explanation. This is easy: The best people being away on the excursion, there is no one left in town to enforce the laws and preserve order. If this explanation won't do you will have to consult Chief Agitator Lech.

—There will be a garrison church parade to St. John's church tomorrow Peace thanksgiving service will be held. The troops will fall in at the drill shed at 4 p.m., and move off punctually at 4.10 p.m. The veterans and cadets corps have been invited to join the parade.

The Band Concert

The first band concert of the summer series took place last night in Victoria Park and was largely attended. A splendid programme of music was furnished.

Our New Story

We have arranged for the production of a splendid new serial story, entitled, "A Girl of the People." The story will begin in a day or two. Watch for the opening chapters.

Girls Wanted.

Three girls wanted at once—A laundry woman, assistant cook and dining room girl. Wages from eight to twenty dollars per month. Apply to Wm. Snowden, Snowden House, Peterborough.

Down the River.

Have you been down the river yet? If not, you should take a trip on the City of Peterborough without delay. The steamer, under Capt. Lane, is in good shape, and no better or more enjoyable outing can be had. The steamer runs her Saturday special afternoon trip today, leaving at 2.15.

A Deserved Promotion

The Times heartily congratulates Mr. W. B. Bamford, who has so ably filled the position of C.P.R. station agent here, on his promotion to Travelling Freight Agent of the Company, with headquarters in Toronto. In Mr. Bamford's departure the town loses a most estimable and useful citizen. It is not known yet who Mr. Bamford's successor will be.

Ponsette—Rackham Nuptials

The Toronto Globe says: "Announcement is made of the marriage at the Church of St. James the Apostle, Montreal, on May 31st, last, of Mr. A. Courtlange Ponsette of the Sovereign Bank, formerly of the Bank of Toronto, Montreal, to Miss Eleanor Rackham, a member of an old Peterborough family. The bridegroom is a son of Mr. A. P. Ponsette K.C., of Peterborough.

An Old Citizen Gone

The death is announced of Mrs. James Girvin, Otonabee, an old and highly esteemed resident of the township. The deceased was a native of the county of Fermanagh, Ireland, and came to Canada at the age of 14, marrying four years later. She leaves nine children to mourn the death of a most devoted mother; viz., Mrs. Andrew Fawcett, Otonabee; Mrs. Samuel Spencer, Peterborough; Mrs. Robert Fields, Minneapolis; Richard, South Dummer; John, Minnesota; William and James, Otonabee; Samuel, Norwood, and Thos. H., Ashburnham. The funeral will take place from the residence of Mrs. Fawcett, lot 26, concession 12, Otonabee this afternoon to the Little Lake cemetery.

Destruction of Property.

A number of depredations have been committed upon the beautiful grounds of St. John's church and these offences have been increased of late. A crowd of hoodlums gather frequently about noon in the shed and use objectionable practises to carry out their objectionable intentions. Both children and grown up persons have been breaking the shrubs and otherwise damaging the trees. This has led to the arrest of one offender who will come before Magistrate Dumble this morning. Other arrests will follow if these offences continue.

The officers of the church desire the public to enjoy the grounds and that they should be improved and preserved as they rank among the most beautiful

A BIG EARNER

Good Food Pays Better than any Other Investment

Money put into properly selected food that brings health and maintains it is better invested than any other way.

A man who had spent hundreds of dollars in medicines to try and get well explains that the past year he has used 156 packages of Grape-Nuts. He says, "Several years ago I had two severe shocks of paralysis, bringing on general nervous debility. I was not able to do work of any kind for several years.

I doctored hundreds of dollars away. About a year ago I began using Grape-Nuts Breakfast Food and have so steadily gained in strength and health that since last July I have worked every day at collecting for a large company, walking several miles a day and have not enjoyed better health for over 20 years than I do now. I am able to use all kinds of food but do not eat much besides Grape-Nuts and Postum Food Coffee." W. F. Albro, 227 Chestnut St., Scranton, Pa.

Don't overlook the recipe book in each package of Grape-Nuts.

WEDDING BELLS.

A very pleasant event took place at the home of Mrs. H. G. Gurney, 273 Dublin street, town, on Tuesday evening, June 3rd, when her youngest sister, Miss Agnes Y. Sweet, was united in marriage to Mr. James S. Jackson, of town. At seven o'clock the groom, accompanied by his cousin, Mr. Dolf Brundage, of Trenton, awaited the bride in the parlor under an arch of evergreens and flowers. The bride entered on the arm of her brother, Mr. M. Sweet, of Springville, attended by Miss Winnie Hankeson, of town, little Allen Sharp acting as ring bearer. The bride was very prettily attired in a gown of white silk, with veil and orange blossoms. The bridesmaid was very becomingly gowned in white organdie. Rev. Mr. Bistow, of Murray street Baptist church, performed the ceremony, after which about forty persons sat down to supper, the usual toasts were given, and a very pleasant evening spent. The many beautiful and useful presents received by the bride testify to the high esteem in which the young couple are held. Mr. and Mrs. Jackson will take up their residence at 198 Reid street, town, and will be at home on June 13.

THE NEW WOMAN.

Miss Alice Cohn, writes from 474 Eleventh Street, Brooklyn, N. Y., as follows:

"Having had poor health for a great many months and now having it restored makes me feel very grateful to Peruna. I suffered a great deal during my monthly periods, had severe pains, and was generally depressed, but can truthfully say that a few bottles of Peruna has removed all pain and made a new woman of me.—MISS ALICE COHN.

The coming of what is known as the "new woman" in our country is not greeted by everyone as if she were a great blessing. But there is another new woman whom everybody is glad to see. Every day some invalid woman is exclaiming, "I have been made a new woman by Dr. Hartman's home treatment." It is only necessary to send name, address, symptoms, duration of sickness and treatment already received to Dr. Hartman, Columbus, O., and directions for one month's treatment will be promptly forwarded. The medicines can be obtained at the nearest drug store.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

London View of the Proposal to Increase the Canadian Militia

Boer System Ideal in Effectiveness for Defence of the Colonies

Special to The Times.

Ottawa June 9 — Whether or not the Boer system is destined to revolutionize European war, says the London Chronicle, there can be no question of its ideal effectiveness for colonial defence. That is at least what Canada believes, and she has lost no time in acting upon the conviction. The measure submitted by Mr. Borden to the Dominion Parliament at Ottawa proposes to raise the militia in that part of the Empire to a hundred thousand rifles. This means that the practical strength of the force will be increased nearly threefold at a stroke and the step is taken in circumstances which make it one of the most significant developments in the military expression of the imperial idea. Where Ottawa leads, Melbourne, we may be confident, will not be slow to follow, and if the Canadian model were imitated with any degree of closeness, the years a far larger and more systematically trained fighting reserve than eally trained fighting reserve than that possessed by the mother country itself. To appreciate the policy of the Dominion two things must be remembered. In the first place, this scheme, as may be usefully noted by retrograde Radicalism at home, is the work of a Liberal Cabinet, and represents the robust patriotism of the whole Canadian people. In the next place, it is remarkable that the minister for defence at Ottawa brought forward his proposals almost simultaneously with the announcement that Lord Dundonald had been appointed to the command of the Canadian militia. That nomination was in itself of the first interest and importance. No officer has shown a more alert and complete insight into the lessons of the war than the leader of the mounted brigade in Natal. Since he led the advance into Ladysmith, Lord Dundonald has shown, in a series of most lucid and valuable speeches, that he has a powerful and seasoned faith in the imperial future of citizen soldiership of organized on right lines.

With vast talent and equal eccentricity, his ancestor, better known by his earlier title of Admiral Lord Cochrane, was believed by many close judges to have been inferior in naval genius to Nelson alone. His descendant has revealed so many reminiscent traits of original mind and enterprising instinct as to suggest that should opportunity offer, his ability in the field is not unlikely to prove worthy of the fame afloat won by the gifted sailor whose name he bears.

In any case Dr. Borden's bill will provide the re-organiser of the militia in the Dominion with sufficient material to work upon. At present there is a broad distinction between the nominal and the actual liability for defence purposes of the king's subjects in North America. By the act of 1886 all the male subjects in Canada between the ages of eighteen and sixty are liable to be called upon in case of emergency. As a matter of fact, however, only about thirty-five thousand men, have hitherto been trained annually, and their instruction has been conducted more or less upon the traditional lines of old-world practice. A "peace effective," so to speak, of a hundred thousand men, directly organized in the light of the experience gained in the South African war, and including a very large mounted element—the term "militia" being inclusive for Canadian purposes—this will be an incomparably more striking matter.

The Dominion, in short, is about to turn its citizen force into an army in earnest. Its enormous space of unfilled territory will afford Lord Dundonald as much liberty for the practice of extended tactics upon the most ambitious scale as any part of the world could provide and the vista of possibility opened up before him is obviously one of the most attractive imaginable to any keen professional intelligence. From the assault at Paardeberg to the hero's stand of the little outpost in the recent repulse of Delarey, the Canadians have proved that they are inspired by the spirit of splendid soldiership, and possess for all military purposes the very root of the matter in them. How should it be otherwise? They have been matured and breeded in one of the most vigorous climates of the globe, amid scenes as inspiring as any on the face of nature. They are sprung from the two great fighting races, England and France, whose blended qualities should produce a breed combining fire and staying power in a unique measure of admirable union. And what we have, of course, to look to, in addition, is the fact that the reorganised Canadian militia is evidently intended to form a training machine, passing men through its ranks who will build up a reserve practically including the great majority of the male population. If such a system were adopted by the colonies in general and the mother country in particular, it is no exaggeration to say that the problem of Imperial defence would be solved. Every part of the King's dominions would be its own security, and the total number of men who had received a modern education in the use of their rifles and their wits, would form an inexhaustible reservoir of fighting material for the common purpose of Imperial policy. It need only be pointed out, for instance, that on the ratio of military to population, contemplated in the new Canadian measure, the mother country would be training annually some eight hundred thousand men, apart from the regular army.

The coronation conference between Mr. Chamberlain and the Colonial premiers will carry this question further, and it is evident that the Canadian precedent must form something like a decisive point of departure for ultimate developments, such as, in one form or another, must become universal throughout the empire.

ALL THE BOERS SAY THEY REJOICE AND SING GOD SAVE THE KING

Satisfactory Surrenders--Lore Kitchener Says 440 Burgers Have Laid Down Their Arms Around Middleburg

Special to The Times.

Cape Town, June 9.—The surrender of over 1,500 Boers has already been reported, covering various points. Commandant Fouche brought his command into Cradock, Cape Colony, consisting of 36 Free Staters and 219 rebels. Fouche is ill.

Commandant Conroy's men, on hearing that peace had been concluded, threw their hats into the air, cheered for King Edward, and sang "God Save the King."

These incidents dissipate the fear expressed that the Cape Colony commands would refuse to accede to the peace terms

Gen. Christian De Wet is personally superintending the surrenders of the Boers in the Vredefort, Orange River Colony district.

General Schalkburger (former acting President of the Transvaal), who is the guest of the Governor of Natal, Colonel Sir Henry Edward McCallum, at Pietermaritzburg, in an address to the burghers in the concentration camp, asked them to make the best of the situation and to forget and forgive the past. He pointed out the uselessness and hopelessness of continuing the struggle, urged the Boers to accept and act in accordance with the terms of surrender, which he intended to uphold. He desired them to work for the good of South Africa.

London, June, 9.—Lord Kitchener in a despatch from Pretoria, dated yesterday, announced that the British Commissioners in the various districts report that 1,154 Boers laid down their arms on Thursday. Afterwards the Commissioners addressed the Boers, who gave three hearty cheers for King Edward. The best possible relations exist between the Boers and the British, and there has been no hitch in the proceedings anywhere.

Vredefort Road, Orange River Colony June 7.—General Christian De Wet, addressing the inmates of the concentration camp here, explained the circumstances leading to the termination of hostilities, and urged the burghers to do their utmost to show Great Britain what good colonists the Boers can make. The speech made a favorable impression.

General De Wet's wife will rejoin the General here to-day.

Amsterdam, June 9.—It is reported here that Mr. Kruger has declined the facilities offered by Great Britain for his return to South Africa, but has accepted Queen Wilhelmina's proffer of a Dutch vessel to convey him to South Africa when he decides to return there.

London, June 9.—Lord Kitchener, in a despatch from Pretoria, dated to-day, announces that the Progress in the surrender of Boers is entirely satisfactory. Four hundred and forty burghers have laid down their arms at Middleburg, Transvaal. They brought in a pom-pom complete with ammunition and indicated the hiding places of a howitzer and a Maxium gun.

Two hundred and eighty-nine Boers have surrendered their arms at Standerton, Transvaal, and Lord Kitchener confirms the report that 255 Boers, of whom 219 were rebels, surrendered at Cradock, Cape Colony.

Many more surrenders are expected to-day. All the Boers who surrendered in Cape Colony expressed themselves as being rejoiced at the fact that peace had been arranged.

WHALEBACK VESSEL CUT IN TWO AND NINE MEN PERISH IN THEIR BUNKS

Special to The Times.

Duluth, Minn. June 9.—The whaleback steamer Thomas Wilson, Capt. Cameron, master, was cut almost in two by the steamer George G. Hadley, Capt. Fitzgerald, master a half mile south of the Duluth Canal to-day, and nine men, mostly of the night crew, who could not get out of their bunks before the vessel sank, perished.

The victims are: Aaron Trips, cook;—Frank, second cook, Superior James McDougall, oiler, West Superior; James M. Frazer, oiler, Manitoulin Island; Joseph McGraw, wheelsman, Sault Ste. Marie, Mich.; John Campbell, lookout, Greenleaf, Mich.; John Carey, deckhand, St. Catharines, Ont; Thomas Jones, deckhand; William Roebuck, fireman, Port Hampton.

The Wilson was coming toward the canal, and the Hadley going out, both loaded.

Just before reaching the canal, and, when about opposite the Wilson, the Hadley was given orders bya tug to go to Superior. Immediately, she sheered off for the Superior entry, and crashed directly into the Wilson.

The Wilson went down so quickly that the next instant after the collision her crew could be seen throwing off their clothing and jumping into the water.

In the interval before she sank, she seemed to be supported entirely by the Hadley's prow which was sticking through her plates.

The plunge released the Hadley, and the latter swung back with a tremendous jerk. As the whaleback went beneath the water, she spouted like a submarine explosion from the compression of air in her.

The life-saving crew picked up the men in the water.

The Wilson was loaded with ore and belongs to the Pittsburg Steamship Line, the fleet of the United States Steel Company. The Hadley carried coal.

Items of News

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., June 9.—The four coal and iron policemen, charged with the shooting of the boy Charles W. McCann at the Stanton Colliery on Thursday night, were given a preliminary hearing to-day, and were committed to jail for a further hearing, when the result of the boy's injuries shall be definitely known. The only witness was a physician who attended him. He grew worse last night and it is feared cannot recover.

TEN MINES CLOSED.

Roanoke, Va., June 9.—According to advices received by the Norfolk and Western Railway, which controls the output of the Pocahontas coal fields, ten mines closed down in that district to-day. It is estimated about 500 men are out. Other mines are crippled, and are working with reduced forces. The Tug River field miners on the West Virginia side have struck. Several thousand men are employed there. The Norfolk and Western officials do not consider the strike in their territory serious. No reports of violence among the strikers have come in. "Mother Jones," the strike agitator, is on the ground.

STRIKE NOT OBEYED.

Clarksburg, W. Va., June 9.—The strike order was not obeyed in this region, and all the mines are in full operation. Less than 100 men in the district quit work.

SOFT COAL MEN OUT.

Huntington, W. V., June 9.—Advices from various points along the Norfolk and Western Railroad to-day are to the effect that almost every soft coal mine along the line is tied up, the miners generally obeying the strike order. Something like ten thousand men are out in that field.

MINE BOSS KILLED.

Huntington, W. Va., June 9.—A skirmish between mine officials and strikers is reported at Keystone. The mine boss was killed. No names or particulars are available.

Albuquerque, N. M. June 8.—Dr. C. L Herrick, former president of the New Mexico University, and one of the most eminent geologists in the west, has carefully examined the supposed volcano crater fifteen miles from Gallup. He gave a description of the locality and said:—

"Here there is a fold and fault which is interesting because of the metamorphosis that is going on. From cracks in the sandstone overlying the lignite there is issuing a constant stream of heated air, carbon dioxide, sulphurous oxide and vapor. The solfataric action may be attributed to the slow oxidation of shales in the presence of water. From this point eastward, is a series of cracks that have been filled with iron and lime and serving still further to show that, along this fold and break, water at one time ascended."

Dr. Herrick does not believe there is any possibility of dangerous eruption from this crevice.

There was a burglary last night at Niagara Falls and four men supposed to be the culprits were pursued to Niagara-on-the-Lake where three of them were captured. The fourth man hid himself on the Corona, and crossed the lake to Toronto. In the meantime the Niagara police telephoned to the Toronto detective department, and detectives Black and Forrest went down to meet the steamer when she steamed up to the dock. The gang planks were watched, and the man wanted was caught. He was arraigned before Police Magistrate Kingsford and remanded verbally for a day to await a frontier officer. Inspector Stark received no particulars of the burglary. The prisoner calls himself Scott.

The Burglaries.

A despatch from Niagara Falls says the men entered the residence of Mrs. M. Ferguson and ransacked the place from cellar to garrett, there being no one at home but a servant girl, who heard them and locked herself in her room. She claims they were in the house nearly two hours and cannot say what booty they carried off.

The next place visited was Land's drug store, but Mr. Land awakened with the noise made by a jimmy prying a window open. Mr. Land chased them off. The residence of Mr. J. T. Henderson in that town was entered and a watch and some change was removed from Mr. Henderson's clothes in the bedroom, where he was asleep.

The next place entered was the residence of Town Treasurer Mr. W. J. McMurray, on the river front, where they took from Mr. McMurray's trousers, lying across the foot of his bed, some fifty dollars.

Edwardsville, Ill, June 7 — Early this morning a riot started between striking moulders and non-union men employed by the American Steel and Foundry Company. As a result five men, two negro non-union workers and three white strikers were shot, two of the latter mortally. The names of the injured are not obtainable, as they were hurried away to places of safety by their friends.

The trouble started at five o'clock, when a train load of employees of the steel company who had not struck reached Granite City. As the men were going through a narrow lane to their work in the mills they were threatened by the strikers, and then assailed with stones.

Revolvers were brought into use, and several shots were fired by both parties. Two non-union men, negroes, and three white strikers received wounds. Two of the latter were shot in the back and it is believed they will die as the result of their wounds.

Liverpool, June 7.—The report is fully confirmed that the Cunard Steamship Company has begun the formation of a British shipping combination. The Beaver Line, of which Sir Alfred L. Jones is the head will join forces with the Cunard Line.

Sir Alfred is the most energetic organizer of English shipping. He is the head also of the Elder Dempster Line and the British West Indies.

The Allan Line will support the new combination, which meets with the warm approval of the Colonial Office.

The objects of the scheme are two fold, firstly, to meet the Morgan combination on American ground, and, secondly, to arrange a new and fast service to Canada which will be subsidized largely by both the British and Canadian governments; but nothing will be done regarding the subsidy question until the meeting of the colonial Premiers on the occasion of the coronation.

The leaders of the new scheme say they recognize that the fight for freight will be severe. The British combination will not be hampered so much by Mr. Morgan's control of the American railways as by the fact that the principal freight steamers are in the hands of its opponents.

It is denied that Mr. Morgan offered the Cunards £11,000,000 for the company. The offer did not approach that figure.

A Hamburg correspondent telegraphs that shipping men there believe that the Cunard company will come to a working arrangement with the Union and Castle lines in order to secure a monopoly of the African trade, and that the result will be the establishment of new lines from the United States to Africa.

RUSSIAN POLICE HAVE ODD POLICY

Oranize lectures to Entrap Alleged Conspirator Against the Government

Correspondent Explains How So Many Strikes Started This Year in Czar's Domains

Special to The Times.

Moscow, June 9.—In connection with the assassination of M. Sipliaguine, the Russian minister of the interior, mention has been made of the new workingmen's policy inaugurated by M. Zoubatoff, chief of the secret police of Moscow, with the approval of Chief of Police Trepoff. Authentic information received here shows this policy to be one of the oddest and most revolutionary ever taken by the Russian government.

Last autumn, on the ostensible initiative of workingmen, a number of university professors and teachers began lecturing to audiences of workingmen on the question of labor legislation and various other allies subjects. It soon became apparent that the lectures had been organized by the secret police, whose tools the alleged workingmen's leaders were, and all the lecturers except one ceased their discourses. These lectures served as being introductory to the organization of labor unions, or friendly societies, statutes for several of which have just been confirmed by the ministry of the interior.

POLICEMEN AS MEMBERS.

As characteristic of these statutes is that they permit, as members of the societies, policemen and priests, it is provided that the funds of these organizations may not be used to support strikes. Workingmen's meetings, conducted by police, in temporary tea rooms, were allowed to discuss the eight-hour movement, freedom of organization, liberty of instituting strikes, and other matters hitherto held to be seditious.

The government scored an immediate success. The secret, radical movement was out-trumped. Every man was invited to openly demand what he had preached secretly, and rumors were circulated that the government intended buying factories and turning them over to the workmen. The government's victory attained its maxiumm when 25,000 workingmen peaceably celebrated on February 19, (old style), the anniversary of the emancipation of the serfs, in the sacred Kremlin, the police officials carefully selecting the participants and giving tickets, in batches of 100, to regular and secret police and spies. Thereupon the governor general of Moscow, Grand Duke Sergius, received a delegation of workingmen and promised paternal solicitude for their welfare. Celebrations in commemoration of Emancipation day had been strickly forbidden heretofore.

TIRE OF MERE TALK.

So much for the bright side From the beginning disadvantageous features cropped out, and the working people quickly tired of mere talk and demanded results. Early in the year strikes began in numerous factories. These were followed, in some cases, by incendiary fires, while machinery was smashed in Daniloff cotton mills by a mob led, it is asserted, by police agents.

A most extraordinary phase of the situation began late in February. Although the government tried to hush the affair up, the following story has been absolutely authenticated. Rumors in regard to the matter were current in St. Petersburg and they were verified by an investigation made on the ground. A French company operates silk mills here, employing, ordinarily, 6,000 men. One day two pretended workingmen, named Kraslvsky and Jilkin, leading organizers of the lectures and of the friendly societies, demanded admittance at the works, for the purpose of discussing the differences between the company and its employees. Manager Goujon, a French citizen, refused to allow them to enter. The two men, who were in reality police agents, reported to the nearest police again, who demanded that they be admitted, with the same result. Chief of Police Trepoff then called M. Goujon to the telephone and peremptorily ordered that the men be allowed to enter the mills. The manager declared his willingness to comply if Trepoff sent a order. The chief answered that M. Goujon should obey instantly and the written order would bbe forthcoming.

"Very well." replied M. Goujon, 'since you promise it, I will admit themen."

FRENCHMAN IS BANISHED.

Trepoff, thoroughly enraged, then shouted that M. Gonjon would have to leave Moscow within twenty-four hours.

The two agents were finally admitted to the mills, and, after a discussion, demanded that the company pay the employees 40,000 roubles on disputed wage adjustments, the workingmen having charged that inequitable measurements had been made of work completed. M. Goujon refused to accede to this. A factory inspector attached to the finance minister declared that the demands were unfounded, but, nevertheless, the two agents called out 700 weavers, whom Goujon immediately paid and dismissed. Chief Trepoff hired a vacant workshop to lodge the idle men and their families, and gave them money regularly, in order, it is claimed, to make the strike a success. He also sent notice that the mills would be inspected, and threatened that if a single infringment of the regulations was found that M. Goujon would be imprisoned. The sanitary inspectors, however, found nothing amiss. Thereupon M. Trepoff summoned M. Goujon and his associates and threatened to ruin them if they refused compliance with his desires.

"If the demands were legal I would gladly submit," responded M. Goujon, adding that not only would he not take back the 700 persons in question, but would also dismiss 2,000 others employed in the preparatory stages of the work.

MAY CHANGE BRITISH NORTH AMERICA ACT

Premises Are Against Any Reduction of Provincial Representation

IN THE FEDERAL PARLIAMENT

Maritime Statesmen Who are on Their Way To the Coronation Ceremonies

Special to The Times.

Montreal, June 7 — An interesting group at the Windsor to-day was that composed of Hon. G. H. Murray, Premier of Nova Scotia; Hon. L. G. Peters, Premier of Prince Edward Island, and Hon. L. J. Tweedie, Premier of New Brunswick. In conversation with a Star representative they were all very enthusiastic in praising the Governments of their respective countries, but grew reticent when asked if the different Maritime provinces were going to lose the number of the representatives in the Federal House owing to a decrease of population. As Premier Murray remarked, it would be a very serious matter for any government to undertake to decrease the number of the representatives of any provinces. When the British North America Act, calling for representation, was drawn up it was impossible to see all the difficulties that might arise. The Premiers thought that there might be some amendment or change made, rather than any of the provinces should lose a representative. They will sail for England together on board the S.S. Parisian.

WHAT HE SAW AT ST. PIERRE

Capt. McDonald of the Collier Sterleng Reports on His Martinique Visit

Norfolk, Va., June 7 — Capt. McDonald, commanding the United States collier Sterling, reported to-day to Admiral Cotton, commanding the Norfolk Navy Yard, what he saw at Martinique on May 20, when the second eruption of Mont Pelee occurred.

The Sterling, which was the first relief ship to reach the island after the catastrophe, was lying at Fort de France. Capt. McDonald said that on May 20 Mont Pelee began to send up a great column of black smoke, which swiftly spread for miles about. Shortly afterward volcanic dust, closely resembling dry cement, began to fall upon the deck of the collier thirteen miles from the crater. This, although the crew tried to sweep it into the sea as fast as it fell, soon covered the collier's deck four inches deep.

Next came a shower of mud so hot that it burned inflammable matter it touched. This was followed by a rain of hot stones. The collier made ready to go to sea, but soon the stones ceased falling and the volcano became quiet.

Capt. McDonald said he afterward visited St. Pierre. He saw near the St. Pierre bank a man who had apparently been a prosperous business man sitting in a chair in his office. In his hand was his watch, open, as though to take the time of day. Death evidently came without warning, as there was no sign of a struggle and no marks were upon the body.

Capt. McDonald said that when he sailed the people of Fort de France were in momentary expectation of another outburst from the volcano.

MUST HANG ON FRIDAY

Hansen Murderer of Eric Marrotte, Will Get No Reprieve

Montreal, June 9.—Thorvald Hansen the murderer of little Eric Marrotte in Westmount, must expiate his crime upon the scaffold on Friday morning of next week. In spite of all the efforts by his counsel, Mr. Mathieu, the Department of Justice has decided that the law must take its course and news to this effect was received by the authorities to-day.

The news will be received by Hansen with no surprise, for he has given no evidence that he expected or even hoped for a moment that there was any chance for him. Since his conversion to the Roman Catholic faith he has been faithful in his religious duties and those who have come in contact with him say that he is quite prepared for the end and that he will go to the scaffold without a murmur.

It is expected that word will be received from Radcliffe to-morrow announcing that he will be on hand for the execution. The gallows used will be the same upon which Lapiaine met his fate a few months ago.

ONE LANGUAGE ONLY

There Will Be No Conflict Over This in South Africa

London, June 9.—The Pretoria correspondent of the London Times settles the question of the dual language in South Africa. He says the chief concession regarding the language only amounts to granting such reasonable facilities as would be granted anyhow, and does not interfere with the status of English as the sole official language. That is as it should be.

Valuable Advice to Mothers

If your child comes in from play coughing or showing evidences of an approaching attach of Grippe, Sore Throat or sickness of any kind, first thing get out your bottle of Nerviline. Rub the chest and neck with Nerviline, and give internal doses of ten drops of Nerviline in sweetened water every two hours. This will prevent any serious trouble. No liniment or pain reliever equals Polson's Nerviline, which is a necessity in every household. Large bottles cost only 25c.

CAREFUL CALCULATION

THE NORTHWEST PROVINCES

There is an influx of population going on in the Northwest which will have consequences of the first importance. The province of Quebec is a member of confederation, but Quebec has insisted upon a separate nationality which will not be merged in the general population. We need not enlarge upon the political and social and significance of this attitude, but it is the Hon. Mr. Tarte who tells us frankly that this separated people, living under conditions which make for a remarkable fecundity, will, before long, become a majority throughout the Dominion. The prediction would be fulfilled were it not for what is happening just now in the Northwest. There is no longer any doubt about it—the western provinces are being filled up by English-speaking people from the United States and England. In the course of time, these fresh young provinces will become powerful; they will dictate the policy of the country; they will hold the balance of power by reason of numbers and wealth and influence. We have in the Northwest, a considerable number of foreigners who will need some time for assimilation, although ultimately they will speak the English tongue, and become British citizens in texture as well as in name, but the movement from the United States and the Old Country of what might be called ready made citizens—men and women who are ready for all our institutions, who understand the genius of the British constitution—marks a departure which will be fruitful of consequences. This movement is bound to grow; the country will be thickly populated, and we shall find, in time, that permanence will be given to the British idea in our customs, laws and aspirations. We desire all the provinces to grow in wealth and numbers, but we hail this new movement as guaranteeing conditions which have, apparently, been threatened by certain alleged leaders of our French-Canadian friends, who frankly utter their vision of a great country which shall express the French ideal from the Atlantic to the Pacific. It will neither be Quebec nor Ontario which shall dictate the policy or the legislation of this country—it will be the giant provinces in the west whose wealth and numbers shall overshadow the older members of confederation. This movement will be watched with interest.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

John Bull will now proceed to sew up the hole in his pocket.

• • • •

The rumor is revived that the German Emperor may come to the United States next year. The wish is father to the thought in American social circles.

• • • •

The generosity of England in dealing with the Boers will apparently have the effect of making the Boer leaders England's best friends in South Africa.

• • • •

The number of Boer prisoners in British hands has been exaggerated. Counting those in St. Helena, Bermuda, South Africa and elsewhere the total number is officially stated to be 25,565, of whom 763 are under 16, and 1,035 over 60 years of age. Naturally these are heartily glad that the war is over, especially that the exiles will soon be restored to their native land and their families. There is also said to be great rejoicing in the concentration camps among the women and children.

Poor Oom Paul! The sun has set on his glory and there is none so poor as to do him reverence. He cajoled his own people and lied to them and deceived them, and in the hour of danger he ran away with all the money he could lay hands on. He spent $20,000,000 in bribing newspapers and in the propogation of an anti-British sentiment in Europe and America, and though he undoubtedly accomplished something in this particular, for it is always easier to fasten suspicion and distrust than it is to allay hatred; but he has come to the length of his tether at last and he is alone and deserted and his whilom friends are now deriding or making sport of him. His condition is infinitely worse than of ex-President Steen, as the latter stuck to the ship till the very last, and when he could fight no longer he gave up his sword like a brave though beaten man, and he will carry with honor to his grave the respect of his enemies as well as the love of his friends. No wonder poor old Kruger is speechless.

Labor is making bold demands upon capital all over this continent at the present writing. The country is prosperous; trade is brisk; great corporations are making money; labor takes note, and reminds capital that profits are only possible through the co-operation of the workingman, who has found himself compelled to pay from fifteen to twenty per cent more for his necessaries than he was in the habit of doing ten years ago. Labor asks for higher wages, and labor strikes when the demand is refused. And labor strikes with great promptitude, and is not afraid to stay out; and at this moment many important industries have been brought to a standstill through this uncompromising attitude. And the experience is that labor is disposed to be as tyranous as capital, if not more so. Labor societies are officered by men who are not noted for sagacity or a judicial frame of mind. The head orders a strike, often without sufficient thought; the men turn out; there is a dead silence over vast spaces where formerly the wheels of trade and industry hummed pleasantly; there will be suffering and want and probably violence, and in the end, after an enormous waste of money, the men will go back at the old rate. Not always, but this is often the case. And in any case the strike is a savage protest.

Paine's Celery Compound Positively and Permanently Cures

It Puts the System in Perfect Condition to Cope With All Hot Weather Dangers

During the month of June people should closely attend to their condition of health. Small streams make mighty, rushing rivers; the little ills of life when neglected, frequently bring on maladies that end in death.

The so-called trifles of to-day—weak and deathly feelings, nervous twitchings, debility, sleeplessness, and heavy, dull pain in the head—may in a few days result in dread disease, paralysis, awful paresis or insanity.

This is the time when Paine's Celery Compound should be used by old and young who feel they are not up to the standard of full health, strength and activity. The hot enervating weather of summer will soon overtake the weak, languid, nervous and brokendown. The results will be appalling and fatal to thousands, if the system be not fortified by that best of medicines—Paine's Celery Compound. No other medicine in the world like it for making pure, rich blood, and for bestowing that robust health that can successfully cope with the dangers that have to be encountered in midsummer.

BRITISH GARRISONS CONTROL NIGERIA.

London, June 5.—Reuter's Agency is informed that the Imperial Government has decided upon the establishment of a British garrison on Lake Chad, and that the post of resident in that region has been offered to an officer who has lately done distinguished service in the remoter regions of Northern Nigeria. The command will be known as that of Upper Bornu, and its headquarters will be at Kuka, the old capital, at present an unoccupied ruin, owing to the depredations of the Rabah. The garrison at Kuka, which is situated at least 600 miles distant from Lokoja will probably number two companies of the West African Frontier Force.

The rich province of Bornu, will, for administrative purposes, be divided into two provinces—Upper Bornu, with headquarters near Lake Chad at Kuka, and Lower Bornu, with headquarters at Guiba—the point where Fadr-el-Allah is stated to have been killed by the French, on the direct road to Lokoja, and about 150 miles from the lake. Captain J. K. Cochrane has been appointed resident at Gujba, and the garrison will consist of a company of the West African Frontier Force. By this arrangement the whole of the vast area from the Niger to Lake Chad will be effectively occupied by British garrisons under white officers.

They Father Consumption

Bad coughs, colds and catarrh are responsible for more consumption than is traceable even to heredity. Catarrhozone cures quicker than ordinary remedies because it is the only antiseptic yet discovered that is volatile enough to reach the root of the trouble in remote parts of the lungs and bronchitis tubes, and impregnate every particle of the air breathed with its healing, germ-killing vapor. Colds can't last ten minutes, or coughs more than thirty minutes when Catarrhozone is inhaled. It clears nose, throat and air passages at once, stops dropping headache, and erradicates catarrh from any part of the system. Two months' treatment, $1.00; trial size 25c. Druggists, or N. C. Colored Murderer Hanged

Macon, Ga., June 9.—E. G. Howard, was hanged in the county jail shortly before noon to-day. The crime for which he paid the death penalty was the murder of Henry Hammond, a saloon keeper and dance hall proprietor. Howard shot Hammond with a pistol because Hammond put him out of the saloon for being disorderly. Howard fled, but was captured in Opelika, Alabama, and brought back to Macon

"No Cure, No Pay," is the Newest Proposal of the Proprietors of Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills

Editor Morning Times

Sir,—We make the following proposal to anyone who is a subject of rheumatism (no matter how long standing), or any blood disease, as enumerated below, and will give Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills a fair trial, and do not find a perfect cure, we will refund the money paid for the pills. If no substantial improvement is observed, we will in addition, pay $10 in cash on satisfactory evidence being supplied us to this effect.

We have yet to know of a single case where these wonderful pills have not been almost entirely successful in effecting a cure. CANADA CHEMICAL CO.

Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills are a positive and certain cure for la grippe, rheumatism, asthma, paralysis, catarrh, eczema, coughs, backache, indigestion, all stomach and liver troubles, female complaints, even when the diseases have been standing for many years, the most stubborn cases will yield. Price 50 cents per box. For sale by Ormond & Walsh. The Canada Chemical Company will forfeit $10 for any case that these pills do not help.

CRITICISM OF THE STONY LAKE ISLANDERS ASSOCIATION

One of our up to date prominent citizens thinks the Stony Lake Association, and in fact the Kawartha Cottagers generally behind the times. There is no fine guide-map of the lakes procurable, such as that issued for the Muskoka District. This should not be so.

The Manager of the Siche Gas Co., Toronto, recently in Peterboro' on his way back from a short run up Stony Lake, while he had nothing but praise for the courtesy of the Railroad, Steamboat, Hotel, and other officials was surprised to find so little attention paid to good cheap light. He stated that in Muskoka the leading residents all use Siche Gas, and furnished the following list of prominent persons in proof of his assertion.

Cottagers—C. S. Gzowski; J. Herbert Mason; W. H. Elliott; Dr. Elmore Harris; Timothy Eaton; Rev. John Gillespie; W. A. Sims; Gregory-Allen; Jas. McKay; Mrs. Davidson of "Steubenden"; Mrs. Rebecca Berger; J. P. H. Cunningham, etc, etc.

Hotels and Summer Resorts—Capt. Mardon, The Windsor, Bala. The Fife House, Windermere, "Minett's" Lake Rosseau; etc, etc.

At the magnificent Summer Resort "Minnicoganashene" in the Georgian Bay, Col. J. C. Cautley has this year put in five Siche Plants for his five hotels, and one steamboat plant. The Bay View Club House, Port Rowan, following the example of the R.C.Y.C., Toronto, has just put in a large SICHE installation, the largest Ontario, and other places are sending in orders every day.

Kawartha has natural advantages excelled by no other place and should keep in line with the rest in up to date lighting. Electricity is all very well, but it is dim, dangerous and expensive, and as a competitor where a good strong steady light is desired cannot for a moment hold the field with SICHE gas, while on the score of safety it is nowhere, Siche Gas being certified by many eminent engineers and chemists to be absolutely safe, and free from danger either on the line of explosion or asphyxiation. Lastly, it is simple and CHEAP. Full information can be obtained by addressing "SICHE" Rossin House Block, Toronto. Phone Main 1971.

Yours truly,
F. L. H. SIMS.
Manager.

INVESTORS ATTENTION.

We wish to call the attention of all classes of investors to the firm of Wm. C. Benson & Co'y of London Ont., as a medium through which both small and large investments can be made to the best possible advantage. We give special attention to Mining and Oil Stocks but handle Industrials as well. We handle only such stocks as we believe to be safe and profitable investments, and make it a rule to investigate as thoroughly as possible all properties for which we act as financial agents. Here is one of the many "good things" we can offer; we have visited his property personally and can fully recommend it; it is an oil property situated in the Lima, Ohio, Oil Fields—the greatest oil fields in America. The Company has over 12,000 acres of leases of proven oil property, with over 75 producing wells, and pay dividends every month. The Company intends to build its own refinery and thereby double its earning power. For this purpose stock (par value $1.00) is now being sold and can be secured up till Saturday, 7th inst., AT 30 CENTS PER SHARE, after which the price will be 50 CENTS PER SHARE. ORDERS BEARING POSTMARK JUNE 7, 02, or earlier date, will be accepted at 30 cents. The Union Oil, Gas and Refining Co. is an established Company, not a prospect, and has a good record behind it.

Secure this stock at 30c. at once, this (Saturday, June 7th) being the last day on which these terms will be offered. Buy at once, and you will not regret it.

[illegible] THE EVANS CHEMICAL CO. CINCINNATI, O. U.S.A.

Beating a Gambler at His Own Game.

If every one who has a system for beating the bank at Monte Carlo attempts to float a public company, as the young Earl of Rosslyn is doing, to invite the world to share in the profits, there will not be much available capital left for any other enterprises. Whatever may be the peculiar merits of the scheme evolved by the English peer, who has recently been selling dog biscuit, the fact remains that despite the daily attack on the Monte Carlo bank by mathematicians with new systems the Casino continues to pay its large dividends.

Not only does the Prince of Monaco welcome the distinguished scientists who come to deprive him of his wealth, but he even goes so far as to pay their railway fare home, when their money is gone, and to provide for them, if desired, one of the most picturesque spots in the world in which to blow their brains out. But pistol practice on the grounds is very distasteful to the prince; hence his readiness to provide funds to place the unlucky system player in some other part of the world, where he may take his life in whatever manner he pleases, without disturbing the other players at the tables.

One of the recreations of a well-known New York banker, who has no need to "break the bank" at Monte Carlo to provide funds for himself, is to play imaginary roulette on a complicated system of his own invention. Although a yearly visitor at Monte Carlo, he has never staked a sou on the spin of the ball at the Casino. Back in his college days he was an honor man in mathematics, and he still delights in odd computations that have no connection with dividends and money rates. One day last spring at Monte Carlo he amused himself by making a "graphic chart" of the "rouge et noir" croupier for five hundred consecutive rolls. Governed by the immutable laws of chance, the zigzag line, tracing the variations from one color to the other, appeared to have certain zigzags of similar outline occurring at irregular intervals. Taking the daily record sheets of the roulette wheels, the New York banker plotted more charts, all of which showed the same characteristic zigzags, with "high levels," "low levels," "criss-crosses," "runs" and "chutes," and other peculiarities, for which the mathematical American has an elaborate nomenclature.

Coming back to New York, he privately engaged, in another part of the office building in which is his banking house, a small room, which he fitted up as a miniature Monte Carlo. Six young women spent three weeks there spinning the roulette wheels and making charts of the fall of the balls. These charts represent the equivalent of a year's play at one of the tables at Monte Carlo. The banker keeps them in a safe-deposit box, marked "strictly private;" the wheels he has destroyed. These charts, too, have the same easily recognized zigzags. From the study of them the New Yorker has evolved a "graphic system" of "beating the bank" which has met with marvelous success, although the major part of the winnings has been made in imaginary play. At odd moments he and several club friends played the charts. Starting with a capital of $1,000, they won a small sum every "day," and at the end of the "year" had won $200,000 without plunging. Had they given a larger increment to their wagers they would have "broken the bank." They are all satisfied that the chart system is based upon good mathematics and will "beat the bank."

While he was at the Carlton, in London, the banker met a Dutch diplomatic officer, on his way to America, to whom he gave the results of his observations at the tables at Monte Carlo. The nobleman from Amsterdam, who is greatly respected among the baccarat players of Paris, and just had some very costly lessons in American poker from his New York friends. He was delighted with the mathematical beauties of the "graphic system" and offered to furnish a capital of $10,000 if the banker would go with him to Monte Carlo and instruct him how to make his wagers. The American, of course, declined, but he gave the Dutch official enough of an outline of the method of play so that when he made a recent visit to America he spent several profitable nights in a well-known gambling house near Fifth avenue. The first night he won $250, the second $440, the third $1,200, and the fourth $970. The one fault he found with the system was that the winnings were made at the expense of brain tissue. He said he would not attempt to follow it longer. Meanwhile the secret of the "graphic system" of "breaking the bank at Monte Carlo" lies in a safe-deposit box in Broad street, and the man who has the key refuses to indulge in public gambling.—"Leslie's Weekly."

A Golf Sermon.

To illustrate his text, "Thou art not far from the Kingdom of God," an Edinburgh minister the other day drew upon familiar golf expressions. He said:

" 'Not far from the Kingdom of God' is not within it. That is how I would put it. 'Never up, never in.' I dare say those of you who are golfers know what that means, and I am sure if you have ever paid any attention to the game you will be struck by the way in which the game of golf seems to reproduce the common scenes of life. Those of you who don't play may know that the great object is to put the little white ball into the little hole. So long as you are short of that, if you don't do it—well, the other man does it before you. He has won the hole. And in doing this, when you come to what is called the 'putting green,' and you take your putt—it may be a beautiful putt, it may run straight to the hole, but if it stops short you will say to yourself, and your partner will say to you, 'Never up, never in. It is a beauty, but it wants legs.' And that is just exactly the situation here—'not far from the kingdom.' You may be 'lying dead,' as we say. The next shot is sure to do it. 'Never up, never in.' "

Mr. D. Speptic—My dear, I wish you would prepare something occasionally to tempt my appetite. His Wife—The idea! Why, you have not any appetite to tempt.—"Waverley Magazine."

The Poultry Yard.

Qualities of the Andalusian.

The Andalusian is a member of the Mediterranean family; it might be called a Blue Laced Minorca or Leghorn, as one might wish, since it is formed like them. Some follow the more gamey type of the Leghorn or Spanish, while others are built on the exact lines of the Minorca. These fowls undoubtedly came from the union or cross of the solid white and solid black fowl. In early days when we had the old time pure white and pure black Spanish with but small white lobes or face, they came of that type, and now we have them of both the Leghorn and the Minorca type.

The slate-blue colored hen can be seen in almost every flock of barnyard fowls. Some of them are laced like the Andalusian. The same manner of color and lacing is seen in the Jersey Blues. The shade of color and style of marking are not unusual, but the real beauty is best shown as cultivated in the well bred Andalusians of today, for the elegance of which, as seen in this country, much credit is due Mr. Newton Cosh, who has done so much for this breed in the way of cultivating size, shape and color to American notions of beauty.

The Andalusians are a fine sized fowl; the females range from 4 1-2 to 6 pounds in weight, the males from 5 1-2 to 7 pounds, with an inclination for those that have the Minorca type to range a little larger in size than the others. They are wonderfully good egg producers; their eggs are large and white in color of shell. We should class the Andalusian among the best of our Leghorns for egg producers, and might be called a general-purpose Leghorn, for they are not only good egg producers, but are equally good table poultry, and will bear confinement in yards and do well.

Learning Wisdom From Mistakes.

The first and greatest mistake I made was to get every new breed that I could hear or read about, when the fact was I only had enough room for a few of one breed. I did not pay enough attention to the health of my chicks, and the result was that cholera got among them, and my young chicks died faster than I could bury them. I got heartsick, and let my stock run down to only a few for family use. I took all the poultry papers I could read, but they did not help me. I let my chickens run where they pleased and forage where they could find food; only, they were not allowed inside of my barn or waggon house under any circumstances.

When Plymouth Rocks came into prominence I sent to Massachusetts and got a pair of high up, pure blood, registered Rocks. These I kept one year and got perfectly sick of them, as the egg production was not what I expected, and the meat was tough and beefy. But I know now where I failed.

Eggs are what the farmers want of poultry. If an amateur wants information along these lines he naturally turns to the poultry paper editor, but how often he gets disappointed! Many an ignorant beginner has sought for light where he was led to expect light, and got it not; dropped the musket and deserted the army, when a few words of counsel and advice would have made him a good fighter.

You must have bones to cut to make the bone cutter of use, and many farmers are not so situated that they can obtain them; to such the commercial crushed bones, or meat, are more advantageous. I pound up with a stone sledge all I can get, and the hens relish it much. As to vegetable cutters, the farmer who keeps only a few hens does not feel like putting out cash for a hand cutter. But do not deprive your hens of chopped vegetables. Take a common hand hoe to the blacksmith, and have him rap it out of the handle and straighten it out perfectly straight, and put it back into the handle, and sharpen the edge if it needs it. Take an old butter tub or a wooden pail and put in your vegetables to be chopped. Chop your cutter around the sides of the tub, and you will be surprised how quickly you can reduce any kind of vegetable to a fine feed fit to mix with your hot mash.

Also for chopping clover. Take good, clean clover, all you can grasp tightly in the left hand, sweep away a clean place on the floor, and with a square-bitted hand axe chop off the cuts as short as you want, and as near the hand as you dare and be safe, and in two minutes you can chop a pailful of nice, fine clover. I feed one day chopped vegetables and the next day chopped clover in my hot mash.

Some have trouble with hens eating their eggs in cold weather. Poultry papers tell us if hens are fed a proper ration they will not eat their eggs. Admitting this, how many common farmers can or will go to the trouble to feed their hens a proper ration. And those who will not feed a scientific ration to hens I am advising.

Take a boot or shoe box at least twenty inches deep, make a partition in it large enough for your hen's nests; for big hens twelve inches square, for smaller hens ten inches square, will be big enough. Cut a round hole at the top six or seven inches in diameter, according to the size of your hen; nail the top on tight, stop all cracks where light can come in, put a step on the outside low enough so the hen can stand on it and look in and see the eggs, but not so she can reach them with her bill, and when she hops into the hole the nest will be dark, and if she drops into the nest it is not so large that she can reach the egg. She will fly out and off, and go to work and forget the egg, and you have saved it for your own use. The hen must needs stand on something in order to peck the egg. These boxes I nail up around the henhouse about two feet from the floor. Some farmers let the hens roost on poles at different heights, but nests want to be all on a level. Put a floor of poles or loose boards about three feet above the roost and cover with straw, and you will not have frosted combs if your house is anywhere reasonably warm, even if the air on the floor is below freezing.

If these thoughts are of value, and more are wanted I will be glad to benefit my fellow-farmers. I write of what I know, and have tried.—D. Dole, New Idea Poultry Yard, Ellenburg Centre, N.Y.

HEROES AND HEROINES.

SERMON BY

GEORGE H. HEPWORTH.

But he that endureth to the end shall be saved.—St. Matthew, x., 22.

Everybody admires heroism. The qualities of character which hurl one to the forefront in a critical moment, careless of danger, reckless of consequences, claim our unstinted applause.

But in the emergency, when the air vibrates with excitement, a man becomes intoxicated with courage, ordinary soldiers do deeds which would grace a god of Olympus, and the coward is so rare an exception that he becomes invisible. Human nature, when impelled by a strong passion or a noble ambition, surprises itself. The poor village lout has a capacity for endurance and brilliant work which needs only time and incentive to become divine. The rattle of musketry is the stimulus to great achievement. The perilous expedition, with sudden death lurking in ambush, will always find volunteers.

Man is a rude, crude, but grand sort of creature, with the making of an archangel in him. There is a mettle in his soul which has not yet been fully called forth. He is a Toledo blade which the hot fire of circumstance will some time temper. He is nobler than he knows or ever can know until he is forced to show himself by opportunity.

So much for physical heroism. It is generally exhibited in the gaze of the world. There is another kind, however, and a higher kind, which never sees the light of day—the quiet heroism of an obscure life. The majority of our heroes and heroines will be unknown to us until we get to heaven. They are not now walking on hilltops, where they can be observed of all men, but are living quietly and sacrificing patiently in their narrow sphere, waiting for the peace and rest which will come "at eventime." I have known many such, and have never looked into their sad faces without thinking that there is a courage to which that of the battlefield is a trivial circumstance, the courage which endures with resignation and meets inevitable suffering and misfortune with a calmness which is God's best gift.

Here, for example, is a woman who on her wedding day saw nothing but blue sky and sunshine. It seemed as though no shadow could throw itself across her path. A light heart and lips of laughter—nothing more. She did not know her own strength, for she had never been tested. But the avalanche swept down the mountain side and crushed and buried all her hopes. The day was turned to night, and even the stars refused to come out. Sickness, death, poverty followed in logical succession. She was face to face with a hard world, her children crying for bread. The friends of other days had their attention called elsewhere, and they saw her not. Alone in the struggle! And yet she bravely set to work, won her way to a livelihood, walked her lonely path in calm confidence that God still lived, brushed away the tears and grappled with fate. The struggle has told on her, for her hair is grey, and there is a look in her face which comes only from sorrow hard to bear.

You do not know her, or perhaps care to know her, but that life is one long list of heroisms, and when we all get yonder and look back on the past we shall see the path she has travelled, the upward climb of her years, and give her the meed of praise which a thoughtless and ignorant world now refuses. There are no nobler qualities of character than her uncomplaining endurance, her persistent patience and her undimmed faith. The future has crowns for such souls, and God and the angels walk with them on their way to the New Jerusalem.

I know a man who has given his life to an aged parent, and another who has been forbidden for years, shut in from the pleasures which we most prize, and still another whose life has been a long sacrifice for his children, and another who—but why continue the list? I do but remind you of a similar instance within your own knowledge.

To meet such a fate as that requires the sublimest courage, not the courage of despair, but the courage of faith. There are flowers even in such byways as these, joys which cheer the heart and spots of happiness like oases in the desert. It is strange, but the presence of God and the conscious companionship of angels can bring bright days and starry nights. It is not our surroundings, after all, that bring peace, for if peace is in the heart it throws its light over all.

The root and foundation of this heroism is religion. There must be faith that above us and around us are helping and cheering influences, that earth and heaven are within telepathic distance of each other, and that what strength we need will be given us for the asking if we are to meet sorrow and misfortune with quiet fortitude. And the more we realize the presence of God, the easier it is to bear burdens. If we could once catch a glimpse of an angel's face—and some tell me they have done this—we should be light hearted even in the dark. At any rate, we can have faith that loved ones are near, though invisible, and it helps us as nothing else can.

Have Women Intuition?

In a recent magazine article William S. Walsh discusses the question, "Have Women Intuition?" He does not throw bouquets to feminine vanity, for he writes:

Literature is the final expression of human thought. If women can lay claim to a special faculty of intuition, why do they not manifest it in their writings? Intuition, if it means anything, means the faculty that gets down to the germ of actions and characteristics and focuses external traits into a central verity recognizable to the general public. Now there are more female writers than male. No woman poet has ever written an inevitable line, a line that flashes spontaneously out of the unknown and casts an illuminating light upon the abyss. Woman has added practically nothing to our stock of familiar quotations. Take down your Bartlett or your anthology, and you may be surprised to find that from Mrs. Browning to Mrs. Meynell women have never coined a phrase which has passed into the common currency of speech. Mrs. Browning has indeed written fine lines, but nothing of hers can be said to have become a household word.

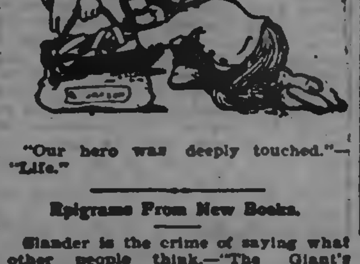
Nor has any woman novelist created any character that is generally recognised as typical. George Eliot has come closest with her Tito Melema and Mrs. Poyser. You would appeal only to the educated few if you described a person as a Tito or a Poyser. But call a man a Don Quixote, a Micawber, a Dogberry, a Falstaff, a Colonel Newcome, a Blifil, a Parson Adams, a Bob Acres; call a woman a Mrs. Malaprop, a Becky Sharp, a Beatrice, a Diana Vernon, a Meg Merrilies, and even the illiterate will mentally classify the individual as you wish him or her to be classified.

"Ah, but," you say, "in real life women are the true intuitions. They size up a man or a woman at a glance. They are never mistaken when they trust to their instincts."

I can only testify to my own experience. I have not found that women's snap judgments of character are imbued with any special verity. They form likes or dislikes quicker than man does, because they are quicker on the trigger of conjecture. They can only be one of two things—right or wrong. If time proves that they are right, as they must be in fifty per cent. of cases, the right guess is remembered and treasured up by the slower-minded man as an extraordinary instance of intuition. The wrong guess is forgotten.

Mary Anderson's Advice to Stage-Struck Girls.

Mrs. Antonio de Navarro, better known as Mary Anderson, has written a striking preface to Clara Morris's "Life on the Stage," which is on the eve of publication in England. In a glowing tribute to the American actress, Mrs. de Navarro declares: "She is the greatest emotional actress I ever saw," and adds the significant warning to stage-struck girls: "I hope she who writes this work will help to stem the tide of girls who so blindly rush into a profession of which they are ignorant, for which they are unfitted, and in which dangers unnumbered lurk on all sides. If, with Clara Morris's power and charm, so much had to be suffered, what is, what must be, the lot of so many mediocrities who pass the same fires with no reward in the end?"



"Our hero was deeply touched."—"Life."

The Poultry Yard.

An English poultry expert says:—Both in the States and in France the system of feeding poultry generally followed is the exact opposite to our own, the fowls getting soft food at night and corn in the morning. The poultry-keeper may well ask which is right, and the answer apparently is that there is very little difference in the result. An experiment recently tried in America, two lots of fowls getting just the same treatment, but one having soft food in the morning and corn at night, and the other the opposite, resulted in the fowls getting soft food in the morning laying slightly better than the others in winter. This is what one might expect. To set against this, however, was the fact that the fowls getting soft food at night voided double the amount of manure. The reason of this, of course, is that soft food is more quickly digested, but in those poultry houses where the droppings from the fowl-houses are systematically collected and utilized, there is a distinct value in feeding soft food at night, in preference to the morning. There is far less trouble to the feeder when corn is given in the morning, and it really seems as though the value of soft food for breakfast has been over-estimated.

Sulphur for Fowls and Swine.

When fowls are attacked with cholera I find that a little sulphur given in the food will check it. One tablespoonful mixed with the morning's food for thirty fowls and given once a month is sufficient when they are in health. When much sulphur is fed, with exposure to a cold and damp atmosphere, it will cause stiffness in the joints. Sulphur put in the dust bath with ashes is a preventive against lice. A little sprinkled in the nests and under setting hens routs these pests.

It is also good to give swine in case of cholera or sickness followed with vomiting caused from overfeeding. It regulates the stomach and liver without further trouble. I have given two teaspoonfuls twice a day in severe cases in sweet milk or sprinkled on some sliced vegetables.—Emma L. Hill, Damascus, N.Y.

To Make Hens Lay.

Many people complain that they cannot get their hens to lay in winter. One very strong complaint comes to us from one of our subscribers. To aid such we give the experience of one who resides in the cold climate of South Dakota.

Many farmers fail to get any eggs during the winter months, and, from the experience of others more successful, it must be concluded that they either do not care about winter eggs, or that they neglect to so manage and feeds the fowls as to induce them to lay. An interesting experiment was made with two lots of pullets, showing influence of food and care on the production of eggs in winter, by Rose Seelye-Miller, in the cold climate of South Dakota. The trial was reported in a western journal as follows:—

Two pens of pullets were placed in conditions as nearly equal as possible. One pen was designed for breeding, and it was desired that they should not lay until toward spring. The other pen, containing 18 hens, was designed to produce eggs during the winter, and the eggs were not intended at all for hatching.

The experiment began in December. Let it be remembered that the care, temperature and all other things were equal, save the food, and that the pen designed for late laying contained two less fowls.

During December the early layers produced five and a quarter dozen eggs, and the other pen not an egg. In January, the early layers produced ten dozen and three eggs; the late layers seven eggs. In February the early layers produced nine dozen eggs, and the other pen one dozen. In March the early layers produced fifteen dozen eggs, and the late layers three and a half dozen. In April came the change; the early layers laid ten dozen and nine eggs, and the late layers fifteen dozen and four eggs. From this time the breeders were kept laying, and produced in May 28 eggs, the early layers 142 eggs. This shows conclusively that egg-producing may be governed in a great measure. The feeding was very simple, and the early-laying fowls were fed as follows:—In the morning, boiled lean meat, chopped, with scraps from the table, and during the day all the wheat screenings they would eat, with corn twice a week. They were, of course, watered twice daily, and had some milk to drink.

The pen not intended for laying were fed on poor wheat screenings, with corn. These fowls grew and waxed fat, until they seemed too fat, and no doubt were, for laying. As spring came on the food was changed, and as it was the natural time for laying, too, they produced eggs in abundance.

The ordinary poultry raiser feeds too much corn and wheat. Hens are fed liberally twice a day and are fed on a steady diet of one or two things, either corn or wheat, and both fattening. Hence our hens do not pay, and poultry raising is a snare and a delusion to the one who is not wideawake and up to date in caring for the fowls.

Meat is known to be a great egg-producer, and there is now upon the market a feed prepared from refuse which makes an ideal food for fowls. Bones ground and plenty of milk are also very good in egg production.

Cleanliness and warmth are absolutely essential. A hen with a frozen comb might about as well be killed, unless she is a valuable one, whose eggs will make good hatching in the spring.

We feed our cattle for beef, and our hogs for lean or fat; we feed cows for milk or butter. Then why not discriminate in feeding our poultry too?

If thought were used more we should find our purses growing fat. Lean hens and hogs may be desirable, but a fat pocketbook never fails of appreciation, and the need of strenuous labor is decreasing.—The Country Gentleman.

VLOCANOES OF THE WORLD

Interesting Facts Concerning Volcanoes and the Causes

The Volcanoes of Iceland are in Perpetual Activity—The Europeans Loss of Life and Property by Eruptions

Special to The Times.

New York, June 9 — The terrible catastrophe of St. Pierre has directed attention to other volcanos, of which about a thousand are known. Of these, three hundred and twenty-five are now active. Those now quiescent are not all extinct; any one of them may, at any time, renew an activity which, so far as is known, is but suspended. Vesuvius was considered by the ancient world as extinct until the period of the destruction of Pompeii. From 1306 to 1631 this volcano was again quiescent — during a period of three centuries.

The volcanos of Iceland are in perpetual activity. Etna, Vesuvius and Stromboli are now intermittently active. The volcanoes of Spain were very active in the province of Murcia in 1819. The Azores, the Canaries, the Cape de Verde Islands, Isle de Bourbon, the Philippines, Java, Japan, Hawaii, Mexico, Central America, Ecuador and other States along the Andes, Terra del Fuego, are countries containing volcanoes perpetually active. The Azores and the Hawaiian Islands are, in fact, nothing but volcanos rising from the sea. Alaska contains several active volcanoes, and the Northwestern States of the Pacific include mountains that have become quiescent in very recent times. A glance at a map of the world on which the volcanoes are marked will give a vivid idea of their distribution. This is not a random one, as a map will clearly show.

Quiescent volcanoes that are becoming active usually give warning by earthquakes. This was not the case in Martinique. The crater begins by pouring out huge volumes of smoke composed of gases and steam, and then come volcanic ashes, pumice, and every now and then volleys of incandescent porous stones — lapilli and pozzolanes. Globular masses of white-hot lava are thrown out in spiral-like forms, accompanied by explosive sounds. Through the clouds above the crater lightning flashes, and the clouds themselves are illuminated by the glare of the lava beneath. The lava itself may be thrown out by explosions or it may open ways through huge fissures through the side of the mountain. In very violent eruptions the whole head of the mountain may be blown off, or the mountain may be riven apart, as at Krakatoa. The volcanic ashes are sent out in vast quantity, and, being light, are carried to enormous distances.

The ashes of Vesuvius have fallen in Constantinople. The ashes from St. Vincent in 1812 darkened the whole sky at Barbadoes; those from Sumbawa in 1815 were carried 700 to 800 miles in large quantities. The ashes from Krakatoa in 1883 filled the upper air and produced the red sunsets of that year, which continued for months. The gaseous products of a volcano are deadly. In Java the neighborhood of an active crater has been found covered with the dead bodies of wild animals—tigers, deer and the like. It was, no doubt, waves of noxious gas that killed thousands at St. Pierre. Some faint idea of the energy of volcanic forces may be had by considering the pressures necessary merely to maintain a column of lava at the level of the summit of a high mountain. Teneriffe is 3,710 metres in height. A pressure of about 1,000 atmospheres is necessary to make the lava flow from out its crater. The Martinique volcano was 1,350 metres high and the pressure was at the maximum, 400 atmospheres.

Anecdotal.

Philip II. sent a young nobleman to Rome to congratulate Sixtus V. on his exaltation. Sixtus was dissatisfied at so young an ambassador being sent, and, with his usual frankness, said, "Does your master want men, that he sends to me a beardless ambassador?" "Had my sovereign thought," replied the haughty Spaniard, "that merit consisted in a beard, he would have sent you a goat."

Charles Kean and James Wallack were once playing in the private theater at Windsor Castle, and the actors were somewhat chilled by the lack of hearty applause to which they were accustomed in public. At the end of one act there was a slight suggestion of hand-clapping and exceedingly gentle foot-tapping. Wallack, pricking up his ears, enquired, "What is that?" "That, my dear Wallack," Kean replied, "is applause." "Bless me!" exclaimed Wallack. "I thought it was somebody shelling peas."

Bishop Potter is accused of having given currency to the following anecdote: A Chicagoan had been taken around Boston all day to observe her bulwarks, but had failed to exhibit any of those symptoms of paralysis which are acceptable to the Bostonian mind. "Now confess," said the Bostonian host, after the burden and heat of the day, "isn't Boston a unique town?" "Unique?" mused the Westerner; "I believe that word is derived from two Latin words, unus, one, and equus, horse. I think Boston is a unique town."

Walter Dean, sr., once hired an artist to paint his portrait, with the stipulation that the picture would not be accepted and paid for unless it looked like himself. When the portrait was completed it was sent to Mr. Dean, who did not recognize himself, and absolutely refused to pay the painter. The painter sued, and Joe Strong, the artist, was called in to give an expert opinion. "You see the portrait of Mr. Dean?" the lawyer asked. "No," said Mr. Strong, "I do not." "There it is," said the lawyer, pointing to the big canvas. "I don't call that a portrait; I call that a map of Mr. Dean," said Mr. Strong.

"Down in South Carolina," says Congressman Talbert, "I once attended a colored church. The preacher, one of those negroes with an oily face and big spectacles, was talking about the prophets. He had taken an hour to discourse upon the major prophets, and then he took up the minor ones. In course of time he reached Hosea. 'My breddren,' he exclaimed, 'we come now to Hosea. Let us consider him. Where shall we put Hosea?' At that moment an old negro, who had been peacefully slumbering in one of the back pews, woke up and looked at the pastor. 'Hosea can take my seat,' he said. 'I'm so —— tired that I am going home.'"

The "Evening Post" of New York narrates that on Washington's birthday a well-known New York caterer became the possessor of a pair of English soles and English pheasants, and invited a couple of friends to dine off them at the dog show. It was a great success, but one of the guests, remembering the day, said it was far from patriotic. "Why," he added, "here it is Washington's birthday and we are dining on English sole, pheasant and currant jelly, eating French bread and drinking French wine. Let's have something American. Why don't you serve some oleomargarine?" "Don't worry," was the reply, "you've got it."

"Good Words" prints a little story of the early schooldays of Lord Salisbury, when he was Lord Robert Cecil, which shows how soon in his life his conspicuous disregard for dress began. When he was about seven years old he came into the nursery one afternoon on his return from school, which was held at the old rectory outside Hatfield, and dumped his books into a corner. "Oh, Betty," he said to his old nurse, "I wish I was a cat!" "La, Lord Robert," Betty replied, "how can you wish yourself a beast?" "Oh," he replied, with a sigh, "when I think of how many times I must dress and undress before I die I wish my clothes grew on my back."

Some years ago a Philadelphia preacher inaugurated in his Sunday-school the practice of having the children quote some Scriptural text as they dropped their pennies into the contribution box. On the first Sunday in question, a little shaver walked up and said: "The Lord loveth a cheerful giver," and in dropped his penny. "Charity shall cover a multitude of sins," and in dropped the next. "It is more blessed to give than to receive," quoted the third, and so on. Just then, up walked a little fellow with the unmistakable remnants of molasses candy on his chubby face, and, as he dropped his cent, he bawled out: "A fool and his money are soon parted."

The Wit's Hour of Trial.

Repartee is like tennis. The ball is driven backward and forward from one player to the other, and the one on whose side it last strikes is the loser. It is a terrible thing for an artist at repartee to find that he has no answer. The mere pretender does not care. He will answer something, to the point or not; but the artist will not debase his art with a bad answer; he merely sorrows for a good one.

There was a little Irishman who kept a liquor shop, and he was noted for always having a reply ready. One day a man came in, laid a dollar bill on the bar and called for whiskey. The proprietor set out the bottle and a glass, and the customer filled the glass right up to the top. "Is it a towel you'd be wantin'?" the proprietor asked, implying thereby that the customer had poured out a bath, rather than a drink. "Look here," said the customer, pointing to the money, "there's a dollar, you can take the price of this drink out of it, and if there isn't enough, tell me how much more you want and I'll pay it but I don't want any talk from a little Mick of a bartender."

The proprietor picked up the dollar and laid down 85 cents. As the customer disappeared he walked around in front of the bar and said to a friend who sat there: "Casey, I'd have given the liquor shop to have knowed what to answer back to that man."

Miss Antique—They say his dissipations are telling on him. Miss Cutting (his loyal fiancee)—No: it's his friends who are doing all that.

Mainly About People.

Dr. Parr, on meeting Lord Chancellor Erskine, with whom he was friendly, once said: "Erskine, I mean to write your epitaph when you die." "Doctor," answered the great lawyer, "it is almost a temptation to commit suicide."

At a ball in the country a gentleman undertook to introduce a companion to a young but somewhat stout lady, who seemed to be pining for a dance. "No, thanks, old fellow; I don't care to waltz with a cart." A few evenings later the same young lady, who had overheard the conversation, beheld the young man seeking an introduction and asking if he might have the honor, etc. "No, thank you," she replied; "I may be a cart, but I am not a donkey cart."

A rich Irish-American, who frequently visits England and dearly loves a lord, loses no opportunity of talking of his great acquaintances. At a recent dinner party in New York, where there were several Roman Catholics, during a conversation on the subject of fasting, this gentleman said: "It is very strange how little Catholics in the higher ranks mind the fast days. I was dining at the Duke of Norfolk's on a fast day, three weeks ago, and there wasn't a bit of fish at dinner." "I suppose," said another Irishman, "they had eaten it all in the dining-room."

John D. Rockefeller recently told the following story: "I don't question the veracity of that story, but I am going to tell you one that I know to be true. It happened down in Washington. A negro was driving a wagon and in going through a street ran against a funeral. With the superstition of his race he thought it would be bad luck to cross behind the funeral, so he tried to cross ahead of it, but the driver of the hearse whipped up his horse, and the two went neck and neck for a time until finally the darkey sang out: 'Say, dah, pull up youah hoss! Mah boss is in a hurry an' yuah'n isn't!'"

Judge Pennypacker of Philadelphia tells a story which shows the readiness of the Pennsylvania Dutchman to obey those in authority: In 1864 Sheridan, under orders, burned every barn from a valley above Staunton to a certain point below Winchester. A band of angry rebels followed this raid, watching for a chance to pick up any stragglers. Among others who fell into their hands was a little Pennsylvania Dutchman, who quietly turned to his captors and enquired: "Vat you fellows going to do mit me?" The reply came short and sharp: "Hang you." "Vell," he said, meekly, "vatever is de rule." His good-natured reply threw the Confederates into a roar of laughter and saved his life.

One day last autumn Bennet Burleigh, the noted English special war correspondent, was encountered a few miles outside Pretoria by that volcanic rhetorician, General Tucker. "What the —— —— are you doing out here with that —— thing?" asked the general, pointing to a kodak which was slung round his shoulders. "Well, sir," promptly replied Mr. Burleigh, "I was intending to take some photographs; but had I known that I was to have the pleasure of meeting you I should have brought out a phonograph." At this audacity, it is said that even General Tucker's stock of sulphurous adjectives ran low.

Gilbert Parker, to illustrate the gullibility of some Englishmen in the colonies, recently told the following story: "Once in Australia on my way through the bush, with my friend Cabbage Tree Bill, we were accompanied by a burly and intelligent young gentleman from Devonshire, and as we came along we saw along the road, if it might be called a road, a young kangaroo. Bill said: 'Now wait a minute; you will see him take the letters.' The kangaroo was sitting up as if waiting for something, and Bill said, 'He has his pouch and everything ready to carry them,' but as we came along Bill snapped his whip and said, 'Nothing to-day,' and the kangaroo trotted off, the young gentleman believing for a great part of the rest of the journey that the object of the kangaroo's presence was as Bill had said."

John Philip Sousa, the bandmaster, usually wears his uniform at all times and seasons, and prefers that his men do the same. The practice has led to some very amusing experiences. For example, one night Mr. Sousa was standing in a railway station, on the platform, waiting for a train. A belated traveler ran up to him and asked, excitedly, "Has the nine-three train pulled out?" "I really don't know," responded Mr. Sousa. "Well, why don't you know?" shouted the traveler. "What are you standing here for like a stick of wood? Aren't you a conductor?" "Yes," said Mr. Sousa, pleasantly, "I am a conductor." "A nice sort of conductor, indeed!" exclaimed the man. "Well, you see," smilingly responded the musician, "I am not the conductor of a train, but of a brass band."

VLOCANOES OF THE WORLD

Interesting Facts Concerning Volcanoes and the Causes

The Volcanoes of Iceland are in Perpetual Activity—The Europeans Loss of Life and Property by Eruptions

Special to The Times.

New York, June 9 — The terrible catastrophe of St. Pierre has directed attention to other volcanos, of which about a thousand are known. Of these, three hundred and twenty-five are now active. Those now quiescent are not all extinct; any one of them may, at any time, renew an activity which, so far as is known, is but suspended. Vesuvius was considered by the ancient world as extinct until the period of the destruction of Pompeii. From 1306 to 1631 this volcano was again quiescent — during a period of three centuries.

The volcanos of Iceland are in perpetual activity. Etna, Vesuvius and Stromboli are now intermittently active. The volcanoes of Spain were very active in the province of Murcia in 1819. The Azores, the Canaries, the Cape de Verde Islands, Isle de Bourbon, the Philippines, Java, Japan, Hawaii, Mexico, Central America, Ecuador and other States along the Andes, Terra del Fuego, are countries containing volcanoes perpetually active. The Azores and the Hawaiian Islands are, in fact, nothing but volcanos rising from the sea. Alaska contains several active volcanoes, and the Northwestern States of the Pacific include mountains that have become quiescent in very recent times. A glance at a map of the world on which the volcanoes are marked will give a vivid idea of their distribution. This is not a random one, as a map will clearly show.

Quiescent volcanoes that are becoming active usually give warning by earthquakes. This was not the case in Martinique. The crater begins by pouring out huge volumes of smoke composed of gases and steam, and then come volcanic ashes, pumice, and every now and then volleys of incandescent porous stones — lapilli and pozzolanas. Globular masses of white-hot lava are thrown out in spiral-like forms, accompanied by explosive sounds. Through the clouds above the crater lightning flashes, and the clouds themselves are illuminated by the glare of the lava beneath. The lava itself may be thrown out by explosions or it may open ways through huge fissures through the side of the mountain. In very violent eruptions the whole head of the mountain may be blown off, or the mountain may be riven apart, as at Krakatoa. The volcanic ashes are sent out in vast quantity, and, being light, are carried to enormous distances.

The ashes of Vesuvius have fallen in Constantinople. The ashes from St. Vincent in 1812 darkened the whole sky at Barbadoes; those from Sumbawa in 1815 were carried 700 to 800 miles in large quantities. The ashes from Krakatoa in 1883 filled the upper air and produced the red sunsets of that year, which continued for months. The gaseous products of a volcano are deadly. In Java the neighborhood of an active crater has been found covered with the dead bodies of wild animals—tigers, deer and the like. It was, no doubt, waves of noxious gas that killed thousands at St. Pierre. Some faint idea of the energy of volcanic forces may be had by considering the pressures necessary merely to maintain a column of lava at the level of the summit of a high mountain. Teneriffe is 3,710 metres in height. A pressure of about 1,000 atmospheres is necessary to make the lava flow from out its crater. The Martinique volcano was 1,350 metres high and the pressure was, at the minimum, 400 atmospheres.

Anecdotal.

Philip II. sent a young nobleman to Rome to congratulate Sixtus V. on his exaltation. Sixtus was dissatisfied at so young an ambassador being sent, and, with his usual frankness, said, "Does your master want men, that he sends to me a beardless ambassador?" "Had my sovereign thought," replied the haughty Spaniard, "that merit consisted in a beard, he would have sent you a goat."

Charles Kean and James Wallack were once playing in the private theater at Windsor Castle, and the actors were somewhat chilled by the lack of hearty applause to which they were accustomed in public. At the end of one act there was a slight suggestion of hand-clapping and exceedingly gentle foot-tapping. Wallack, pricking up his ears, enquired, "What is that?" "That, my dear Wallack," Kean replied, "is applause." "Bless me!" exclaimed Wallack. "I thought it was somebody shelling peas."

Bishop Potter is accused of having given currency to the following anecdote: A Chicagoan had been taken around Boston all day to observe her bulwarks, but had failed to exhibit any of those symptoms of paralysis which are acceptable to the Bostonian mind. "Now confess," said the Bostonian host, after the burden and heat of the day, "isn't Boston a unique town?" "Unique?" mused the Westerner; "I believe that word is derived from two Latin words, unus, one, and equus, horse. I think Boston is a unique town."

Walter Dean, sr., once hired an artist to paint his portrait, with the stipulation that the picture would not be accepted and paid for unless it looked like himself. When the portrait was completed it was sent to Mr. Dean, who did not recognize himself, and absolutely refused to pay the painter. The painter sued, and Joe Strong, the artist, was called in to give an expert opinion. "You see the portrait of Mr. Dean?" the lawyer asked. "No," said Mr. Strong, "I do not." "There it is," said the lawyer, pointing to the big canvas. "I don't call that a portrait; I call that a map of Mr. Dean," said Mr. Strong.

"Down in South Carolina," says Congressman Talbert, "I once attended a colored church. The preacher, one of those negroes with an oily face and big spectacles, was talking about the prophets. He had taken an hour to discourse upon the major prophets, and then he took up the minor ones. In course of time he reached Hosea. 'My breddren,' he exclaimed, 'we come now to Hosea. Let us consider him. Where shall we put Hosea?' At that moment an old negro, who had been peacefully slumbering in one of the back pews, woke up and looked at the pastor. 'Hosea can take my seat,' he said. 'I'm so —— tired that I am going home.' "

The "Evening Post" of New York narrates that on Washington's birthday a well-known New York caterer became the possessor of a pair of English soles and English pheasants, and invited a couple of friends to dine off them at the dog show. It was a great success, but one of the guests, remembering the day, said it was far from patriotic. "Why," he added, "here it is Washington's birthday and we are dining on English sole, pheasant and currant jelly, eating French bread and drinking French wine. Let's have something American. Why don't you serve some oleomargarine?" "Don't worry," was the reply, "you've got it."

"Good Words" prints a little story of the early schooldays of Lord Salisbury, when he was Lord Robert Cecil, which shows how soon in his life his conspicuous disregard for dress began. When he was about seven years old he came into the nursery one afternoon on his return from school, which was held at the old rectory outside Hatfield, and dumped his books into a corner. "Oh, Betty," he said to his old nurse, "I wish I was a cat!" "La, Lord Robert," Betty replied, "how can you wish yourself a beast?" "Oh," he replied, with a sigh, "when I think of how many times I must dress and undress before I die I wish my clothes grew on my back."

Some years ago a Philadelphia preacher inaugurated in his Sunday-school the practice of having the children quote some Scriptural text as they dropped their pennies into the contribution box. On the first Sunday in question, a little shaver walked up and said: "The Lord loveth a cheerful giver," and in dropped his penny. "Charity shall cover a multitude of sins," and in dropped the next. "It is more blessed to give than to receive," quoted the third, and so on. Just then, up walked a little fellow with the unmistakable remnants of molasses candy on his chubby face, and, as he dropped his cent, he bawled out: "A fool and his money are soon parted."

The Wit's Hour of Trial.

Repartee is like tennis. The ball is driven backward and forward from one player to the other, and the one on whose side it last strikes is the loser. It is a terrible thing for an artist at repartee to find that he has no answer. The mere pretender does not care. He will answer something, to the point or not; but the artist will not debase his art with a bad answer; he merely sorrows for a good one.

There was a little Irishman who kept a liquor shop, and he was noted for always having a reply ready. One day a man came in, laid a dollar bill on the bar and called for whiskey. The proprietor set out the bottle and a glass, and the customer filled the glass right up to the top. "Is it a towel you'd be wantin'?" the proprietor asked, implying thereby that the customer had poured out a bath, rather than a drink. "Look here," said the customer, pointing to the money, "there's a dollar, you can take the price of this drink out of it, and if there isn't enough, tell me how much more you want and I'll pay it but I don't want any talk from a little Mick of a bartender."

The proprietor picked up the dollar and laid down 85 cents. As the customer disappeared he walked around in front of the bar and said to a friend who sat there: "Casey, I'd have given me liquor shop to have knowed what to answer back to that man."

Miss Antique—They say his dissipations are telling on him. Miss Cutting (his loyal fiancee)—No: it's his friends who are doing all that.

Mainly About People.

Dr. Parr, on meeting Lord Chancellor Erskine, with whom he was friendly, once said: "Erskine, I mean to write your epitaph when you die." "Doctor," answered the great lawyer, "it is almost a temptation to commit suicide."

At a ball in the country a gentleman undertook to introduce a companion to a young but somewhat stout lady, who seemed to be pining for a dance. "No, thanks, old fellow; I don't care to waltz with a cart." A few evenings later the same young lady, who had overheard the conversation, beheld the young man seeking an introduction and asking if he might have the honor, etc. "No, thank you," she replied; "I may be a cart, but I am not a donkey cart."

A rich Irish-American, who frequently visits England and dearly loves a lord, loses no opportunity of talking of his great acquaintances. At a recent dinner party in New York, where there were several Roman Catholics, during a conversation on the subject of fasting, this gentleman said: "It is very strange how little Catholics in the higher ranks mind the fast days. I was dining at the Duke of Norfolk's on a fast day, three weeks ago, and there wasn't a bit of fish at dinner." "I suppose," said another Irishman, "they had eaten it all in the dining-room."

John D. Rockefeller recently told the following story: "I don't question the veracity of that story, but I am going to tell you one that I know to be true. It happened down in Washington. A negro was driving a wagon and in going through a street ran against a funeral. With the superstition of his race he thought it would be bad luck to cross behind the funeral, so he tried to cross ahead of it, but the driver of the hearse whipped up his horse, and the two went neck and neck for a time until finally the darkey sang out: 'Say, dah, pull up youah hoss! Mah boss is in a hurry an' yuah'n isn't!' "

Judge Pennypacker of Philadelphia tells a story which shows the readiness of the Pennsylvania Dutchman to obey those in authority: In 1864 Sheridan, under orders, burned every barn from a valley above Staunton to a certain point below Winchester. A band of angry rebels followed this raid, watching for a chance to pick up any stragglers. Among others who fell into their hands was a little Pennsylvania Dutchman, who quietly turned to his captors and enquired: "Vat you fellows going to do mit me?" The reply came short and sharp: "Hang you." "Vell," he said, meekly, "vatever is de rule." His good-natured reply threw the Confederates into a roar of laughter and saved his life.

One day last autumn Bennet Burleigh, the noted English special war correspondent, was encountered a few miles outside Pretoria by that volcanic rhetorician, General Tucker. "What the —— —— are you doing out here with that —— thing?" asked the general, pointing to a kodak which was slung round his shoulders. "Well, sir," promptly replied Mr. Burleigh, "I was intending to take some photographs; but had I known that I was to have the pleasure of meeting you I should have brought out a phonograph." At this audacity, it is said that even General Tucker's stock of sulphurous adjectives ran low.

Gilbert Parker, to illustrate the gullibility of some Englishmen in the colonies, recently told the following story: "Once in Australia on my way through the bush, with my friend Cabbage Tree Bill, we were accompanied by a burly and intelligent young gentleman from Devonshire, and as we came along we saw along the road, if it might be called a road, a young kangaroo. Bill said: 'Now wait a minute; you will see him take the letters.' The kangaroo was sitting up as if waiting for something, and Bill said, 'He has his pouch and everything ready to carry them,' but as we came along Bill snapped his whip and said, 'Nothing to-day,' and the kangaroo trotted off, the young gentleman believing for a great part of the rest of the journey that the object of the kangaroo's presence was as Bill had said."

John Philip Sousa, the bandmaster, usually wears his uniform at all times and seasons, and prefers that his men do the same. The practice has led to some very amusing experiences. For example, one night Mr. Sousa was standing in a railway station, on the platform, waiting for a train. A belated traveler ran up to him and asked, excitedly, "Has the nine-three train pulled out?" "I really don't know," responded Mr. Sousa. "Well, why don't you know?" shouted the traveler. "What are you standing here for like a stick of wood? Aren't you a conductor?" "Yes," said Mr. Sousa, pleasantly, "I am a conductor." "A nice sort of conductor, indeed!" exclaimed the man. "Well, you see," smilingly responded the musician, "I am not the conductor of a train, but of a brass band."

The Retort Cordial.

PETERBOROUGH, JUNE 9 1902

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

Local Happenings Picked Up Here and There by the Times.

[ED.—The Times requests its readers to contribute items of news to its columns. Anything that is phoned or sent in writing to the office, of a nature suitable for publication, will be received and published.—ED. TIMES.]

—Everybody reads The Times.

—The Deering Works will go to Hamilton after all.

—A citizen was find $5.00 for not taking out a dog license.

—Saturday's market was very light on account of the rain.

—Work on the new dam at the lower lock is progressing.

—The Public School promotion examinations will start in a few days.

—Once again: Are we to have a demonstration on Coronation Day?

—The Street Railway will be completed to the river below the locks as soon as possible.

—The Douro pic-nic will take place on Thursday June 19. It will afford a splendid day's outing.

—The Town Council will meet this evening for the transaction of general business.

—The labour union of the town will give a supper to their members on Wednesday night, June 18th.

—The Times will be delivered daily to subscribers in Peterborough and Ashburnham for 25c per month.

—We are in receipt of papers from Cape Town, South Africa, giving full account of the funeral of the late Cecil Rhodes.

—The regular monthly meeting of the Board of Directors of the Y.W.C.A. will be held this afternoon, June 9th, at 2.30 p.m. A full attendance of members is requested.

The Boston Bloomers arrived in town on Saturday night from Lindsay. The ladies are quite confident of putting it over the local nine and an exciting game is looked for this afternoon.

—At the Police Court Saturday a little girl was charged with breaking shrubbery at St. John's church grounds. She was discharged on a promise not to go near the grounds again.

—Persons who have lately visited the "plains" where the huckleberry grows, inform us that there has been a pretty display of blossom, and the prospect seems pleasing for a good crop of fruit. The berry is beginning to form, and in about five weeks it will develop into the ripened fruit.

—Lindsay Post,—A glib-tongued vendor of a wondrous herb medicine held forth on the Market Square Wednesday night and last evening, and attracted large crowds. The receipts were disappointing and he left this morning for Peterboro, having been told that the people of that town would prove easy marks.

—Lakefield News.—Word was received in the village on Wednesday that Mr. Dan. Armstrong had been killed at Webbwood, in the Nippissing district. No particulars are to hand of the occurrence. Mrs. Armstrong and family will have the sincere sympathy of the community in the sad and sudden bereavement.

—Campbellford Herald.—Some of the newspapers in the Midland district are giving much prominence to the fact that a maskinonge weighing 44 pounds was caught last summer in the Bay of Quinte. It's a large fish but small in compared with one caught some years ago in Bradley Bay southeast of Campbellford, a maskinonge that weighed 72 pounds, and 69 pounds when dressed for the table

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

NOTE—The Times requests its readers to furnish the paper with items of a personal and social nature either by phone or in writing.—ED TIMES.]

Three girls wanted at once—A laundry woman, assistant cook and dining room girl. Wages from eight to twenty dollars per month. Apply to Wm. Snowden, Snowden House, Peterborough.

Was Acquitted

Cobourg Sentinel-Review—James Kane of Peterborough, who was arrested a few weeks ago for stealing a pair of boots from an intoxicated farmer at Millbrook, but was let out on bail in order to secure further evidence, was to have appeared here before Judge Benson on Friday for trial, failed to show up, although all the witnesses were present. Kane was said to have gone to Port Hope, and it was thought that he had either got lost amid the hills and dales, or had wiped the Canadian Dust off his boots and gone over to join Uncle Sam. It eventually turned out that he had been in Peterborough, but turned up at the trial here yesterday, when he was discharged.

THE "STANLEY" PREFERRED

The Government Purchase Two of These Superb Instruments

The Stanley Piano Company are to be congratulated on the fact that the Ontario Government has purchased two of their instruments for the public institutions. One of their finest styles was shipped to the Institute for the Blind, at Brantford, another to the Asylum for the Insane at Hamilton, and a third was sent to the Ladies Seminary, in St. Jean Point, Joliet, Quebec. In each case the merits of the "Stanley" were critically tested by skilled musicians in competition with a number of other leading makes of pianos, and the fact that our own local "Stanley" was selected in each is not only a high testimonial to the company but complimentary to the town where it is manufactured.

CHURCH NOTES.

The morning service at All Saint's Yesterday was a thanksgiving declaration of peace, with a special sermon by the Rector. A similar service was also held in St. Luke's, Ashburnham, the church being handsomely decorated for the occasion.

A military thanksgiving service was held at St. John's at 4.15 p.m., in order that the Sunday schools would not be interfered with, the regiment did not fall in till 4 p.m. when the cadets, veterans, and members of the Battery and Dragoons paraded. The sermon was preached by the Rev. E. A. Langfeldt, and was eloquent and impressive.

MEDALS PRESENTED

At the conclusion of the afternoon thanksgiving service at St. Johns, the regiment formed up in companies on the church grounds and Lieut.-Col J. Z. Rogers presented handsome long service medals to the following members: Staff-Sergeant W. F. Green, to whom the Colonel gave credit for not having missed a parade in twenty-six years, Pioneer A. Blade, and Privates J. A. Crowe. Messrs. Harper and Blade are cracks shots of the 57th, and W. F. Green served with the band fourteen years.

The Political Situation

London, June 8.—The recount in the East Middlesex election case conducted before Judge Edward Elliott, was concluded this morning, and resulted in Dr. Routledge being declared elected by 21 majority over Captain Thomas F. Robson. It was found that, in two Westminister divisions, Nos. 6 and 10, the deputy returning officer, through ignorance, had numbered all the ballots on the back, and counsel for Capt. Robson claimed that these should all be thrown out. This would have given Robson about 90 majority. Judge Elliott, however, decided not to disfranchise the 224 electors in these divisions, and the ballots were counted, thus electing the Liberal candidate, as stated. The argument in the case was brief.

GROSS MAJORITY REDUCED.

Welland, June 7.—The recount in Welland reduces the majority of Gross (Liberal) from 121 to 113.

TIE IN NORTH PERTH.

Stratford, June 7.—The recount of the votes in the recent election in North Perth is taking place at the Court House here to-day before Judge Barron. A. B. Aylesworth, K.C., and R. T. Harding represent Mr. John Brown (Liberal) and E. E. A. DuVernet and James Steele represent Mr. Monteith (Conservative.) Up to adjournment for lunch, the Stratford votes had been gone over, with the result that the Judge allowed four votes for Monteith that had been rejected by the deputy returning officers and five for Brown, and threw out one vote that had been counted for Monteith. This leaves the court a tie so far.

IN WEST HURON.

Goderich, June 7.—In West Huron recount on adjournment at 6 o'clock, Wingham, Blyth and Ashfield, and East Wawanosh Townships, had been completed, with a gain of one vote to each candidate. The remaining places have 12 spoiled and rejected ballots to consider.

pursue is not known, but in the meantime the manufacturers stoutly declare they will not resume operations until the actions of M. Trepoff are disavowed. They do not much object to a long shut down, owing to a business being excessively bad. The Goujon affair has taken on an international aspect, owing to the manager having appealed to the French embassy for protection.

The trade union movement has also advanced beyond the wishes of the police. A delegation of workingmen recently went to St. Petersburg to ask permission for the formation of labor unions on the British model. The ministry of the interior, however, flatly refused their request.

The finance ministry has recently given the labor question close attention, and has elaborated proposed laws regarding employers' liability for accidents, medical assistance for working people, the opening of new industrial establishments, and freedom of organization and strikes.

Subordinate importance is attached here to placards denouncing "foreign devils," the example of the mill workers in Tver, where this movement originated, not having been followed elsewhere.

Another Account of The Gallant Fight Made by Canadians

A SPLENDID STORY OF HEROISM

Which Cannot Be too Often Repeated—The Boer War Has Made Canadians Famous As Fighters

Trooper Fred. Wollaston, one of the Canadians now with the second C. M. R. in South Africa, writes some interesting news in a letter just received, dated Driskel Camp, Transvaal, April 4. He was one of those who took part in the Hart's River fight and came out with a hole through his hat. He gives an interesting account of the fight. He says:

"On Sunday afternoon, March 23rd, we got orders to march at 6.30 p.m., and we left there in company with Damant's Horse, the Imperial Light Horse, and some of the Mounted Infantry, about 1,500 strong and made a night march which was a terror. We rode 42 miles that night and stopped at about 4.30 in the morning and fed our horses, and munched a hard-tack. Then, just as we were ready to start out again, our scouts ran on to three or four Boers and killed two and captured one. Then we started on a sort of a small drive, and worked our way back towards where we started from the night before, and that night camped about 15 miles from Klerksdorp, having covered about 90 miles in the 24 hours. The total captures for the whole column amounted to about 100 Boers and a convoy, and about 600 head of cattle. After that we had a couple of days' rest, then started out in a column under the command of Gen. Kitchener, about 3,000 strong looking for the enemy. We marched for two days and found nothing; then, on the morning of the 31st, we started at 3 a.m., leaving the transport behind us, and the larger part of the column in charge of it, making our column about 2,400 strong. We took two days' rations with us, and marched West until about 11 o'clock when the advance guard reported a Boer convoy in sight about 4 miles ahead of us. Damant's Horse and the 28th Mounted Infantry, and the Artillery were sent after them, and we were left behind as the supports. They caught up with the enemy about six miles from where we sighted them, and had a little skirmish, but they got away from us. When we caught up with them we pitched camp on a creek called Brakspruit, and had just got our camp pitched, and had just finished our hard-tack and jam, when all of a sudden whizz came a shell right over our heads and burst about fifty yards outside our camp. This was the start of a pretty hot fire. They had two 15-pounders, and a pom-pom and they kept up a pretty hot fire on us for about two hours and a half with the guns. Of course, our guns were by no means idle during this. We had two 15-pounders three pompoms and a Maxim, and they did great execution as far as we could see. The artillery fire was of course more to cover the advance of the riflemen than anything else, and as soon as the shelling started we took up positions lying in the grass all around the camp, and when they advanced we let them have it hot and heavy; they could not face it and had to retire, and about 4.30 they gave it up and retired. Of course we were there and had to stay there, and as there was no sun, we could not heliograph for help, so we had to send messengers out. Several tried it, but could not get through, but a couple of Kaffirs got out all right. As we were stuck there, just as soon as their fire ceased we got to work digging trenches and by dark we had good trenches and a barbed wire fence all around the camp, and that night we all slept in the trenches. We fully expected an attack that night or early next morning, but I think that they had enough of us in the afternoon, and did not care to tackle it again. The next morning about 12 o'clock we were relieved by a column sent for the purpose under command of Gen. Kitchener, who had stayed behind with our main body. He was very much relieved to find us all right, as some of the M.I's had got away the night before and had reported that we had all surrendered.

"The total casualties on our side were about 100 killed and wounded; on the other side we estimate them at about 200 or perhaps more, but we cannot find out for certain. The reason our regiment suffered so heavily was that two troops of "E" Squadron (who were acting as the rear guard), through some mistake on the part of their officers did not get into camp, and had to take a position in some brush outside; they got pretty well cut up, and some of them were finally captured. Nowadays the Boers cannot keep any prisoners, but they strip them of arms, ammunition and clothes and let them go, so that lots of them come in with nothing but their underclothes on. Well, it is getting dark now and I have no light, so must stop and try to write more tomorrow. April 7

"It appears that we got quite a good name in our first engagement. We were against practically the best of the Boer army, under the leadership of Delarey, and this was the first reverse he ever had; and when he attacked our camp it was looked on on their side as a sure victory. Our fellows never seemed to think of such a contingency as being captured at all, and were all quite cheerful and everyone doing his best.

"There are rumors of peace in the air, but whether there is anything in it or not I do not know.

"This is a very desolate looking country nowadays. There is not a house or building of any kind left standing. We came across a field of corn yesterday, and a big party has gone out today to destroy it. This afternoon we played a cricket match against Damant's Horse, one inning each, and we beat them, 51 to 44. I made 8."

To Save By Using Oil

Special to The Times.

San Francisco, Cal., June 9.—The Southern Pacific has let contracts for the construction along its lines of eight oil tanks with a capacity of 20,000 to 55,000 barrels each in connection with its conversion of locomotives from coal to oil-burning machines. Besides the eight large tanks the company also plans to distribute smaller tanks along the road. These arrangements for handling the new fuel include nothing that will be done on the southern route of the company's line. It is estimated that the exclusive use of oil will net a saving of $1,500,000 over coal. This estimate is based on the figures of last month, when a saving of $14,000 was affected by the use of fuel oil on thirty-nine engines of the western division.

A DASH FOR THE POLE

Canadian Explorer Plans a Novel Way to Seek the Pole

AUTOMOBILE ON ARCTIC ICE

Captain Bernier, of the Canadian Exploration Party, will Make a Try

How He Proposes to Proceed—Will Start as Soon as Funds Can be Secured

Special to The Times.

Ottawa, June 10.—A novel way of seeking the North Pole will be adopted by Captain Bernier, the head of the Canadian exploration party. The Captain's idea is to use automobiles of Russian design. Instead of wheels these automobiles will be fitted with rollers adapted to ice going.

The Captain's plan is to anchor his vessel in the ice pack off the coast of Siberia at a point which he calculates will drift him to the nearest point attainable to the pole.

When that point has been reached he will disembark working parties, who will carry wireless telegraph outfits, with which his ship is also to be furnished. The parties will drill holes in the ice and plant poles as landmarks as they proceed, and establish their first station and storehouse about fifty miles from the ship.

The road having been made as practicable as possible the automobile sleigh will be put into commission to stock the station with supplies. In the meantime other parties will be working on toward the second 50-mile station and so on.

There will be a second automobile in reserve or for use, where two can be usefully employed, as well as dog sleighs with a team of 20 dogs.

The sleighs on which the motors are to be placed will be so constructed as to be capable of being used for navigating open stretches of water where such cannot be avoided.

In case rough ice is met with that presents an insurmountable obstacle to the automobiles the machines will be disconnected, taken to pieces and portaged, a work with which Canadians, who will form a large portion of the exploring company, have been familiar since infancy.

RATES TO BE RAISED

Ancient Order of United Workmen To Increase Insurance Rate

Special to The Times.

Portland, Ore., June 9 — Members of the Supreme Lodge of the Ancient Order of United Workmen are here for their annual meeting, which begins to-morrow and continues for ten days. The A. O. U. W. is the original fraternal co-operative association in America, was organized by John Jordan Upchurch in August, 1868, and now numbers over 400,000 members. The Supreme Lodge is composed of representatives from all the States and Territories and several of the Canadian Provinces.

The question of most vital importance to come up before the present meeting is the proposal to advance the rates of insurance over the age of 65.

About six years ago the order revised the plan adopting a step rate, and making the initial rate up to 25 years $1.20 a month per $1,000 and the top limit $3.55, for all ages above 50. It is now proposed to raise the rade for over 55 years to between $4.50 and $4.75. The increase is necessitated by the fact that the order is accumulating liabilities which it cannot meet the present plan. The statistics show that while the year 1901 was entered into with a surplus of $40,000, and the amount paid into the relief fund was $875,000, the losses amounted to over $1,000,000, and it took the assessments of two of the months of 1900 to finish up the debts.

LORD KITCHENER HAD NO SECRET TERMS WITH BOERS, SAYS A. J. BALFOUR

London, June 10.—The suggestion that Lord Kitchener, with the connivance of the Government, entered into a secret compact with the Boers, to induce them to surrender, was denied by the Government leader, A. J. Balfour, in the House of Commons to-day. Mr. Balfour declared that so far as the Government was aware no pledges and no assurances were given by Lord Kitchener which had not been published.

The Colonial Secretary, Joseph Chamberlain, answering a question regarding the agitation for the suspension of the constitution of Cape Colony, said he had received a petition from forty-two members of the Parliament of Cape Colony in favor of its suspension, and had awaited the observations of the Cape Ministry on the subject. An Act of the Imperial Parliament, he added, was required before the constitution could be sustained.

THE WHITE PLAGUE

One Out of Every Five Persons Die Of Consumption

Special to The Times.

New York, June 9.—The American Tuberculosis Congress finds that consumption in its various forms, "is causing, directly or indirectly, probably one-fifth of the total deaths in almost every country in the world," and calls upon every government, municipality, and individual citizen, to adopt organized methods for lessening its ravages. The response will not be immediate. Probably the call will have no apparent effect, but it will do its part in awakening the public to the danger of consumption, and little by little people will learn to appreciate the importance of precautions against tuberculosis. One of the first signs that this desirable result is being accomplished will be the discontinuance of the habit of promiscuous spitting, to which a certain class of people is strongly addicted.

Doctors' Convention

Saratoga, N.Y., June 9—Beginning today with a meeting of the American Medical Association, Saratoga for the next four or five days will be the central point for medical men from all over the United States and Canada, as in addition to the above there will be a meeting of pension examiners, a convocation of the health boards of the United States, Canada and Mexico, and a meeting of editors of medical publications. The subjects which will be brought before the various boards, while largely technical, are of considerable importance in the medical world.

JOHN W. HOWRY COMMITS SUICIDE AT KANSAS CITY

A Man Well Known in Peterborough and District Kills Himself.

HE WAS AT ONE TIME A MICHIGAN MILLIONAIRE

Bought Out the Dickson Company's Limits Some Years Ago and Operated Large Mills at Fenelon Falls

Special to The Times

John W. Howry, at one time a millionaire lumberman, of East Saginaw, Michigan, committed suicide at 910 East Ninth street, Kansas City, Mo., by taking a dose of morphine. A telegram to The Times states that he was not dead when discovered, but the doctors were unable to save him, and he died at 4.25 yesterday. Financial reverses are ascribed as the cause for his desire to end his life.

Mr. Howry is apparently about 70 years of age, his hair is gray and he is a distinguished appearing old man. He planned to die deliberately, and after arranging details of various descriptions relative to the disposal of his body, in case of his death, took the morphine and laid down on his bed awaiting the death which he sought.

His heavy breathing attracted the attention of a boarder at the rooming house, and when he discovered the old man's condition he at once notified the police.

Mr. Howry was removed to central station, and on a cot in the dingy room of the police surgeon the old man, accustomed to the best of surroundings, lay unconscious while the assistant police surgeon fought his battle against death until 11 o'clock this morning, when the patient was removed to St. Joseph's hospital.

HIS LAST INSTRUCTIONS.

On the dresser in the room where Mr. Howry sought to end his life, was found a note marked "Copy" addressed to E. Stine & Son, undertakers, and reading: "Should anything happen to me I wish you would remove my body at 910 East Ninth street, from second floor in room at head of stairs, first door to the right. Take it to your parlors and with it my trunk, valise, and umbrella, and prepare body for shipment. Telegraph to J. H. and H. K. Howry at Nara, Visa, N. M., for instructions. I enclose $20. Keep everything from the newspapers. Cause, business troubles with my son, J. H. Howry. I took morphine. All reasonable bills will be paid, I inclose $10. Dr. E. T. Phillips, 1018 Broadway, is acquainted with my son; also knows me slightly. Consult him. Truly yours,

J. W. HOWRY."

Inclosed with the letter and signed with the name of Stine & Son, but written by Howry, was the following telegram:

"J. H. and H. K. Howry, care of James E. Johnson, Nara, Visa, N.M.: "We have your father's body at our rooms. Wire instructions. If parties are gone forward to them."

Kansas City, June 9.—John W. Howry the Michigan capitalist who took morphine with suicidal intent, at his room, 910 East Ninth street, died at St. Joseph's hospital this morning. John H. Howry, of Denver, son of the deceased, arrived in Kansas City this morning. Mrs. Howry, his widow, whose home is in Springfield, Mass., is on her way to Kansas City. Until she arrives no arrangements for the funeral will be made.

THE HOWRY SONS

J. H. Howry and H. K. Howry are sons of the old man and are interested with him on several New Mexico cattle ranches. A telegram was sent to J. H. Howry at 625 Seventeenth street, Denver, his headquarters, notifying him of his father's act and a reply was received by the police staging that the son would leave for Kansas City at once.

Dr. E. T. Phillips, a friend of Howry, jr., said this morning, "I do not think the old man and his son had any personal trouble, but I am of the opinion that several investments which they made together have been unsuccessful and that led to the suicide."

"The son was here two weeks ago conferring with his father about the purchase of another ranch in Indian Territory and they were on good terms at that time."

L. A. Laugiin, former assistant city councelor, was at the station this morning to see Mr. Howry. Mr. Laughlin said, "I have known the Howrys intimately for twenty-five years, and they are highly connected throughout the northwest. For years the dry goods firm of John W. Howry and Son, of East Saginaw, Mich., was one of the leading houses of the Saginaw valley, and was known far and wide in that locality. Finally the elder Howry and his son John went into the lumber business, and they made great success. At one time the firm was reputed to be worth a million dollars, but I understand that unfortunate investments lately resulted disastrously for the elder Howry, and the family removed west.

"Mr. Howry intended to make Kansas City his home, but made but few comments as to his plans here. He was stopping at the Baltimore for a time, and when he moved from there a short time ago I lost trace of him."

THE HOWRYS IN CANADA.

Some years ago the Howrys purchased the extensive limits of the Dickson Company, which they began to operate on a large scale. They also bought the big saw mills at Fenelon Falls, belonging to the Smith estate, of Port Hope. These mills were thoroughly overhauled and put in first class shape. Misfortune appeared to attend their operations at the Falls. Many unforseen difficulties were experienced and heavy losses incurred, the chief of which was a great fire which broke out in their lumber yards and consumed much of an entire season's cut. The fire began in the evening, and a high wind fanned the little blaze into an immense conflagration, so great that it was plainly visible in Peterborough. The local fire brigade, together with the fire appliances of Lindsay and other places, were despatched to the scene and succeeded, after many hours of heroic struggle, in getting the flames under control.

This calamity so weakened the financial standing of the firm that they were unable to keep up their payments to the Dickson Company, and the latter was forced to take proceedings to protect their interests. The result was that the members of the firm suddenly departed for the United States abandoning all their property. The Bank of Toronto seized the mills and stock of lumber and logs on hand to cover advances made to the firm. The balance of the stock was cut up after which the mills reverted to the Smith Estate. It is understood that the Bank was able to pull out without loss but the Dickson Company was not so lucky.

The mills at Fenelon Falls have been the means of driving more than one person to suicide. Some 25 years ago an American syndicate who were operating the mills failed, and one of the firm committed suicide, as a result. Mr. Enlton Ulyot, of Peterborough, it is said lost a fortune here, as also did Messrs. J. D. Smith & Co., of Port Hope who succeeded to the business after the Americans had quit.

It is said that fully $75,000 was spent by the Howrys in fixing the mill up and putting in modern machinery. After standing idle for some years, the buildings was sold to Messrs. Needler & Saddler of Lindsay, the most of the machinery going for old iron. On the old mill site now stands a fine brick building, used as a power house, for supplying Lindsay with electric current.

AMERICAN INVASION OF THE NORTH-WEST

Story of Big Land Purchase by Syndicate of Americans

WHOLE TOWNSHIPS GATHERED IN

Deal is the Largest Ever Negotiated in Canada—Millions of Americans Will Cross Into Canada During the Next Ten Years

Special to The Times.

Winnipeg, June 10 — The largest land deal ever attempted in the history of Canada has just been brought to a successful close and a number of the directors of the company, which is called the Saskatchewan Valley Land Company, have just returned to Winnipeg after inspecting their property, which consists of 1,100,000 acres of the most fertile country in the southern Saskatchewan and northern Alberta districts of the Northwest Territories.

C. W. Speers, of the immigration department, has taken a leading part in the consummation of the deal and it is to his efforts that the credit of bringing into Canada this company of American capitalists is largely due. The capital represented in the company is $3,500,000, which will be devoted to the improvement and settlement of these lands.

The properties purchased are in two lots. In Assiniboia the lands lie between townships 20 and 31 and run from range 14 west of the second initial meridian to range 5 west of the third meridian. In Saskatchewan the lands lie between townships 37 and 51 and ranges 21 west of the second meridian to range 8 west of the third meridian. In addition to this there are several detached townships along the western edge of the Beaver hills and in the Big Touchwood hills.

All the land purchased was chosen on account of its adaptability for ranching or wheat raising purposes. Both tracts are cut diagonally by the Qu'Appelle, Long Lake and Saskatchewan Railway, which runs from Regina to Prince Albert, and the latter town is situated in the centre of the northern district.

The land in Assiniboia is clear, rolling prairie, which in past ages furnished pasturage for myriads of buffaloes whose bones are still found scattered thickly in all directions. The soil is rich, dark and well drained, the Qu'Appelle river on the south and the Little Saskatchewan on the west providing an adequate outlet for any surplus water. Last Mountain lake, a beautiful sheet of water 38 miles long and from two to five miles in width, runs north and south through the centre of the property.

The northern tract is also rolling prairie and contains more timber. Along the north and south Saskatchewan rivers lie a number of bluffs of poplar, spruce and jackpine, which furnish excellent shelter for grazing cattle and also serve to break the force of the cold winter winds. The soil in both districts is the deep black mould which has proved so favorable for wheat and flax raising, and they contain many broad hay meadows, which will supply ample feed for thousands of horses and cattle.

A number of settlers who are already on the grounds report crops of wheat ranging as high as 50 bushels of No. 1 hard to the acre, and they proudly boast that never in the history of the country has there been a bushel of frosted wheat raised.

The directors, who are among the most prominent business men of the western States, left Minneapolis last Wednesday on a trip of inspection, arriving at Regina on Thursday, when their private car was attached to the regular Prince Albert train and taken to Hanley, where a portion of the party remained, the balance going on as far as Prince Albert. At each of these points, teams were in readiness, and long drives were taken in many directions, covering the different kinds of country contained in the purchase. Without exception they were more than pleased, and before leaving the district each chose several sections for his own and closed the sale with the president of the company, who was of the party.

The sales made since last Wednesday aggregate 250,000 acres, a considerable portion of which was purchased by the residents of Indian Head and vicinity, men who not only are competent judges of land value, but are also thoroughly acquainted with the character of the country in which their purchases lie. Among these purchasers are Andrew McKay, superintendent of the Indian Head experimental station, 22,000 acres; and Messrs. Francis, Gowin and Ferguson, also of Indian Head, areas mounting to about 9,000 acres.

There is a great future for the Northwest. It is estimated that before ten years is over not less than two millions of Americans will have crossed into Canada.

A Safe Cure For Constipation

Some remedies cure this distressing in a day, some in a month, but Nerviline never fails to cure in a few minutes. Just ten drops of Nerviline in sweetened water—that's enough, and away goes the dysentery, cured to stay cured. Nerviline also cures Cramps, Colic, Pain in the Stomach and Sick Headache. It has five times the strength and curative properties of ordinary remedies, and should be in every household. Better buy a 25c bottle and try it. Nerviline is all right.

BABIES CAUGHT ON A RAILWAY BRIDGE

The Little Tots in Perilous Position, and One Killed

LITTLE GIRL HUNG OVER RIVER

And Thus Escapes, While Her Baby Brother is Instantly Killed

Special to The Times.

Woodstock, June 9.—There is desolation in the home of Christopher Babb, foreman at the Canada Furniture Company's factory, who lives on Dundas street west, and yet there is thanksgiving, for the terrible bereavement which visited them almost as suddenly as a lightning stroke, might have been a double one.

The two elder girls of the family, Mabel and Edith, aged 9 and 7, respectively, started out after breakfast after flowers at the Eleventh Line bridge. The two younger children, Bernard, aged 3, and Hilda, 5, were left behind. The two babies decided to follow their elder sisters a little later.

Supposing Mabel and Edith had gone to the C.P.R. bridge, which is situated a few hundred yards west of Dundas street, the little ones climbed over the cattle guard and began to walk down the track.

Some boys were fishing in the river just below the bridge. The little ones toddled along on the track above, and though the boys called to them not to do so, they started to cross the bridge. Just as they were about half way over the shrill whistle of a locomotive sounded from the west and presently the boys on the river bank were horrified to see a heavy freight come dashing down the grade. The engineer saw the children on the bridge and whistled continuously but owing to the grade he could not stop, though he made every effort to do so.

The poor little things on the bridge were evidently overcome with terror. They turned to fly from the approaching danger, but, weakened with fear, they frequently fell. Just as the big locomotive was almost upon them, little Bernard, in his baby terror, crouched down, grasping the iron rails with his baby hands, the front of the engine struck him on the head, crushing his skull.

The little girl, with wonderful presence of mind for one of her tender age, managed to pull herself to the edge of the bridge, and there she hung over the river, while the train thundered past.

The boys who had been fishing found the baby boy lying in a pool of blood beside the track, unconscious from a terrible wound in the back of his head, but the girl, though nearly ready to drop into the river, was unscathed.

TO VISIT CANADA

THE CROWN PRINCE OF SIAM TO VISIT THIS COUNTRY

He will Probably Land at New York, and After Visiting Washington Come to Ottawa

Special to The Times.

Washington, DC, June 10. — Crown Prince Maha Vajiravuch, son of the King of Siam, will visit the United States directly after the coronation of King Edward VII. The Siamese Minister has asked whether it would be agreeable to the President to receive him, and Secretary Hay has given assurances that the President and this Government will be delighted to do so. He will also visit Canada.

The present King of Siam has always maintained a friendly attitude toward the United States. More than 50 years ago treaties were made between Siam and the United States under which that country was opened to foreign intercourse. These treaties were negotiated by J. H. Chandler, of Camden, N.J., who spent 47 years at Bangkok, first as Consul General of the United States and later as instructor and confidant of the present King.

The father of the present King early recommended to his people friendly intercourse with the people of the United States. He was the first ruler to purchase American machinery.

The present King sent a costly exhibit to the Centennial Exposition at Philadelphia, in 1876, and presented the exhibit to the United States Government.

TO SETTLE MINE STRIKE.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., June 10 — President Mitchell left here to-day for New York, where he will meet Carroll D. Wright, the United States Commissioner of Labor, to-day at the Manhattan Hotel. He expects to return to this city to-morrow morning.

Mr. Mitchell went to New York at the request of Mr. Wright, with whom he was in communication to-day. Mr. Wright it is believed will directly represent President Roosevelt. According to Washington despatches, Mr. Wright and Senator Hanna have had a conference with the President during the last two days on the strike situation in the anthracite field.

Whether Mr. Wright carries a plan for peace is not known at this time.

WEATHER NOTES

Probs. To-day— Fresh southwesterly winds; mostly fair and warmer; a few scattered showers in early morning and again at night.

A temperature of 40 degrees was recorded very generally in Ontario and Quebec early this morning, and it is quite possible that light ground frosts may have occurred in some localities. The weather is now likely to turn warmer, and will probably continue so.

PETERBOROUGH, JUNE 10, 1902.

A SUMMER COOLER

Professor Willis L. Moore, chief of the United States Weather Bureau, is now prepared to make midsummer weather comfortable, says a Washington despatch. He has invented a machine which will cool any room on the hottest day. It will keep the temperature at 60 degrees when the thermometer in the street marks up to a hundred. Professor Moore's machine not only reduces the temperature in a room, but cleanses and purifies the air before expelling it. The machine is constructed on the style of a cylinder stove, and its size is regulated by the dimensions of the apartment or building to be cooled. The machine operates on the principle of gravity and is therefore called the "gravity cooling machine." Hot air, filled with dust, is taken into the machine at a temperature of 100 degrees and discharged immediately at 60 degrees, pure and fresh, relieved of its humidity and enervating effects. It works automatically, requires no motive power, and is self-adjusting. The ingredients with which the machine is charged form the secret of the invention, but Professor Moore says the formula does not contain ammonia nor any of the usual chemicals used in producing freezing mixtures. He is keeping the secret until he gets his patents in Europe. The cost is about the same as would be the cost of coal to heat the same space in extremely cold weather.

GERMANY GREAT TASK

The Prussian Government has prepared a bill increasing by 250,000,000 marks, the fund for buying out Polish-speaking proprietors and strengthening the German element in Polish Prussia. This makes the total sum devoted to the purpose since 1886 1886 122,500,000. The policy of expropriation has not hitherto been very successful. The German settlers, although they had obtained their land on very favorable conditions, did not find their surroundings congenial. In many cases they either succumbed to Polish influences, and became, as the Germans express it, "Polonized" or else they got rid of their land at a loss to some Polish bidder and migrated westward to their "own people." It is proposed, if proprietors desire it, to convert a certain number of them into lease-holders or into occupiers of what are called Rentenguter—that is to say, holdings leased out or sold by the Government against the payment of a fixed annual rent, redeemable only with the consent of both the contracting parties. In this way the Government would retain permanent control over the land, and would be enabled to prevent it from finding its way back into Polish hands.

UNGRATEFUL

The work of disinterested philanthropy in relieving the wants of the stricken people of the devastated W. I. Islands is said to have received an initial "frost" from the sufferers themselves. When the Dixie reached Fort de France, laden with gifts of food and clothing for the victims of the volcano, the very people for whom these gifts were intended refused to unload the vessel unless they were paid twice the wages commonly paid for such labor in that part of the world. Finally, the American sailors had to perform the task, for them—a dangerous one and the objects of the swift and practical sympathy got their supplies with the minimum of effort.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Mont Pelee is still in eruption, but no fear is felt that it will do any further damage to the Island of Martinique, and the excitement there is calming down. The people have enough to eat for the present, and if they had the means to rebuild their houses and cultivate their fields such of them as have land not utterly devastated might soon recuperate. Too many, however, have had their lands ruined beyond redemption, and, as those belonged to the class that employed many others, their inability to resume will cause distress in the island for a long time.

The Danger Period For The Nervous and Brokendown In Health is Rapidly Drawing Nigh

Paine's Celery Compound

Banishes All Symptons of Disease and Nourishes The Nervous System

A Precious Boon For Invalids and Convalescents

Paine's Celery Compound has saved thousands of people from nervous prostration and collapse brought on through sleeplessness, weakened nerves and impoverished blood. The great medicine has made thousands well. It has conquered weakness and ill health when everything else has failed.

This is the time when nervous debility and nervous prostration begin to manifest themselves. The coming hot weather will only add fuel to the fire of suffering and disease.

If there is mental depression, loss of energy, lack of vivacity, dullness of the eyes, blanched cheeks and lips, confusion in the head, defective memory, love of solitude—all these are direct indications of coming nervous collapse, and call for the immediate use of that nerve feeder, strength giver and blood enricher, Paine's Celery Compound. This Heaven-sent prescription is a peerless remedy for your dangerous troubles. Mrs. A. Legault, St. Andre St., Montreal, says:

"I would have been a lost woman had I continued six months longer in suffering. Headache, insomnia, nervous prostration and loss of memory made up my troubles, and I feared they would lead to insanity. The doctors treated me, but it did not get any better. My friends advised me to try Paine's Celery Compound. The first bottle gave me little relief, but the second began to work miraculously on my nerves. I continued using the Compound, and after taking nine bottles I can say I am positively cured."

The first sitting of the Court of Revision was held, when the following business was transacted: On request of Sylvester Fife, his sons Edwin A. and Sylvester were placed on the roll. William Stewart appealed to have the acreage and assessment reduced on account of drowned lands; reduced from 50 acres to 21 1-2, and from $1,000 to $700. Chas. Edwards was assessed as tenant for N. E. 1-4 18 concession 8 Jas. Bowie, owner. Lawrence Michaels, tenant for lot 11, con. 6, John Bennett, owner. G. W. and Agex. Eason to be jointly assessed; also Daniel Esson and F. Milton. Council adjourned to 16th June.

A 12 p.c. PRIORITY STOCK

There is no more profitable investment than shares in a legitimate, working mining property. Exception may be taken by some to this statement, but if it is not true why do those shrewd money makers called American Capitalists invest so extensively in mines? The fact is that there is absolutely no risk in a properly conducted, working mine.

Such a mine is the "CHICAGO," operated by the BLACK ROCK MINING CO'Y, LIMITED, incorporated under the laws of Ontario, with a capital of $150,000, in shares of ten cents each. The mine is situated in Yavapai County, Arizona, THE RICHEST MINERAL SECTION OF THE UNITED STATES, the "Ore Grande" and "Octave" mines are our nearest neighbors; they pay large dividends now; the ore on the "CHICAGO" is of exactly the same grade, BUT IN LARGER BODY.

THE EXTENT OF THE VEIN of the "CHICAGO" is unknown, the outcroppings show on the surface 220 ft. to 450 ft. wide the whole length of the property (6-7 of a mile) and all of the development including Tunnel, Shaft and Cross-Cuts IS INTIRELY IN ORE FROM THE SURFACE; there is by actual calculation TWO MILLION TONS OF ORE IN SIGHT NOW.

The shaft is down over 100 feet and work is being pushed with vigor.

The opinion of every miner and expert who has seen this property is that there is not a mine in the country or bigger prospects than the "CHICAGO" mine to-day.

It is operated by reliable and experienced men at the mine, and its Directorate is composed of successful business men.

Are YOU open for an investment of this character? A limited amount of Treasury Stock, with a priority of 12 1-2 per cent. annual dividend is now offered at par, TEN CENTS PER SHARE.

TO THE ADVERTISER

Do you realize that it would be easy for you to increase your business to the extent of several thousand dollars a year?

Do you know that hundreds of people living in the country surrounding Peterborough never see your name in the newspaper they read; that they don't know why it would be to their advantage to deal with you?

Do you know that these people are sending to Toronto for goods they could buy from you, if they knew you wanted to sell them?

Do you realize that the merchants of Toronto and Montreal are reaching out for the trade of this, and other towns; that they are spending thousands of dollars in advertising, to tell people who ought to buy from YOU all about their goods?

Are YOU telling the people about YOUR GOODS, and the LOW PRICES at which you sell them?

You CAN NOT do so thoroughly, if you don't advertise in THE TIMES, because

THE TIMES reaches people whom you can't reach through any other medium.

At least 60 per cent. of the people living in the surrounding country read "THE TIMES" and NO OTHER newspaper. These people have money to spend and will spend it in Toronto because they think they can buy more cheaply there than here, if you don't secure their custom.

Use THE TIMES to tell them you can give them better bargains than they can get in Toronto.

You'll make money, you'll increase your business, you'll get new customers if you advertise in THE TIMES.

We are going to make THE TIMES the best daily paper in Eastern Ontario. We have made arrangements to improve the local news service and to push the paper to the foremost place in the front ranks. We want you to advertise in THE TIMES because it'll pay you to do so. Every dollar you spend for advertising in The Times will return with good interest added.

Remember—No matter how much business you are doing now—YOU CAN DO MORE if you advertise in THE TIMES.

TRY IT AND SEE IF YOU CAN'T.

ARE YOU STOUT.

CURE YOURSELF! [illegible]

HEROES AND HEROINES.

SERMON BY
GEORGE H. HEPWORTH.

But he that endureth to the end shall be saved.—St. Matthew, x., 22.

Everybody admires heroism. The qualities of character which hurl one to the forefront in a critical moment, careless of danger, reckless of consequences, claim our unstinted applause.

But in the emergency, when the air vibrates with excitement, a man becomes intoxicated with courage, ordinary soldiers do deeds which would grace a god of Olympus, and the coward is so rare an exception that he becomes invisible. Human nature, when impelled by a strong passion or a noble ambition, surprises itself. The poor village lout has a capacity for endurance and brilliant work which needs only time and incentive to become divine. The rattle of musketry is the stimulus to great achievement. The perilous expedition, with sudden death lurking in ambush, will always find volunteers.

Man is a rude, crude, but grand sort of creature, with the making of an archangel in him. There is a mettle in his soul which has not yet been fully called forth. He is a Toledo blade which the hot fire of circumstance will some time temper. He is nobler than he knows or ever can know until he is forced to show himself by opportunity.

So much for physical heroism. It is generally exhibited in the gaze of the world. There is another kind, however, and a higher kind, which never sees the light of day—the quiet heroism of an obscure life. The majority of our heroes and heroines will be unknown to us until we get to heaven. They are not now walking on hilltops, where they can be observed of all men, but are living quietly and sacrificing patiently in their narrow sphere, waiting for the peace and rest which will come "at eventime." I have known many such, and have never looked into their sad faces without thinking that there is a courage to which that of the battlefield is a trivial circumstance, the courage which endures with resignation and meets inevitable suffering and misfortune with a calmness which is God's best gift.

Here, for example, is a woman who on her wedding day saw nothing but blue sky and sunshine. It seemed as though no shadow could throw itself across her path. A light heart and lips of laughter—nothing more. She did not know her own strength, for she had never been tested. But the avalanche swept down the mountain side and crushed and buried all her hopes. The day was turned to night, and even the stars refused to come out. Sickness, death, poverty followed in logical succession. She was face to face with a hard world, her children crying for bread. The friends of other days had their attention called elsewhere, and they saw her not. Alone in the struggle! And yet she bravely set to work, won her way to a livelihood, walked her lonely path in calm confidence that God still lived, brushed away the tears and grappled with fate. The struggle has told on her, for her hair is grey, and there is a look in her face which comes only from sorrow hard to bear.

You do not know her, or perhaps care to know her, but that life is one long list of heroisms, and when we all get yonder and look back on the past we shall see the path she has travelled, the upward climb of her years, and give her the meed of praise which a thoughtless and ignorant world now refuses. There are no nobler qualities of character than her uncomplaining endurance, her persistent patience and her undimmed faith. The future has crowns for such as this, and God and the angels walk with them on their way to the New Jerusalem.

I know a man who has given his life to an aged parent, and another who has been forbidden for years, shut in from the pleasures which we most prize, and still another whose life has been a long sacrifice for his children, and another who—but why continue the list? I do but remind you of a similar instance within your own knowledge.

To meet such a fate as that requires the sublimest courage, not the courage of despair, but the courage of faith. There are flowers even in such byways as these, joys which cheer the heart and spots of happiness like oases in the desert. It is strange, but the presence of God and the conscious companionship of angels can bring bright days and starry nights. It is not our surroundings, after all, that bring peace, for if peace is in the heart it throws the light over all.

The root and foundation of this heroism is religion. There must be faith that above us and around us are helping and cheering influences, that earth and heaven are within telepathic distance of each other, and that what strength we need will be given us for the asking if we are to meet sorrow and misfortune with quiet fortitude. And the more we realize the presence of God, the easier it is to bear burdens. If we could once catch a glimpse of an angel's face—and some tell us they have done this—we should be light-hearted even in the dark. At any rate we can have faith that loved ones are near, though invisible, and it helps us as nothing else can.

WEEDS AND FLOWERS.

SERMON BY
GEORGE H. HEPWORTH.

Stand fast in the faith, quit you like men, be strong.—I Corinthians, xvi., 13.

I have a neighbor in the country who has a garden which he treats in a very peculiar way. His theory is that all forces of nature are good-natured, and that all products of nature should be encouraged. Whatever is natural, he tells me, is admirable. A weed is just as natural as a rose and has just as clear a right to flourish. It is, therefore, unfair to discriminate against the weed by pulling it up and destroying its life.

Wishing to see how his theory worked in practice, I wandered about his enclosure and found a curious state of affairs. The weeds were in a more flourishing condition than the roses; in fact, they had taken possession of the ground and dominated it to such an extent that the flowers had well-nigh given up the struggle for existence, and were on the verge of despair. I vainly tried to convince my neighbor that if he wanted flowers he must pull up the weeds, for the two do not get on well together. They can't be made to harmonize, because weeds are greedy and refuse to give flowers a chance.

My neighbor has another peculiarity. He carries his theory into the education of his boy. All natural impulses are good impulses, he tells me, and it is not right to give a child a bias toward this or that standard. Let him show himself just as he is, giving perfectly free vent to his good and bad qualities of character, and by and bye he will achieve a well-rounded and well-balanced soul. It is the weed theory transferred to human nature, and so far as my observation of the boy goes it works very badly. I rather fear that later on that father's heart will be filled with regrets.

You cannot build a house without a plan. If you attempt to do so you will have a curious combination, whose inconvenience is only equalled by its ugliness. A house without a plan is not worth having. It is not true that all natural impulses are good, for some impulses, when gratified, produce unmixed evil. Not everything that is is right, for some things are wholly wrong and must be held in check at any cost. If you give the weeds as fair a chance as the flowers the time will come when the flowers will die and nothing but the weeds will be left. It is just as necessary to pull up certain natural qualities as to pull up weeds, and unless you do so you will find yourself without any character at all.

There is a stern and awful truth in the injunction to pluck your eye out if it offends you. It is a bold figure, and startling, but it has a profound meaning. If, for instance, you give free rein to your selfishness it will grow apace to rule and ruin. It will creep over your soul like a smouldering fire on the prairie, and burn the life out of everything as it goes. You must treat it as you would a weed, and without any compunction tear it up and hurl it as far from you as possible. And if you have a quick or an ill temper, it is necessary to subdue it if you would have peace or happiness. Your very nature must be conquered, no matter how hard the fight may be. It must be caught, harnessed, bitted, tamed and taught that you are its master and will be obeyed.

You are simply a bundle of possibilities in the beginning, and if you allow them full swing you will become a mass of contradictions. Your business as an immortal soul is to look at all your tendencies, good and bad, squarely in the face, and then set to work to annihilate some of them, to encourage others, and, with a definite purpose in view, to give yourself the shape of honest and virile manhood. This is not an easy, but it is a glorious, task, and it ends in the victory over self, the sublime mastery which brings self-respect and that dignity which comes with poise and conscience.

The object of religion is to teach you that this is the best and noblest thing to do, and that it is the only thing which it will pay you to do. That struggle is worth your while, for when you find yourself well in hand you will possess that quiet kind of power which blesses you and the whole world alike. This life gives you that sort of discipline, and when the lesson is learned you will be ready for any other life that may come to you. Earth will become a stepping-stone to heaven, for a whole man is fitted for any world in God's universe. Plant your garden with flowers and then see that weeds do not interfere with their growth.

Must be Deadly.

Attention has been called, says a recent issue of The Speaker, to the mysterious plan of warfare invented by Admiral Cochrane, tenth Earl of Dundonald (grandfather of the present Lord Dundonald, our new G.O.C.), early in the last century, which, it was claimed, would result in the absolute annihilation of an enemy. Dundonald himself believed that if his plan was once put into effect it would make war impossible for the future, and there seem to have been some grounds for this belief, although the secret has never yet been divulged. George IV., when Regent, appointed a secret committee to consider it. The committee reported that the method would be irresistible and infallible, but shrank from recommending its adoption. Forty years later a commission was again appointed to consider it. They reported against it on the grounds that if any experiments were made the secret would be at the command of every nation, and also that it would not accord with the feelings and principles of civilized warfare. Twice during the Crimean war Dundonald urged his plan upon the Government. The second time he offered to reduce Sebastopol by his invention, but the War Office laid down stipulations which he would not accept, and the secret remains a secret still. The present Earl of Dundonald, besides being a successful cavalry leader and the possessor of one of the reputations made in the present war, is also an inventor. It would be interesting to know whether he is in possession of his grandfather's secret or whether that secret died with its discoverer.

A good story is told in a musical paper of the Principal of a well-known colonial academy of music. He was much pestered with letters from young composers, asking his advice. On one occasion he received a letter from a country organist asking in which of two ways he should write a certain musical passage. The professor, being a blunt man, wrote back on a postcard, "It doesn't matter a ——." His offended correspondent sent the postcard to the Academy Board, who sat in solemn conclave on it, and wrote to the Principal for an explanation. He answered thus: "Dear Sirs,—I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter. I have considered the matter in all its bearings, and it really doesn't matter a ——. Yours, etc."—London Globe.

The Poultry Yard.

Qualities of the Andalusian.

The Andalusian is a member of the Mediterranean family; it might be called a Blue Laced Minorca or Leghorn, as one might wish, since it is formed like them. Some follow the more gamey type of the Leghorn or Spanish, while others are built on the exact lines of the Minorca. These fowls undoubtedly came from the union or cross of the solid white and solid black fowl. In early days when we had the old time pure white and pure black Spanish with but small white lobes or face, they came of that type, and now we have them of both the Leghorn and the Minorca type.

The slate-blue colored hen can be seen in almost every flock of barnyard fowls. Some of them are laced like the Andalusian. The same manner of color and lacing is seen in the Jersey Blues. The shade of color and style of marking are not unusual, but the real beauty is best shown as cultivated in the well bred Andalusians of today, for the elegance of which, as seen in this country, much credit is due Mr. Newton Cosh, who has done so much for this breed in the way of cultivating size, shape and color to American notions of beauty.

The Andalusians are a fine sized fowl; the females range from 4 1-2 to 6 pounds in weight, the males from 5 1-2 to 7 pounds, with an inclination for those that have the Minorca type to range a little larger in size than the others. They are wonderfully good egg producers; their eggs are large and white in color of shell. We should class the Andalusian among the best of our Leghorns for egg producers, and might be called a general-purpose Leghorn, for they are not only good egg producers, but are equally good table poultry, and will bear confinement in yards and do well.

Learning Wisdom From Mistakes.

The first and greatest mistake I made was to get every new breed that I could hear or read about, when the fact was I only had enough room for a few of one breed. I did not pay enough attention to the health of my chicks, and the result was that cholera got among them, and my young chicks died faster than I could bury them. I got heartsick, and let my stock run down to only a few for family use. I took all the poultry papers I could read, but they did not help me. I let my chickens run where they pleased and forage where they could find food; only, they were not allowed inside of my barn or waggon house under any circumstances.

When Plymouth Rocks came into prominence I sent to Massachusetts and got a pair of high up, pure blood, registered Rocks. These I kept one year and got perfectly sick of them, as the egg production was not what I expected, and the meat was tough and beefy. But I know now where I failed.

Eggs are what the farmers want of poultry. If an amateur wants information along these lines he naturally turns to the poultry paper editor, but how often he gets disappointed! Many an ignorant beginner has sought for light where he was led to expect light, and got it not; dropped the musket and deserted the army, when a few words of counsel and advice would have made him a good fighter.

You must have bones to cut to make the bone cutter of use, and many farmers are not so situated that they can obtain them; to such the commercial crushed bones, or meat, are more advantageous. I pound up with a stone sledge all I can get, and the hens relish it much. As to vegetable cutters, the farmer who keeps only a few hens does not feel like putting out cash for a hand cutter. But do not deprive your hens of chopped vegetables. Take a common hand hoe to the blacksmith, and have him rap it out of the handle and straighten it out perfectly straight and put it back into the handle, and sharpen the edge if it needs it. Take an old butter tub or a wooden pail and put in your vegetables to be chopped. Chop your cutter around the sides of the tub, and you will be surprised how quickly you can reduce any kind of vegetable to a fine feed fit to mix with your hot mash.

Also for chopping clover. Take good, clean clover, all you can grasp tightly in the left hand, sweep away a clean place on the floor, and with a square-bitted hand axe chop off the cuts as short as you want, and as near the hand as you dare and be safe, and in two minutes you can chop a pailful of nice, fine clover. I feed one day chopped vegetables and the next day chopped clover in my hot mash.

Some have trouble with hens eating their eggs in cold weather. Poultry papers tell us if hens are fed a proper ration they will not eat their eggs. Admitting this, how many common farmers can or will go to the trouble to feed their hens a proper ration. And those who will not feed a scientific ration to hens I am advising.

Take a boot or shoe box at least twenty inches deep, make a partition in it large enough for your hen's nests; for big hens twelve inches square, for smaller hens ten inches square, will be big enough. Cut a round hole at the top six or seven inches in diameter, according to the size of your hen; nail the top on tight, stop all cracks where light can come in, put a step on the outside low enough so the hen can stand on it and look in and see the eggs, but not so she can reach them with her bill, and when she hops into the hole the nest will be dark, and if she drops into the nest it is not so large that she can reach the egg. She will fly out and off, and go to work and forget the egg, and you have saved it for your own use. The hen must needs stand on something in order to peck the egg. These boxes I nail up around the henhouse about two feet from the floor. Some farmers let the hens roost on poles at different heights, but nests want to be all on a level. Put a floor of poles or loose boards about three feet above the roost and cover with straw, and you will not have frosted combs if your house is anywhere reasonably warm, even if the air on the floor is below freezing.

If these thoughts are of value, and more are wanted I will be glad to benefit my fellow-farmers. I write of what I know, and have tried.—D. Dole, New Idea Poultry Yard, Ellenburg Centre, N.Y.

The Poultry Yard.

An English poultry expert says:—Both in the States and in France the system of feeding poultry generally followed is the exact opposite to our own, the fowls getting soft food at night and corn in the morning. The poultry-keeper may well ask which is right, and the answer apparently is that there is very little difference in the result. An experiment recently tried in America, two lots of fowls getting just the same treatment, but one having soft food in the morning and corn at night, and the other the opposite, resulted in the fowls getting soft food in the morning laying slightly better than the others in winter. This is what one might expect. To set against this, however, was the fact that the fowls getting soft food at night voided double the amount of manure. The reason of this, of course, is that soft food is more quickly digested, but in those poultry houses where the droppings from the fowl-houses are systematically collected and utilized, there is a distinct value in feeding soft food at night, in preference to the morning. There is far less trouble to the feeder when corn is given in the morning, and it really seems as though the value of soft food for breakfast has been over-estimated.

Sulphur for Fowls and Swine.

When fowls are attacked with cholera I find that a little sulphur given in the food will check it. One tablespoonful mixed with the morning's food for thirty fowls and given once a month is sufficient when they are in health. When much sulphur is fed, with exposure to a cold and damp atmosphere, it will cause stiffness in the joints. Sulphur put in the dust bath with ashes is a preventive against lice. A little sprinkled in the nests and under setting hens routs these pests.

It is also good to give swine in case of cholera or sickness followed with vomiting caused from overfeeding. It regulates the stomach and liver without further trouble. I have given two teaspoonfuls twice a day in severe cases in sweet milk or sprinkled on some sliced vegetables.—Emma L. Hill, Damascus, N.Y.

To Make Hens Lay.

Many people complain that they cannot get their hens to lay in winter. One very strong complaint comes to us from one of our subscribers. To aid such we give the experience of one who resides in the cold climate of South Dakota.

Many farmers fail to get any eggs during the winter months, and, from the experience of others more successful, it must be concluded that they either do not care about winter eggs, or that they neglect to so manage and feeds the fowls as to induce them to lay. An interesting experiment was made with two lots of pullets, showing influence of feed and care on the production of eggs in winter, by Rose Seelye-Miller, in the cold climate of South Dakota. The trial was reported in a western journal as follows:—

Two pens of pullets were placed in conditions as nearly equal as possible. One pen was designed for breeding, and it was desired that they should not lay until toward spring. The other pen, containing 18 hens, was designed to produce eggs during the winter, and the eggs were not intended at all for hatching.

The experiment began in December. Let it be remembered that the care, temperature and all other things were equal, save the food, and that the pen designed for late laying contained two less fowls.

During December the early layers produced five and a quarter dozen eggs, and the other pen not an egg. In January, the early layers produced ten dozen and three eggs; the late layers seven eggs. In February the early layers produced nine dozen eggs, and the other pen one dozen. In March the early layers produced fifteen dozen eggs, and the late layers three and a half dozen. In April came the change; the early layers laid ten dozen and nine eggs, and the late layers fifteen dozen and four eggs. From this time the breeders were kept laying, and produced in May 28 eggs, the early layers 142 eggs. This shows conclusively that egg-producing may be governed in a great measure. The feeding was very simple, and the early-laying fowls were fed as follows:—In the morning, boiled lean meat, chopped, with scraps from the table, and during the day all the wheat screenings they would eat, with corn twice a week. They were, of course, watered twice daily, and had some milk to drink.

The pen not intended for laying were fed on poor wheat screenings, with corn. These fowls grew and waxed fat, until they seemed too fat, and no doubt were, for laying. As spring came on the food was changed, and as it was the natural time for laying, too, they produced eggs in abundance.

The ordinary poultry raiser feeds too much corn and wheat. Hens are fed liberally twice a day and are fed on a steady diet of one or two things, either corn or wheat, and both fattening. Hence our hens do not pay, and poultry raising is a snare and a delusion to the one who is not wideawake and up to date in caring for the fowls.

Meat is known to be a great egg-producer, and there is now upon the market a feed prepared from refuse which makes an ideal food for fowls. Bones ground and plenty of milk are also very good in egg production.

Cleanliness and warmth are absolutely essential. A hen with a frozen comb might about as well be killed, unless she is a valuable one, whose eggs will make good hatching in the spring.

We feed our cattle for beef, and our hogs for lean or fat; we feed cows for milk or butter. Then why not discriminate in feeding our poultry too?

If thought were used more we should find our purses growing fat. Lean hens and hogs may be desirable, but a fat pocketbook never fails of appreciation, and the need of strenuous labor is decreasing.—The Country Gentleman.

London, June 10.—The French are causing more trouble in St. George's Bay, Nfld. They bring in liquor from St. Pierre and sell it to the people on the treaty coast, and cause thereby a good deal of drunkenness and demoralization among a normally quiet and temperate people. Several disgraceful orgies have occurred at Bay St. George, which the resident magistrate and policeman were unable to cope with. Of course the liquor besides being of the worst quality, is smuggled in in defiance of the law, the vendors, if remonstrated with, declaring that they have a perfect right to do as they please under their treaty rights. The question will shortly be a leading topic, as Mr. Chamberlain, and the British Government are pledged to procure a settlement with the French Government of the old-standing French shore dispute.

Rochester, N.Y., June 9 — Sportsmen from far and near are gathering for the annual meeting and tournament of the New York State Association for the Protection of Fish and Game, which opens here to-morrow under the auspices of the Rochester Rod and Gun Club, and continues through the week. Interest in the meeting is running high and it promises to be the most notable in the history of the association. The principal event will be the competition for the famous Dean Richmond trophy, which this year is to be at inanimate targets instead of at live birds as heretofore, the change having been necessitated by the legislative enactment abolishing live bird trap shooting in the state.

Kingstown St. Vincent, Saturday June 10.—During the great eruption of Mont Pelee, Island of Martinique, yesterday morning, the detonations were heard in the neighboring islands, and heavy clouds of smoke issued simultaneously from the Soufriere volcano on this island, which alarmed the inhabitants.

The Island of St. Lucia was obscured by dust to a distance of three miles, and a steamship experienced difficulty in finding the harbor of Castries.

At 2 o'clock in the afternoon of Friday pitch darkness prevailed here. The three Americans—Prof. Jagger, the geologist, of Harvard University; Dr. Hovey, assistant curator of the Museum of Natural History, New York; and Geo. C. Curtis, who ascended the Soufriere May 31—made another ascent on Thursday. They entered a dense, dusty fog, which impeded their progress, as they made their way up the precipitous trail around the cliffs with extraordinary courage and perseverance, and once more reached the edge of the crater, on the east side, reaching an altitude of 3,20 feet above the sea, carrying with them an aneroid and a barometer. They heard water boiling and spattering in the depths of the crater; but nothing could be seen through the fog, though the party waited a considerable time. The ascent occupied five hours.

The return of settlers to the devastated area is discouraged by Prof. Jagger, who is of the opinion that the crater, continuing active, may emit poisonous gases at any moment, without warning, and cause the death of many people from asphyxiation.

London, June 10.—It is reported from Pretoria that on the eve of the peace meeting at Vereniging, on May 15, over sixty arrests were made by the military authorities in Pretoria of persons concerned in an extensive plot. Their program was almost identical with that of the Cordua conspiracy. They were to blow up the Government buildings, the Palace of Justice, and Lord Kitchener's residence, and to spike all the guns in the artillery barracks. The report says that lawyers and chemists and Boer and Dutch prisoners on parole were concerned.

London, June 10.—Lord Kitchener, in a despatch from Pretoria under today's date, announced the surrender on Saturday and Sunday of 3,500 rifles, of which 446 were handed in by Cape Colony rebels. The remainder were principally from General De Wet's men. The British commander added that the cheers given by the Boers for King Edward were hearty.

A despatch from Bloemfontein says a strong contrast to the good feeling between Boer and Briton is the bitterness existing between the burghers who are surrendering under the peace terms and those who surrendered during the campaign. When the Boer leaders came to Bloemfontein, previous to the conclusion of peace, they curtly refused to shake hands with those who had previously surrendered. The general belief is that relations between those two classes of Boers will be embittered for a long time.

AN OVERWORKED GOVERNOR.

Hartford, Conn., June 10. — Governor George P. McLean has announced that the condition of his health will forbid his becoming a candidate for a second term. The work of the last year has brought him close to a nervous collapse, and his physician has ordered complete rest for months.

Washington, June 9.—Acting Secretary of the Navy Darling has just received a report from Commander George W Mentz of the United States Steamship Sterling upon the relief work done by that ship in Martinique and St. Vincent. The Sterling was the station ship at San Juan, Porto Rico, and arrived at the scene of distress next to the little Potomac with relief supplies. The report shows that within nine hours after receiving the orders of the Secretary of the Navy the ship was ready to sail.

Commander Mentz thus describes the eruption on the 20th, which was greater than the one on the 8th, which destroyed St. Pierre:

"Large stones fell in the town, some six inches in diameter; the hail of pebbles was greater, as also was the deposit of mud and dust. The people naturally were in a panic, and, shrieking with fright, flew to the water, taking boats or swimming to get on board vessels in the harbor. About 3,000 were thus struggling at one time to get to a place of safety, among them women scantily clad with nothing on but their night robes. For some time it looked as if Fort de France would meet the fate of St. Pierre. Except, however, for a deposit of good-sized stones, pebbles, mud and dust, no damage was done to the town itself so far as I know.

"Where on the 8th inst. the destruction seemed to stop at a line running east from the village of Carbet, it now, as far as vegetation is concerned, extends to the edge of the town of Fort de France; so that, although the relief sent by the United States Government is not absolutely needed at the present time I am confident that, in the course of a few weeks, there will be much distress, and it will be a very welcome supply."

New York, June 9.— Captain Barry of the cruiser Dixie, just returned from bearing supplies to the volcano victims in the West Indies, said, regarding the conditions in the islands: "Conditions are not as bad on Martinique as on St. Vincent, because on Martinique the people are fairly well supplied with everything, and there is no danger in future eruptions. Only a small area of twelve square miles has been devasted, but on St. Vincent the destruction extends over a third of the island. Plantations, orchards, and everything have been ruined, and the means of subsistence have been taken away from the people, and thousands have been left in need of some kind of support."

Of the scientific results of the Dixie's expedition, Prof. I. S. Russell of the University of Michigan said: "The over heated rocks bursting against the water near the base of the mountain, caused superheated steam, and burst the mountain open."

Professor Hill, who investigated the outbreak for the Government, said: "Months will be required for the final scientific decisions. We have had an eminently satisfactory trip. The rocks and volcanic matter which we have collected must be cut into sections and analyzed before we can give extended opinions for publication."

Professor Hill advocates the establishment of scientific observations in the Caribbean district for the detection of the imminence of volcanic eruptions, so that human life may be saved—a scientific institution easily and economically founded and maintained.

"I think Pelee will smoke and remain active for months," said Prof. Russell. "It probably will be a case of Vesuvius again. I hardly think Pelee will smolder and blow up in one gigantic explosion. I believe it will quiet down and gradually die away. A new lake will form in the crater, and tropical verdure will grow where there is now nothing but black grey ash. The people will build new villages and towns at its foot and again hold their holiday picnics on its sides, and Pelee will remain quiet for probably fifty or sixty years.

"There should at least be a seismograph on every volcano — an instrument which records the tremors of the earth. It was operated by the Chinese centuries ago. The instrument would give the populace ample warning. The seismograph at Vesuvius for thirty-five years has done satisfactory and valuable work.

"There is absolutely no occasion for such tremendous loss of life as occurred at St. Pierre. I do not think Fort de France is in much danger from the volcano, but I do think she is in danger from a tidal wave. In volcanic districts these tidal waves are of frequent occurrence. They are caused by a sudden upheaval of the sea-bottom.

"In case of such an upheaval Fort de France would surely be wiped out.

"As a safety position from tidal waves Morne Rouge is finely situated, as it is built on a high ridge. It is about the only town in the volcanic belt so situated."

London, June 8 — The court was greatly annoyed by the premature publication of an unauthorized programme of the coronation procession in the Abbey, but its repudiation of the detailed account in The Times merely implies that the general scheme had not received the finishing touches. The official programme, which was issued by the Duke of Norfolk last night, contains no surprises. The Bishops of Oxford and Norwich will support the Queen in place of the Bishops of Winchester and London, and the pallor canopy will be held above her by the Duchesses of Marlborough, Sutherland, Montrose and Portland. The bearers of the King's canopy will be Lord Rosebery, Earl Spencer, Earl Cadogan and Lord Derby. The King's crown will be carried by the Duke of Marlborough, and the Queen's crown by the Duke of Roxburghe. Mr. F. S. Dymoke, who claimed the right to appear in Westminster Hall as the King's champion and to challenge all and sundry to mortal combat, has been accorded the peaceful task of carrying the British flag.

Montreal, June 10. — Arthur Burnet, the broker who was arrested on a charge of bribing Hetu, the representative of Mr. J. G. H. Bergeron in the St. James' election, to falsify the returns, and also of bribing electors in favor of Mr. Joseph Burnet, the successful candidate, has changed his plea of not guilty to that of guilty.

A petition has already received 400 signatures asking for clemency on these grounds:

That the accused pleads guilty to the charges brought against him:

That he sincerely regrets having committed these offences, and that they were the result of irreflection and ignorance of the law:

That the accused belongs to an honorable family:

That the great publicity given to his offence is already a considerable punishment, and that a severe sentence would cause his ruin.

Rhodes as a Phrase-Maker.

Rhodes rather fancied himself as a phrase-maker, says a correspondent of The New York Sun. A writer who saw a good deal of him, describes him as repeating over and over again some saying of his own with which he seemed to have been pleased as soon as he had uttered it.

Perhaps one of the best-known phrases is the "unctuous rectitude" with which he reproved a certain class of his opponents in this country. No one in future who wishes to discuss the traits of the British character will be able to do without those two words. Some other sayings of Rhodes which have been left on record are as follows:—

My life is a temporary one, but the country will remain after me.

If I forfeit my flag, what have I left? If you take away my flag you take away everything.

Remember that sentiment rules half the world.

"It is no use for us to have big ideas if we have not got the money to carry them out," Rhodes once remarked to Gen. Gordon.

It took me fifteen years to get a mine, but I got it. Though my boat may be slow in the race, I know exactly what I am starting for.

I have found out one thing, and that is, if you have an idea, and it is a good idea, if you will only stick to it you will come out all right.

The only awkward thing is the progress of Time. We do get older, and become a little hurried in our ideas because of that terrible Time.

After the raid: "Kruger and I have met twice. The first trick I won (referring to Bechuanaland), he won the second. There is no doubt who will win the odd!"

When timorous friends were begging him to be discreet, and foes were saying he dare not "face the music," he answered both, once and for all: "I am not going to lie about it!"

When Dr. Jameson was convicted and sentenced for the part he took in the raid, Mr. Rhodes exclaimed: "What a tribute to the moral worth of the nation that has jumped the world!"

I will challenge any man or woman, however broad their ideas may be, who objects to go to church or chapel to say they would not sometimes be better for an hour or an hour and a half in a church.

In the Oriel Hall, Oxford, in 1899, he said: "I have been interested in Aristotle's definition of virtue in the 'Ethics' as the 'highest activity of the soul living for the highest object in a perfect life.' That has always seemed to me the noblest rule for a man to follow, and I have made it my rule from the first."

"Life is too short, after all," he used to say, "to worry about previous lives. From the cradle to the grave—what is it? Three days at the seaside. Just that and nothing more. But although it is only three days, we must be doing something. I cannot spend my time throwing stones into the water. But what is worth while doing?"

A Waggon Journey.

After so much about Rhodes one may have a bit of South African life. It is a description of a waggon journey a score of years ago, and occurs in a new novel, entitled "Reversed on Appeal," by John Ross:—

"Pale pink over the trees, and bar gold glittering through the branches saw the large waggon equipped and drawn with open front, facing the kraal gate, towards which extended a double line of shining brown oxen, each with a white streak down its back like fourteen brethren bearing up the flashing chain, wooed at each pair by a heavy pole with wooden yokes for two. At the head of the uneven line of glancing horns and switching tails stood the powerful bronze figure, thong in hand, of a Zulu in a sleeveless blouse and short blue pants, the leader of the horned cavalcade. A Kaffir boy held a grey horse ready saddled, tossing his head and rattling his bit with impatience, a contrast to the drowsy cattle. . . . There was a din of shrill Kaffir shouts, weeping women, yelping dogs, stamping feet and rattling chains as Mouji flourished his long whip, and the Zulu dragged at the leading strap like a son of Anak, as he guided the string of cattle out of the kraal into the open field.

"Her uncle rode his grey horse within speaking distance behind the waggon, and when they passed the large green orchard, with its brown pears, purple plums, and yellow oranges ripening in the branches, he rode in among the trees and returned with a small basket of peaches, which he handed to Belle at the end of the waggon, as they moved slowly on through prickly cactus hedges, and bushes of red and yellow mimosa blossom. . . .

"She had travelled in the waggon before, with the mid-curtain that was lowered at night, to shut her off into a little nunnery of her own. She knew the bed, so innocently tied on one side, in which she was advised to slumber, and supposed to sleep, during the ceaseless jolts of a moonlight journey. And she remembered how she pitied all men, and women, too, who went down to the sea in ships, if their berths were like her berth, and their tossings like her tossings. She knew the boxes tied with thongs that served for seats and lockers, and that she must fasten up everything, if she did not wish a bruised foot or a wounded head, when the quick mounts and sudden dips came under the irresistible strain of fourteen oxen."

It is estimated that the Kaffirs in the diamond mines at Kimberley, South Africa, steal £250,000 worth of diamonds in a year.

The Lion Bridge, near Sangang, in China, is the longest in the world, being 5¼ miles from end to end. The roadway is 70 feet above water.

A large house in a Berlin suburb has been rented by several acquaintances, married and single, who are going to try to run the place on the principles of communal life.

"Take the men of prominence in the United States to-day, and pick out the true gentlemen. I'll wager that nine out of ten of them never had a high school education, let alone a college one." So says Mark Twain.

Gold has been mined in Georgia for nearly three-quarters of a century. Previous to the discovery of gold in California the mines of Georgia furnished the greater part of the gold produced in the United States.

MOST WONDERFUL OF PIANO PLAYERS.

The Cecilian

There are many piano-players offered to the public—all said to be perfect. But after having played on the Cecilian Piano-Player it will be at once pronounced the one "Perfect" player The tone is such that people are charmed from the first note.

It is so simple in construction that anyone, without the ability but with the desire to play some of the most classical and difficult compositions of the greatest masters, finds no difficulty whatever when using the Cecilian.

It is completely under the control of the operator, responding to the slightest touch—and the tone can be moderated according as the player desires.

The power of individual expression in the Cecilian is really wonderful—astonishing people whenever it is heard.

It has been endorsed by leading musicians in different parts of the country and is the delight of all who know it.

This piano-player is on daily exhibition at our handsome warerooms, and is worthy a visit from every lover of beautiful music.

ROSSLAND BOOM.

Rossland, B.C., June 10. — Rossland mines during the past week shipped 4,742 tons of ore and Boundary mines 11,100 tons. Recent exhaustive tests of the ores of the Rossland camp show that a twelve to one concentration can be effected at a total cost not exceeding one dollar per ton, and ten dollar ore, which has hitherto been classed as waste, will with this new process yield a net profit of $4.25 per ton. Taking into account losses in concentration and cost of smelting concentrates, six dollar ore, of which there is an inexhaustible supply, will yield a substantial profit.

—Everybody reads The Times.

—The usual June rush for marriage licenses has set in.

—The season for bass and maskilonge begins on the 15th.

—A child's purse and a ladies chatelaine bag await owners at the Police station.

—When you miss the Morning Times, call, or telephone The Times Bookstore.

—The headquarters of the Durham Field Battery has been changed from Port Hope to Cobourg.

—St Luke's Sunday School pic-nic is announced to take place at Jubilee Point on July 11.

—The daily trip afforded by Calcutt's Line of steamers is sure to become popular.

—The Times will be delivered daily to subscribers in Peterborough and Ashburnham for 25c per month.

—We stop the press once again to ask, what is being done in regard to properly celebrating Coronation Day?

—Holidays are becoming a drug in the market. How would it do for Mayor Denne to proclaim a few working days?

—There is a constant pond of filthy water standing in front of the Palace Restaurant, on George street. This should not be, as it raises a stench in hot weather.

—Wm. Hogg, of Toronto, has made an offer to sell the Eugenic Falls to that city for $400,000. The falls are 85 miles from Toronto, with a drop of 80 feet. This power is no better or more valuable than the Burleigh Falls power.

—Lindsay Post,—Mr. Carnegie, member elect for East Victoria, is one of the most pleasant and gentlemanly of men; he never wounds and invariably treats his opponents with that deference so characteristic of men possessing his happy and fair disposition.

—The Woman's Auxiliary of St. Luke's Church, intends holding a pic-nic at Chemong Park to-morrow (Tuesday). Conveyances will be at the Post office, Peterborough, and the town hall corner Ashburnham, at 1.30 p.m. Tickets 25 cents.

—Here is a pointer to some of the Peterborough church workers; A church social in Western Ontario drew a crowd because it had been advertised that all the women present would wear bloomers. A lot of old and hardened sinners, who hadn't seen the inside of a church since they were christened, attended and found every blooming beauty in the bunch wearing a large red rose pinned to her belt.

Cavalry Camps

The cavalry camp at Niagara will be held on June 24. The following regiments will take part: Governor-General's Body Guard, Toronto Mounted Rifles; 1st Hussars, London; 2nd Dragoons, St. Catharines. The 3rd Dragoons, Peterborough, and the 4th Hussars, Kingston, will camp at the Valleyfield Commons on the same date. It has been stated that there would be no camp for infantry regiments this year, but that officers and non commissioned officers would assemble for instruction in September.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

NOTE—The Times requests its readers to furnish the paper with items of a personal and social nature either by phone or in writing.—Ed. Times.]

—Mr. Harry King is home for the holidays from Saginaw Valley Medical College.

—Mrs. E. B. Stone will leave to-day to visit relatives in Brighton, where she will remain a week or ten days.

The Late Matthew Walton

The demise of Mr. Matthew Walton, of Oshawa, is announced. The deceased was 85 years of age, and at one time was a resident of Peterborough County. He was the only surviving brother of Robert Walton, Esq., town. The funeral will leave the Grand Trunk depot on the arrival of the noon train to-day, and proceed to Little Lake cemetery.

Long Service Medal

Yesterday morning Mr. George E. Whiten, photographer, received from Ottawa the long service medal issued to the members of the Canadian militia who have served 20 years or more. Mr. Whiten was for over 24 years a member of the 35th Batalion, whose headquarters are at Orillia. He naturally feels proud of his position.

DOURO.

A very pretty wedding took place at St. Joseph's Church, Douro, on 3rd instant, when Mary, eldest daughter of Mr. Humphrey Crowley, was united in marriage to Mr. Harry O'Rourke, of Deseronto. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Kielty, in the presence of a number of relatives and friends. The bride who was becomingly attired in a dress of white silk organdie, was assisted by her sister, Miss Annie, who was also gowned in white organdie, and Mr. George Goodburn, of Deseronto, assisted the groom. The happy couple left on the 9.15 train for their future home in Deseronto, carrying with them the hearty good wishes of a very large circle of friends.

COUNCIL IN SPECIAL SESSION

A By-Law Authorizing the Execution of an Agreement with the Street Railway Co. Passes its Several Readings

The Town Council met in special session last night, when there were present Mayor T. H. G. Denne and aldermen Edgcumbe, Shortly, Roger, Rush, McGregor, Morrison, Clinkscale, Batten and Corkery.

COMMUNICATIONS.

The minutes of the preceeding meeting were read and confirmed.

From S. R. Armstrong, Secy.-Treas. of the Water Commissioners, asking as directed that the Council authorize an expenditure not exceeding $1,000 for the extension of water mains on Antrim and Water Streets.

In reference to the above communication, Mayor Denne explained that the work for which this money is asked will return in revenue of ten per cent. The act authorizes the town to expend $5,000 each year for water works extension purposes without submitting a by-law to the people. This matter was referred to the Fire, Water and Light Committee and the Town Solicitor.

From E. M. Elliott on behalf of the Council of Smith asking for the use of the horse road roller in repairing the river road. This request was granted, free of charge.

From Town Solicitor E. H. D. Hall, enclosing declarations as to the publications of the necessary notices of the Radial Railway Co's By-law.—Received.

From T. Hurley Co. asking that Rubidge street be opened to Reid Street—Referred to the Board of Works.

ACCOUNTS.

The following accounts were referred to the Finance Committee.

R. H. Leary	$ 18 00
F. Smith	2 50
W. J. Kennedy	1 00
C.P.R. Telegraph	73

ST. RAILWAY CO.

A by-law authorizing the execution of an agreement with the Peterborough Radial Railway Company passed its first, second and third readings.

Ald Roger suggested that a time limit be fixed for the Railway Co. to sign the agreement. Mr. Geo. Hatton, the Company's solicitor replied that Mr. Dore is expected in town this week, when he (Mr. Hatton) understands the agreement will be signed.

Council then adjourned.

G. H. THURSTON DROWNED.

Grant Howard Thurston, formerly of Toronto, was drowned in the right arm of the Fraser River, near Vancouver, on Saturday afternoon.

His home was in Vancouver, where he was engaged with his father in the leather business. He went out riding on Saturday, and his horse backed into the river while crossing a bridge.

Mr. Thurston was born in Toronto 30 years ago, and went West with his father in 1892. He had two sisters and six brothers. One of the latter, Mr. W. D. Thurston, lives at 73 Hazelton avenue.

Girls Wanted.

Three girls wanted at once—A laundry woman, assistant cook and dining room girl. Wages from eight to twenty dollars per month. Apply to Wm. Snowden, Snowden House, Peterborough.

General - Sports.

Over 1300 people assembled at Nicholls Oval to witness the game between the Boston Bloomers and the Peterborough nine, the local team winning by a score of 14—8. The Bloomers put up a good game, and were frequently applauded for their good play. They left for Belleville last night to play the baseball nine of that place this afternoon.

LADY CYCLISTS START ON MONDAY.

Toronto will be favored next week with the international bicycle carnival, open to all lady bicycle riders. A six days' race will start at the Island track on Monday night at 8.15, for the Canadian championship and a purse of $500. The following entries have been received by Manager Jeff: Miss Jennie Brown, Rochester; Miss Tillie Anderson, the Swedish champion; Miss Lizzie Glaw, the German champion; Miss May Allen, the little English champion; and Miss Anna Ehmer. All have competed in races before, and the result has invariably been close. There is the keenest rivalry existing, and the riders set a merry clip from the start. Twenty miles must be covered by each rider every hour, and they have all been training for some time. Miss Brown arrived yesterday from Rochester, and was over to view the track. She expects to be right up to the front at the finish. The track is saucer-shaped, 18 laps to the mile, and modelled after the Madison Square Garden track.

The Story of Morning Tiredness

Is told by impure blood, poor digestion, sluggish liver and tired nerves. It is a warning of very serious trouble ahead and should prompt sensible people to take a bracing tonic like Ferrozone, an energetic invigorator and rebuilder. Ferrozone will give you a sharp appetite, promote good digestion and sound sleep; it will feed and energize the enfeebled organs, strengthen the nerve and vital forces and regulate the heart. Ferrozone changes that tired feeling into vigor strength and ambition, and does it quickly. Remember the name, and insist on having only Ferrozone; it's the best tonic made. ERUPTION IN ALASKA.

Seattle, Wash., June 10— Passengers from Cook Inlet who have arrived by the steamer Chico confirm previous rumors of another eruption of Redoubt volcano, which is situated on the west side, about 40 miles north-west of Iliamna. From Iliamna only heavy smoke was to be seen in the direction of Redoubt, but the spectators knew the volcano was in eruption again. Precipitous mountains shut off the view until the Chico had sailed 30 miles or so on the trip up the inlet, when the show became thrilling. Dense black clouds covered the entire region, spreading entirely over Cook Inlet. At times the smoke directly over the volcano region was lighted to a dark gray, but no flames were seen during the day and no ashes reached the ship, but when evening fell bright flames flashed up and lighted the whole sky in that direction. The ship's course out of the Inlet left the volcano directly to the westward, at which point there seemed a continuous sheet of fire, rising probably miles high.

DEATH FROM TIGHT LACING

London, June 10. — At an inquest, with reference to the death of a young woman named Mary Edwards, a servant employed by Mr. R. W. Perks, M. P., a witness stated that she went to the Salvation Army barracks at Portobello road with the deceased. During the evening deceased was called in to sing, and she had got through the first line of a hymn, "when on earth, life is ending," when she fell backwards into witness's arms, and died in the lobby almost immediately.

A doctor stated that he had made an autopsy, and found the valves of the heart were diseased. Continuous tight lacing had constricted and malformed the stomach. It was not temporary. At the time he was called the stays were extremely tightly drawn, and would impede the action of the heart. The other organs were all normal. Death was due to valvular disease of the heart, accelerated by the heat and tight lacing.

The jury returned a verdict accordingly.

THREE FOUGHT THIRTY.

St. Paul, Minn., June 10.—A battle was fought with pistols and shotguns late yesterday between three citizens and about 30 Italians, employed in a camp on the Chicago Great Western road, at the end of the Concord street car line, resulting in the serious injury of four men, one of whom will die.

Three wounded: A. Roberg, will die; N. Marcotte, Minneapolis, injuries not serious; Fred Wayman, expected to recover; Joseph St. Dore, an Italian laborer, has several wounds on his face, and it is thought that he will lose his eyesight.

The battle is said to have resulted from insults offered to two women who were passing the camp of the laborers. Pistols were used, but which side began the shooting it is not clear.

The Italians, it is said, had been drinking during the day, and when Mr. and Mrs. Roberg, Mr. and Mrs. Marcotte, and Mr. Wayman passed the camp after a fishing trip, some of the laborers made disrespectful remarks about the women. Roberg and Marcotte understood the insults spoken in Italian, and answered.

A pistol shot was fired, and immediately followed by several others. The shooting ceased for a time, and witnesses say some laborers ran into the camp and one of them fired three charges from a shotgun. Each shot brought down a man, Roberg, Marcotte, and Wayman falling in the street, and then the shooting ceased.

The police arrested twenty of the Italians, and twelve were detained at the police station for investigation.

Our Friends Over the Border Kicking Over the Boundary Line

They Think The Matter Should Have Been Fought Out in 1846—How the Yankees Would Have Divided the Continent

Special to The Times.

New York, June 11—Leslie's Weekly laments that the United States did not fight it out with Great Britain in 1846, and establish the ownership of British Columbia, so that Canada would not now have a port on the Pacific coast. It says that the United States' title was based upon the discovery of the Columbia River by the Yankee skipper, Captain Gray, in 1792, by the exploration of the Columbia and its tributaries in 1805-6, by the erection of Astor's fur-trading factory at Astoria in 1811, and by the treaty with Russia in 1824, in which Russia promised to plant no colonies south of the present Alaska, and the United States promised to establish none north of Alaska's southern line. Britain's claims were based on glimpses which Drake got of the Pacific coast region of the present United States and Canada, little over three centuries ago, by some discoveries by Cook and Vancouver a little over one century ago, and by possession of part of it by the British fur-trading corporation, the Hudson's Bay Company.

A popular war-cry of the Democrats in the campaign of 1844 was "Fifty-four-forty or fight," the allusion being to the southern boundary of the present Alaska, which is in latitude 54 degrees, 40 minutes. The Americans claimed all up to that line, while the British claimed everything down to a point below the mouth of the Columbia. The talk about fighting subsided soon after Polk's election in 1844, especially as Britain seemed to be preparing for war, and a compromise was reached on the forty-ninth parallel in 1846, which is the present northern boundary of the State of Washington.

"If," says the Weekly, "the United States had persisted in its claim of the territory up to 54 degrees 40 minutes, and had been able to maintain it in the war which appeared to be coming, England would have been shut out from access to the Pacific on this continent, the United States would have had, ever since the annexation of Alaska in 1867, an unbroken stretch of territory along the Pacific from the southern line of California up into the Arctic regions, and the boundary controversy with England and Canada which is now on, and those which have taken place in the past sixty years in the same locality, would all have been averted."

It all turns on that "if" and the ability "to maintain it." Possibly the result of a war in 1844 or 1846 would have been to give British Columbia to the United States, and possibly Great Britain would have possessed not only British Columbia, but Maine as well, at the end of the war. The opinion in this country is that the United States got by treaty in 1846 a great deal more than she was entitled to on both coasts, and infinitely more than she could have obtained by war. At any rate it does not appear that Britain was afraid of the encounter. Another point worth considering is this: If the United States had made war on Britain in 1846, what would have been Britain's attitude in 1861, when it was in her power to help the South and permanently disrupt the Union?

ELOPED FROM WOODSTOCK

W. E. Smith, a Baker, and Miss. Minnie Wilkins

Both Have Disappeared and Have Probably Gone Together

Special to The Times.

Woodstock, June 11 — Many people in this city would like to know the whereabouts of Baker W. E. Smith, who has been carrying on a bakery business on Wellington street north for some years. Principal among them who would like to hear from Smith is his wife, who, with four children, seems to be deserted.

Smith told his employes they could have a holiday because they had worked on Monday, the day signing of peace was celebrated. Then he went to the house and told his wife he was going to London to see a friend of his there, whom he used to board with.

"I'll be back to-night," he said to his wife as he kissed her good-bye.

He hasn't been seen since. Neither has Miss Minnie Wilkins, who worked in the bake shop.

When Smith didn't get home at night his wife went out to the bakery to see if the bread had been set for next day. It hadn't been. Instead she found a note scribbled on a piece of wrapping paper to the effect that he was going away for six months. He was sorry, he said in the note, he had to go out among strangers to earn a living after working so hard, but he had got behind with people and there was nothing else for him to do. He would be back in six months, however.

It is alleged that Miss Minnie Wilkins, the girl who has also disappeared, went to E. W. Sage's grocery, corner of Finkle and Main streets, and ordered about five dollars worth of groceries in Smith's name to be put up in a packing box and sent to the G.T.R. station. The groceries were sent to the station.

Somebody got them there, but where they were taken no one knows.

Since Smith disappeared it has transpired that he owes a lot of people in town. A great many hold three dollar bread tickets, which they got from him for $2.25, by paying for them in advance. They are "out" the $2.25.

Several days ago Smith purchased a $12 silver set from Mr. Leadbeater, paying down one of the $2.25 tickets as a deposit. He has the silver set and Mr. Leadbeater the bread ticket.

Chief Zeats said that no complaint had yet been laid against Smith.

A peculiar incident to-day cropped up in connection with the supposed elopement. Since midnight someone went into the Smith stables and took away two delivery horses, two delivery wagons and a set of single harness. No one knows positively who it was, but they might make a good guess.

GOLD IN ONTARIO

Indications are that Rich Gold Deposits Exist in This Province

The Bowmanville Statesman says that it is probable there is gold in the vicinity of Newcastle harbor. R. H. McCalpin, formerly of G.T.R. at Newcastle, killed a chicken recently that had a solid gold nugget weighing nearly 1-2 oz. in its gizzard. Mac claims that the fowl picked the gold from a load of gravel hauled from Newcastle harbor. The Dominion Government has been spending considerable money on this public convenience for the benefit of the Clarke farmers, and Mac's chicken got a few nuggets, no doubt. This nugget is worth $3.50. This incident explains why a fewmen have been strolling on the sand east of the pier this spring. There is more gold there.

That gold exists in paying quantities in many parts of the Midland District, we have not the slightest doubt. The Cordova mines, in Peterborough county, employing several hundred men, is proof of this. Recently at Stony Lake, quartz was picked up and found to be exceedingly rich in precious metal. It is only a matter of time—and a very short time at that, until our mineral wealth is known.

SHOT HIS WIFE'S FRIEND

Incensed Husband Found Them in a Pleasure Resort—Wanted to Expose the Pair

Special to The Times.

Harrisburg, Pa., June 10.—Shortly after 6 o'clock this evening people on Third street, near Reilly, were startled by screams from a party of two men and a woman in a carriage, followed by the sound of a shot. Directly afterward one of the men fell out of the carriage, and an officer ran up to arrest the whole party. The man on the ground was George Etter, an iron worker, and the other two were Joseph Redmond and his wife.

Redmond had heard from the neighbors when he came home this afternoon that his wife had gone out driving with Etter, and it added fuel to the flame made by stories he had been told before concerning his wife and Etter. He jumped on his wheel and went to Rockville, where he found the two in a resort. Compelling them to get into the carriage, he also took a seat, his intention being to drive the pair to the business place of his brother to expose the woman and her friend. When they arrived at the brother's business place Etter refused to stop the horse and kept on down the street. This so incensed Redmond that he drew his revolver, and, it is said, shot Etter through the head, following it up by beating him with the butt of the revolver. Etter is at the hospital, so badly injured that it is thought he will die. Redmond disclaims intentional shooting, saying his revolver went off as he was beating Etter.

The Cause of Deafness

Deafness and impaired hearing are due almost entirely to catarrhal inflammation of the eustachian tubes. Permanent cure is guaranteed to all who inhale Catarrhozone as directed. This vegetable antiseptic is inhaled at the mouth, and after traversing all the air passages of the respiratory organs it is exhaled through the nostrils; it completely eradicates catarrh from any part of the system, clears the ears, nose and throat, and allays inflammation, congestion and soreness. For Deafness, Earache, Ringing in the Ears, Head Noises, Catarrh, Asthma and Bronchitis, science can devise nothing as beneficial as Catarrhozone. Complete outfit for two months use, price $1.00; trial size 25c. Druggists or N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

Hamilton's Pills are Effective.

A True Nerve Tonic

Will act, not so much directly on the nerves as upon the digestive functions and the abundant formation of red, vitalizing blood. Nerves can't be fed on medicine. They can, however, be restored and strengthened by assimilated food. The marvellous action of Ferrozone arises from its action over the digestive and assimilative processes. When you take Ferrozone the blood is purified, strengthened, and grows rich and red. Then you grow vigorous, healthy and beautiful, ready for work, because you have the strength to do it. No tonic for the brain, blood or nerves compares with Ferrozone. Price 50c., at all Druggists of Ormond & Walsh.

THE KING'S CORONATION

Foreign Potentates and Their Ruites Make London Lively

GORGEOUS ROBES ORDERED

An Indian Prince Brings an Idol Valued at a Quarter of a Million Dollars

Peeresses Using all Their Ingenuity to Evade the King's Strict Orders as to Dresses to be Worn in Westminster Abbey

London, June 11.—As the date of the coronation approaches London is assuming a beautiful aspect, the early extent of which is to no little degree due to the peace rejoicings.

The Indians and other foreign princes in Oriental costumes in the royal carriages are sights to which London is becoming daily accustomed. The feeding of the same notabilities almost drives the court functionaries to despair.

The most orthodox of Hindu potentates, the Maharajah of Jeypor, who is living in stately confinement at Moray Lodge, has commanded a complete renovation of a neighboring slaughter house even to the flooring, which is now exclusively devoted to killing animals required by the Maharajah and his suite of 130 persons. All the slaughtering operations are conducted by Hindu butchers, who enshroud the slaughter house with amusing secrecy, much to the disappointment of the local residents.

Brought His Own Idol.

The Maharajah brought a large golden image of the Hindoo god Krishna, worth $250,000. One room is set apart as a temple, where pagan worship is carried on daily. His baggage included 80 huge stone tanks of Ganges water, as all his food must be boiled in water from the sacred river. The Maharajah also carries a six months' supply of certain delicacies hard to find in the English markets.

Strict Orders Evaded

Despite the strict orders issued regarding the uniformity of the dresses to be worn by peeresses at the coronation service, there will be countless variations that art and money can devise without actual disobedience to the royal commands.

All the dresses must be white, but many ladies, determined to make their dresses distinctive of the occasion, and to preserve them as heirlooms, are having gowns embroidered with coats-of-arms, national flowers and other devices. These are being executed in gold and silver, here and there touched with the forbidden colored silk, in order to bring out the badge of a clan or an ancient heraldic quartering.

Gold Embroidery in Vogue.

Gold embroidery down the sides of dresses and on shoulder straps is also much employed, many persons exactly copying pictures of the costumes worn by their ancestors on the occasion of a previous coronation. The Countess of Shrewsbury, mother of the Earl of Ingestre, will appear, in an exactly similar dress to that worn by the Countess of Effingham, when George III. was crowned.

Coronets Hard to Manage.

One of the greatest present anxieties of the peeresses is how to keep the coronet on the head. It cannot be too firmly fixed, for it has to be quickly taken off and then replaced, in accordance with the ritual of the service.

The jewelers have been inventing all sorts of devices to overcome the difficulty. One form punched holes in the sides of the coronet so that a hat pin could be inserted. Another attached to coronets elastic bands of the exact tint of the wearer's hair. Others gave it up and told their customers they must dress their hair to suit the stability of the coronet, rather than their looks.

Another serious point is how the peeresses are to carry their costly coronets when the service commands that they be uncovered. An ingenious jeweler devised an arrangement of crossed bands of narrow, white silk, inside the coronet in which the peeress slips her wrist and carries her headpiece as she would an ordinary hand satchel.

The correct method, however, according to the authority of old prints of previous coronations is to hold up the coronet between the finger and thumb.

King's Golden Robe Ready.

The King's golden robe has finally been completed. It is a gorgeous garment, shaped like a priest's cope, composed of the finest cloth of gold, and elaborately embroidered in rich colors. Unlike the cloaks in which previous sovereigns were crowned, it has no opening at the arms and shoulders, in order to allow the passage of the anointing oil. Twenty to thirty girls of the Royal school of art needlework spent three months in making the robe.

His Majesty has now ordered that an old royal barge, built for George II. be made seaworthy. This magnificent relic, with its elaborate canopy and high stern will once more be floated, and the King's "Jolly Watermen" who wear brilliant scarlet liveries, have been ordered on duty at Windsor, where the castle lake, after many years, will soon be the scene of a royal water pageant.

Wheat Outlook Good

Special to The Times.

Duluth, Minn., June 10.—The favorable weather conditions of the last few weeks have given a most encouraging turn to the prospects for the spring wheat crop in the great wheat-raising states of Minnesota and the Dakotas. The possibilities, according to reliable reports, are for a large crop. Last year's wheat average in the three states was about 14,700,000 acres; this year's will be a few hundred thousand acres less. But while wheat will be shortened a trifle, the abundant moisture of the spring, will aid the crop in growth. There will be a far larger crop this year of other grains than wheat, if the present promise is fulfilled. The flax crop is estimated for the three states at a little over 3,000,000 acres of land.

The World's Peace

Special to The Times.

Tokio, Japan, June 11 — The Osaka says: While the contracting powers in the new alliance are Great Britain and Japan on paper, there is also the unofficial American support of the alliance. It is an alliance of the three Powers which hold the balance of power in the Far East, in commerce, in navigation and in naval and military strength. These three powers can defy the world, and we do not hesitate to assert that their alliance is sufficient to guarantee the peace of the world. The mist of uncertainty which has hung over the Far East since the China-Japan war has been dispersed.

BOER AS A WARRIOR

British Military Officialdom Now Doing Some Wondering

And Have Partly Come to the Conclusion That They were not so Brave After All

London, June 11.—Now that the South African war is over, the military Briton is beginning to revise his opinion of the militant Boer and to wonder whether the latter was so very much of a fighter after all.

A writer in the United Service Magazine discusses the Boers on commando and doesn't think much of them. He has a good opinion of the Boers generally as law-abiding, thrifty and easily contented farmers, and doesn't even think their religious tendencies hypocritical. But this is what he says about the Boer on the firing line:

"The defects of the Boer as a warrior resolve themselves into one great defect—a lack of that chivalrous, daring intrepidity which is not only an ornament, but an absolute necessity to a first-class soldier, and which, when combined with a cool head, tends to make a fighter well-nigh invincible.

"In the field the prudence of the Boer is such as might well be called downright cowardice were it not that his unwarlike character and that his ideas about courage—so utterly different from those of the average European—at most forbid our passing too harsh a judgement.

"The Boer not only lacks that 'devil' which makes the desperado dangerous but also does not understand that decent feeling which will make one man sacrifice his life for another.

"What we call courage and pluck the Boer calls foolhardiness and mere show-off. He saddles his horse and starts on commando with the one predominating idea of trying not to get hurt, and he acts according to his resolution regardless as to consequences.

"This is the average Boer as a fighter and is not an enticing picture. All the qualities dwindle into nothing through one great defect."

There are few non-military Englishmen however, who take this writer's view or even appreciate it. The great British public is mighty glad that the war is over and is thoroughly content to pay full tribute of respect and admiration to the fighting farmers who for nearly three years have held out against the concentrated military might of the whole British Empire.

REWARDS TO GENERALS

Successful Generals Given Fortunes by Britain

Kitchener Profits Most—Enormous Sum That the Empire Has Paid Out at the End of Its Many Wars

Special to The Times.

London, June 11.—The prompt appropriation of a money reward for Lord Kitchener by Parliament is in accordance with precedent. Successful generals have always been handsomely treated as far back as the time of Alfred the Great. Lands, fortunes annuities, and titles have been bestowed upon them by the sovereign, the Parliament, and the people. There is no military pension system in Great Britain. Civil officials are pensioned after long and faithful service, and the Sovereign has a yearly allowance from Parliament from which he is allowed to pay annuities and pensions to distinguished authors, poets, painters, scientists, and others who have promoted the welfare and the happiness of their fellowmen.

NO PENSION SYSTEM

Some of this money is given to the widows and orphans of soldiers who have shown extraordinary bravery or done extraordinary deeds, but there is no general pension fund for disabled veterans of the British army or for widows or orphans.

In 1900, when it was found difficult to get recruits for the army in South Africa, Parliament attempted to stimulate enlistments by voting a sum of money to pension the families of those who were killed or permanently disabled. But it was stated that they were intended to be rewards for loyalty and efficient service, and could be discontinued at any time at the pleasure of Parliament.

The amounts allowed are very small. The widows of quartermaster-sergeants, hospitals sergeants, and sergeant-Majors receive $10 a month, those of color-sergeants $8, sergeants $7.20, corporals $6, and privates $5. Orphan children of soldiers receive 50 a week to the age of 16, when they are considered old enough to take care of themselves.

No pensions whatever are given to officers or to their widows or orphans, although those who desire to take advantage of the retired list receive half-pay for the remainder of their lives, subject, of course, to be called into active service if needed.

GRANTS TO LEADERS.

Lord Kitchener has already received a grant of $150,000 for his services in Egypt, five years ago, which gives him $400,000 in all, the largest reward ever given a British soldier. After the Afghanistan campaign, Lord Roberts received a gift of 75,000; Lord Wolseley received $100,000 after the Ashanti campaign and $150,000 after the Egyptian campaign.

During the reign of Queen Victoria the following annuities were granted to victorious generals, which are unparalleled in the generosity of nations.

	A year.
Lord Hardinge	$25,000
Lord Seaton, for three lives	10,000
Lord Keen, for three lives	10,000
Lord Gough, for three lives	15,000
Lord Raglan, for three lives	10,000
Lord Clyde	10,000
Sir W. F. Williams	5,000
Sir H. M. Havelock	5,000
Lord Napier, for two lives	10,000
Sir W. Nott	5,000
Sir G. Pollock	5,000
Sir A. Wilson	5,000
Sir J. Outram, two lives	5,000

In addition to these several hundred grants were made of from $500 to $4,000 a year.

THE COST OF WARS.

This has been the most expensive war Great Britain ever fought, both in money and in blood, and has verified the prediction of President Kruger at the beginning about the size of "the butcher's bill" she would have to pay. The total money cost has exceeded a billion dollars. No nation that pretends to have an honest Government is taxed so heavily as England is to-day, yet there is comparatively little complaint. Taking the financial and industrial depression into consideration, it is extraordinary how cheerfully and willingly the Britons carry their load, and when they realize that 4 per cent. interest on a billion dollars or more has been added to their former burdens perpetually their loyalty will have to endure another strain.

Since the year 1700 England has spent $8,500,000,000 in carrying on wars. In the Statesman's Year Book for 1902 you will find an interesting tabular statement showing how the public debt has piled up since the reign of William III., when it was only £664,263, and what each of the wars has cost. Since that period Great Britain has been constantly fighting either European powers or semi-barbarous people for the purpose of conquest, and, while she is now the largest real estate owner among nations, the property has been acquired at an enormous cost.

London, June 11.— The correspondent of the Times at Bloemfontein says the surrenders in the colony are proceeding satisfactory. One of the first signs of the era of peace is the removal of the barbed wire fences between the blockhouses, which is going on everywhere. These rolls of wire will doubtless be given at a valuation to the Boers to replace their fences. The correspondent hopes the blockhouses, especially the stone ones, will not be destroyed, as they are quite a feature of the landscape, like the great towers of Scotland and Martello towers on the south coast of England, and are historical monuments worth preserving.

APPEAL TO THE BOERS

Text of the Address to Burgers in the Field by Their Leaders

Asked to Become Good Citizens — Thanked for Their Sacrifices and Suffering

Pretoria, June 11,—Following is the text of the last letter of Boer leaders at Vereeniging to the burghers in the field, when peace was signed:

"Fellow brethren and countrymen,—We feel it to be our duty to address a word of thanks and farewell to you on ending our struggle. It is our duty to inform you that peace has now been concluded, in a manner and on the terms set forth in an agreement signed by the two governments, and on the grounds set forth in a resolution this day adopted by the burgher assembly at Vereeniging. We heartily thank you for your heroism, for your sacrifice of so much that was dear and beloved by you, for your obedience, and for your faithful discharge of duty, all of which serves the honor and glory of the Afrikander people. We counsel you all to acquiesce in this peace; to conduct yourselves quietly and peacefully, and to obey and respect the new government.

"Further, we would inform you that the head of the commission has been appointed by the representatives of the two states for the purpose of obtaining money and means to provide as far as possible for the widows and orphans whose husbands and fathers have given their lives in the struggle for freedom and justice, and whose memory will ever remain in our history.

"We also here express heartfelt sympathy with those who mourn, and pray God to give them strength to bear their cross.

"We would also speak a word of praise and thanks to our women and children, who have so heroically borne the most bitter sacrifices and suffering. Now there is peace, and although not the peace such as we longed for, yet let us abide where God has lead us. We can with clear conscience declare that for two and a half years our people carried on the struggle in a manner almost unknown in history. Let us now grasp each other's hands, for another great struggle lies before us, for the spiritual and social prosperity and welfare of our people.

"Casting aside all feelings of bitterness, let us learn to forget and forgive so that the deep wounds caused by this war may be healed.

THE CORONATION BAZAR

Opened in London by Her Majesty Queen Alexandra

The Americans Take the Lead and Occupy the Most Conspicuous Places in the Building—Promises to Be an Immense Success

Special to The Times.

London, June 10 — The Queen at the Botanical Gardens this afternoon opened the great coronation bazaar in aid of charity. The magnitude of the present undertaking, which lasts two days, quite eclipses the similar affair held at Kensington two years ago in aid of the sufferers from the war. Although much space in the great conservatories has been given up to the bazaar, the enterprise has attained such huge proportions that vast marquees have had to be erected along the great walks in the gardens. The stalls are attended by titled personages and the elite of London's society. It is hoped to realize $500,000 from the undertaking.

Occupying the most conspicuous position in the entire bazaar is the American court, which consists of six stalls and two exhibitions. The principal stall is the Embassy stall, with Mrs. Choate at the head, assisted by Mrs. Adair and all the ladies connected with the Embassy. Another interesting stall is that presided over by Consuelo, Duchess of Manchester, who has with her among others, Lady Essex, Mme. Von Andre, Mrs. Dudley Leigh, Mrs. Smith Barry, Lady Lister-Kaye, and Mrs. Jack Leslie, all American women. Mrs. Bradley Martin has a stall, at which she is assisted by Lady Craven and a large circle of friends. Others who are holding stalls are Mrs. Herbert Eaton and her sister, Mrs Alfred G. Vanderbilt, Mrs. Hawreaves Brown and Mrs. Hugh Reed Griffin. One of the most striking exhibitions is that of Mrs. Arthur Paget's stall. It is a display of jewelry, and including cherished family heirlooms, new tiaras, ropes of valuable amounting in all to about $15,000,000, pearls and glittering diamonds. Assisting Mrs. Paget are the Princess Hatzfeldt and Lady Cunard. All three are Americans. Cora Lady Strafford presides at a beautiful exhibition of miniatures, silver and other works of art. She is assisted by Miss Pauline Astor, Mrs. W. Burns, Mrs. Lulu Harcourt and Mrs. Phipps.

Among other fair Americans assisting in various ways are Mrs. Ronalds, Mrs. Mackay, Mrs. Ritchie, Mrs. Foxhall Keene, Mrs. Pidelford, Mrs. Chauncey, Lady Dufferin, Lady Grey Egerton, Lady Naylor-Leyland and Mrs. George Cornwallis-West.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

• • • •

The remarkable fact that the eruption of Mont Pelee and Mont Soufriere in the West Indies have been contemporaneous with earthquakes in Russia, Central America and India, is affording scientists some problems for study. Is there some great sea of fire beneath us, extending under continents and oceans? How thick is the crust? What would happen if the bottom of the sea fell out?

• • • •

The revolt in Russia is henceforth to be a sealed book to the outer world since the establishment of a "black cabinet" on the frontier to examine all private letters and despatches. But, possibly, some word may be got forward by "underground wire."

• • • •

Britain will not make the Boers pass under the harrow. She grants them liberty, and helps them to begin life anew. That action furnishes the key-note to Great Britain's success as a coloniser. She makes the colonists proud to be part of the Empire.

• • • •

Once again one hears of the activity of British agents in the shipment of four-footed animals from our Gulf ports to South Africa. The shippers are former British officers, now Texan ranchmen. They are not sending out cavalry remounts and pack mules, however, but young breeding cattle wherewith the Boer farms are to be restocked. It is expected that the number to be transported from Galveston to Natal will reach 50,000 head. This is an employment for British army transports against which even the valiant Governor of Louisiana will not be able to offer objections. The promptness with which the British Government is proceeding to heal the ravages of war is certainly commendable.

FALLEN IDOLS

Correspondents of United States papers are beginning to talk in a manner that indicates that they realize that their readers cannot much longer be made to view the Boer leaders as heroes to be worshipped and revered. Some of the U. S. papers that a short time ago were violently pro-Boer are found dealing with Steyn as a great blunderer—a man who threw away his people's liberty and his country's existence in the hope of grasping all British South Africa. As for Kruger, he is being handled without gloves. The correspondent of such an Anglophobe paper as the Chicago Chronicle, treats him as a cowardly poltroon and self-seeker. In a recent letter he thus speaks of the man who a few months ago was the centre of admiration of the British haters.

Kruger is held responsible for the war, and all the suffering it has entailed. If it had not been for his obstinate and unreasoning hatred of the outlanders, which led him into the denial to them of all political and many business privileges, there would have been no cause for Great Britain's interference in the affairs of the republics. His desertion of his brethren in the hour of their greatest humiliation has alienated all sympathy for him that existed here and has likewise turned his own people against him. It is not likely, therefore, that his future will concern anyone in particular. He has but a few years at most to live and is amply provided for. His private fortune, most of which he managed to convert into cash and take with him to Holland, is said to be considerably in excess of $1,000,000 dollars and with the well known frugality of his habits, he can manage to get along very comfortably on the income from that amount during the remaining few years of his life and leave enough behind to keep his family from want.

Mr. Kruger is not the heroic figure he once was, either in Europe or South Africa. While it is an undoubted fact that he would have been of little service to his people if he had remained, his flight from the Transvaal at the most critical stage of his affairs, is looked upon in the light of a base desertion. Some people claim that it is heroic to die for one's country. "Oom Paul" doubtless thinks it nobler—or perhaps more comfortable to live comfortably far removed from danger of hardship. Once an idol, he has been overthrown and his name is now only heard accompanied by some term of obloquy.

Neither of the men who were most to blame for all the bloodshed and loss of the war rank high in the scale of manhood. The world would not have suffered much if they had shared the fate they brought upon so many of nobler stuff. Those who remember the Pharisaical Kruger, with his grossly familiar references to Deity, plunging his people into the vortex of ruin, then gathering up his millions and fleeing to Europe, leaving his wife to the enemy's mercy, and his people to shift for themselves, while he luxuriated in safety, will never apply to him the term, hero.

A DEEP DISAPPOINTMENT

The bitterness of the German press regarding the terms of peace with the Boers may proceed partly from disappointment. So long as the Boers kept the field the hope was indulged by Germany that Britain would come to such terms as would restore the republics their autonomy, and thus leave the way open for future German aggrandizement in South Africa, with these republics as a basis. This hope is dashed to the ground by the formal reunion of British and Dutch under the Union Jack, and the prospect that under the favorable terms arrived at, the Boers may settle down into contented and loyal subjects of Great Britain. How annoying this must be to the overcrowded nation whose salvation lies in expansion of Empire, with nearly every avenue blocked, and the expectation of an outlet for German energy through the Transvaal blasted forever!

PELAGIC SEALING

The U. S. law prohibiting the importation of sealskin garments into that country the past five years has had no perceptible effect in preventing pelagic seal hunting in Behring Sea as was intended by its passage. It is now proposed by the Committee of Ways and Means to kill all seals in the Pryhiloff Islands, except 10,000 females and 1,000 males, unless means can be devised to put a stop to pelagic sealing. The bill proposed by the committee authorizes the President to open negotiations with Great Britain for a review of the existing regulations in order to preserve the seal industry from extinction, failing which the drastic remedy before mentioned shall be put in force. The New York Evening Post remarks that there is little doubt that Great Britain will accede to the proposal. There is little doubt that she will see the necessity of some radical change in the rules; but the question how to enforce the rules will be the most difficult one to deal with. As the number of the catch diminishes on both land and sea, the interest of either country in protecting the herd diminishes also. Neither one has much motive now to keep a fleet patrolling Behring Sea, and it is a debatable question whether any force that can be spared from the navy of each can prevent pelagic sealing as long as the seals are numerous enough to tempt men to go after them.

Items of Interest

Special to The Times.

Lake Park, Minn., June 11. — A tornado swept through the county 12 miles north of here yesterday afternoon, cutting a path two miles wide and three miles long. Nine farm houses were destroyed and ten persons are reported dead. The church at Spangle was demolished. Further details have not yet reached here.

BECAUSE FORMER IS WEAK

Woodstock, June 11. — The Hamilton Methodist Conference meeting here yesterday discussed a resolution to memorialize the General Conference, which meets at Winnipeg in September, to adopt a resolution to merge Wesleyan Theological College of Montreal into Victoria University of Toronto. The motion was lost by an overwhelming majority.

London, June 11. — Reuter's Agency learns that no news has yet been received of the return of Colonel Morland and his force from Lake Chad. This is giving rise to some surprise, as the expedition was due back at Lokoja at latest May 15, when Colonel Morland was to relieve General Sir Frederick Lugard, who was to leave about that date on his way to Las Palmas for the purpose of being married. Telegrams have been received announcing that General Lugard delayed his departure until the 19th inst., when he sailed for Las Palmas. The last personal communication with Colonel Morland was in February, when Mr. William Wallace, C.M.G., the Deputy High Commissioner, bade him good-bye at Bauchi, after the peaceful subjugation of that slave-raiding centre and the installation of a new Emir by Mr. Wallace.

Colonel Morland then started on his long journey to Lake Chad, involving a further march of over 300 miles through country absolutely unknown to the British. Colonel Morland had with him fifteen white officers, two doctors, and 400 West African Frontier Force, with two millimetre guns and two Maxims. After leaving Bauchi Colonel Morland was to proceed to Gujiba (where Fadr-el-Allah was killed) about midway between Bauchi and Lake Chad, and it is known that on the way there he had some stiff fighting. After leaving a garrison and a resident at Gujiba, Colonel Morland was to proceed direct to Lake Chad or to strike south via Yola, as the political situation might determine.

News lately reached Ibi, the British post on the Benue, of a tragic affair near the Anglo-German frontier. It appears that the officer commanding a German expedition in that region, during an altercation with the Emir of Banya, who had declined certain demands made by him, seized the chief by the throat, whereupon the after ripped him open with his knife. The officer's aide-de-camp, who was standing by, at once shot the Emir dead, whereupon one of the latter's head men killed the German aide-de-camp on the spot. Fighting ensued, and eventually the town was destroyed.

Some fresh details of Fadr-el-Allah's death, which have come through a British source, show that, after a desperate fight of several hours at Gujiba, Fadr-el-Allah was severely wounded, and was persuaded by his people to escape on horseback. He died the same night, and was buried in a tributary of the Gongola River. In order to prevent his body falling into the hands of the French his chiefs dammed off a portion of the stream, where they dug a deep grave, moved the stakes, so that the waters once more resumed their course over the grave of the fallen leader.

New York, June 11.—The Israelite Alliance of America held its second public meeting yesterday in the Educational Alliance Building in East Broadway to protest against Russia's refusal to admit Jewish American citizens to her territory. The resolution passed at the first meeting in the Temple Rodolph Sholom, urging the Government of the United States to put an end to such discrimination against the Jews, was also adopted at this second meeting with an enthusiastic chorus of "oears" and no nays.

Joseph J. Corn, President of the alliance, presided, and a Catholic priest and a Protestant Episcopalian joined the Jews and their rabbis in appealing for equity in Russia for all American citizens, regardless of religion.

Nissim Behar, who in the interest of the Israelite Universelle has travelled the world over, working and talking in behalf of persecuted Jews, said:

"You may ask what we can do, and say that Russia is a great and powerful empire. The pen and the voice which direct public opinion in this country are greater than Russia. You who live in New York City, the head and heart of the civilized world, can do much by teaching your fellow citizens. Teach your children that millions of their people are persecuted and that they would suffer, too, should they go to other lands, and with time and patience you will do the work. And you may be sure that the Gentiles will help you."

RUSSIAN PERSECUTIONS

John DeWitt Warner said that it was absolutely necessary for Russia to retain the friendship of this country, and that that act would furnish the lever by which the United States can compel the Czar to treat all American citizens alike.

Rabbi David Blaustein, superintendent of the Educational Alliance, said that this country should also demand of Roumania justice for the Jews in that country.

Meyer Goldman, an American citizen of Cincinnati, who went to Russia in 1888, but was arrested as soon as he got over the border, in spite of his passports, and was then driven from the country because he was a Jew, told of his experience.

When the Rev. Dr. H. Pereira Mendes began to speak an aged, long-bearded Hebrew, whose object in life is to establish five-cent kitchens all over the East Side, threw a bunch of roses at him from the audience.

The rabbi broke a rosebud from its stem and based his speech on that. He said that the bud was developed in accordance with the subtle and unknown laws of God, and so became fragrant and lovely, but that if God's laws are violated the bud withers and perishes.

"And so with Russia," he added, "if she disobeys the laws of God she will perish and cease to be a nation."

In conclusion, Rabbi Mendes said that the alliance must ask the Government to speak just as freely in behalf of the Jews as it had for the Cubans who were persecuted by Spain.

Congressman Goldfogle said that the question was not one of race or religion, but of pure Americanism. "The badge of American citizenship," he said, "should enable any man, regardless of his creed, to travel anywhere in the world unrestricted and unmolested."

London, June 11.—Sir Michael Hicks-Beach's remarkable speech in the House of Commons last night is accepted as foreshadowing the British Ministry's attitude, in view of the coronation conference, disclaiming entirely Sir Wilfrid Laurier's interpretation that the new wheat and flour duties were imposed for purposes of Imperial protection. Moreover, it is not the policy of the British Government to impose as against foreign nations in order to give the colonies advantage of the duties, but where duties are imposed for British revenue purposes, as was the case with last year's sugar and coal duties and this year's cereal duties—and possibly next year with a timber tax—the British Government may after consultation with Colonial Premiers be induced to exempt colonial produce in the interests of inter-imperial trade.

Thus, Sir Michael Hicks-Beach seems to have succumbed to Chamberlain's contentions, having been led to do so by the expectation that the colonies would show a desire to take a more direct share of the cost and responsibility for imperial defence.

The Liberals oppose this as masked protection.

The conference will open on Wednesday, July 12.

A 12 p.c. PRIORITY STOCK

There is no more profitable investment than shares in a legitimate, working mining property. Exception may be taken by some to this statement, but if it is not true why do those shrewd money makers called American Capitalists invest so extensively in mines? The fact is that there is absolutely no risk in a properly conducted, working mine.

Such a mine is the "CHICAGO," operated by the BLACK ROCK MINING CO'Y, LIMITED, incorporated under the laws of Ontario, with a capital of $150,000, in shares of ten cents each. The mine is situated in Yavapai County, Arizona, THE RICHEST MINERAL SECTION OF THE UNITED STATES, the "Ore Grande" and "Octave" mines are our nearest neighbors; they pay large dividends now; the ore on the "CHICAGO" is of exactly the same grade, BUT IN LARGER BODY.

THE EXTENT OF THE VEIN of the "CHICAGO" is unknown, the outcroppings show on the surface 220 ft. to 450 ft. wide the whole length of the property (6-7 of a mile) and all of the development including Tunnel, Shaft and Cross-Cuts IS INTIRELY IN ORE FROM THE SURFACE; there is by actual calculation TWO MILLION TONS OF ORE IN SIGHT NOW.

The shaft is down over 100 feet and work is being pushed with vigor.

The opinion of every miner and expert who has seen this property is that there is not a mine in the country with better or bigger prospects than the "CHICAGO" mine to-day.

It is operated by reliable and experienced men at the mine, and its Directorate is composed of successful business men.

Are YOU open for an investment of this character? A limited amount of Treasury Stock, with a priority of 12 1-2 per cent. annual dividend is now offered at par, TEN CENTS PER SHARE.

TO THE ADVERTISER

Do you realize that it would be easy for you to increase your business to the extent of several thousand dollars a year?

Do you know that hundreds of people living in the country surrounding Peterborough never see your name in the newspaper they read; that they don't know why it would be to their advantage to deal with you?

Do you know that these people are sending to Toronto for goods they could buy from you, if they knew you wanted to sell them?

Do you realize that the merchants of Toronto and Montreal are reaching out for the trade of this, and other towns; that they are spending thousands of dollars in advertising, to tell people who ought to buy from YOU all about their goods?

Are YOU telling the people about YOUR GOODS, and the LOW PRICES at which you sell them?

You CAN NOT do so thoroughly, if you don't advertise in THE TIMES, because

THE TIMES reaches people whom you can't reach through any other medium.

At least 60 per cent. of the people living in the surrounding country read "THE TIMES" and NO OTHER newspaper. These people have money to spend and will spend it in Toronto because they think they can buy more cheaply there than here. If you don't secure their custom.

Use THE TIMES to tell them you can give them better bargains than they can get in Toronto.

You'll make money, you'll increase your business, you'll get new customers if you advertise in THE TIMES.

We are going to make THE TIMES the best daily paper in Eastern Ontario. We have made arrangements to improve the local news service and to push the paper to the foremost place in the front ranks. We want you to advertise in THE TIMES because it'll pay you to do so. Every dollar you spend for advertising in The Times will return with good interest added.

Remember—No matter how small business you are doing now—YOU CAN DO MORE if you advertise in THE TIMES.

TRY IT AND SEE IF YOU CAN'T.

ARE YOU STOUT.

HEROES AND HEROINES.

SERMON BY
GEORGE H. HEPWORTH.

But he that endureth to the end shall be saved.—St. Matthew, x., 22.

Everybody admires heroism. The qualities of character which hurl one to the forefront in a critical moment, careless of danger, reckless of consequences, claim our unstinted applause.

But in the emergency, when the air vibrates with excitement, a man becomes intoxicated with courage, ordinary soldiers do deeds which would grace a god of Olympus, and the coward is so rare an exception that he becomes invisible. Human nature, when impelled by a strong passion or a noble ambition, surprises itself. The poor village lout has a capacity for endurance and brilliant work which needs only time and incentive to become divine. The rattle of musketry is the stimulus to great achievement. The perilous expedition, with sudden death lurking in ambush, will always find volunteers.

Man is a rude, crude, but grand sort of creature, with the making of an archangel in him. There is a mettle in his soul which has not yet been fully called forth. He is a Toledo blade which the hot fire of circumstance will some time temper. He is nobler than he knows or ever can know until he is forced to show himself by opportunity.

So much for physical heroism. It is generally exhibited in the gaze of the world. There is another kind, however, and a higher kind, which never sees the light of day—the quiet heroism of an obscure life. The majority of our heroes and heroines will be unknown to us until we get to heaven. They are not now walking on hilltops, where they can be observed of all men, but are living quietly and sacrificing patiently in their narrow sphere, waiting for the peace and rest which will come "at eventime." I have known many such, and have never looked into their sad faces without thinking that there is a courage to which that of the battlefield is a trivial circumstance, the courage which endures with resignation and meets inevitable suffering and misfortune with a calmness which is God's best gift.

Here, for example, is a woman who on her wedding day saw nothing but blue sky and sunshine. It seemed as though no shadow could throw itself across her path. A light heart and lips of laughter—nothing more. She did not know her own strength, for she had never been tested. But the avalanche swept down the mountain side and crushed and buried all her hopes. The day was turned to night, and even the stars refused to come out. Sickness, death, poverty followed in logical succession. She was face to face with a hard world, her children crying for bread. The friends of other days had their attention called elsewhere, and they saw her not. Alone in the struggle! And yet she bravely set to work, won her way to a livelihood, walked her lonely path in calm confidence that God still lived, brushed away the tears and grappled with fate. The struggle has told on her, for her hair is grey, and there is a look in her face which comes only from sorrow hard to bear.

You do not know her, or perhaps care to know her, but that life is one long list of heroisms, and when we all get yonder and look back on the past we shall see the path she has travelled, the upward climb of her years, and give her the meed of praise which a thoughtless and ignorant world now refuses. There are no nobler qualities of character than her uncomplaining endurance, her persistent patience and her undimmed faith. The future has crowns for such souls, and God and the angels walk with them on their way to the New Jerusalem.

I know a man who has given his life to an aged parent, and another who has been forbidden for years, shut in from the pleasures which we most prize, and still another whose life has been a long sacrifice for his children, and another who—but why continue the list? I do but remind you of a similar instance within your own knowledge.

To meet such a fate as that requires the sublimest courage, not the courage of despair, but the courage of faith. There are flowers even in such byways as these, joys which cheer the heart, and spots of happiness like oases in the desert. It is strange, but the presence of God and the conscious companionship of angels can bring bright days and starry nights. It is not our surroundings, after all, that bring peace, for if peace is in the heart it throws its light over all.

The root and foundation of this heroism is religion. There must be faith that above us and around us are helping and cheering influences, that earth and heaven are within telepathic distance of each other, and that what strength we need will be given us for the asking if we are to meet sorrow and misfortune with quiet fortitude. And the more we realize the presence of God, the easier it is to bear burdens. If we could once catch a glimpse of an angel's face—and some tell me they have done this—we should be light hearted even in the dark. At any rate, we can have faith that loved ones are near, though invisible, and it helps us as nothing else can.

For Farmers.

In an experiment conducted in Staffordshire, England, to test the relative value of different root crops for sheep feeding, the results were as follows:—(1) Globe mangels; (2) kohl rabi; (3) Long Red mangels; (4) Tankard mangels; (5) Swedes.

Sir Walter Gilbey considers it "an alarming fact" that American and Canadian breeders are now going to France and Germany to buy their breeding stock. We cannot afford to lose patronage for our studs from abroad, and the whole question deserves the consideration of horse-breeding societies.—Farmer and Stockbreeder.

Currant bushes should be sprayed with white hellebore in order to destroy the currant worm. As hellebore is a poison some growers object to it. It is claimed that if wood ashes are dusted over the bushes, first spraying with cold water, the worms will be destroyed. It is at least a harmless remedy and is worthy a test trial by those having currant bushes.

The Department of Agriculture at Washington, D.C., has issued a statement that there is no such thing as manufactured comb honey. Geo. W. York, President of the Chicago Beekeepers' Association, says:—"The truth is that when you find honey in the comb, you may be absolutely certain that the bees, not man, put it there. It may vary in color; it may vary in quality; all flowers do not yield the same honey; but it was all stored by the bees."

An acre of grass land, according to experiments, gives off not less than 6,400 quarts of water in twenty-four hours, and an acre of sunflowers would give a relatively greater quantity. In fact, swamps have been reclaimed and malarial marshes rendered innocuous by planting sunflowers or eucalyptus trees, which are great pumpers of water, and also exert other influences counteracting baneful conditions of air, earth and water.

Sheep on the Farm.

A correspondent of The Ohio Farmer gives some of the reasons why sheep are a fine thing for the farmer to raise. They pay for their raising in profitable fleeces. They are easily transferred from one inclosure to another and restrained by fences that would not hold cattle or pigs. Their light tread and their dislike to mud warrant their access to fields where the trampling of cattle and tearing of hogs would not be tolerated. They waste less food in proportion to the quantity consumed than any other animal, and will hunt out and utilize much that would otherwise be lost. They work for a living by keeping the farm clean from weeds. No animal returns more fertility to the soil in proportion to the amount exacted for its support. They produce a pound of mutton cheaper than a hog will a pound of pork.—Southwestern Stockman.

Tobacco Stem and Dust.

The waste material from the cigar factories is a good fertilizer, containing both nitrogen and potash, but it has so many other valuable qualities that the farmer and gardener should not fail to obtain some every year. Placed around the squash vines in the hill, it almost surely drives away the fly which is the mother of the borer, and scattered along the onion rows it serves the same purpose for the little black fly that causes the onion maggot. In fact, nearly, if not quite all the insects which damage our plants and trees by laying an egg of which the larva will be a borer, and thus cannot be reached by poisonous sprays, will be repelled by the use of tobacco stems or dust around the stem of the plant. The claim has been made that the borers that infest our apple and peach orchards can be driven away by winding tobacco leaves around the trunk of the tree, just above where the borers usually enter them. When this is wet the juice that runs down not only makes it unpleasant for the fly to stay there, but if she deposits a few eggs when the tree is dry, the first wet day is likely to send down a decoction strong enough to destroy the vitality of the eggs or kill the young larvae. We do not claim it to be sure, in all of these cases, as something will depend on the weather, but with frequent showers to keep it wet, it will greatly reduce the trouble from these insect pests.—American Cultivator.

The Horse's System.

It may be of use to call attention to the fact that the digestive system of horses differs a great deal from that of our domesticated ruminants—viz., cattle and sheep; whereas the latter are able to consume a large amount of food at one time, the horse—owing to the comparatively small size of its stomach and intestines—is able to consume only a small quantity of food at one meal. In saying comparative size of the horse's stomach and intestines, this refers to the comparison with the stomach of ruminants; as compared with the stomach and intestines of carnivorous animals—such as the dog—the stomach of the horse is large. I have already mentioned the fact that cattle and sheep are able to digest fibre much better and make much better use of it than horses. Besides this difference, there is another important point in which the mode of feeding the former differs from that of the latter. Whereas cattle and sheep are able to live and do comparatively well on poor and bulky foods, such as straw or roots, horses cannot deal satisfactorily with large quantities of these, even when doing no work; they cannot, like cattle, draw the amount of nourishment they require from poor foods by consuming large quantities of them. In their case, the necessary amount of food material must be provided in a more concentrated form. It is in these two points that the chief difference lies in the feeding of horses, as compared with that of cattle and sheep. There is, however, a third point—namely, that in feeding horses we wish to produce work; whereas in feeding cattle, sheep, or pigs we wish to view the production of flesh, fat, milk, or wool.

Farm Notes.

Care should be exercised in the use of poisoned solutions for spraying, as many insects that are friends of the farmer may be destroyed. Bees have been exterminated in some sections by spraying, though something depends upon the kinds of plants sprayed.

We clip from an exchange the following directions for killing lice on cattle—Dust the animals thoroughly with fresh insect powder; rub in well, or else part the hair so the powder will reach the pests. In about a week, dust again to kill any mites that might have hatched. The other is: Make a strong tea of cedar twigs; wash the lousy animal with this tea; this last is effectual in cleansing buildings, coops, roosts, poles, etc., of lice.

No greater mistake is ever made than to suppose that by selecting the largest eggs from the basket for hatching improvement of the poultry is sure to follow. There is no makeshift in this industry. Careful selection of the breeding stock, males and females, alone will insure that grading up so desired by every breeder. There is no room today for slipshod methods in poultry culture, and the breeder who does not select a breeding pen from his best birds and keep them by themselves does not deserve and cannot hope to maintain the quality of his stock.

More pigs are lost in the summer season from improper feeding than from any other cause. They are compelled to consume foods that are not conducive to thrift, and which lead to disease in the herds. Some feeders keep slop in barrels, which ferments until sour, having a very disagreeable odor, the pigs being fed largely upon the slop. This kind of food is more injurious in summer than in winter, as it induces bowel disease. The best slop is milk and bran, freshly made, with grass, vegetables and plenty of pure water, which will induce growth and keep the pigs in good condition.

Use a Good Sire.

If there is one thing more than another which pedigree breeding has taught it is the value of using a good sire. It takes a long time before this lesson can be universally appreciated. There are some breeders whom nothing but adversity will teach; others are willing to profit by the experience of the many, and are ready to adopt the lessons which can be obviously deduced. It is a pity that in these times of enlightenment and advanced ideas the simplest lessons cannot be absorbed by small breeders. It is with the small breeder that the future lies, and the sooner he adapts himself to a more successful policy the better will it be for himself and for the breed which he favors. It is not enough to have a well-bred sire. That certainly is a primary consideration, for, as every breeder knows, there is nothing more perplexing in breeding than the frequency with which atavism occurs. It is satisfactory to note, however, that when characteristics have become more fixed by years of registered breeding, breeders are more and more coming to regard it as essential that the trumpeted merits of good back breeding should be displayed in the animal itself. The old principle that like produces like is truer now than it was fifty years ago, because of the increased prepotency of line bred stock. Nothing condemns the policy of a breeder more effectively than the use of an indifferent horse on good mares, or, for that matter, moderate bull on better cows. As a rule, the farmer is not deficient in useful breeding mares or roomy cows, but it would form painful reading to learn how often he had misused his trust by the use of an indifferent sire. It is a very safe rule to patronize a sire better than the females. There is everything to gain and nothing to lose. The initial cost is a mere bagatelle, compared with the difference in price of the progeny. It is a misfortune that many farmers expect too much of their mares or their cows. This, at all events, seems a reasonable deduction from their policy when they use very indifferent sires. The point we wish to accentuate is that it pays to use a good sire. It is short-sighted policy to expect too much of the dams.—Farmer and Stockbreeder.

Sore Mouths in Horses.

A sore mouth in a horse is frequently the cause of his not feeding properly. In cases where a horse has lost his appetite or does not redily eat his food it is well to examine his mouth, if the fact of his being off his feed cannot be traced to any apparent cause. A sore mouth may be due to several causes. In young horses it is generally due to teething troubles, which make the mouth more or less tender and interfere with the feeding. In such cases the only thing to be done is to provide the food in a state which will permit of its being easily chewed and masticated. The oats should be crushed, bran mashes and roots should be given, and the hay should not be hard, and free from woody stems.

In older horses the permanent molars are sometimes the cause of a horse not being able to chew his food, and of his having a sore mouth. The molars sometimes have sharp edges and points which hurt the inside of the cheeks, and cause considerable pain when the horse is eating. In this case they require filing with a rasp, but this operation can only be performed by a skilful hand. At other times a horse may be prevented from masticating his food properly by one of the molar teeth being longer than the rest, which prevents the molars in the upper jaw from coming into contact with those in the lower jaw. In this case again professional advice is required.

Lampas not infrequently is the cause of a horse having a sore mouth. Lampas consists of an inflamed condition of the roof of the mouth or of the palate, and is caused by various means. In young horses it is due often to the growth of the teeth, while in older ones it is caused through indigestion or by irregularities of the molar teeth. The treatment accordingly varies and depends on the cause of lampas. Ignorant grooms and stablemen sometimes suggest burning as a remedy. This is of course a cruel and perfectly inadmissible remedy, and one which should not be adopted on any account.

Another form of inflammation of the mouth is known under the name of "stomatitis."—Farmer and Stockbreeder.

For Duck-Keepers.

The largest duck farm in America is located at Speonk, Long Island. Last year over 35,000 ducklings were hatched. Nearly every pound of the flesh was marketed in New York City.

Ducklings for Profit.

Ducklings are wonderfully hardy, and the death rate, even when large quantities are reared, is very slight when the duck raiser knows his business. They must, of course, be kept dry and sheltered from rain, and if their sleeping house is draughty they may get a touch of roup. This shows itself by a froth collecting round the eye, and can easily be got rid of with a little care, and taking precaution to prevent their sleeping in a draught. They fatten not only easily but quickly. In one big duck-rearing establishment no ducklings are kept over eight weeks old, but generally they are fattened for a fortnight longer.

During the last week of incubation the eggs need to be damped, as a rule, two or three times; in incubators they require rather more moisture than hens' eggs, and makers give instructions on the subject. When the stock ducks have their liberty and are strong, healthy birds, the eggs hatch well, and the twenty-ninth morning sees all the ducklings out that are coming. Like chickens, they need no food for twenty-four hours, but just sleep. By the expiration of that time they are thoroughly dried, and their abundant fluff no longer sticks to their skins, but stands out, making them look much larger than they did when first hatched. They are now ready for their first meal, which should consist of hard-boiled egg and breadcrumbs, damped with skim milk or water, given moister than to chickens; the food should be dropped on their backs; they huddle together in a heap when first collected for feeding, and, seeing the food, they peck at it readily enough.

A pan of water should be put down by them, and to let them see it, a few grains of coarse oatmeal should be dropped upon it. Then they peck at the oatmeal, find the water, and drink. It is necessary that at each meal they should have all the water they want, and they want a great deal, for they are thirsty creatures. Pure, fresh water, and plenty of it, is very necessary for successful duck-raising. The water should be supplied in shallow pans at first; as they get bigger it can be given in larger pans or troughs, but they should not have access to a pond. When they have never had the opportunity of swimming they do not pine for it, but if once they get the chance of swimming they fret for access to it.

For the first two or three days nothing should be given but the hard-boiled egg and breadcrumbs, or oatmeal may be substituted. The eggs should be passed through a sieve, the unfertile ones removed on the eighth day of incubation should be reserved for this purpose. They should be fed very frequently—every two hours, at least. It is a good plan, as in the case of goslings, to give them a little tender chopped grass mixed in with their food, but they are not large eaters of green foods, as goslings are. After the first three days the egg food can be dropped, though if there are unfertile eggs this feeding can with advantage be continued a little longer. Biscuit meal, scalded, is an excellent food for ducklings, and can be made the chief article of diet from a week to a month old. Boiled rice is also largely used by some breeders; others rely entirely on biscuit meal and ground meals. The rice should be thus prepared: To one quart of rice add six quarts of water, and let it simmer till the water is all absorbed. A little fat or greaves can be added. On rice thus boiled, biscuit meal and various ground meals, the ducklings can be quickly forced to maturity; meat and fat are also given more or less, and it hastens them on. The meals used are ground oats or oatmeal, maize meal and pollard.

After the first week the meals can be reduced to four a day, giving them all they will eat at a time, but permitting no food to lie by them between meals. The four can be reduced to three when they are seven or eight weeks old. Most fatteners have their own system, and differ in details of management, the object, in all cases, being to keep the ducklings in good health and appetite, so that they eat well, for the more they eat the better they grow. There are certain adjuncts that must be supplied if they are to keep in first-rate condition under the somewhat artificial mantion under the somewhat artificial manner of treatment they receive, and these are plenty of grit, a supply of green food, and strict cleanliness. For bedding them, peat moss can be highly recommended, and, failing it, straw, but straw is getting scarcer than it was. The peat moss, too, when it is finished with, will be a valuable manure for either the field or garden. Later in the season they can sleep on the ground without ill-effect, but not before it is dry.

It is very needful to protect the ducklings from rats, as they highly prefer them to chickens. They must be well netted in at night, and a few traps set near, for rats are sure to be attracted to the vicinity when ducklings are bred for market. It is also necessary to shelter them from the sun, as they get sunstroke very easily if exposed to it, but, of course, this means the July and August sun, when it is really hot.

In case of their going off their appetites when fattening a meal should be missed for a day or two, and the food changed. This will bring back their appetites. A little spice may with advantage be given at this time. Those ducklings intended for stock should be picked out at four or five weeks old, and have more liberty and a certain proportion of corn. Ducklings for table are fed entirely on soft food. They can have a swim just before being killed, as this washes their plumage.—Farm and Stockbreeder.

Hostess (to guests, who have to spend a few days)—We're so glad you've been able to come, Miss Gushington; but I do hope we are going to have better weather, or I am afraid you won't enjoy yourselves much.

Miss Gushington—Oh, but, my dear Lady Boreham, we didn't come here to enjoy ourselves. We came to see you.—London Punch.

His Estimate of Cromwell.

Lieut.-General Sir William Butler recently lectured to the Irish Literary Society on "The Cromwellian war in Ireland." After a sketch of the famous campaign couched in the severest terms, Sir William proceeded to express his view of Cromwell. His appreciation, marked as it is by an enviable power of expression, is as follows:—For some 50 or 60 years, he said, it had been the fashion of the time to speak of Cromwell as one of the greatest of men. For quite 200 years before our time not one historian, not one writer of any eminence, had had anything good to say about him. But we had changed all that. His eulogisers could now be counted by the thousand, his admirers by the million. He had already quoted a letter, written by Cromwell some years before he became famous, in which he said, "Who goeth to war at his own cost?" That was the keynote of Cromwell's character. The two chief objects of his effort were plunder and persecution. He and his were the saints; they were to possess the earth. All the rest were sinners; they were to be despoiled, cast out, persecuted. Who could count the oaths taken by him and broken by him? He swore allegiance to the King, but he cut his head off. He swore to support the Parliament, but he betrayed it and turned it out of doors. He swore to the Scottish covenant, but he destroyed it. He swore to uphold the liberties and rights of his country, but he trampled upon the one and betrayed the other. Standing in his place in the House of Commons with his hand upon his heart, he swore, in the presence of Almighty God, that he knew the army would disband and lay down their arms at the door of the House whenever the Parliament should command them to do so, and within 24 hours he was in the midst of that army inciting them to fresh defiance of that Parliament. Could any instance of hypocrisy match this—that he had prayed on his knees to God for the life of Charles until his tongue clove to the roof of his mouth, by which he saw that God had willed the death of the King? He averred that he was a most upright and conscientious man to his King and he prayed that God would be pleased to look upon him (Cromwell) according to the sincerity of his heart to the King, and at that moment Cromwell had the death of the King planned. He was absolute master of every trick of tongue, gesture, expression by which man could deceive his fellow. He could weep at will, pray, preach, affirm, swear, cajole, belie, act the buffoon with the corporal, play schoolboy tricks while signing the death-warrant of the King, commit the most appalling deeds with the name of God upon his lips and the Bible in his hand. He was the greatest dissembler that history held record of. While raving of liberty he suspended in turn every liberty that Englishmen had ever known—representation in Parliament, trial by jury, taxation with consent, everything that the people had gained and valued. He proposed to sell St. Paul's to the Jews for a synagogue. He sold hundreds of English gentlemen and thousands of Irishmen, women and children to West Indian planters to be slaves. He arrested and locked up in the Tower the three counsel of a London merchant who was prosecuted for having refused to pay taxes which had not been voted by Parliament. When confronted with all this perfidy he fell upon his knees in the House of Commons and took a solemn oath that it was untrue. He was false to his own chosen band of supporters and to the inner circle of his friends; and to each one of those parties whom he deceived in turn he used the same solemn asseverations of rectitude, piling perjury upon perjury such as no age had ever seen before. Did he deceive even himself? That question we could not answer. It was possible that having deceived every one—enemies, friends, comrades—he had come at last to deceive himself. The world held no greater failure in its history than our civil war. The result was that the King lost his head and the Parliament lost every shred of privilege and liberty it had ever possessed. For years Cromwell ruled the land with heavy sword and booted foot. He abolished the House of Lords, and he shut up the Commons. He taxed without representation. He tried without jury. He ruled by martial law. He packed the courts, he arrested counsel, he hanged and beheaded as he pleased. His little finger lay heavier upon the nation, said the people of the time, than the loins of the late King had lain. And then he died, and there came back to a weary and blood-sucked land a King. Cromwell left nothing behind him, no public works, no new system of law, no better policy of land, no clearer conception of justice. "Nothing cried at his furneral," wrote Evelyn, "but the dogs." And that, the dismalest failure of English history, was the man in whose praise to-day histories were imagined and statues inaugurated. Courage, diligence and the most dogged and determined resolution—these things he had to an extraordinary degree. But to what end and at what cost did he use them? It was a cowardly and a base act of the Parliament of 1660 to dig up his remains and hang his mouldering body on the gibbet at Tyburn. It was voted without a dissentient voice in the House of Commons, but history had missed one strange coincidence which resulted from it. They could remember the choice which Cromwell, in the days of his victory, gave the unfortunate Irish:—"Hell or Connaught." He turned to the last page of Cromwell's latest biographer, and this was what he read: "Where Connaught Square now stands, a yard or two beneath the street, trodden under foot and beaten by horses' hoofs, lies the dust of the great Protector." And that was the end.

Grazing does harm to pastures if the cattle are permitted to eat too closely of the grass. Weeds in pastures indicate that damage is being done by cattle, because of the fact that the animals reject the weeds, leaving them to grow and crowd out the grass. When a pasture becomes infested with weed mow them down and keep the stock off until the grass has an opportunity to grow. It may be necessary to re-seed the pasture also, as well as apply fertilizer.

Charcoal is very valuable as an aid to keeping poultry in good order and preventing bowel disorders. It should be fed in powdered form mixed with the food several times a week; it is harmless, whatever amount is given, as it is not really medicinal but acts as an absorbent, taking up the poisonous gases in the system. It is said that chickens will fatten faster if charcoal is given.

COUNTERFEITER ON TRIAL

Ottawa, Ont., June 10. — The alleged counterfeiter, Francis Martin, was brought before the police magistrate this morning, charged with having in his possession tools for the purpose of manufacturing counterfeit coins. Inspector Hogan, of the Dominion police, asked the magistrate for a remand for a week, and this was granted. The tools found on him consisted of dies for making 25-cent pieces, but they had not been quite finished. The police had been on the look-out for him for some time, having received information which led to the capture. Prisoner was previously in difficulties in connection with the discovery of plates for counterfeiting the Banque Nationale notes, and after that got into trouble for running an illicit still.

SHOT OR HANGED

London, June 11. — The War Office has published a Blue-book of nearly 200 pages relating to the administration of martial law in South Africa.

From this it appears thirty-two persons were hanged or shot in Cape Colony between March, 1901 and January, 1902. The offences included high treason, murder, robbery arson, train-wrecking, marauding, "disgraceful conduct of a cruel kind and being in possession of expanding ammunition.

The report of the trial of Commandant Scheepers (sentenced to death by hanging, but shot on January 18 last) is given in full. The accused was charged among other things with placing prisoners in the firing line, but he declared that the 1,200 prisoners taken by him had always been treated with the greatest respect, and that he had received letters from British officers thanking him for his kind treatment.

During the trial a telegram was received from the father of Lieutenant Grant, 12th Lancers, who was among Scheepers's prisoners, asking the president of the court if the fact that Scheepers had spared his son's life in time of great excitement could be pleaded in mitigation of sentence.

The instructions regarding martial law issued by the Deputy Adjutant-General for Cape Colony are framed in a moderate spirit. Regarding arrests for seditious speaking, it is laid down that it is not necessary to take notice of every loose or unguarded expression of people of no consequence.

"A feeling of sympathy with an enemy of their own race," it is observed, "unless it finds expression in some act of disloyalty, is not to be considered an offence."

Armed rebels are to be treated as enemies, and if taken prisoners must be tried by military courts.

The condition of Cape Colony in April of last year may be gathered from Lord Kitchener, who, in a message to the Governor of the colony, said:

"I am driven to the conclusion that considerable numbers of the inhabitants are now taking part in rebellion, and the state of disorder has grown serious. Only prompt and severe punishment can stop the spread of the evil and prevent general anarchy."

New York June 9.—As a result of the penalty which the Cape Colony Boers who assisted the Boers of the South African republics and the Orange Free State may be called upon to pay by the terms of the peace agreement, an effort may be made to find homes for some of them in the United States. W. D. Snyman, of Cape Colony, who fought with the Boers, and who has been working in the United States for the Boer cause during the past year, said regarding the terms of surrender:

"The colonial Boers are to be punished, I am a colonial Boer, born a British subject, and I am liable to imprisonment for from five to ten years if the terms as published are correct. I am acquainted with President Roosevelt and shall see if there is not a way for some of our people to come to this country. I think there is a great opportunity for us here. There are few here now, but in Portugal there are a good many colonials, and they probably will not want to return to South Africa now. They are men well born. If the United States government would open the way they would be glad to settle in some state like New Mexico, Arizona, Texas or Colorado. They would make good citizens; no one need to be ashamed of them. I shall use every effort to open the way to bring them here."

Mr. Snyman's son, who fought with him in South Africa, has just passed his examination for admission to Columbia university.

Brockville, June 11.—U. S. Immigration Inspector Crawford stopped a party of seven Italian navvies from crossing to Morristown, N.Y., this morning. They landed recently at Montreal, but failed to provide themselves with the necessary passports issued by the U. S. Board of Immigration Examiners. Mr Crawford conveyed the party back to Montreal, and if he can locate the steamship company which landed them in this country they will be sent back to sunny Italy.

Brockville is now one of the principal points along the frontier used by agents of foreigners to smuggle the different prohibitive nationalities across the line. The chief traffic is in Assyrians. David Korry, a Brockville Syrian, was arrested at Morristown yesterday by a United States marshal, charged with smuggling from Syrians who later on were overtaken and arrested at Watertown, N.Y. Korry is held at Ogdensburg for examination on $5000 bail.

The Curl

A Love Story of France.

By ETHEL WHEELER.

We were sitting on the terrace of an old French chateau, sipping coffee and smoking cigarettes. It was a hot autumn afternoon. The tapestries of the woods were worked in the faded colors of decay; they rustled with the sentiment of the lost, the past, and the dead. The warm sun had raised a wavering veil of moisture about them, and in allowing for its influence one was inclined to exaggerate the definition of leaf-line underneath—that delicate definition, incident on the sparseness of autumn, which charges the smiling abundance of summer with the first exquisite thinness of renunciation, to sharpen later into the hard features of winter asceticism.

Beneath the tobacco smoke my old friend's face showed shriveled and wrinkled with a like delicacy of line. Its sentiment of expression was almost one with the sentiment of this essentially French moment of the year. The woods were sad, but they were more happy than sad; with them it was the time of dreams, and they were haunted by the fragile loves of a vanished spring. The sorrow that was in them was plaintive, wistful—almost a tender impersonation: theirs was the sentiment of sorrow, its iridescence and play, unconscious of any depth or darkness of suffering.

It was forty years since I had met Louis de Brissac. In Paris, as young men, we had been close friends. I had gone over to study in the French capital, and from the very first Louis had won me to him by the charming romance of his friendship for me. Since that time, during the long years in India, men had come near to the fibre and core of me through mutual danger and mutual endurance; I had felt the stir of those silent friendships whose most open manifestation is a firmer hand-grip, an understanding eye glance. Beside these hidden vital emotions the memories of my Paris friend were as pale-colored as his autumn woods, but yet in these far-off memories there was a sweet fragrance which the robuster attachments lacked. Louis had written to me regularly for years and years: I had whole boxes of letters in his fine, pointed handwriting. He was expansive, and thought no detail too trivial for my interest: not only was I familiar with the administration of his estate down to the minutest particular, but also his whole mental life, with all its philosophic doubts and conjectures, was laid open before me. The letters were written with flow and lucidity; they were full of keen observation and admirable criticism of life and books. But partly through lack of time, partly through difficulty of composition in the French language, and mostly through constitutional self-repression, my replies were, I fear, somewhat bald and brief. Then, during a period of extended travel, I missed several of his letters, and, having no incentive to write to him, I let the correspondence end.

On my return from India the London doctors advised me to try the waters at Vichy, and thither I repaired, intending to find out if my old friend still lived in the neighborhood. On the very first evening I came across him unexpectedly. I had dropped into the Cercle Prive to watch the gambling, and amid the grasping and repulsive faces of those present my attention was attracted by an old man of great benevolence of aspect. I could not be mistaken. I knew him at once, in spite of his white hair and his wrinkles. The peculiar charm, the dash of melancholy happiness, that had always belonged to Louis were there still, more marked than ever. He was playing the game with a childish pleasure—staking deliberately, but not high. He had evidently set a limit to his losses, for presently he came over, with a pleasant word to a friend or two, toward the window where I was standing.

"Louis!" I said, touching his arm.

He looked at me for a moment quite blankly. Then his face grew irradiated. "Richard!" he said, pronouncing the name French fashion. "It is Richard—my friend Richard Wright! My poor Richard, but how you have changed!"

I smiled. "Well, it is forty years," I replied.

"And to meet you here!" he continued. "I always dine here when I come to Vichy on business. And I play a little. It is excitement. If you win, excitement; if you lose, more excitement. . . . My friend Richard Wright! . . . I am overwhelmed! . . . You must come home with me to-night. Why, I insist—I absolutely insist. My carriage is here. There is a room ready for you. It is too great happiness to have you with me at the Chateau de La Tour."

There was no resisting the pressure of his invitation, his faithfulness of friendship. I consented, though quizzically, half doubtful what manner of welcome I should receive from Madame or Mademoiselle de Brissac. I supposed, of course, that Louis had married in the long interval since we had ceased to correspond—that he had children. But I was wrong. I found the chateau presided over by an old butler and his wife, who superintended the servants.

And so, on the next day, looking out on that delicate autumn landscape, so full of vague and lovely regrets, I felt impelled to break our silence with the remark, "So there never was a woman in your life?"

A greater sweetness came into my friend's face. "Yes, Richard, there was—and is," he replied. "I will tell you about her when we go in. You will think it—you may think it—rather a delightful story. Perhaps you will only laugh at me. . . . And you, my friend—you have never married, either? No, no . . . do not answer me. I see I have touched pain. I would not have you speak out of a sore wound. I want to know no more. Forgive me—forgive me!"

"You are—happy in her?" I asked in a low voice.

"But you must hear the beginning—you must see," said Louis. "Tell me, did my last letters make mention of any hobby of mine?"

I reflected a moment. "A hobby?" I repeated, a little puzzled.

"Why, yes: one must have a hobby—birds' eggs," said Louis. "It is a hobby full of poetry, of romance, of sentiment. When I was young, it took me out into the open woods, out in the springtime, out in the early morning. Every specimen I collected made me more exquisitely aware of the marvels of creation, and woke in me new wonder for nature's supreme artistry of color and curve. Have you ever pondered over a bird's egg, Richard—over the frail brittleness that encloses the germ of sublime music? As the crinkled shell is characteristic of the crisp ocean—as it is thin, but of infinite resistance, and shaded mainly with the yellow and red hues of sand—so the bird's egg is characteristic of the softer contours of the land, and memories of leaves and skies are blended in the greens and blues of its shell."

"That seems to me . . . just a little fanciful," I protested, "but to tell the truth, I have not given the subject any attention."

"I will show you my collection presently," said Louis. "I am arranging and classifying it now. Of course I am too old to get any more specimens myself, and I fear to employ the village lads, lest they should be lacking in wise discretion. But believe me, Richard, on the most bitter winter's day my birds' eggs are potent to bring the spring vividly before me. Within these fragile cases, I whisper to myself, there lives in essence the whole magic of spring—its crystal-clear calls, its high and liquid notes, its flash of lark mounting into the sky, all its varieties of faint flutterings among new leaves. I touch my eggs and say, 'Thrush, finch, wood-dove!' and the pressure of woven nests grows round me, and I see the green-cradled babyhood of birds."

"I wonder," I said, "that you ever found the will to take and blow the eggs?"

"Ah," Louis replied, "you are too prosaic. I take but one egg of many; with us scientific interest does not necessarily kill sentiment. And the birds do not resent it; they have been kind to me, kind beyond expression. They have given me a gift. I have told you this that you may be in the right mood to understand. Come in, now; I will show you."

Together we went into the chateau. It seemed to me charged with an atmosphere of old-world sentiment, conventionalized by the lines of ancient perpendicular wall papers, of panels and parquets of oak—dim hand-worked tapestries reproduced within the rapture of autumnal decay. A sombre richness had grown about the greens and blues of the threads, like an emergent shadow; there was the pallor of exhaustion in the blanched yellows and waning whites. Everywhere huge pot-pourri of roses reproduced about the corridors the sentiment of the lost, the past, the dead; giving for the passionate beauty of June an attenuated sweetness, grown a little sickly in heavy confinement. Louis led me up the stone staircase to a long, bare room, arranged as a museum, with a number of cases containing birds' eggs. It was inconceivable to me how anyone could extract a dream of springtime from so arid a spectacle. Louis drew me over to a table upon which stood a casket jeweled with small turquoises: this he opened with a key. Within lay a curl of golden hair tied with a piece of faded blue ribbon.

"She is with me always," he said dreamily; "her sunny presence pervades the house; I almost think, at times, I see her flitting up and down the staircase. Before, I was lonely—lonely and often bitter—but since she came all has been changed."

"Your dead wife," I said reverently, for the moment forgetting.

"No, no; I was never married. I told you that. But I did not tell you why. There was consumption in our family. I consulted a doctor after you left Paris. . . . I did not think I was justified"—

I grasped Louis' hand. "My friend, my friend, how could I guess at so deep a tragedy?" I exclaimed, deeply moved. Here indeed was courage, heroism. "I fancied—forgive me—I fancied you had not known real suffering. My own case . . . I have loved, too."

"But . . . let me finish. I think you mistake. I never loved . . . in the flesh," he interrupted hastily. "That would have been terrible, terrible. I could not have conquered a great passion. I think I should have killed myself." He touched the curl. "I never saw her," he went on. "I found this . . . just as it is now . . . tied up with blue ribbon . . . in the nest of a bird. That is my romance, Richard—the whole of my romance."

"But—I don't understand!" I gasped.

"It gave me something tangible to build upon—a lock of hair, brought me in that tender way by the bill of a bird, associated with all that is dear and beautiful and wonderful to me. I think: this bit of sunshine in the soft moss of a nest, a golden pillow for wee feathered things. She would be pretty, with such hair! She has blue eyes and gentle ways; she has changed a little during the long years she has been with me, but always she is young, always she is sweet and lovable, with golden hair. Her gentle companionship has grown dearer to me, and dearer; her voice is the blended voice of all birds, and the lightness of the birds is in her step, and their timidity, and soft, nestling ways."

"But it is a dream!" I exclaimed.

"Perhaps. Still, there is the curl," he said. Then he put his hand on my arm. "It puzzles you," he continued, with a whimsical smile. "No Englishman is like that: you are material, and must have the substance; you do not understand that a dream has as actual an existence as a reality. We have the better of you, dear Richard, in this: we have found one secret of happiness."

"If there had ever really been a woman," I began.

"I know. This could not have happened," he said gravely, "it could never have happened—in that case, and I should have suffered—like you."

I took up the curl, examining it curiously. At one time I had given some study to physiology. "But this is not woman's hair," I remarked, without thought.

Louis grew pale. "Not woman's hair!"

Then I realized the mischief I had done. I cursed myself inwardly that in a moment of recklessness I had shattered the whole fabric of his life's dream. It is, of course, easy enough to tell from a lock of hair the age and sex of the owner when it was cut off, and it was quite evident that this curl had been taken from the head of a young child. But why had I not had the wit to keep the discovery to myself? Why must I burst in with my crude science upon this delicate, incomprehensible romance?

"Not woman's hair!" repeated Louis.

"It is the hair of a child—of a young child—about seven years old," I said dully. "Oh, Louis, I should not have spoken."

He looked dazed, bewildered. The next moment he was wringing my hand ecstatically. There were tears in his eyes. "Richard, Richard," he cried, "I had never thought of that—a child! We pass the time . . . for loving women, and sometimes I have felt . . . lately . . . that an old gray-haired curmudgeon like myself has no right to let his fancies run forever on golden-haired maidens. But a child, a little girl—one is never too old to love a child! It is what the chateau wants beyond all else—childish laughter, the patter of childish feet. Oh, Richard, think what you have given me—a little child, to be with me always till I die! It is good—it is good that you came!"

He leaned on me, almost overcome. But I . . . I could not understand. Only in my heart was a great void—a pitiful cry for that childish laughter, the patter of childish feet, which I should never hear.

It was twilight when we reached the staircase. The wind was in the tapestries on the walls. They rustled like a shower of falling leaves. Suddenly Louis touched my arm. And down at the bottom of the stairs, amid the fantastic movings of the hangings, I thought for one moment I saw a brief vision of a little golden-haired child.—"Atlantic Monthly."

"Out of the Mouths of Babes," Etc.

"How is it, my dear," enquired a school teacher of a little girl, "that you do not understand this simple thing?" "I do not know, indeed," she answered, with a perplexed look; "but I sometimes think I have so many things to learn that I have not time to understand."—The "Schoolmaster."

—The Public Library closes at 8 o'clock each evening, including Saturdays, during the summer months. Members will kindly bear this in mind.

—A case of non-support was up before the Police Magistrate yesterday, and was enlarged till Saturday. The defendant is a laborer named John Drummond, and the complainant his wife.

—The man who cannot find one or more days out of the week now that are either hot enough, cold enough, dry enough or wet enough to suit him, ought to go way back and—stand up.

—Mr. James Richardson, Janitor for the Ontario Bank, while out on his wheel the other day, collided with a farmer's wagon. The wheel got the worst of it, the rider being thrown and considerably shaken up.

—Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Nickle, of Bridgenorth, were presented, a few evenings ago, with a handsome mantel clock, accompanied by an address, by the members of the Epworth League of the church.

June clearing sale of sporting goods now on at Times Bookstore. Lacrosse sticks, base balls, base ball bats, catching gloves, base ball masks, and in fact everything in sporting goods going at big reductions from regular prices.

—In the Division Court at Stratford last week, His Honor Judge Barron gave an interesting decision. A girl by the name of O'Donoghue, employed at the Albion, sued the proprietor for part of a month's wages and succeeded in recovering her claim. His Honor held that a servant girl could leave at the end of a month, without notice, and recover her wages.

—His many friends will be pleased to learn that Sergt.-Major Brittain, the representative of the 57th Regt. on the Coronation Contingent, who was appointed Colour-Sergeant of the Infantry Company, has since been appointed drill sergeant. When it is remembered that this company is composed of the picked men of all the Infantry Regiments of Canada, and that nearly all of them are themselves non-commissioned officers in their own corps, it is no small compliment to the 57th to have its representative appointed Drill Instructor of the rest. This appointment seems to indicate that authorities at headquarters gave the preference to Sergt.-Major Brittain of the two names sent in to them, with a view of utilizing his services in this way.

—"It was during this feature of the programme" says the editor of a contemporary, in writing up a wedding, "that the only specially emotional feature of the evening occurred. J. J. Anderson, father of the bride, who never before had shed a tear, found several of them rolling down his sunburned cheeks as he came forward to kiss the bride, remarking that she was his 'last baby.' Immediately several of the ladies began to shed tears, everybody was somewhat excited, and in the slight confusion the writer hereof found himself embracing a lady who stood conveniently near and who proved not his wife. He immediately apologized to the lady and was forgiven. He apologized again, later on, to his wife, with no very definite returns up to this date.'

More Dog Poisoning

The west end is becoming notorious for dog poisoning, the last to succumb being Mr Will Batten's splendid St Bernard, "Colonel," valued at $100, and two dogs of less value. It is a serious matter, and no stone should be left unturned to discover the guilty parties, even if it is found necessary to employ a professional detective.

The Farmers' Picnic

We again remind our readers of the farmer's pic-nic at Jubilee Point to-morrow. It will be a representative gathering of the farming community of this district. The speakers are to deal with the beet sugar industry, and they are men who are capable of discussing the question. The business men of the town should take an interest in this excursion and attend it, to show in a practial way their willingness to aid all efforts to bring a sugar factory to Peterborough. The picnic this year will be an education in the sugar beet line. Let the business men be represented.

Presbyterian Century Fund

At the Assembly of the Presbyterian Church of Canada, now in session, the question of the completion of the century fund will be laid before the meeting. Of the $600,000 requested for missions and benevolent work, about $635,000 has been paid. Upwards of $600,000 has been subscribed, but a certain shrinkage is to be expected. The Assembly may take steps to complete this branch of the fund. The sum of $400,000 was requested for the purpose of reduction of debts on church property; instead of this sum nearly $1,000,000 have been paid. Thus the church has actually received, up to date, about a million and a half on this fund.

Rather Expensive Arithmetic

A teacher in one of the Peterborough public schools received the following letter the other day:

"Sir,—Will you in the future give my son easier sums to do at nites? This is what he's brought hoam two or three nites back: 'If fore gallins of bere will fill thirty pint bottles, how many pints and half bottles will nine gallins of bere fill?' Well, we tried and could make nothin' of it at all, and my boy cried and laughed, and said he didn't dare to go bak in the mornin without doin' it. So I had to go over to Kalkitt's brewry and buy a nine gallin keg of bere, which I could ill afford to do, and then he went and borrowed a lot of wine and brandy bottles. We fill them, and my boy put the numbers down for an answer. I don't know whether it is rite or not, as we spilt some while doin' it.

"P.S.—Please let the next sume be in water, as I am not able to buy more bere."

—On Sunday, June 15th, at 8 p.m., a thanksgiving service will be held in St. Mark's church, when Rev. Mr. Langfeldt will preach a patriotic sermon.

WHY DON'T THEY GO?

A Way to Push off the "hang on's."

Perhaps some day you will wake up to the fact that coffee is quickly and surely doing the business for you. You wonder why the symptoms of disease which grow more and more pronounced do not disappear but hang on in spite of all the medicines you can take.

Fixed organic disease may result if you keep up your present course, and yet it is an easy thing to give up coffee and get well. Have your cook make Postum Food Coffee strictly according to directions, and that is easy. Use enough of it and boil long enough to bring out the taste, then you will find that the famous food drink will satisfy your coffee taste and your old troubles gradually disappear.

There are hundreds of thousands of cases in America that prove the truth of this statement.

A gentleman from Columbus, Ga., says, "My wife had been an invalid for some time and did not seem to yield to any sort of medicines. She could not eat anything without distress, and naturally was badly run down in every way.

Finally we concluded that perhaps it was the coffee that hurt her, so she quit it and went on to Postum, also began using Grape-Nuts Breakfast Food. She immediately began to improve and kept gaining strength and health, now she can eat heartily of anything she wants, vegetables and anything else, without hurting her. She has gained nearly thirty pounds since she made the change.

I saw such an improvement in her health that I decided to quit coffee myself and you would be surprised to see the change. I have gained in flesh about 25 pounds, and have entirely lost the old, dull headaches that I used to have so much.

Our two children are very fond of Postum. You can use my name if you like." T. M. Coggin, 1220—10th Ave., Columbus, Ga.

COUNTY COURT IN SESSION

OPENED YESTERDAY BEFORE HIS HONOR JUDGE KETCHUM

A Light Docket—will Probably Finish To Day—The Judge's Address

The County Court of the County of Peterborough opened at 1 o'clock yesterday before His Honour Judge Ketchum. Amongst the members of the bar present were: Messrs. W. A. Stratton, K.C., R. M. Dennistoun, R. E. Wood, G. M. Roger, E. B. Stone, John Green, G. W. Hatton, A. L. Colville, Campbellford, George S. Sherry, Norwood, and O. C. Langley, Lakefield.

The Grand Jury was sworn in as follows:

Cornelius Young, merchant, Lakefield, foreman.
M. Doran, farmer, Ennismore.
Thos. Greystock, farmer, Otonabee.
Wm. Hatherly, farmer, Otonabee.
W. Halcome, farmer, Belmont.
Dawson Kennedy, farmer, Ennismore.
Andrew Laidlaw, merchant, Peterborough.
J. K. Moore, farmer, Smith.
A. E. Micks, merchant, Peterborough.
Robert Tudhope, Jr. farmer, Asphodel.
George H. May, farmer, Otonabee.
Thos. Greaves, farmer, Douro.

His Honour addressed the Grand Jurors, congratulating them upon the freeness of crime in the County and touching upon the old subject of the need of a House of Refuge. He hoped that before long the Legislature would pass legislation compelling counties to erect houses of refuge. His Honour made a rather lengthy reference to the peace settlement in South Africa, which he said the jurors might pass their opinion upon.

The jurors then returned to their room. The first case was.

KENNY VS. DOXEE.

The plaintiff, Archie Kenny, a cheesemaker of Campbellford, and the defendant is A Doxee, of Chandos. The action is brought to recover damages to the contract, claiming that he was wrongfully dismissed from the employ of the defendant. In addition he claims $40 wages alleged to be due him, $11 lent, and interest on $71 from May 11, 1901, until the date of judgment.

In his statement of defence the defendant denies the existence of such a contract, and that the plaintiff left his services voluntarily. He alleges that the defendant was an incompetent cheese maker, but is willing to pay him $46 that he admits is due the plaintiff.

A. L. Colville for plaintiff; Stratton and Hall for defendant.

THE LATE MRS PHELAN

One of Peterborough's Most Esteemed Citizens Passes Away

The news of the death of Mrs. Edward Phelan, which took place on Monday night, will be received everywhere with sincere regret. The deceased lady had been ailing for some time, suffering from rheumatic complaint. About ten days ago Mr. Phelan was taken ill with grip, and it was while attending her husband that the deceased over-taxed her strength and became seriously ill. Everything that medical skill could do was done, but without avail, and she peacefully passed away about midnight.

Death at all times is sad, but when it takes away from our midst one whose graces and goodness are everywhere known. One who is beloved far and near, it is particularly so. The deceased lady was a native of Cork, Ireland, where she was born about seventy years ago. She had lived in Peterborough most of her life. When three or four years of age she came to Canada with the family of her father, the late John Sullivan. She was united in marriage to Mr. Phelan fifty years ago. One of the sad features of her illness and death, is the fact that for some time past Mr. and Mrs. Phelan and their family have been discussing arrangements for the celebration of their golden wedding anniversary next month.

Mrs. Phelan was a consistent Christian woman, and was ever foremost in doing good. A faithful and loving wife, a loving mother and a true friend, she will live for years to come in the hearts of the people.

Mrs. Phelan leaves behind her a husband and three sons:—Mr. Harry Phelan town; Rev. C. J. Phelan, of Young's Point and Mr. Walter Phelan, at present of Toronto. Other relatives of Mrs. Phelan living are her sisters, Mrs. Atchison, of Le Roy, N.Y.; Mrs. P. J. McCauley, Trenton; Mrs. John Corkery, Hamilton township; and Miss Maggie, an unmarried sister, living with a brother, Jeremiah Sullivan, in California.

The funeral will leave the family residence, corner of Simcoe and Stewart Sts. to-morrow, Thursday morning, at 9 o'clock, and proceed to the Roman Catholic Cemetery for interment.

ESCAPE FROM DROWNING

Two Young Men Upset Out of a Canoe on Sturgeon Lake

Messrs. Harry Tims and Allan Dougal, of the Bank of Montreal staff, Lindsay, narrowly escaped drowning on Sunday last, says the Post. They visited friends at Sturgeon Point on Saturday night, and being anxious to reach Lindsay for supper and attend church in the evening they started out in Mr. Dougal's canoe against a strong northwest wind and a heavy sea, to make the trip. When near the first cut they hoisted the sail, and next moment a gust of wind came, and almost before the boys knew what had happened they were struggling in the chilly water. Fortunately the compartments and floated. The boys managed to hold on and drifted ashore near Pleasant Point, after being in the water for nearly an hour. While floating they managed to take off nearly all their clothing. These articles were lost.

Their friends at the Point being anxious to know if they arrived at Lindsay, telephoned here, but the boys could not be found. Fearing that they were in the water their bank comrades here got Mr. Joe. McConnell to steam up the Laura Mace to go the Point. As the yacht was just about to be locked through Messrs Tims and Dougal made their appearance very wet and very cold. The boys say they will not soon forget their experience, and will never again attempt to sail in a canoe in a heavy sea.

TWO TRIPS TO PELEE

An American Scientist Visits the Crater's Mouth

DURING A TERRIFIC STORM

Sat on the Edge of the Crater Enveloped in Rain Clouds and Speculating Upon Strange Detonations

Perilous Trip Down Gorges—Met Kennan and Party at Acier and Decided to Return Upon a Second Trip of Discovery

Special to The Times.

Fort de France, Island of Martinique, June 9.—Professor Angelo Heilprin, president of the Philadelphia Geographical Society, who is here for the National Geographical Society, came into Fort de France last night from his explorations of the crater on the summit of Mont Pelee. Professor Heilprin is well and in good spirits. He has rested from the fatigues of his last trip and is ready for more work.

New Crater Located.

The following important points have been settled by Professor Heilprin:

The location of the new crater has been accurately determined; it is positively known that there has been no overflow of molten matter from the lip of the crater; there has been no subsidence of the mountain, and the height of Mont Pelee is unchanged; the crater does not contain a cinder cone; there has been no cataclysm and no topographical alteration of the country. The period of violent eruptions has probably ended, although the volcano may continue quietly active for a long time to come.

Prof. Heilprin's Expedition.

Referring to his expedition, Professor Heilprin said to-day—

"I left Fort de France with Mr. Leadbetter the morning of May 30, and reached Acier at 7 o'clock in the evening of the 30th. We visited Vive and Basse Pointe. The latter place has been entirely destroyed by the overflow of the local streams. Mud flowing into the beds of the rivers there caused this overflow. Many important usines are seriously menaced by the floods.

"May 31 we made our first ascent of the volcano. We left Acier at half-past 5 and Vive at half-past 7 o'clock in the morning. The party consisted of Mr. Leadbetter and myself and three colored boys. We were on muleback. At an altitude of 700 metres we began the ascent of the Arete. We passed along its east side and slightly to the north of the mountain.

On the Crater's Lip.

"We arrived at the lip of the old crater, the former site of Lake Palmiste, at 11 o'clock. Here it began raining. Rain clouds and the clouds from the volcano enveloped us and we could not see ten feet. A terrific thunderstorm had begun, and we sat on the edge of the crater for some time, speculating whether the detonations we heard were of thunder or from the volcano. As we afterwards found the River Fallaise to be boiling, the detonations were probably volcanic. We could not tell how near we were to the crater, as, either from local attraction or the electrical conditions our compass refused to work. Its variation was about twenty degrees to the eastward, but later we found that it acted normally at the lip of the new crater. The colored boys with us were horribly scared.

Perils of the Trip

"We finally groped our way down that awful arete through gloomy clouds of rain, and amid great electric discharges. At every step we dislodged the rain-soaked ashes and were in danger of being precipitated down the hideous gorges on either side.

"The extreme top of the volcano is covered with cinders, scoriae, bowlders and angular rocks, which had been ejected from the volcano. Further down the mountain is covered with ashes and mud and these are thick on the arete. On our way down we saw the river Fallaise rushing along with great velocity and full of steam and mud. We reached Acier well, but soaked, caked with mud, and very much disappointed.

"At Acier we met Mr. George Kennan and his party, and determined to attempt a second ascent the next day, June 1. The ascent made this day with Mr. Kennan was more trying and difficult than the one I had previously made with Mr. Leadbetter. The day was intensely hot, and it was raining. When we reached the old crater it was again enveloped in vapor. The temperature of the basin of Lake Palmiste, taken three inches below the surface, was 124 degrees Fahrenheit.

"Between lifts in the clouds of vapor we could see the new crater, of which Mr. Varian made an excellent sketch. Suddenly the vapor cleared away and we made a dash forward. We reached the edge of that new crater, and from where we stood we could have dropped stones into the white mass within. The new crater is a crevasse running north and south and expanding into a bowl. This crevasse nearly rifted the mountain. It runs transversely to the old crater, and might be called a huge gash. From it volcanic matter has been freely erupted.

A Sublime Spectacle.

"As we stood on the edge of the crater a sublime spectacle began. I now have some conception of what is going on inside the earth, and have been a spectator of nature's interior work. We were assailed with a noise. Far below there was a hissing of steam like that of a thousand locomotives, as well as violent detonations.

The principal output of the crater, while we were there, was steam. The phenomena were limited and were not essentially different from those of other volcanoes in action. Positive assurance was gained that no molten matter has flowed over the lip of the new crater. Several observations taken with the aneroid barometer showed that the height of Mont Pelee had not been changed.

No Eruption of Lava.

"I agree with Professor Robert T. Hill the geologist of the United States Government, that Mont Pelee erupted no lava, and that there has been no cataclysm or any serious topographical alterations. No cylinder cone was visible in the crater. What was taken for a cone is a pile of ejected rocks. Perhaps the bottom of the new crater may contain a cinder cone, but we could not see down only about 150 or 200 feet. I believe however, that the crater is very much deeper than this.

"I do not know the exact material of which the pile of rocks in the centre of the crater is composed, but it seems to be matter which has been ejected from the crevasse. This pile of rocks has no vent. I think Mont Pelee has freed itself from the interior pressure, and that the volcano is not liable to further violent eruption. It is not safe, however, to make predictions about volcanoes.

Problems in Pelee's Eruption.

"The eruption of Mont Pelee on May 8 was unique in that it resulted in the greatest destruction of life and property ever known by direct agency of a volcano. The phenomenon of the explosion of flaming gases is probably new, but a careful study of observations is necessary before an opinion can be reached. The electrical phenomena are also new. They probably did not play the chief role in the destruction of St. Pierre, but were developed by and aided the other forces. I have specimens which show the effects of the bolts of lightning. The latter were small and intense and penetrated within the houses of the city. For rapidity of action and for lives destroyed Mont Pelee holds the record among volcanoes.

"When we got back to Acier we found Mr. Jaccaci and Mr. Leadbetter, who had stopped at the arete, and had descended before us. Early in the morning of June 2 Mr. Kennan and his party left for Fort de France. Mr. Leadbetter and I went to Morne Rouge to study topographical details, and from there we came back to Acier and Fort de France.

"I shall now join Mr. Kennan in exploring the Leprecheur region."

COUNTY COURT IN SESSION

PRESENTMENT OF THE GRAND JURY READ

The Case of Kenny vs. Doxee Decided in Favor of Kenny

The court gave a verdict of $119.25, in the defendant's favor, in the case of Kenny Vs. Doxee.

THE GRAND JURY.

At noon yesterday the Grand Jury brought in the following presentment:

We, the Grand Jury, beg leave to submit the following report—

We desire to congratulate your Honour and the County upon the absence of crime, as shown by the fact that there are no criminal cases before the county court to engage our attention.

While we welcome your Honour to Peterborough, we would express our regret at the circumstances which make your presence necessary, namely, the ill-health of His Honour Judge Weller, who is thereby rendered unable to discharge the duties he has fulfilled so efficiently in the past, and we trust that in the near future his health will be fully restored.

We would also desire to reciprocate Your Honour's congratulations upon the restoration of peace by the termination of that war in South Africa, a fact that should bring rejoicing throughout the Empire, and bring to the late Republic the blessing of good and stable government, such as we enjoy in this favoured country, which we are proud to regard as the best country in the world.

We have examined the jail premises, and find everything perfectly in order, but regret to note the presence of one or two persons who are guilty of no crime, and therefore should not share the penal confinement of criminals. One of these is a person partially paralyzed and fitted for hospital treatment, and another of unsound mind, who should, we think, be cared for in a proper asylum, and another who we believe is able and should be made to work. The number confined in the jail at present is nine.

We also visited the House of Providence in Ashburnham, where shelter is given to 56 persons, of which 38 are advanced in years and 18 are children, all apparently well cared for.

We also visited St. Joseph's Hospital and found there 26 patients, all well and properly cared for.

In the Nicholls Hospital we found 17 patients, also all well and properly cared for.

We would also strongly recommend and urge the necessity of providing a County House of Refuge for the shelter of those poor and infirm persons, who, for lack of proper accommodation, are compelled to mingle with criminals in the county jail, and we would suggest that the adjoining counties unite in building and maintaining at some convenient point, a suitable institution, where these poor and infirm people can be properly cared for.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

CORNELIUS YOUNG,
Foreman.

Grand Jury Room,
Peterborough, June 11th, 1902.

His Honour addressed the Grand Jurors briefly in reply, after which they were dismissed.

The case of Ontario Bank vs. Moore was then taken up.

ELECTRICITY FROM AIR

Further Particulars of the Latest Discovery

POWER AS FREE AS AIR

A Tremendous Industrial Revolution will Follow the Discovery

Confirmation of the News of the Invention—It will Render Valueless Hundreds of Millions Worth of Property Used for Power

Special to The Times.

London, June 12.—The report of the greatest scientific discovery of the age has been confirmed. The new invention which is nothing more or less than the using of atmospheric electricity without chemicals or dynamos, and applying it without any motive force. The discoverer is a Spaniard named Figueras, an engineer, and for many years professor of physics at St. Augustin's College, Las Palmas, and long known as a scientific student.

Hitherto he has jealously guarded the secret, fearing that a premature revelation might rob him of his reward. Even now, while he professes to have entirely succeeded he remains silent regarding the exact principles of his discovery.

He says, however, that he has invented a generator which can collect the electric fluid, is able to store it and apply it to an infinite number of purposes, for instance, in connection with ships, railways and manufactories. He says he expects the effect of his discovery will be a tremendous economic and industrial revolution.

He will not give the key to his invention but declares that the only extraordinary point about it is that it has taken so long to discover a simple scientific fact.

The people of the Canary Islands consider Prof. Figueras to be very able, and they firmly believe that his invention is genuine. He had his appartus made in separate parts in Paris, Berlin and Las Palmas, and fitted them together himself.

The firm in Berlin which supplied some of the parts was curious enough to send to the Canary Islands an emissary to try to draw out the professor, but the attempt was unsuccessful.

Prof. Figueras is shortly going to Madrid and Berlin to patent his invention.

A German electrical company is reported to have offered a very large sum for the invention, while the syndicate in Barcelona has also made a generous offer. Neither advance has been accepted. This the correspondent adds, is all that it is possible to obtain at present.

No opinion can be expressed as to the value of the discovery until further details are known.

The Mail says that it has learned from other sources that Prof. Figueras has constructed a rough appartus by which he obtains a current of 550 volts, which he utilizes in lighting his house and driving a 20 horse power motor.

He is shortly coming to London with a perfected working apparatus. His inventions comprise a generator, motor and sort of a governor or regulator. The whole apparatus is so simple that a child can work it.

KILLED IN TORONTO

Thomas Guerin, of Peterborough Killed in Toronto on Tuesday

Toronto Globe—Thomas Guerin, a boilermakers' helper, employed in the Grand Trunk's shops, at the foot of Brock street, Toronto, was run down and fatally injured by a shunting engine about noon yesterday. He left the shop to get his dinner and walked down the track a short distance, apparently intending to cross to the water front. He waited to go behind a moving freight train, and after it had passed he stepped in front of the light engine which was backing in the opposite direction. It knocked him down and he was terribly injured in the head and upper portion of the body. The ambulance removed him to the Emergency Hospital, but he died soon after reaching that institution. Internal injuries, it is thought, caused his death, but the facts will be made known at the inquest which Coroner Johnston has called for to-morrow afternoon.

Guerin was 23 years of age and resided with his brother Adolph at 390 Dufferin street. He was unmarried, and came to Toronto from Peterborough.

The deceased was a son of Mr. Adolph Guerin, who resides in the south end of the town. He went to Toronto about a year ago.

Why Britain was Anxious for End of War

Special to The Times.

London, June 11.—The Asiatic preoccupations of Great Britain are responsible in great part for the termination of a wasteful conflict in South Africa. The engagement recently entered into with Japan calls for a free hand, for there is very little doubt in the opinion of competent observers that the outbreak of hostilities between Russia and Japan is merely a question of opportunity, which Japan might might not be able to avail itself of if England's teeth were still fixed in South Africa. The progress of Russia in Persia also has to be met and counteracted in some way, and the prestige of Great Britain all over Asia restored. The attention of the Government, too, is urgently demanded by the imperilled maritime supremacy of Great Britain, without which England sinks to the position of a fifth-rate Power, and the colossal navy she is creating would have no reason for being.

These last considerations, coupled with the others, constitute powerful motives for the peace just concluded, as also for the exercise of a generous toleration of the Boers after they have laid down their arms, and for lenity to the colonial rebels when they submit. The existence of the British Empire may be dependent upon it.

THE FERNIE DISASTER

Inquiry Into the Cause of the Recent Explosion—Four More Bodies Recovered

Fernie, B.C., June 11.— The adjourned inquest into the recent disaster was resumed this morning before Coroner Triton, before whom working plans of the mines were produced.

James Wallace, a shot firer, who worked in Beaver deeps, where it is suggested the explosion might have taken place, testified that the locality was during the morning shift all clear of gas, and that he could have taken an open light to the Beaver face without fear. He remembered a blower in the deeps on one occasion, but this amounted to nothing. He could not account for the explosion. He had worked in the Nanaimo Mines, and there was as much gas there as here. Water was taken in carts and thrown about with buckets to lay the dust. There was a large quantity of dust on the haulage. The new machinery recently introduced raised a good deal of dust, but witness had never withheld a shot on account of dust from the machines. Black powder and dynamite were the usual explosives used. In answer to Mr. Blakemore witness said: "If I had been told that an explosion took place that day I would say that it could not be so from what I saw. Any dust was at least two hundred feet back from the face workings." A year ago gas had been found in the mines, and after that safety lamps had been introduced.

One of the Survivors.

John Dobie, fire boss, swore that the faces were clear of dust and gas within a radius of twenty yards of the working faces in the No 2 mine, to which the explosion expended. He was in the mine at the time of the explosion, and felt a great blast of wind coming towards him. He and 23 others came out alive. The explosion came from the south side of the No. 2 slope in the No. 2 mine. He had never known gas amounting to anything to exist in No. 2 mine. There was no dust in the No. 2 mine, had lots of water, in fact was all wet with the exception of a small district on the right or south side of the slope. He had never reported the existence of dust, and had never seen a fire. Witness had been engaged in coal mining for twenty years in Scotland and Pennsylvania. In Scotland they never sprinkled the dust.

A Bereaved Father.

Hugh Diggs a rope splicer and electrician, exhibited a good deal of feeling, he having lost one of his sons in the disaster. He had seen no gas in Beaver deep, but had seen gas in No. 2 mine, and had lighted it on one occasion, and it had taken half an hour to put it out. He had never seen any gas in the No. 2 mine, but the dust was ankle deep in the main roadways, but never nearer the working faces than 200 feet. He could not give any explanation of how the accident happened. He was outside at the time of the explosion, and saw a great cloud of dust, but no fire, coming from the entrances of the Nos. 2 and 3 mines. His son and a "trapper" had opened lamps in the main air shaft, and he believed this was often done, but never in the mine workings. He thought if the overcast had been built four feet higher it would no have carried away, and that the fan which continued working would have supplied air with might have saved the lives of several of the miners. He never at any time reported to anyone that he thought that dust was dangerous. He would always damp on the roadways of Beaver deep, and the road leading up to it from the main roadway was damp.

Tim McCarthy, bratticeman (a ventilator worker), worked in the No. 2 mine at Beaver deep, and saw nothing dangerous, and knew nothing about the cause of the explosion. He once noticed a small fire caused by a shot at the entrance to No. 1 room in the machine workings.

George Allison, timberman, worked in the No. 2 mine, and never noticed gas or dust. He noticed a fire started once by a shot.

D. R. McDonald, timberman, worked in the No. 3 division of the No 2 mine in the machine section. There was no machine working in that section on the day of the explosion. The mine was clear of gas generally during the day. That section was very dusty in the main roadway, but he could not give the cause of the accident. The main roadway was 200 feet away from the working faces. He believed the machines were dangerous, and had twice seen fires started from the machine workings. There was a considerable amount of dust, and it was not sufficiently watered. He admitted to Mr. Macdonald that the roadways, which were in the same condition as on the day of the accident, had been reported by him to be on May 5 in good order. He thought that powder was not a safe explosive in gaseous mines. In Nova Scotia they have discontinued the use of powder, because of the gaseous condition of the mines. He had thought the mines dangerous, but had never said so to anybody, and had lost a son in the explosion.

The inquest was again adjourned.

At 12.30 yesterday a fire broke out at Michel, having been communicated from a conflagration in the neighboring woods. Twenty-six of the companies' houses were burnt, doing damage to the value of about $15,000. The tipple was on fire, and one fan was burned out, but the timbers at the mine entrance were left, and the tipple was ultimately saved. The output at Michel will, therefore, not be interferred with for more than a day or two.

More Bodies Taken Out

Four more bodies were taken from the mines to-day, making 124 altogether, and it is likely there are four more yet to be recovered.

Dying by Slow Degrees

Although not always aware of it thousands die by slow degrees of catarrh. It first attacks the nose or throat, than the lungs, and finally spreads all through the system. Catarrhozone is the only remedy that will immediately prevent the spread of this awful disease. Every breath from the Inhaler kills thousands of germs, clears the throat and nose, aids expectoration and relieves the pain across the eyes. TWO NEGRO BOYS LYNCHED

Charlotte, N.C., June 11.—A mob of about fifty men broke into the jail at Salisbury at 1 o'clock this morning, took out two negro boys, Harris and James Gillespie, charged with murdering a white girl, and lynched them. They were hanged to a tree on the outskirts of the city. Their bodies were riddled with bullets.

THE EFFECT OF LYNCHINGS.

In justice to President Roosevelt, let it be said that he has at last vigorously denounced lynching. So far he is an improvement on his pious predecessor, who on the very scene of the lynchings morally connived at them by his silence. But words, however, strong, will have little effect on the passions of a Texan mob. Something effectual evidently must be done if a murderous collision of races is not to be the end. Yet it is extremely difficult to say what can be done when the powers of Government are so limited as are those of the Government of the United States, and with such a lack of statesmanship as there is now at Washington, where regard for national interests is lost in a sectional struggle for commercial self. The social antagonism between the North and South has not been obliterated by the reconquest of the South, and it still suggests misgivings as to the ultimate stability of the Union.

Russian Activity in China Causing Great Uneasiness

An Ominous Outlook for the Peace of the World

A Despatch Says that War Cannot Be Long Delayed

Special to The Times.

London, June 12.—Russian activity in Mongolia is a cause of no small uneasiness in the Pekin court, and, judging from recent Tokio papers, the matter seems to be attracting great attention in Japan, too. Some time ago the Chinese Government despatched a high official, Yu Tok, to that outlying part of the empire to report on the condition of things there. A confidential communication received recently from him by Grand Secretary Yung Lu, and published in some of the Tokio papers, reveals a state of things calculated to disturb the equanimity of even the most apathetic of Chinese statesmen. The writer says:

"Since the boxer trouble of the year before last the Russian Government has spared no pains to purchase the good will and gratitude of the Mongolian chiefs by lavish and constant presents of food stuffs, garments and money. The Russian policy, in this respect, is, indeed, in striking contrast to the irregular and uncertain payment of our own stipulated subsidies to these chiefs. According to a rumor current along the routes I have travelled thus far, Prince Tuan and Gen. Tung Fuh-siang (the proscribed leaders of the Boxer movement) are said to have been present in these parts, impressing upon the people the utter decadence of the Middle Kingdom and extolling the prowess of Russia. Whatever may be the truth of this story, I have myself been the witness on several occasions, of the presence in these parts of a number of Gen. Tung's followers. I have also seen repeatedly parties of Russian soldiers moving about in several places. There are schools in many places where the natives are learning the Russian language * * * At Lin-Tsai, Kian-Nin (impossible to locate on the map but apparently in the parts adjacent to the Russian border) and some other places, I have seen a large number of Russian settlers * * * In other sections of the country, also, it is noticeable that there is an increasing tide of popular leaning toward Russia. This, I believe, is the result of ignorance on the part of natives as to the mighty power of the Middle Kingdom, and it is therefore urgently important that the dangerous tendency in question should be checked by the despatch of a strong force of troops, drilled according to the foreign fashion. It is my earnest hope that your excellency will at once consult with Viceroy Yuan on this subject."

Does Russia intend to relinquish Manchuria? What means the recent confab between the Czar and the French President? Why did the latter visit St. Petersburg, and what was the object of the meeting? In the light of events in the East, it is easily understood. That war is coming and that quickly, few who have watched the trend of events in the East will deny.

DEAD BABY IN A BOX.

THE BODY OF AN INFANT FOUND BURIED IN SAWDUST

The Infant was Wrapped in a Copy of the Times—Inquest Held Last Night

While Mr. Matthew McMahon, an employee of the Dickson Company, was at work in the lumber yard adjoining the mill yesterday he discovered the body of a newly born infant. He at once notified the Chief of Police, who informed Coroner Gray, who, after consulting with County Crown Attorney Wood, ordered an inquest to be held.

The body was that of a female. It was in a box, and was headless. It was removed to the undertaking establishment of D. Belleghem, and prepared for burial.

THE INQUEST.

At the inquest held last night a jury composed of Messrs. McFadden, Miller Ryan, Hutchinson, Good, Brown, Savigny Hall, Cooney, Brooks, McGregor, Cobb, Kindred and Bradburn was impannelled.

Evidence was heard from Chief Rossel, Mr. Frank Bano, of Belleghem undertaking establishment, and Dr. Young, after which an adjournment was made until Monday evening June 16th at 8, p.m.

Recent despatches from Holland represent Kruger as heart broken over the final outcome of the South African war, and it is doubtful if he will derive much comfort from the generous terms which the British government proposes to extend to him.

There is no more pathetic figure in history than this of the old man of the republics of South Africa that have been finally overwhelmed by the British Empire. There he sits in his exile, a solitary individual, out of touch even with the men into whose hands the control of affairs in his country passed after the capture of his capital by the British forces had made his position at home untenable. After that, there was nothing for him but surrender to the enemy or to seek refuge abroad, because his age and physical feebleness made it impossible for him to endure the hardships of life on the kopje or the veldt.

He left South Africa with hopes of securing intervention to save his country from being overwhelmed; and we can imagine his bitter disappointment as one European court after another turned the cold shoulder, or in polite diplomatic phrase informed him and his agents that anything beyond the tender of good offices was incompatible with their duty as neutral powers. When he became convinced that no nation on earth would risk antagonizing the boasted mistress of the seas on behalf of a remote and feeble state, the iron must have entered his soul, and if he did not see the inevitable end it was because his narrow-mindedness could not conceive of any surrender so long as a single Boer remained with strength enough to lift and sight a rifle.

Had Oom Paul been a statesman of the modern type he would have perceived that resistance was useless after the fall of Pretoria and Johannesburg, and would have hastened to make the best terms possible to save something from the wreck, and to avoid useless effusion of blood. But his model was Moses rather than Napoleon. He could not bow the knee to Baal. And so the war went on until younger Boers, more imbued with the modern and the practical spirit, took the responsibility and made terms over his head, leaving him, alone in his picturesque isolation, to wear out the feeble life among a kindred people, warm in sympathy, but powerless to aid his lost cause.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Mrs. Hariet Lane Johnson, niece of President Buchanan, and mistress of the White House when the Prince of Wales visited America as "Baron Renfrew," has not been forgotten by Edward VII. of England. She is now in London and will witness the coronation by invitation of the King. While in Washington in 1861, the Prince enjoyed a visit with Miss Lane to a fashionable boarding school for young women, and rolled several games of ninepins with her and the pupils. These civilities were in small part returned when Miss Lane was a guest in the British Legation at dinner with the Prince, but the reception and splendid treatment which he received at the hands of the President and his niece were ever remembered by the future King. A Washington correspondent notes that King Edward has seen to it that every social distinction awaits the American woman who made pleasant his visit to the American capital more than a third of a century ago

* * * *

The treaty of peace in South Africa will throw a great many sympathetic gentlemen in the United States upon the county. The business of collecting money for the suffering Boers, was a good one, however, while it lasted. They might now devote their energies and sympathies to collecting for the suffering Filipinos.

YOUR SUMMER VACATION

If You Are Not In A Condition of Health To Enjoy It Thoroughly

Paine's Celery Compound

Will Send You off Happy and Joyous

In every city and town of the land young and old are already arranging for the "summer vacation" to the seaside, mountains or rural resorts.

Some will leave full of health and vigor, others, suffering from nervous prostration, sleeplessness, headaches, backaches, sideaches, neuralgia, rheumatism and blood troubles will drag themselves off in the vain hope that a change of air and scenery will secure for them a certain measure of relief and comfort. Such hopes are vain and foolish. The of weakness and sickness, should without delay, be attacked at home, before trusting oneself to the many discomforts of popular resorts.

If Paine's Celery Compound be honestly used this month, by the ailing, run-down, weak and nervous, they will find that in a few short weeks they will be enabled to leave for a vacation with a surprising amount of new vigor and strength, fitted to enjoy themselves, and at the same time be a comfort to those with whom they may associate.

We would urge the necessity of immediate efforts to secure the necessary strength for the enjoyment of a true summer vacation. Paine's Celery Compound will assuredly give you happy results. Try it.

NORTH MONAGHAN.

The Council of the Township of North Monaghan met as per adjournment of the last meeting.

All the members were present, the Reeve presiding. The minutes of the last meeting were not read.

The committee appointed to estimate the cost of the crib-work and filling in of washout on the Drain Road, reported.

It was moved by Messrs. May and Smith that Commissioner Revington be, and he is hereby, instructed to provide and crib and fill in the washout on the Drain Road by day labour in the same manner as other work is being performed throughout the township. The Council to supply that timber, etc., and the work to be under the supervision of a Committee consisting of the Reeve and Chas. May and Smith. This was carried.

It was moved by Messrs. May and Smith, that a committee consisting of Messrs. Madill, Smith and Dobbin meet a committee of Cavan Township Council for the purpose of inspecting and repairing any necessary places of the Cavan boundary road.—Carried.

By-law No. 510, entitled a "Bylaw to confirm an agreement with the Peterborough Radial Railway Co., by which the franchise to erect a street railway within the Township and operate the same for a term of years," was introduced and read a first and second time. The third reading of this by-law was deferred until next meeting of the council.

The clerk forwarded the list of statute labour commutations for each division for the year 1902, as follows: Road Division, No. 1, 408 days, $302.25, less snow shovelling acct., $83.3o, total, $219; add bal. not spent, 1901, 75 cents; leaving total of $219.75. Road Division No. 2, 198 days, $111; less snow shovelling acct., $28.25; total, $112.75; less overspent 1901, $10.75; leaving total of $102.00; Road Division No. 3, 222 days, $166.50; less snow shovelling acct. $30.15, total $136.35; add bal. not spent 1901, $4.02; leaving a total of $140.37. Road Division, No. 4, 250 days, $187.50, less snow shovelling acct., $12.50; total $175; and bal. not spent 1901, $133.90; leaving grant total of $308.90.

These lists were accepted and ordered to be delivered to the several Road Commissioners.

Council then adjourned until Monday, July 14th, at the town hall, at 1.30 p.m.

The adjourned meeting of the N. Monaghan Court of Revision met on Saturday, June 7th. The following alterations were made to the assessment roll for 1902; R. Kline, assessed part 1 or 2, $500; J. Madill, assessment reduced, $100; N. W. May assessed as occupant; J. Ferguson, assessed as occupant. Mr. R. Lillico, appeared before the council asking for a reduction in his assessment on lot 1 on 11th con. but owing to irregularities in the appeal no action was taken in the matter. The roll was then confirmed and the court adjourned.

The largest producing mines today pay big dividends on ore averaging from $3.00 to $8.00 per ton. This is only made possible by the enormous bodies of ore such as are found on the "Chicago" "United Verde" "Oro Grande" and other similar mines.

The "United Verde" with an original capital of three million dollars pays to its stockholders in cash profits about Two million dollars every month; or in other words pays back its entire capital every six weeks.

THE BLACK ROAK MININNG CO., LIMITED, will without doubt pay dividends of at least one per cent. a month before the end of the year. Now is the time to get in while stock is low. Only 10c. per share.

TO THE ADVERTISER

Do you realize that it would be easy for you to increase your business to the extent of several thousand dollars a year?

Do you know that hundreds of people living in the country surrounding Peterborough never see your name in the newspaper they read; that they don't know why it would be to their advantage to deal with you?

Do you know that these people are sending to Toronto for goods they could buy from you, if they knew you wanted to sell them?

Do you realize that the merchants of Toronto and Montreal are reaching out for the trade of this, and other towns; that they are spending thousands of dollars in advertising, to tell people who ought to buy from YOU all about their goods?

Are YOU telling the people about YOUR GOODS, and the LOW PRICES at which you sell them?

You CAN NOT do so thoroughly, if you don't advertise in THE TIMES, because THE TIMES reaches people whom you can't reach through any other medium.

At least 60 per cent. of the people living in the surrounding country read "THE TIMES" and NO OTHER newspaper. These people have money to spend and will spend it in Toronto because they think they can buy more cheaply there than here. If you don't secure their custom.

Use THE TIMES to tell them you can give them better bargains than they can get in Toronto.

You'll make money, you'll increase your business, you'll get new customers if you advertise in THE TIMES.

We are going to make THE TIMES the best daily paper in Eastern Ontario. We have made arrangements to improve the local news service and to push the paper to the foremost place in the front ranks. We want you to advertise in THE TIMES because it'll pay you to do so. Every dollar you spend for advertising in The Times will return with good interest added.

Remember—No matter how much business you are doing now—YOU CAN DO MORE if you advertise in THE TIMES.

TRY IT AND SEE IF YOU CAN'T.

Curious Bits of News.

Wearing sandals is an English fad that has just reached America. They come in several styles, and their use is said to meet with the approval of physicians and chiropodists.

When "Looking Backward" was written it was the prophecy of a dreamer that in a hundred years the citizen would hear sweet music by telephone. Already in London advertisements of fashionable flats offer you the luxury of an electrophone in each suite.

An English paper says that a great many valuable jewels were swept up after King Edward and Queen Alexandra's recent court. An equerry superintended the work and great care was taken with the valuable finds, most of which were promptly enquired for by their owners.

A peculiarly interesting ceremony has been gone through at Westminster Abbey several times. A stalwart grinning bobby sits upon an ordinary cane-seated chair, while a tin crown is put on his head to the accompaniment of thunderous peals from the great organ, and the shrill voices of the boy choir. It is one of the rehearsals preliminary to the coronation.

The English sparrow, which has made so many enemies in the East, has invaded the Rocky Mountain region. For some time past, Mr. T. D. A. Cockerell reports, it has been known in the north-eastern section of New Mexico, at Raton and Las Vegas, and it seems to be gradually spreading westward and southward, having recently been noticed, for the first time, at Albuquerque.

One of the bloodiest bull-fights ever witnessed in Juarez, Mexico, was on March 16, when Fuentes and Mazzantini, Spain's most renowned matadors, fought six bulls to the death. Five horses were horribly gored and killed, or mortally wounded during the combat, which lasted three hours, and the ten thousand people who saw the Sunday afternoon battle had their thirst for gore fully satisfied.

The Russian Government has undertaken the completion of a great petroleum pipe line from the oil-wells of Baku on the Caspian Sea to the port of Batum on the Black Sea, a distance of about 550 miles, following the axis of the Caucasus range of mountains. Several years may be required to finish the work, but when the line is in operation it will be capable of transporting 625,000,000 gallons a year, and the intention is to compete in the world's markets with American petroleum.

It is difficult to account for the enormous velocity of some birds' flight when migrating. The northern blue throat goes at the rate of 540 miles an hour, flying 4,800 miles from Egypt to Heligoland in a spring night of barely nine hours. Virginian plover fly from Labrador to North Brazil, 3,600 miles, without stopping, going at the rate of 636 miles in an hour, and probably more. How can this speed be attained? "Nature Notes" thinks it is because the birds resort to great heights, where the resistance of the air is slight.

Among the most interesting experiments in telephoning without wires are those of Monsieur Ducretet, a French scientist. He places an ordinary telephonic transmitter in direct communication with the ground, and at a considerable distance away, on the other side of some buildings with thick walls and cellars, he has a receiver, connected by one wire to the earth, and by another wire to a small metallic sphere let down through an opening to the floor of the catacombs beneath Paris. When words are spoken into the transmitter they are heard in the receiver with much greater clearness than in an ordinary telephone. Monsieur Ducretet is continuing his experiments at increasing distances.

In many farming districts of the West the telephone is taking the place of the newspaper in certain directions. With the spread of the telephone to farms has come about what the company calls a "news service." At a given hour every evening—seven o'clock is the time in most communities—the central operator calls up its long line of subscribers and reads off to them, as to one man, the important happenings of the day. First the official Washington time is given, so that clocks may be regulated, and then come the weather quotations for the next twenty-four hours. Market quotations of farm commodities always follow, so the subscriber in South Dakota knows what his butter sent last week to New York, Chicago or Boston sold for that day. This one feature alone is changing the markets for certain farm products, and swinging them, for instance, from Boston to New York, and vice versa. Important news of national moment is also telephoned briefly without bias, and thus the twenty minutes devoted to this news service is filled out.

Lost the Case.

"Sometimes," said a prominent lawyer, who was giving some reminiscences of his professional career, "a case is won or lost for you right in the court-room without your lifting your finger—or rather, your voice.

"I was once counsel for the plaintiff in a suit for infringement of trademark. My client made a brand of chewing-gum put up in a blue wrapper. This wrapper had been widely advertised, and was a good thing to catch the eye in a candy counter. The defendant had got up a pretty close imitation; at a distance it looked the same, although the words were different, and nothing was copied except the general appearance, which is, for advertising purposes, half the value of a distinctive label.

"The opposing counsel made out a pretty good case, showing that in wording, the shape of the letters, and other points, his client's wrapper was different from the plaintiff's.

"'Why,' he said, picking up one wrapper and showing it to the jury, 'would anyone mistake this wrapper for that of the plaintiff? See,' he continued, reaching down for the other, 'they are entirely different.'

"I told him to hold the two just as he had them. He paused at my interruption, wondering what I was up to. His wonder changed to confusion when he found that he had mistaken them himself, and picked up my client's wrapper first. It took two words from me to win the case."

In a Chariot of Fire.

"'Morning, 'Lije. Didn't expect to see you here. Thought ye'd be givin' us fellows a pretty wide berth. When 're ye goin' to start out on the missionary business?" It was the bantering voice of Jerry Pull, the presiding genius of the Mansion House bar-room.

"Go on, Jerry, what are you giving us?" said the strapping six-footer, who had just come in from the stable yard with a pair of beautifully matched bull-terriers at his heels.

"Goin' to sell yer sportin' dogs an' give the mon' to the poor?" continued the bar-keep, throwing a wink at a select party of habitues seated near the window.

"Sell Blinker and Beefer?—not while I have the price of a drink in my clothes, Jerry," replied Elijah Todhunter, stooping and patting both his dogs affectionately. "And seeing as this has been a pretty fair season—yes, sir, pretty fair—in the horse business, I don't reckon on reaching my last nickel for a few days yet. But, say, Jerry, what's the meaning of this 'slack' they're all giving me, anyway?"

"Slack?" said Jerry. "Why, old fellow, it's reported you got religion las' night. Haven't you been attendin' all these revival meetin's? The boys say you've been there four nights handrunnin'—they seen you goin' in."

'Lije turned with an exclamation of disgust and denial—just one sharp, summarizing expletive. Then he cracked a fifty-cent piece on the top of the pine bar with enough force to mark the soft wood with an impress of the milled edge.

"Step up, boys," he said, with a wave to the arm-chair philosophers; "the drinks are on me this time."

But Elijah Todhunter, the horse-buyer and all-round sporting man, took a lemon soda while his friends disposed of sterner stuff. Then, without offering a word of explanation of the reports on which the jovial servant of Bacchus had based his jests, Elijah turned the conversation to other matters—the price of horseflesh, the records of Blinker and Beefer as prize-winners at the bench shows, "Bud" Burnside's homing pigeons, Job Enfield's new silo, and a score of other subjects of current comment in the village and township.

Having talked and listened with equal intelligence, till there seemed to be nothing more to talk about, the horse-buyer asked Jerry Pull for the latest Toronto paper, and, pulling a chair up to the fire, sat down and busied himself with his pipe and the last night's news.

Not for a dozen years had slow and sleepy Duncanville been so disturbed as by the union revival services now going on in the dingy old agricultural hall—the largest assembly room in the place. The Rev. Winterburn Packard, professional evangelist, had fairly kicked the town into a consciousness of sin. Duncanville was not in the ordinary sense a bad town—just a common country village, with six stores besides the post-office, a bank, a woollen mill, two taverns, a blacksmith and wagon-shop, an annual fair, a railway, and a market. Its people were much the same as people in most other country-places—somewhat superficial and conventional in their standards of conduct, addicted just a trifle to gossip and uncharitable speaking, possibly too prone to measure merit by success, yet on the whole a kindly disposed, right-intentioned, temperate, clean-living and honest people.

But since the advent of the Rev. Winterburn Packard, Duncanville had seemed, in the eyes of many of its own best citizens, to be a very stronghold of sin and uncleanness. It was as though the town had been rocked from its nethermost foundations by an earthquake shock. No gaping fissures had as yet appeared in the thin earth-rind on which Duncanville, in common with other human habitations, stands suspended o'er bottomless lakes of fire. But the very smell of brimstone was in the air, and it would have occasioned no surprise to the local saints had the solid earth dissolved at any moment and precipitated the whole of sinful creation into the pit of everlasting torment. Revivalist Packard had figuratively taken Duncanville by the scruff of the neck and dangled it over the bad place till its garb of mere respectability was singed on its quivering body and it yelled for mercy. Everybody was taking the shortest cut to the penitent bench with the least delay practicable. Steady church-goers, self-confessed worldlings, even the few open scoffers of the village—both sexes and all ranks and conditions of people—"old men and babes and loving friends and youths and maidens gay"—were being nightly gathered into the fold. Not since the postmaster's son had eloped with old Dr. Rubbleby's young wife and burglars had blown the safe at the railway station, both in the same night, had Duncanville experienced such a spasm of excitement.

Now, to be quite fair, the instrument by whom such miracles were wrought upon a blind and faithless generation was a man of no mean stature, morally or intellectually. But as he stood above the average in character and brain power, so the psychic side of his nature seemed to have been endowed at the expense of the physical. The Rev. Winterburn Packard was not ten years out of the divinity school. But though still in the bloom and promise of the thirties, he looked to have spent ages in fighting the hosts of Satan. He was a rather short, spare man in immaculate black clothes, that always looked as though he had just had them carefully pressed without troubling to remove them from his person; and it seemed as if the oft-repeated ironings had, in the long course of years, flattened his body till, looked at sideways, it resembled the lath and canvas trees that are used on the stage. His complexion was that of an underdone tea-biscuit. His eyes, small and piercing black, were imprisoned behind a pair of large, unrimmed, close-fitting spectacles, as if to prevent their jumping out of his head in moments of rhetorical and emotional abandon. His hair, once dark—lang syne, in the forgotten days of his youth—was now well streaked with gray, and clung in a shaggy mass at the nape of the neck by way of counterbalance to the beetling brow that seemed to threaten to disturb the possessor's vertebral equilibrium. However, one soon forgot the peculiarities of his person in listening to the music of his voice as he pictured the lost estate of man and pointed the way to salvation in language fluent and tumultuous as the rush of waters over the precipice of Niagara.

It was true that Elijah Todhunter,

An Acrostic of Gems.

There was formerly a very pretty fashion in the setting of gems which was so quaint that it deserves to be remembered. It consisted in so setting the gems of a wedding ring that the initial letters of the gems, read in acrostic style, would give the name of the bride. Sometimes, when the names presented difficulties in gem-type, they were set up so as to form a motto on the same plan. The most interesting example of this peculiar fashion is that connected with the name of Rachel, the famous actress. Someone made her a present of a diadem in which were six jewels. The stones were so set that when read acrostically they gave not only the actress's name, but also the initial letters of the principal parts she had played. Put in proper form and translated into words, it was as follows:

R uby,	R ozana,
A methyst,	A menaide,
C ornelian,	C amille,
H ematite,	H ermione,
E merald,	E milie,
L apis lazuli.	L aodice.

The column on the left gives the lady's name from the initials of the gems, and the column on the right shows her six principal roles, so that the gems indicated not only the name, but the occupation also.

The Maxims of Nizam.

There are two kinds of men who, by their personal appearance, instantly attract the attention of women—the very handsome man and the very homely man. The fellow of average appearance seldom counts.

A woman can always instinctively detect insincerity in a man—except when she is in love.

So long as men are men, and women are women, no man will ever meet a woman without both—perhaps unconsciously—casting up the chances of eventual matrimony.

Women seldom speak from experience—for the simple reason that they rarely profit from experience. They are much more likely to talk of their experiences.

This idea of "living on a desert isle" with one woman for life is all very well in its way—and it is a plan that appeals to a certain form of insanity—but a time would always come to any man who might attempt this when he would be glad to sit down and chat socially with his mortal enemy.

Most men think that women are fools; probably because they would like to have them so. This would give the majority of men so much more of an opportunity.

Women get more out of incidents than men do—because their lives are made up of incidents. They are not capable of undergoing a protracted experience.—Albert Lee in "Smart Set."

Fifteen Laws of Book-Borrowing.

An English magazine reprints some curious laws of book-borrowing—originally found in a copy of the "Lettres Fanatiques," 8vo., 1739, now in the British Museum. The complete text in ancient law Latin was published in the "Athenaeum" of December 21, 1901. Prescribed some century and a half ago by one Francis Vargas, Marquis of Macchucca, to frequenters of his library, the book lover of any age will find little to cavil at in their simple provisions, which run as follows:

"I. Do not steal the book.

"II. Do not cut or stab it.

"III. For Heaven's sake draw no lines about it, within or without.

"IV. Do not fold, crumple or wrinkle the leaves.

"V. Nor scribble on the margins.

"VI. All the ink required is already on the pages; do not defile them with more.

"VII. Let your book marker be of perfectly clean paper.

"VIII. The volume is not to be lent to anyone else on any consideration.

"IX. Keep mouse, worm, moth and fly away from it.

"X. Let no oil, fire, dust or filth come near it.

"XI. In a word, use the book, don't abuse it.

"XII. Read and make what extracts you please, but

"XIII. When read don't keep it an unreasonable time.

"XIV. See that the binding and cover are as they were when you received them.

"XV. Do this, and however unknown you shall be entered in the catalogue of my friends. Omit it, and however well known your name shall be erased."

A Canadian Herd Record.

The following letter is published by Hoard's Dairyman:—

Enclosed you will find a brief report of our dairy of twelve cows for the year 1901:—

No. lbs. milk for year..........	62,595
No. lbs. cream from same......	8,350
No. lbs. skim milk	54,036
Cream was shipped to Montreal and averaged me about 78 cents a gallon of 10 lbs., or.	$670.80
54,036 lbs. skim milk, 20 cents..	108.07
Total...	$778.87
Average milk per cow..	5,216 lbs.
Average money per cow	$64.90
Average of milk per hundred lbs.	$1.24½

You will see that I value the skim milk at 20 cents per hundred. I consider it worth this to me to feed at home. My cows are grade Durhams and Jerseys. We have a silo; have used it seven years, and consider it the cheapest feed we can raise here. Had about four acres last season, and had 66 double loads to put in silo. Thought we had nearly 60 tons. Am feeding it twice a day in winter, and find our cows do just as well. I have water in stable. Cows have only been out once this winter. Stable is well lighted, and has a ventilator in it. Cellar under stable, and in this way think we save the liquid manure.

Made Good Soldiers.

Writing in The Upper Canada Times, A.W.P. gives an entertaining sketch of the mountaineers of Virginia, in the course of which he tells the following story:—During the war with Spain an attempt was made to enroll a mountain régiment in West Virginia. Indeed these lean, fierce, slouching backswoodsmen should make superb irregular fighters. But red tape demanded that they should be drilled, and drilled they were, at Charleston. But the weather was warm and many were met together, and to a mountaineer heat and society suggest corn whiskey. So after a long and heartbreaking day for perspiring officers and files of the guard, the whole regiment "guessed they'd quit," broke ranks and surged into town—a thirsty wave. A sweeping operation a la Kitchener landed three hundred in the guard-house before sunrise, and the prospects were bright for the capture of all, when, mirabile dictu, the guard-house rose in air, showed for a moment like a giant centipede, then was tilted over by many willing hands, and the parched three hundred again swept down to spread Chaos and Old Night in Charleston.

"Vatever is de Rule."

This tale, according to The Philadelphia Times, was told by Judge Pennypacker, who has an excellent reputation as a maker of fervid anti-British speeches, in beginning a response to a toast at a Pennsylvania German banquet in Philadelphia. The story, he said, showed the readiness of the Pennsylvania Dutchman to obey those in authority. It also casts some light upon the occurrences of the American civil war, and goes to suggest that even "farm-burning" is not absolutely unprecedented:—

In 1864 Sheridan, under orders, burned every barn from a valley above Staunton to a certain point below Winchester. A band of angry rebels followed this raid, watching for a chance to pick up any stragglers. Among others who fell into their hands was a little Pennsylvania Dutchman, who quietly turned to his captors and inquired:

"Vat you fellows going to do mit me?"

The reply came short and sharp:

"Hang you."

"Vell," he said, meekly, "vatever is de rule."

His good-natured reply threw the Confederates into a roar of laughter and saved his life.

Wanted a Meal.

A visiting Englishman, says The New York Sun, who attended a dinner given last week by a suburban hostess whose hospitality is notoriously inadequate made a reply to her that it will be difficult for her to live down. Her dinners have been referred to as "samples," and invitations to them are not accepted with alacrity the second time. Her wealth is large, however, and her social persistence is untiring, so that her friends are obliged to accept some of her invitations. The Englishman was a big fellow, whose family had been kind to the hostess when she was in London. The dinner was of the usual inadequate kind that her friends expected. It served merely as an appetizer to the hearty Englishman, and when the coffee was served, indicating that the dinner was at an end, his expression of dissatisfaction was amusing to the other guests. The hostess did not notice it, however, and she said to him amiably:

"Now, do tell me when we may have the pleasure of having you dine with us again?"

"Immediately, madam, immediately," was his unexpected reply. Fortunately for the hostess another guest remarked that the weather had been very "funny," and this permitted a burst of appreciative laughter that ought to have stamped the weather as a wag.

Where Rhodes Rests.

The Matoppo Hills stretch in a northeasterly direction from Buluwayo for a distance of a hundred miles, their greatest breadth being thirty-five miles. The place of Mr. Rhodes' burial is situated about thirty miles from the town.

Near by is a part of the hills which bears the important title of "The World's View." The prospect from any chosen summit makes a deep impression on the spectator. It is impressive without being picturesque. As far as eye can see there is spread out before him a panorama of treeless mountains of varied shapes, mostly of abrupt outline, suggestive of a turbulent sea stilled by an omnipotent hand. The base of the hills is fringed with trees, and here and there is a clump of thick bush. In places great gorges draw black lines between the mountains, which, moreover, are punctured with giant caves, where the Matabele took refuge during the rebellion, and could have held out for an indefinite period had not the genius and daring of Mr. Rhodes put an end to the outbreak.

The predominant note is massiveness and stability, for the hills are of granite, but the hardness is toned down by the green of the lower foliage and the soft, velvety azure of the sky above. It was the poet in Cecil Rhodes which impelled him to his choice.

In places the traveller comes upon groups of ruins, which in this out-of-the-world region strangely stir the imagination.

It is difficult to realize that these habitations were occupied by gold-seekers so long ago as 1,000 B.C. When one thinks of Rhodesia, it is invariably of the great possibilities which the future holds for the country. But what of Rhodesia's past? Three thousand years ago men as gold-hungry as the "greenest" prospector of to-day scoured the Matoppos and the surrounding country for the precious metal. These crumbling ruins once contained the furnaces for the retorting and smelting of the gold. In many quarters huge excavations are found, where the ancients dug far down into the bowels of the earth in search of the metal. Several of these mines are still the largest on the earth's surface. The galleries are caked with layers of soot from the torches of the workers. One historian estimates that the ancient miners discovered millions of pounds' worth of gold in Rhodesia.

"What are you in prison for, my friend?"

"Stealin' a pin, ma'am."

"What?"

"That's right, ma'am. It had a diamond fastened at one end of it."—Chicago Tribune.

Scientific Predictions in Fiction.

RECENTLY "Saturday Night" cited a number of cases of remarkable literary prevision of scientific truth. The words in which Calderon, the Spanish dramatist of the seventeenth century, seems to describe wireless telegraphy and the remarkable passage in which Strada, the learned Jesuit historian, writing in 1624, also depicted Marconi's invention, were quoted. But some further cases of the same kind are now brought to light.

In the third part of "Gulliver's Travels," Swift describes the two satellites of Mars. As the London "Spectator" points out, "when Swift wrote, astronomy had not advanced greatly beyond Huygens's contentment with the twelve bodies—six planets and six satellites—which made up the 'perfect number' of the solar system. Certainly no one suspected that Mars had moons of its own. Thus Swift made a very wild guess when he announced of the Laputan philosophers: 'They have likewise discovered two lesser stars or satellites, which revolve about Mars, whereof the innermost is distant from the center of the primary planet exactly three of his diameters, and the outermost five; the former revolves in the space of ten hours, and the latter in twenty-one and a half.' Not only were there no grounds for the prediction of two satellites, but such an estimate of their distance from the planet was unprecedented; it was as if our moon should be within twenty thousand miles of the earth, and rise and set twice or thrice in the twenty-four hours. Nothing could be more improbable. Yet in 1877 Professor Asaph Hall, with the great Washington equatorial, actually discovered two tiny satellites of Mars, whose distances from the planet are 1 1-2 and 3 1-2 diameters, whilst their periods are 7 1-3 and 30 hours respectively. The agreement with Swift's guess is in the main so remarkable that it is hardly possible to ascribe it to mere accident; and yet these satellites are the merest points of light, which no telescope in existence before Herschel's day could possibly have shown."

Many other similar anticipations are chronicled in the Philadelphia "Era." We quote as follows:

"The law of gravitation was announced by Newton in the year 1682. Had it not been foreseen by Shakespeare in 1600? At all events, in 'Troilus and Cressida,' he put these lines into the mouth of Cressida:

But the strong base and building of my love
Is as the very center of the earth,
Drawing all things to it.—Act iv. sc. 2.

"A contemporary of Shakespeare, Ben Jonson, anticipated the modern air-cushion. In 'The Alchemist,' he makes Sir Epicure Mammon, in enumerating the pleasures to be his when in possession of the philosopher's stone, declare that

I will have my beds blown, not stuffed;
Down is too hard.

"In another play the same author credits the Dutch with an invention that foreshadows the Holland submarine boat:

It is an automa, runs under water,
With a snug nose, and has a nimble tail
Made like an auger, with which tail
she wriggles
Between the coats of a ship, and sinks
it straight.

"In France, Cyrano de Bergerac showed himself full of scientific prescience. The airship in which the hero of his 'Voyage to the Moon' (1650) made his trip to that sphere was a pretty close foreshadowing of Montgolfier's balloon, as will be seen from our illustration, made for an edition that long antedated the aeronaut.

"In the same book he clearly foreshadowed the phonograph.

"The supernatural being who acted as the hero's guide gave him for his entertainment some of the books made by the inhabitants of the moon. They were enclosed in boxes. This is what he saw and heard:

"'On opening the box I found inside a concern of metal, something like one of our watches, full of curious little springs and minute machinery. It was really a book, but a wonderful book that has no leaves or letters; a book, for the understanding of which the eyes are of no use—only the ears are necessary. When anyone wishes to read, he winds up the machine with its great number of nerves of all kinds, and turns the pointer to the chapter he wishes to hear, when there comes out, as if from the mouth of a man or of an instrument of music, the distinct and various sounds which serve the Great Lunarians as the expression of language.' . . .

"Among Fenelon's Fables, written in 1690 for the instruction of Louis XIV.'s grandson, is one entitled 'Voyage Supposé,' and among the suppositious marvels of which it is compact we read: 'There was no painter in all the country, but when they wished the portrait of a friend, or a picture representing some lovely landscape or other object, they put water into large basins of gold and silver, and made this water face the object they wished to paint. Very soon the water would congeal and become as the face of a mirror, where the image dwelt ineffaceably. This could be carried wherever one pleased, and gave as faithful a picture as any mirror.'"

"Is not this an anticipation of photography?"

Great men of the imaginative temperament, observes the "Era," build better than they know; and "the world looks back and sees what they were striving for, what they were aiming at, though they themselves knew it not, or only dimly recognized it."

Changed His Mind.

A young officer at San Francisco had been ordered to the Philippines. According to a Western paper, he received the following telegram from the War Department at Washington:

"You can go to New York, and sail on transport that goes by Suez."

The officer replied: "Would prefer to cross Pacific direct."

Then the Department telegraphed him again: "Transport will make good time; has sixty women school teachers on board."

The young lieutenant answered: "Save me a berth on transport."

LACROSSE.

A closely contested game of lacrosse was played on the oval last night in the championship match between the senior teams of the Y.M.C.A. and the T.A.S. the latter finally winning with a score of 4—3. This game had been postponed from last week, and excitement ran high as to the relative strength of the two teams, on account of the changes which had been made.

Following are the names of the players on the opposing teams—

T.A.S.

Goal	Dorie
Point	Derocher
Cover Point	McDonough
Defence—Meagher, Crowley, Mahoney.
Centre	McGrath
1st Home	McNichol
2nd Home	Gorham
3rd Home	Lynch
Outside Home	McCoy
Inside Home	O'Brien
Field Captain	Picard

Y.M.C.A.

Goal	Wainright
Point	Smith
Cover Point Pinner, Galley	Brown.
Centre	McDonald
1st Home	Forman
2nd Home	Robertson
3rd Home	Robinson
Outside Home	Dumble
Inside Home	Best
Field Captain	Ayres

After a few minutes play McCoy placed the ball in the net for the T.A.S. followed shortly afterwards by Robertson for their opponents.

At half time the game stood 2—2 in favor of the Y.M.C.A. scores having been made by McCoy for the T.A.S., and Dumble and McDonald for the Y.M.C.A.

In the last half the play was fast on both sides, but on account of Gorham placing the ball between the poles, and his example being followed by McNichol, the match was decided in favor of the T.A.S.

Mr. Rolly Glover, acted as referee, and proved satisfactory to both teams.

The winning team was at some disadvantage on the large field during the game as their practice has been mainly done on the small grounds of the Separate School.

THE WHEEL

Toronto June 10.—The cycle whirl at the Island last night attracted a crowd of nearly twelve hundred people, despite the chilly breeze. The six-day contest for the ladies' championship of Canada brought out four starters. The track, which is a unique and compact structure of 18 laps to the mile, is built in front of the grand stand, and so well is it lighted that every movement of the riders is perfectly clear. The four entries were Miss Tillie Anderson, Miss Lizzie Glaw, Miss May Allen, and Miss Anna Ehmer.

Before the first mile had been covered Miss Glaw met with an accident to her tire, and lost six miles before she came back to the track. Misses Anderson, Allen and Glaw are most evenly matched, and despite the most vigorous efforts of each of the three, not one could gain a lap. Miss Ehmer was scarcely as speedy as this trio, and she lost several laps during the night. The crowd encouraged the riders at all times to steal laps, and all through a merry pace was set. The races were at all times exciting, and coupled with the band concert, it furnished a pleasant evening's sport. The races will be held every evening at 8.15, sharp, with a matinee to-morrow. The scores last night were as follows:

	Miles.	Laps.
Anderson......	30	8
Allen......	30	3
Ehmer......	20	12

SIX-DAYS CYCLE RACE.

The six-days ladies' cycle race continued at Hanlan's Point last night without any material change in the relative positions of the riders. Miss Elmer dropped out near the end and lost 7 miles, Miss Glaw was given the laps she lost by her mishap the first night. She led the sprint at the finish, and seemed to have more ginger than the others. The score

	Miles	Laps
Glaw......	60	9
Anderson......	60	9
Allen......	60	9
Elmer...	53	4

The King of Foods For Young Children

Malt Breakfast Food

Is a Grand Nourisher After the Little Ones are Weaned

It Agrees With The Weakest Stomach

Malt Breakfast food is the choice of thousands of physicians as a flesh producer and system builder for growing children.

Malt Breakfast Food keeps the bowels and stomach in perfect condition from day to day, and maintains for the little ones a uniform and happy state of health. Mothers find Malt Breakfast Food the best nourishment for their children after weaning. Malt breakfast Food has made thousands of weak children rugged and strong. Ask your Grocer for it.

For the Farmer.

For the destruction of fungus growth use the fungicides, such as Bordeaux mixture. For sucking insects use the kerosene emulsion. For biting insects use Paris green.

The Globe has been favored by Secretary F. D. Coburn with the last quarter's report of the Kansas State Board of Agriculture. It contains about 400 pages of interesting information about the production, marketing and milling of wheat in Kansas.

Meat is dear, says The Chicago Live Stock World, not so much because of a shortage in supply as on account of a phenomenal demand. The whole country is prosperous, and is consuming meat in unusual quantities. Chicago has received this year about 4,700 cars of live stock more than in the same period of 1901.

The report of the Connecticut Agricultural Experiment Station for 1901 on food products is just to hand, and contains a good deal of useful as well as much disquieting information. The station ordered visits to forty-three towns and villages and has purchased samples of food products from each. The results showed that the custom of adulterating with chemical preservatives and chemical dyes is more prevalent than is generally imagined. Of 240 samples of milk bought, twenty-one were adulterated with chemical preservatives. Of 116 samples of tomato catsup, sauce, etc., 96 were adulterated with dyes of coal tar origin, and of 66 samples of jams and jellies, 21 were adulterated in a similar manner. Many of these dyes are most injurious to health. The chemicals commonly employed as preservatives were salicylic acid, salicylate of soda, benzoic acid, and benzoate of soda, all of which are hurtful. Several of the firms mentioned as having employed adulterants of the kind do business in Canada. The public will do well to avoid highly colored tomato catsup, and chili sauce, and to buy no jams and jellies that are not manufactured by reputable firms.

Raising Good Cows.

I like to fuss with calves. I like the calves because I like good cows and realize the fact that the foundation of a good cow is a good calf. Sometimes I come across a good cow that can be bought at a reasonable price, but the surest way to get a good cow is to raise her from a calf of known parentage. There are people who yet believe they can feed butter fat into milk. My experience, however, is that when you have a cow that gives blue milk, blue milk she will make, even on the richest kind of food, and when it is given to her in fullest supply. And when you have a cow that gives rich, creamy milk that butter-makers and milk-consumers like, rich milk she will give, even if she has nothing but cornstalks or poor hay to eat. Feed determines the quantity of milk, while the blood of the animal determines the milk's richness. For that reason it does not pay to bother with calves of blue milk stock (unless for selling milk, and hardly then). Nor does it pay to fuss with a calf that for any reason is lacking in individual vigor.

But any vigorous heifer calf of good stock is too good for the butcher when it is so easy to make a good cow out of it in not more than two years' time. The Guernseys and Jerseys have the reputation of giving the richest milk. But there is yet a great difference in this respect in individual cows, or, perhaps, rather, in cow families. Just at present I am raising a calf from a Jersey dam, whose milk contains more butter fat than I have ever seen in milk before. Not having much milk on which to bring this calf up, I have tried milk substitutes, especially clear flaxseed meal and a calf meal. I began giving flaxseed meal on the third day by the teaspoonful, gradually increasing to two handfuls at a feed in the fifth or sixth week. The meal was put into a pail, and boiling water put on it, making a thin soup, which was mixed with what skim milk I could spare for the purpose and fed blood warm. At six weeks of age the calf meal—which seems to consist mostly of flaxseed meal or oil meal—was substituted for the flaxseed meal, two good handfuls at a feed. This calf also receives dry bran and other ground grains, and eats several handfuls out of its pail, some cut clover hay, etc., and has done so well that I believe it possible to bring up good calves practically without milk, except for a short time on the start.—T. Greener, in Farm and Fireside.

Orchard and Garden.

At the Nova Scotia Fruit Growers' meeting Prof. L. H. Bailey of Cornell University said that the fifteen years last past were marked by three distinct improvements in the methods of caring for orchards. The first was the introduction of spraying, which had now become so universal a practice that it was not thought necessary to advocate it at the meetings. The second was the tillage of orchards, and that was so well settled now that the farmers do not ask, "Shall we cultivate?" but "What are the best methods for clay or sandy soil?" whichever the orchard was on. Now the prime question seems to be upon the use of a cover crop for the orchard, and he believed that within five years they would be discussing the merits of special cover crops for special soils. Where the soil is not in condition to grow better crops he would use rye as a starter, and gradually work the soil up until it was rich enough to grow crimson clover, which he thought the best cover crop.

But it is quite possible to get the soil too rich with peas and clover if plowed under each spring, and thus it would be well to change occasionally to buckwheat or rye. He would plow them with gang plow, and cover only three or four inches deep. This he would do early in the spring, that they might decay. Would not use commercial fertilizers, or but a little, until the trees came into bearing. After the first four years the orchard should not need plowing, but the disc or cut-away harrows should be sufficient for cultivation. He urged setting two-year-old trees, and said that when two-year-old and six-year-old trees were set at the same time they were of equal size after five years. He is setting in his own orchard the Northern Spy, and top-grafting them with scions from bearing trees that produce fruit of known excellence, as he believes in the individuality of trees.

Anecdotal.

In one of the Philadelphia colleges a professor of chemistry asked a student the other day: "Now, suppose you were called to a patient who had swallowed a heavy dose of oxalic acid, what would you administer?" "I would administer the sacrament," replied the student, who, by the way, is said to be studying for the ministry, and takes chemistry because it is obligatory.

It is reported that Innocent IV. and Thomas Aquinas were standing together as the bags of treasure were being carried in through the gates of the Lateran. "You see," observed the Pope, with a smile, "the day is past when the Church could say, 'Silver and gold have I none.'" "Yes, holy father," was the saint's reply, "and the day is past also when the Church could say to the lame man, 'Rise and walk.'"

W. J. Bryan told a good story at his own expense in New York recently: "I spoke during the campaign in a little Illinois town. In front of me sat a man rigidly attentive. He drank in every word I said; I think he had drunk in something else besides. When I finished he came up and wrung my hand. 'Mr. Bryan,' he said, 'you are wonderful, wonderful. You are the first man I ever saw whose back teeth I could see all the time he was speaking.'"

President Roosevelt is fond of telling any story at his own expense. That which he enjoys most is the following: Former Governor Wise had told the President that it was the general opinion, so far as he had heard, that he would go down to posterity as a Washington. The President replied that he was delighted to hear that. "But," added Wise, in a serious manner, "whether it will be as a George or a Booker T. I don't know." The President is said to have laughed so heartily over this that Wise became alarmed.

Dr. Rixey, who for some years was the private physician in the McKinley household, says that when the late President's mother sat down for the first time to a White House dinner what seemed to impress her most was the prodigal supply of cream. She commented on its abundance, and then added: "Well, William, at last I know what they mean when they speak of the Cream of Society." The President laughed. "I admit," said he, "that there seems to be an extravagant array of cream on the table, but you know, mother, we can afford to keep a cow, now."

An amusing story is being told of Sir Henry Howorth, who, besides being the author of many scientific works, has written an elaborate historical book entitled "History of the Mongols." It seems that the other day Sir Henry found himself at a dinner party next to a lady who determinedly talked dogs to him from the soup to the dessert. Rather bored, Sir Henry at last remarked that though his friends somewhat unkindly declared that he could chatter on any subject, he was obliged to own that he was utterly at sea on the topic of dogs. The lady looked astounded. "Why, are you not Sir Henry Howorth? I understood from our host that you were the author of a learned book on Mongrels, and I was so delighted, as I am so interested in all kinds of dogs."

A story is told of a certain English bishop well known for his verbosity who rose to address the House of Lords on a very important occasion. "I will divide my speech under twelve heads," he said, to the discomfort of his audience. The Marquis of Salisbury begged to be allowed to interpose with a little anecdote. "A friend of mine was returning home late one night," he said, "when opposite St. Paul's he saw an intoxicated man trying to ascertain the time on the big clock there. Just then it began to strike and slowly tolled out twelve. The man listened, looked hard at the clock and said, 'Confound you, why couldn't you have said that all at once?'" The bishop heartily joined in the laughter which followed, and took the hint contained in the story.

Dr. John Kerr, the well-known Scottish school inspector, was once faced in a Banffshire manse by this question put to him by the lady of the house on behalf of her inquisitive son. "Mr. Kerr, is it true that the devil goes about like a roaring lion?" "It must be true," he replied, "for it is in the Bible." A shrill voice came from the corner: "Then wha keeps his fire in when he's gaun aboot?" Dr. Kerr also tells an anecdote of a woman who had just lost her husband, and the minister calling to condole with her found her sitting in front of a large bowl of porridge. "Terrible loss, terrible loss," sighed the minister. "Aye," was the reply, "it's a terrible loss to me. I've just been greetin' a' nicht, and as sune as I finish this wee drap porridge, I'm just gaun to begin again."

Catching Fugitive Hats.

On a recent windy Sunday a new and apparently profitable industry was disclosed in up-town New York. It was a day when hats went suddenly off the head and traveled a block or two before they alighted, and then rolled or bounded three or four blocks more, like low-driven golf balls. People at Broadway and Forty-second street, says the "Tribune," had just watched a young fellow disappear down the cross street in pursuit of his Derby, and were turning to go on their ways, when a negro rounded the corner, who looked like a hat-rack. Derbies were tucked under each arm; he held a muddy tall hat in one hand and a white felt crush hat in the other, and on top of his own Derby a black felt hat was jammed securely. He wore a smile from ear to ear.

"What are you doing with all those hats?" someone asked him.

"Well, I's takin' all dat am a-comin' ma way," and he grinned. "I could 'a' got more, but I ain't got no more place to put um."

"Why don't you give them back to the men who lost them?" he was asked.

"Well, you see," said he, "they was most gen'rally so fah away dat I couldn't wait."

Then he went on up Broadway, with all his hats.

"He proves the old saying," was remarked; "never chase your own hat—someone is always ready to do it for you."

MOST WONDERFUL OF PIANO PLAYERS.

The Cecilian

There are many piano-players offered to the public—all said to be perfect. But after having played on the Cecilian Piano-Player it will be at once pronounced the one "Perfect" player. The tone is such that people are charmed from the first note.

It is so simple in construction that anyone, without the ability but with the desire to play some of the most classical and difficult compositions of the greatest masters, finds no difficulty whatever when using the Cecilian.

It is completely under the control of the operator, responding to the slightest touch—and the tone can be moderated according as the player desires.

The power of individual expression in the Cecilian is really wonderful—astonishing people whenever it is heard

It has been endorsed by leading musicians in different parts of the country and is the delight of all who know it.

This piano-player is on daily exhibition at our handsome warerooms, and is worthy a visit from every lover of beautiful music.

LOCAL LEGAL

At Osgoode Hall, on Tuesday, before Mr. Justice Street, judgment was pronounced by the Court dismissing this action with full costs of suit, as between solicitor and client, to be paid to the representative of the defendant Henry Denne, by the plaintiffs out of their shares of the estate of the late Mr. Wood.

The costs of the defendant, Mrs. M A Burnham, fixed at $50 must be paid out of the Burnham estate.

E. B. Edwards, K.C., for plaintiffs; Hall and Hayes, for executors of defendant Henry Denne; Dennistoun, Peck and Stevenson for defendant, M. A. Burnham.

WILL THERE BE A VACANCY?

Rumor has it That Mr. Kendry, M.P., Intends to Resign.

It is being whispered about that Mr. James Kendry, our popular representative for West Peterborough at Ottawa, intends to retire from politics, and will send in his resignation in a very short time. The reason given is that new responsibilities have been thrust upon Mr. Kendry, which will fully occupy his entire time.

The Times is not authorized to make any statement in regard to the matter. We may say, however, that we are creditably informed such a move is under contemplation. Mr. Kendry's retirement will be Peterborough's loss, and will, we believe, be generally deplored, regardless of political ties.

Should a vacancy occur there will be a scramble for Mr. Kendry's shoes. On the Conservative side the names of Mr. F. T. Matthews and Mr. T. E. Bradburn, while the Liberals may choose between Mr. J. H. McClellan and Mr. R. R. Hall

ODE TO BURLEIGH FALLS

The following spasm was handed in for publication in this g.f.g. At the the risk of breaking the press we let it go:

I have struck a weary streak,
Burleigh Falls
I'll be with you in a week
Burleigh Falls;
Underneath your spreading trees
Soothed by song of bird and breeze
May I rest a little, please.
Burleigh Falls

I have mentioned you in song
Burleigh Falls,
Said your winters were too long
Burleigh Falls,
I have also stated how
Men wear snow shoes when they plow
Until June—forgive me now,
Burleigh Falls

Days I think of now and then
Burleigh Falls
That will never come again
Burleigh Falls
When I wearied in the quest
Of life's childhood joys—the best—
And you cradled me to rest
Burleigh Falls

So when summer suns are here
Burleigh Falls
Just about this time of year
Burleigh Falls
Through the east it does firstrate
I'm inclined to pull my freight
For your rocks I always prate,
Burleigh Falls.

BODY HEAT

Reduced 20 Degrees in Summer

Never eat heavy carbonaceous foods for the morning meal, for these foods should follow and not precede hard work.

The best morning foundation is Grape-Nuts and cream, a little fruit, a cup of Postum Food Coffee and possibly a couple of eggs prepared to suit the taste—this breakfast is sufficient to satisfy the hard worker, either of brain or muscle, until the noonday meal.

Particularly is this true at the present season of the year, when meat and other fatty foods increase the internal heat of the body and make the summer day still more disagreeable.

Grape-Nuts come to you from the Grocer ready to serve, having been fully cooked at the factory by food experts and this saving in time and exertion is appreciated by the housewife as well as the economy, for being a concentrated food, four teaspoonfuls is sufficient for the cereal part of a meal for one person and costs only one cent.

A booklet of excellent recipes is found in each package of Grape-Nuts from which many easy and delicious warm weather dishes can be made for luncheon and supper that are not only nutritious but pleasing to the palate.

A trial of the above selection of food for ten days will prove to anyone that health and vigor, an active mind, and a keen enjoyment of the pleasures of summer will take the place of poor digestion, a dull brain and that heavy draggy feeling caused by improper food during the hot weather.

BUCKHORN POWER HAS BEEN SOLD

Is Now Owned by the Burleigh Falls Company

SO A TELEGRAM SAYS

A Big Deal in Water Power That will Interest Peterborough

Special to The Times.

Newark, N.J., June 12.—Mr. J. Alexander Culverwell of Toronto, Managing Director of the Central Ontario Power Co., which has power concessions near Peterborough, to-day announced that he has purchased outright Buckhorn Falls, in the same neighborhood. The falls are only 18 miles from Peterborough.

The company now owns Burleigh Falls, where five thousand horse power is being developed and transmitted to Peterborough. The acquisition of Buckhorn Falls has been contemplated for some time by the company. At Buckhorn Falls, two thousand additional horse power will be developed by the company, and transmitted to Peterborough and the surrounding towns, as soon as machinery can be installed.

The company's head offices are in Toronto. The further extension of the enterprise is only a matter of negotiating for further supplies of power in a district which is rich in water pow- [illegible]

TWO PRETTY JUNE WEDDINGS

ROXBURGH—MEHARRY.

It was a pretty wedding that was celebrated yesterday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Meharry, 190 London Street, when their daughter, Miss Lettie E., was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to one of Norwood's most popular young men, Mr. John E. Roxburgh.

The bride was charming dressed in a gown of white taffeta, trimmed with point lace and chiffon, wearing the conventional veil and carrying a magnificent bouquet of white roses. She was given away by her father an [illegible] during the ceremony by Miss [illegible] E. Clarke, of Belleville, who wore a dainty gown of pale blue organdie and carried a bouquet of pink roses. Mr Gerald Roxburgh, of Norwood, brother of the groom, assisted as best man.

The beautiful and impressive marriage ceremony was performed by Rev. J. P. Wilson, pastor of George Street Methodist Church, assisted by Rev. F. D. Roxburgh, of Smithville, brother of the groom.

Miss Lila Meharry, cousin of the bride, rendered the wedding march very effectively.

The guests, numbering about sixty, were composed of the intimate friends. After the ceremony the wedding party sat down to a daintily served wedding breakfast, after which the happy young couple left on the 7.30 C.P.R. train for their future home in Norwood. The bride's popularity in Peterborough is evidenced by the many valuable and costly presents she was the recipient of. The groom, who is a son of Mr. W. E. Roxburgh, of Norwood, is an enterprising young business man, and is well and favorably known in Peterborough. May the blessings of prosperity and the joy of wedded bliss be ever attendant upon them as they journey onward in the hearty wish of The Times.

COONE—MARK.

A pretty wedding took place yesterday afternoon at one o'clock at the home of the bride, Havelock, when Mr. Wesley L. Coone, a successful young merchant of Manilla, claimed for his bride Miss Maggie A. Mark, one of Peterborough's most popular and estimable young ladies.

The ceremony took place in the Methodist Church, which was beautifully decorated with flowers for the occasion, Rev Mr. Bell resident Methodist Minister officiating, assisted by Rev. Mr. Jolliffe. The bride looked charming in a dress of cream de chene with trimmings of lace and chiffon, and also wore the conventional white veil and carried a boquet of creamy roses. She was assisted by her niece, Miss Mark, who was bewitchingly attired in a dress of white muslin and also carried a boquet of pink roses. The groom was attended by his brother. After the ceremony the happy couple held a reception in the church. There were a large number of guests present, including several from Peterborough and other places. The newly married couple left on the four o'clock train amid showers or rice and good wishes. On their return from their honeymoon trip, Mr. and Mrs. Coone will take up their residence in Manilla.

The wedding presents were numerous and costly, testifying to the popularity of the bride.

ENNISMORE PIC-NIC

The Annual Pic-nic Tuesday Was a Great Great Success

Notwithstanding the rain, the annual Ennismore pic-nic on Tuesday at Tara Grove, was a great success.

The popular priest of the parish, Rev Father Fitzpatrick, assisted by a strong committee of faithful workers, did everything in their power to make it pleasant for those who attended. The Ennismore orchestra furnished music for dancing, no charge being made to "trip the light fantastic," while a splendid programme of sports, for which valuable cash prizes were offered, was run off and eagerly competed for.

During the afternoon. Hon. J. R. Stratton delivered a spirited address, in which he thanked the electors in general and the people of Ennismore in particular, for their support in the late elections.

It has been said that no hospitality is so cordial or so effulgent as that of the Irish race. This was well proven on Tuesday. From the beloved pastor down to the most humble individual, there was a welcome for the stranger who appeared,

CHAMBERLAIN SPEAKS ON PEACE TO COLONIALS

Britain's Hopes Fulfilled and Her Hands Unfettered

LORD KITCHENER REPORTS FIGHTING AT FRASERBURG

Several Killed in Engagement After Peace Had Been Concluded

Special to The Times.

London, June 13.—Colonial Secretary Chamberlain spoke this evening at the Corona Club, which is a gathering of eminent representatives of the British colonies. He said that through the peace settlement the British had obtained all they had hoped for and their hands in the future would not be fettered. The Government, he added, had been generous to its late opponents in regard to everything concerning personal and private matters, but had given up nothing in substance. It had done nothing to prejudice the ultimate solution of the South African question, to which it looked as its justification for the war. Continuing, Mr. Chamberlain said,—"I am sure we are delighted by the way these terms are accepted by our late opponents. If those feelings prevail we are at the opening of an era of prosperity such as that country has never known."

KILLED IN FIGHT AFTER PEACE.

London, June 13.—A casualty list issued by the War Office shows that four men were killed in a fight 26 miles east of Fraserburg, Cape Colony, on June 3, three days after the conclusion of peace. Gen Kitchener cables that since his last despatch the total number of arms surrendered by the Boers has been 2,643.

MUST SURRENDER BY JULY 10.

Cape Town, June 13.—An extraordinary issue of the Official Gazette published to-day fixes July 10 as the limit in which Boers or rebels who surrender will receive the benefit of the peace terms. All rebels surrendering before that date will be merely disfranchised for life, and will not be subject to trial or punishment. Exception is made in the case of field cornets and justices of the peace, who may be tried and fined or imprisoned, but they will not be executed.

Rebels who hold out after July 10 will be subject to the extreme penalty for high treason.

LEYDS IS SILENT.

Brussels, June 13.—Dr. Leyds, the Boer representatives, absolutely declines to see interviewers. Affairs at the former Transvaal Legation are in a state of chaos. Preparations are being made to remove the archives.

SURRENDERS AT MAFEKING.

Pretoria, June 13.—Commandant Kemp and a number of Boers have surrendered at Mafeking. Commandant Kemp says that he is reconciled to the new situation.

KILLED ON THE TRANSPORT.

Ottawa, Ont., June 13.—A message was received by the Governor-General from the Casualty Department to-day stating that Melvin Gottro, of the 4th Canadian Mounted Rifles, had been accidentally killed while at sea on board the troopship Winnifredian, on June 6th. He enlisted at Newcastle, N.B.

The same cable states that E. C. Redswell and I. M. Sale, of the 2nd Canadian Mounted Rifles, were dangerously ill of enteric fever, the former at Pietermaritzberg and the latter at Klerksdorp. Redswell enlisted at Medicine Hat, N.W.T. Sale enlisted at Revelstoke, B.C.

SANG "AULD LANG SYNE."

London, June 13.—A despatch from Lord Kitchener, dated from Pretoria yesterday, announces that Von Tonder's and Van Heerden's commands, having with them 402 rifles, have surrendered near Ventersdorp camp, south-western Transvaal. At a concert subsequently, the burghers sang "Auld Lang Syne," and "God Save the King."

Further surrenders of 619 rifles and 23,000 rounds of ammunition were also announced.

Completely Fagged Out

The world is full of sickly, despondent, tired enervated people, all hoping to be well some day. The surest road to health is along the way of taking Ferrozone after meals. Ferrozone is a great appetizer and enables one to eat plenty of wholesome food without fear of indigestion or dyspepsia. This results in the rapid formation of an abundance of red, vitalizing blood, which will restore the nerves, increase flesh and vigor, and nourish and feed every organ of body. Ferrozone is an ideal restorative and invigorant. It is a tonic of unequalled merit that anyone can use with benefit. Price 50c. per box or six boxes for $2.50, at Druggists or Ormond & Walsh.

LOST BY FIRE AT WHEELING

Wheeling, W. Va., June 13.—The plants of the Exley-Watkins Catsup and Preserve Company, the Wheeling Mattress Company, and the Acme Box Company, were burned to-day. Three buildings, 500,000 feet of lumber, two box cars and several stables and buildings were consumed. The loss is $150,000, partly covered by insurance. About 500 persons are thrown out of employment.

Britain and the Empire

London, June 13. — The Mail and Empire says: In spite of a spirited show of resistance from the Liberals, as voiced by Lord Rosebery, a decided drift away from the policy of free trade is observable in the sentiment of Great Britain, though the direction which it seems to be taking is toward protection for the empire rather than the kingdom. It is allying itself with the scheme of imperial federation which shall bind the colonies to the mother country with closer ties of commercial interest, and thereby contribute to the political solidarity of the widely extended empire upon whose flag the sun never sets and whose drum beat is heard around the world.

Suppose something like a British Zollverien should be established, encouraging commercial intercourse between the members of the imperial federation and discriminating against other nations, a policy of protection for the empire as a whole, with free trade or liberal reciprocity between its parts. What would be the effect upon Great Britain and what upon the rival nations? The British empire would take its place among protective nations, giving first thought to its extended domestic interests, and seeking foreign markets for a surplus over the needs of its own subjects, pursuing the policy that has been derided in England ever since the triumph of Cobdenism.

CANADIAN ROUTE 'SUPERIOR TO SUEZ'

The Hong Kong Contingent Pleased with the Great Imperial Highway

CHINA TO ENGLAND, 32 DAYS

If Necessary, However, this Time Could be Reduced to Twenty-Six

Special to The Times.

Montreal June 13.—Major Chapman, commanding the contingent from Hong Kong, Captain James and Lieut. Armstrong called on Mr. Robert Kerr, passenger traffic manager of the C.P.R., this morning, and expressed themselves as highly gratified with the Canadian route from the East. One of the officers had been already by the Suez route, and stated that the Canadian route was much superior.

Mr. Kerr informed them that they would land in Liverpool thirty-two days from the date of their sailing from Hong Kong, but if necessary that time could be very greatly curtailed, in fact to twenty-six days, which compares very favourably with the Suez route, the shortest time on record being thirty-three days. The sea voyage occupied fifteen days, the Empress calling at four Chinese ports en route. Five days were consumed in crossing the continent, and eight days is calculated from here to Liverpool. Besides, they stopped off at Calgary and Winnipeg, and will spend three days in Montreal.

THE COUNTY COURT

The Ontario Bank Won its Suit Against Moore

The case of the Ontario Bank vs Moore which has occupied the County Court since Tuesday afternoon was concluded Wednesday night, when the jury gave a verdict in favor of the Ontario Bank.

Much interest has been taken in the case by our local professional men, as it was conceded that a vital principle of banking was at stake — that of the reliability of documents and books. The main facts were that the defendant, Jas. Moore, in April, 1900, deposited $200 in the Ontario Bank, Peterborough; in May, 1900, Mrs. Moore applied at the bank for the money, but was informed that her husband's signature would be necessary to its withdrawal. The teller drew out a cheque and made a mark shewing where it should be signed, and handed it to Mrs. Moore to procure the signature. Shortly afterwards Mrs. Moore again appeared at the bank with the cheque, not signed, however, but endorsed. The bank officials thinking it was the evident wish of Mr. Moore that his wife should get the money, paid Mrs. Moore $150, which she said was all that they then required on a cheque signed by Mrs. Moore for her husband and herself, to which was attached the endorsed cheque of Mr. Moore. In October, 1901, Mr. Moore called at the bank and asked for his $200, which through an error was paid to him a second time on his assurance that he had never drawn any part of his deposit. Upon discovering the error the bank immediately wrote Mr. Moore, when both he and Mrs. Moore denied the signatures of the cheque he endorsed and of the cheque she signed.

This was the ground of the action to recover $150 wrongfully paid defendant twice.

The bank proved the genuineness of several signatures of both Mr. and Mrs. Moore and then tendered expert evidence to prove that the disputed cheques were signed by the same parties. Mr. W. H. Shaw, an expert from Toronto, was the principal witness in this regard, and his evidence was demonstrated by crayon drawings before the court.

The bank in this case did not express any wrong intention on the part of Mr. and Mrs. Moore, but the evidence showed in several instances where the memory of both was at serious fault. This was the view evidently taken by the jury—that they had drawn the money and had forgotten the fact.

The bank was represented by their solicitor, Mr. A. P. Poussette, K. C. The defendant was represented by Mr. Sherry, Norwood.

RIVER AND LAKE BIPLETS

Latest Budget of News From the Raging Otonabee

That the Otonabee River and Rice Lake route, by Calcutt's popular line of steamers, still continues to be the favorite, may be gathered from the fact of the following excursions having already been booked, there are also a number, the dates of which have not yet been definitely decided:

June 12th—Famers' Institute, annual excursion to Jubilee Point.

June 14th—The Stanley Piano Co., to Jubilee Point.

RESETTLING SOUTH AFRICA

Britons Being Rushed to the New Colonies to Repair War's Ravages

London, June 12—Even before peace with the Boers was officially announced England had begun to carry out her plans for resettling South Africa with her own people. Months ago, under official promoting, the immigration associations of London set about bearing a hand with the settlement problem.

The Colonial Immigration Society began it by sending out a delegation of several hundred women to Cape Colony, for distribution at various points where female help could command high wages and loyal English feminine influence could do the most good.

The Scottish Settlers' Association, an organization originally formed in Rhodesia under the patronage and with the assistance of Cecil Rhodes himself, has taken up the work almost as quickly and even on a greater scale. Four months ago a band of 100 Scotch farmers and laborers was sent out to the Orange River Colony to settle there on the land vacated by burghers.

The association was in such a hurry to get its men on the ground that it sent them a little too soon. When they arrived in the new colony it was found that local conditions were hardly ripe for their reception, and Mr. Rhode's assistance had to be sought. He solved the problem by providing the Scotchmen with grants of land from his own farms in Cape Colony.

Now that peace has been declared, preparations for extending the scope of the work are being made. The capital of the association has been raised to half a million dollars and English and Scotch agriculturists are to be rushed to South Africa to people the new colonies, to read just the balance of population there and, by outnumbering the Boers, to render impossible even the faintest chance of a recurrence of a rebellion against British authority.

BODY RECOVERED

Lad Who was Drowned at Hull Under Queer Circumstances

Hull, Que., June 12.—Word was received in Hull yesterday morning of the finding of the body of Benjamin Richer, the 15 year old lad who was thrown into the Little Nation River above St. Andre Avellin, on May 23rd, by Joseph Deschatelets. The latter was committed in Hull yesterday to stand his trial for murder. The body of his victim was found about 100 yards from the spot where he was thrown into the river by Deschatelets. The river was dragged at the time of the drowning, but no sight of the body was secured and it was concluded that it was swept out of reach by the rapid current. It was found last evening pinned in amongst rocks and logs. The news was received by Mr. H. Adelard Fortier, deputy crown prosecutor.

TOOK A SPECIAL TRAIN

Returned Klondiker Didn't Want to Wait Three Hours at a Station

Special to The Times.

Indianapolis, June 13.—When gold was discovered in the Klondike a tinner named Frank Levy went to the "diggings" and opened a saloon. He sold whisky at from $1.50 to $3 a drink and invested his profits advantageously and returned a short time ago a millionaire. Yesterday he was visiting friends in Washington and when he got ready to return home he found it was three hours before the train was due. He immediately chartered a special train to take him to Petersburg, a distance of 30 miles, rather than wait for the regular train.

Items of News

Wilkesbarre, Pa., June 13.—It was learned at the office of the Lehigh Valley Coal Company to-day that an attempt was made on the life of Superintendent Thomas Thomas of the William A. colliery of the Lehigh Valley Company at Old Forge, north of this city last night. Crowds have been gathering twice daily on a hill overlooking the colliery and stoning the men at work within the enclosure. The day and night superintendents are taken to and from the place on a locomotive. Last night the night superintendent reached the colliery safely. Soon after Superintendent Thomas came out. When about 200 yards from the breaker he says several men in ambush fired at the locomotive, but it was travelling rapidly, and was soon out of range. The officials say about ten shots were fired. The Miners Union is doing everything possible to have its idle men keep the peace.

WAS HANGED JUNE 10.

St Petersburg, June 13. — It became known to-day that Hirsch Lekert, who made an unsuccessful attempt on the night of May 18 to assassinate Lieutenant-General Von Wahl, Governor of Vilna, was hanged on Tuesday, June 10.

As Governor Von Wahl was leaving the circus at Vilna, midnight, May 18, Lekert wounded him with a revolver in the hand and foot. Gen. Von Wahl was formerly chief of police of St. Petersburg, and had a great deal of trouble with the students.

LOST IN A STORM.

East London, Cape Colony, June 13.—The Norwegian bark Athara, from Hamburg March 13 for East London; the Swedish bark Aurora, from Gefle, October 15, for East London, and the German bark Ella Link, from Bremerhaven, about February 1, for East London, have been wrecked during a heavy southeast gale. All the crew of the Athara were drowned except the captain, who was ashore. The crews of the two vessels were saved. The coast is strewn with wreckage and portions of the barks' cargoes.

BEHIND IN MINISTERIAL SUPPORT.

Sarnia, June 13.—The London Conference of the Methodist Church raised $123,594 for ministerial support last year, which left a deficit to be provided out out of the Sustentation Fund of $4,096. The total value of church property is $1,941,032, and the total debt $250,356.

A suggestion was made that each conference have a man to devote himself to mission work within its boundaries. The proposal was sent on to the General Conference.

NAUGHTON ALIVE AGAIN

Chicago, June 13.—A Chicago man, believed to have been among the dead buried on a Transvaal battlefield, has been heard from. To his mother and sisters, who have mourned him as dead, his appearance is like a resurrection. When the ambulance corps which left Chicago for the Transvaal returned two years ago, Thomas Naughton was among the men of the corps reported dead. This report was accepted as final until last night, when a cable message from United States Consul Hollis to John T. Keating, president of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, brought the news that Naughton was one of the Chicago men now at Lorenzo Marques awaiting funds to secure passage home.

SHIP'S CREW IS MISSING.

Vancouver, B.C., June 13.—The steamer St. Mary arrived at Perth, Australia, with three men of the Dutch bark Geertruida Gerarda, which left Java on March 22nd in ballast for New Castle. The ballast shifted, and the bark was thrown on her beam ends, all the crew, with the exception of the three men rescued, left the bark in boats. The boats have not been heard of since.

SPENCER DENIES THE REPORT.

Montreal, June 21.—Mr. C. W. Spencer, general superintendent of the Eastern Division of the C.P.R., denies that report from Winnipeg that he is negotiating with Messrs. Mackenzie & Mann to assume the management of the Canadian Northern Railway.

BREAD FAMINE IN WOODSTOCK

Woodstock, June 21.—There is a bread famine on in Woodstock. It was in its most acute from Saturday night, when not a loaf of bread could be had for love or money. The latter was freely offered by disappointed residents. The Hamilton Conference is the cause of it. The descent of three hundred and fifty bread eaters on the city has done the trick. Yesterday's supply of bread was limited, and some of the bakers had only one loaf where two were wanted. The scarcity of the staff of life has had the effect of making the busy housewife get out the "bake pan" and manufacture biscuits, and there has been a great run on sodas.

Mgr. Corrigan's Successor

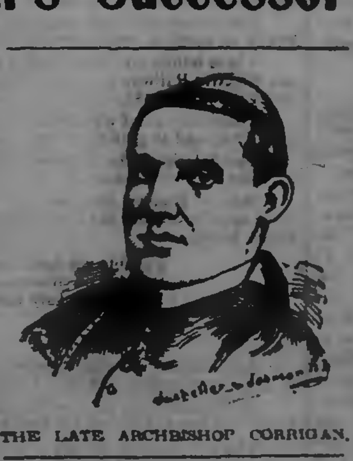
Nominating a Prelate to fill the Vacancey

Bishop Farley and Mc Donnell one Likely Subjects

Special to The Times.

New York, June 13.—The Bishops of the Roman Catholic province of New York are assembled today for the purpose of selecting three names to be forwarded to Rome from which possibly the successor of the late Archbishop Corrigan of New York, may be made. The prelates who attended the meeting held at the archiepiscopal residence included Bishops McFaul of Trenton, Gabriels, of Ogdensburg, Burke of Albany, McQuaid of Rochester and O'Connor of Newark. The conference was preceded by religious services in the cathedral. Bishop Farley celebrated solemn requiem pontifical mass, and Bishop McQuaid preached the sermon.

While the Bishops are pledged to secrecy, the belief exists that the three candidates are Bishop Farley, Bishop McDonnell and Vicar General Mooney. It doubtful if the result will be authoratively learned until fall, when an official announcement will be forthcoming from Rome.



THE LATE ARCHBISHOP CORRIGAN.

THE ELEPHANT WENT MAD.

Tours, France, June 12. — A crowd of about 3,000 witnessed the killing of the largest of Barnum & Bailey's performing elephants in the City Park at midnight. The animal suddenly went mad, broke its chains, tried to kill its keepers while on the way to the railroad station, and had to be slain immediately. Two hundred men tugged at the rope which strangled it.

THE BOERS ARE BITTER TO THE EUROPEANS

Say French and Germans Encouraged Them to Prolong War--Lynch makes Irish Weary

Special to The Times.

Pretoria, June 13.—In all, 19,275 Boers have surrendered up to date. Many are youngsters of 11 years old and upward. The majority of them are under 30, though some of the burghers who have surrendered are septuagenarians.

Reports from all the districts say that the burghers are increasingly friendly. The only bitterness observable among the leading Boers here is against France and Germany. They declare the war was protracted unnecessarily, owing to hopes held out by the French and German press. Some of the Boers are so incensed that they have expressed the hope that some day they will fight on the side of the British against one of these powers.

The anticipated friction between the surrendered Boers and their former comrades of the National scouts has not materialized to any extent.

The Boers admit that they received ammunition through Portuguese territory.

the sympathy from the Irish party, the members of which were disgusted by his letter to the Speaker of the House of Commons, apologizing for the part he took in the Boer struggle. The Irish party knows nothing of his plans or motives to challenging arrest, and regards his action with some doubt. It has been suggested that he was in communication with the British Government before he arrived.

LEYDS WINDING UP.

London, June 13.—The Brussels correspondent of the Times says the late Transvaal agency in Rue de Livourne will shortly be rented as a private dwelling. Dr. Leyds is now busy with the final work of liquidation. The rumor is untrue that the Boer delegates to Europe or the personal of the late agency are about to take the oath of allegiance before the British Minister.

Coronation Dog Show

Special to The Times.

London, June 13—Among the ante-coronation functions and exhibitions not the least interesting is the open air show of the Ladies' Kennel Association which opened today in the Botanic Gardens, at Regent's Park. The association enjoys the distinction of being the only women's club of any description with which the Queen is at all connected. She takes as much interest in its welfare today as she did when Princess of Wales and several high-bred dogs from the former well known Sandringham kennels are among the exhibits. The show is rather international in character, as several American ladies who have come over for the coronation have placed their canine pets on exhibition. In order to do so they were obliged to obtain exemption from the rule which requires dogs from foreign countries to remain in quarantine for six months before landing in England.

Boston is Their Mecca

Boston, Mass., June 13.—Next week will be communion week with the Christian Scientists. Hundreds of people from all over the country will attend the services in the mother church in Boston. Several hundred have arrived here, and at least 4,000 more are expected. Mrs. Mary Baker Eddy, the founder of Christian Science, will be here for Sunday's services and will also take part, if her health permits, in the annual meetings to be held during the week in the mother church and also in Tremont Temple, where public meetings on a big scale are to be held.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Short, of Keene, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Hastie on Sunday.

Mr. A. Brough, assistant miller of the Lang Mills, paid our town a flying visit on Monday evening.

GONE FIVE YEARS

When Coffee Left the Trouble Disappeared

It is hard to make people understand that coffee really will do business for them if they stick to it long enough. It is almost a certainty that some little symptoms of disease, stomach trouble, or kidney or heart trouble, caused by coffee drinking will ultimately develop into some fixed organic disease unless the cause of the disturbance is removed. An illustration may not be amiss.

A lady in Kearney Neb. says, "I used coffee a great many years. Gradually my health broke down. I had dyspepsia and was extremely nervous. I passed many sleepless nights but, like many others, did not know what was the cause of my invalidism.

Finally the trouble centered into a fatty tumor just over the stomach and in the region of the heart, causing acute pain in the stomach and a spasmodic action of the heart. A surgical operation was deemed necessary, but after all the preparations were made a good, old, honest doctor suggested that I take treatment a little longer and leave off coffee and take Postum and some Grape-Nuts Breakfast Food.

I began on Postum and had it made properly by long boiling and found it delicious and drank two cups the first morning. After two weeks I discovered a marked change for the better. In five months my supposed tumor had disappeared, my headaches were gone and digestion wholly restored. My heart only gave me trouble a few times. That was five years ago. I have been a steady user of Postum ever since and am a new creature today. Am in strong and vigorous health and know exactly how to account for it.

The ignorance of people on the subject of coffee is a constant wonder to me, although, at one time, of course, I was just as much in the dark as any one could be, going along year after year putting into my body the poison that was killing me and never knowing it." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

MOUNT PELEE.

The newspaper reports of the greatest disaster the world has ever seen, caused by the overflow of the volcano of Mount Pelee have exaggerated in many instances. This has been discovered by scientists who have been hunting for news about the crater in question. It was said that the eruption blew off the whole top of the volcano; that the topography of the island had been changed; that molten matter poured from the crater, and that, in fact, there had been a cataclysm which had made Pelee unrecognizable by those who were familiar with its shape.

Professor Heilprin, who was sent to Martinique by the National Geographical Society of the United States, has been all around the crater and he has failed to find many of the phenomena reported by the correspondents. He says it is positively known that there has been no flow of molten matter from the crater; that there has been no subsidence of the mountain; that the height of Mount Pelee is unchanged; that the crater does not contain a cylinder cone; and that there has been no cataclysm and no topographical alteration of the country.

COLONIAL AID.

Lord Salisbury and the statesmen of England have been moved on many occasions recently to speak of their appreciation of the assistance given during the South African war. Giving credit to colonial troops is right. The colonies have proven that they are not only dependencies but that they can render valuable aid to the mother land when an emergency arises. They have demonstrated to the world that when England goes to war she is backed by the colonies who can furnish her with men who can ride and shoot and endure and stand up against the fire of the enemy. Better soldiers were not on the field in the South African war than those of Canada and Australia. They displayed courage and tact, and when driven to it showed they could put up a stiff fight against tremendous odds. The young volunteers excelled their comrades of the permanent English army because they were fighting on account of the love they bore Great Britain while their comrades of the permanent corps worked as a matter of business.

In dealing with the subject the Montreal Star says: "The Empire will be much the stronger for the consolidation of South Africa. The removal of the Transvaal oligarchy from the flanks of our African possessions will leave us far freer to guard our interests elsewhere. But much as that will do to better the position of the Empire, the patent and undeniable fact that the great self-governing colonies are to be hereafter considered as a part of the military resources of the British peoples, will strengthen our position in the world immensely more. Britain's Colonies are neither burdens nor responsibilities in the light of these new conditions but allies and the sources of military reinforcement."

EDITORIAL NOTES.

A Protestant clergyman was very anxious to introduce some new hymnbooks into his church and arranged with his clerk that the latter was to give out the notice immediately after the sermon. The clerk, however, had a notice of his own with reference to the baptism of infants to give out; accordingly at the close of the sermon he rose and announced that "All those who had children whom they wished baptized were to send their names to the clerk at once." The clergyman, who was deaf, assumed that the clerk was giving out the hymnbook notice, and immediately rose and said: "And for the benefit of those who haven't any, I would like to say that they may be obtained at the vestry any day from three to four o'clock; the ordinary little ones at twenty-five cents each, and special ones with red backs at fifty cents."

Important Improvements and Alterations in the Passenger Train Service of the GRAND TRUNK RY. SYSTEM

It has been rumoured for some time past that the inauguration on June 15th of the summer passenger train service of the Grand Trunk Railway system would be marked by importand new features. The details of the service have now been sufficiently advanced to permit of information regarding it of a preliminary character being furnished to the public. It is evident that the progressive policy introduced by the present management of the Grand Trunk is to be continued. Many of these improvements in the way of additional trains, have been under careful consideration for some time past and have now only become possible as the result of the substantial growth of traffic in the districts concerned throughout which the new facilities will be greatly appreciated. While Ontario will benefit chiefly, the advantages will not be confined to that province. A brief statement of the new and altered service follows:—

MONTREAL AND NEW YORK

It is usual for the Grand Trunk in connection with the Delaware & Hudson in the Summer to add to the passenger service one train between Montreal and New York in each direction over the balance of the year. This summer, instead of one, two trains will be added. Last fall 40 minutes was clipped off the time between the two cities; commencing June 22nd, (a week later than the general change), a further reduction of 30 minutes will be made, the night express which now leaves Bonaventure Station at 7 40 p.m., being put back to 8.10 p.m., daily. The other trains will depart from Montreal at 7.30 a.m., 10.15 a.m., and 6 30 p.m. Trains will arrive at Montreal from New York at 7 15 a.m., 3 20 p.m., 8 20 p.m., and 9 25 p.m. The 8.20 train will leave New York at 10.00 a.m., practically making a ten hour run to Montreal.

MONTREAL, PORTLAND AND OLD ORCHARD BEACH

The night express will leave Montreal at 8 00 instead of 8.30 p.m. daily, and will arrive at Portland at 6 40 a.m. instead of 8 00 a.m. Through sleeping and parlor cars to Old Orchard will commence June 22nd

PORTLAND AND LEWISTON, MAINE

Two additional trains each way leaving at 7 00 a.m., and 5.20 p.m., will be put on between the above cities

MONTREAL AND ST. HYACINTHE

The local train from Montreal at 5.15 p.m. will be run daily except Saturday and Sunday. A new train will leave Montreal on Saturdays at 1.45 p.m.

MONTREAL AND QUEBEC

A new day train will leave Quebec (Pt. Levi) at 7.45 a.m., and arrive Montreal at 1.00 p.m.; also leave Montreal at 4 15 p.m., and arrive Quebec (Pt. Levi) at 10.15 p.m. daily, except Sunday.

MONTREAL AND TORONTO

The fast "International Limited" will leave Montreal daily at 9.00 a.m., and reach Toronto 4 40 p.m. and Detroit 9.30 p.m., ten minutes earlier, and Chicago 7 20 a.m., as at present. The Night Express trains will leave Montreal at 8.00 p.m., except Sunday and 10.30 p.m., daily. A new express will leave Toronto at 9.00 p.m., except Sunday and the 10.00 p.m. express will leave Toronto 10.30 p.m., daily, reaching Montreal as now 7.30 a.m. The fast day express will continue to leave Toronto at 9.00 a.m., and reach Montreal 6 00 p.m., daily.

BELLEVILLE AND BROCKVILLE

The mail train which leaves Toronto at 8 00 a.m. necessarily passes stations between Belleville and Brockville at midday. In order to give an earlier service in this district a new local train will leave Belleville at 7.00 a.m., and arrive Brockville at 10.00 a.m. except Sunday. A new local train will also leave Brockville at 5.00 p.m. and arrive Belleville 8.00 p.m., except Sunday.

TORONTO, MUSKOKA, NORTH BAY, ETC

A new fast train will run solid between Buffalo (Lehigh Valley) via Niagara Falls, Toronto and Muskoka Wharf to Burks Falls, making direct connection at Allandale for Penetang and all Georgian Bay resorts; at Muskoka Wharf for the magnificent new Royal Muskoka Hotel and all other resorts on the Muskoka Lakes; at Huntsville for the Lake of Bays district and at Burk's Falls for Magnetawan River Points. This train, composed of vestibule coaches, parlor and cafe cars of the newest and most elegant description in which meals and refreshments at any hour may be obtained, will leave Toronto at 11.20 a.m., except Sunday. Passengers from Toronto for the Muskoka Lakes will not be carried on this train, as an additional new train for their accommodation will leave Toronto, except Sunday, at 10 45 a.m. and run direct to Muskoka Wharf. The southbound Muskoka Express will reach Toronto at 4.20 p.m.

NEW NIGHT EXPRESS SERVICE TO AND FROM MUSKOKA, NORTH BAY, ETC

A new night express will leave Toronto daily at 11.15 p.m.. It will carry a sleeping car for Muskoka Wharf as well as North Bay. Passengers in the Muskoka Wharf sleeper can remain in it until about 7 00 a.m. when steamer leaves for all principal points on the lakes including the "Royal Muskoka." A new night express will also leave North Bay at 8.45 p.m. This train will pick up sleeper from Muskoka Wharf daily and arrive Toronto 7.00 a.m. Passengers will be able to leave all principal points on the Muskoka Lakes in the evening and breakfast in Toronto next morning. Special arrangements will be made so that passengers desiring to spend Sunday on the Lakes will be able to leave Royal Muskoka at 8.00 p.m. and reach Toronto Monday directly connecting for Buffalo, Detroit, Chicago and all principal points in the United States. It is believed that this double daily service will immensely increase the popularity of the "Highlands of Ontario" and attract thousands of additional tourists and health seekers from all parts of the country, but particularly from the Southern and Eastern States where already our beautiful northern waters are so greatly appreciated.

A new train will be run each way between Collingwood and Allandale, except Sunday, affording a mid-day service to and from Toronto.

A new train will be run each way between Orillia and Allandale south in morning and north in evening, giving direct communication for and from Hamilton, Toronto, etc.

DETROIT AND LONDON

At present trains from Detroit arrive at London 10.00 a.m., and 1 .20 a.m. To better serve the district the 10.20 a.m. train will run later leaving Detroit 12.40 (Eastern Time), instead of 9.00 a.m. arriving London 4.20 p.m., where direct connection will be made for all Eastern and Northern points.

SOUTHAMPTON, WIARTON AND OWEN SOUND LINES

New trains will be added and changes made in other trains that will afford afternoon connections for, as well as earlier arrival on these branches from Toronto, Montreal, etc.

HAMILTON AND PORT DOVER

The morning service from Port Dover and the evening train from Hamilton will be changed from mixed to passenger trains. The evening train from Hamilton will also start later connecting with fast trains from Toronto at 5.50 p.m., instead of requiring departure from Toronto at 2.10 p.m., as at present.

Many other minor changes will be made and the public are advised to consult ticket agents and procure copy of the new time tables when they have occasion to travel after Saturday next.

EXTENT.

The area of the three claims is 600 feet by 4500 feet.

ORE BODY.

Out-croppings show on the surface 220 feet to 450 feet wide and 4500 feet long, (nearly one mile)

DEPTH.

Shaft is down over 100 feet in ore from the surface and there is ore fully 70 feet above where the shaft starts.

CROSS-CUTS.

Cross-cuts on shaft of fifty feet each are entirely in ore, so also is thirty-foot Tunnel.

ORE IN SIGHT.

By expert calculations there is TWO MILLION TONS OF ORE IN SIGHT NOW.

ASSAYS.

THE BLACK ROCK MINING Co., equally high in Copper, with some silver. Total values running as high as $56.00 per ton.

COST.

Ore can be mined and treated on a proposition of this class, at less than $2 00 per ton by present processes.

The largest producing mines today pay big dividends on ore averaging from $3.00 to $8.00 per ton. This is only made possible by the enormous bodies of ore such as are found on the "Chicago" "United Verde" "Ore Grande" and other similar mines.

The "United Verde" with an original capital of three million dollars pays to its stockholders in cash profits about Two million dollars every month; or in other words pays back its entire capital every six weeks.

THE BLACK ROCK MINING CO., LIMITED, will without doubt pay dividends of at least one per cent. a month before the end of the year. Now is the time to get in while stock is low. Only 10c. per share.

T'THE ADVERTISER

Do you realize that it would be easy for you to increase your business to the extent of several thousand dollars a year?

Do you know that hundreds of people living in the country surrounding Peterborough never see your name in the newspaper they read; that they don't know why it would be to their advantage to deal with you?

Do you know that these people are sending to Toronto for goods they could buy from you, if they knew you wanted to sell them?

Do you realize that the merchants of Toronto and Montreal are reaching out for the trade of this, and other towns; that they are spending thousands of dollars in advertising, to tell people who ought to buy from YOU all about their goods?

Are YOU telling the people about YOUR GOODS, and the LOW PRICES at which you sell them?

You CAN NOT do so thoroughly, if you don't advertise in THE TIMES, because THE TIMES reaches people whom you can't reach through any other medium.

At least 60 per cent. of the people living in the surrounding country read "THE TIMES" and NO OTHER newspaper. These people have money to spend and will spend it in Toronto because they think they can buy more cheaply there than here. If you don't secure their custom.

Use THE TIMES to tell them you can give them better bargains than they can get in Toronto.

You'll make money, you'll increase your business, you'll get new customers if you advertise in THE TIMES.

We are going to make THE TIMES the best daily paper in Eastern Ontario. We have made arrangements to improve the local news service and to push the paper to the foremost place in the front ranks. We want you to advertise in THE TIMES because it'll pay you to do so. Every dollar you spend for advertising in The Times will return with good interest added.

Remember—no matter how much business you are doing now—YOU CAN DO MORE if you advertise in THE TIMES.

TRY IT AND SEE IF YOU CAN'T.

CURE YOURSELF! [illegible]

The Wife of Potiphar.

The country of the Nile was beautiful with verdure. The sky was a dream of light and changing glory; the long caravans of the merchants diverged towards the city of the Pharaohs, bearing purple cloth from Tyre, and rare gems and metal work from Damascus, and carved woods and perfumes from the Isles of the Sea.

A train of dusky men and dusty camels loomed up in silhouette over a ridge, and for a few moments formed a huge picture against a fathomless horizon. On one of the camels was a quaint canopied erection with curtains of silk, and within the curtains sat uneasily a girl of some sixteen years. She had all the beauty of the young Semite, large soft dark eyes, an oval face, somewhat over-full lips of deep red, and nostrils sensitive and distended.

From time to time she plucked aside the curtains with a long slim hand and looked anxiously out. "God of Abraham, thy handmaid crieth unto thee!" she said softly in a voice broken with distress and strenuously pitched. "If help come not soon from above, may death release me!"

Two of the Egyptian traders looked up as some murmur of her vibrant tones reached them where they walked.

"The Hebrew maid speaks," said the younger. The elder waved his hand. "I do not listen," he said, briefly.

"But she may be ill," suggested the younger, glancing at the parting of the curtains and the four small brown fingers. "Bring up the other captive who speaks her tongue and let him enquire," said the elder merchant.

The younger man stood still, and one by one the others passed him, camels laden and men walking. Near the end of the line marched a beautiful boy just emerging into manhood. The young trader called to him kindly, and the youth came to his side.

"I fear for the health of the maiden," he said, briefly. "Come thou and question her."

The eyes of the youth flashed a proud glance at the trader, and then he drew away from him, and a certain far-away look, as of one who sees something enthralling in the distance, crept into his lately flashing eyes.

"The Jewish maiden travels to high honor. Wherefore should she sicken before it meets her? It is her mind that travails in fear of the birth of some new horror," he said, briefly. "The lamb cries for its dam, the young nestling for its mother and its nest. What need for questions? When the maid sits among the mighty ones in a strange land she will learn to forget her sorrow."

"You say wisely, boy," said the trader. "We hope to sell her for much gold to a noble captain of Pharaoh's guard. He has lost his wife, and there is no war in progress. In times of peace warriors are prone to look upon such fair women."

The two had hastened and were now abreast of the silk-curtained canopy, which swayed to the rolling gait of the camel.

"Speak to the maid," commanded the trader.

"Daughter of my people, is all well with thee?" called the youth, his young cheek reddening as he obeyed. The curtains parted.

"Art thou, too, a Hebrew?" cried the girl, with amazement and delight in every tone.

"I am, and, like thee, a captive, foully sold into bondage by my brethren," said the youth, with deep, hoarse anger.

"Alas! then can you tell what is to be our fate?" asked the girl with great tears in her eyes.

"Slavery for me, for thee high honor, riches, luxury, and the captain of Pharaoh's Guard to be thy husband," said the youth, slowly and dreamily.

The Hebrew maiden looked at him in staring dismay.

"What have you said to her?" asked the trader, jogging the arm of the youth. Again the proud eyes flashed, and again grew quickly calm and gentle.

"I have told her that she is to be the wife of the captain of Pharaoh's Guard, and she liketh not my saying," he said, meekly.

The trader laughed. "She liketh not!" he said scornfully, quoting the youth. "When she seeth Potiphar she will fall at his feet. That is our finest and wisest warrior. Tell her what I say." The youth obeyed.

"But I am a Hebrew, and may not mate with a heathen and idolatrous [illegible]!" gasped the girl wildly.

The youth sighed. "The hand of our God be upon thee," he said, and fell back to his place in the rear.

* * *

The captain of the Guard sat in his chamber and doted upon a beautiful carved stand a heap of exquisite gems. There were ear-rings, nose-rings, armlets and anklets, long pear-shaped pearls, strings of round pearls, rings set with great royal rubies, and emeralds deeply and gloriously green. He suddenly sat up and smote his palms together, and a Nubian parted a curtain and came in.

"Take these gifts to the Hebrew maiden, and bid her women prepare her for my coming," said the warrior, pushing aside a heap of jingling, flashy ornaments. The Nubian gathered up the end of his scarlet sash and carefully placed the selected jewels within the improvised bag. Then, speechless, he backed out between the curtains. The warrior leaned back with a smile.

"Rachel will wear those gauds well," he said, softly stroking his short beard and crossing his legs. "I have given her only the new ornaments and the jewels of my mother. The gems my wife wore would bring her misfortune. I am full of the fancies of women to talk thus! This comes of loitering at home, when one should be abroad conquering provinces and fighting one's way about."

A great yawn heaved the warrior's deep chest. He swept the remaining jewels into a coffer, of which he drew a small golden key from his bosom. Then he clapped his hands twice, and again the curtains parted and forth between them stepped the Hebrew youth. He was dressed in rich and costly garb, and his bearing was distinctly distinguished. He bowed ceremoniously and stood before the warrior. Potiphar laughed easily and good-naturedly.

"Hast no word, Joseph?" he enquired.

"All words are good, noble captain. Thy house is well ordered, thy goods are well cared. The land hath peace."

"That last word is not good for fighting men, Hebrew. I would a war came with the setting sun," said Potiphar, yawning again.

"'Tis thy wedding eve, noble captain," said the Hebrew quickly.

"True, and I must make ready," assented Potiphar. "Send a slave for that casket and put it in thine own store-place. It contains precious jewels."

The Hebrew bowed and turned away. Just as he lifted the curtain to leave the chamber a hurried step was heard. A messenger met him on the threshold and handed him a rolled papyrus. "Pharaoh desires the captain of the Guard," stammered the messenger, as he deferentially presented the roll, and the overseer turned back to his master and repeated the message.

"My chariot!" cried the captain, leaping from his seat. "Hebrew, I have my wish. It is war, and in the south where there be tough fighters. Pharaoh's the king, desires me take men this day and meet them half-way. This stirs my sleeping blood! This suits me better than brides and bridals! But, stay! the Hebrew maiden. Go to her; tell her privately of this, for the king must be the first to tell the people. I do not think many tears will fall because the nuptial rites be delayed. Tell the maiden, who is also thy country-woman, that for this postponement I will, when I return, give her thy freedom. And guard her, Hebrew, till that day, be it far or near!"

The overseer bowed and went upon his errand. On his proud face was a look of awe and triumph.

"Lo! the God of Abraham hath encompassed the maiden!" he said slowly. And the slaves and soldiers eyed him as he strode away, and whispered: "The Hebrew has seen a vision! The light of the unknown is upon his face."

* * *

The war dragged slowly, news came fitfully, and week by week the bride of Potiphar and the overseer of his house were drawn by the triple cord of nationality, religion and youthful ardor nearer and nearer. The Hebrew maiden lived secluded from the city and from the court. She passed many hours in converse day by day with the overseer, and together they kept alive the religion of their fathers in their hearts. The maiden lifted her beautiful head in hope as she listened to the voice of Joseph, encouraging and buoying her frightened soul. The inevitable happened at last, and an unguarded word, a look too much confessed the love that was as natural as it was pure, and the two faced the problem in mingled terror and rapture. Escape from Egypt was impossible; a happy consummation of their love was equally out of the question. The city was even then being decked for the triumphant return of the captain of the Guard.

The day of his entry dawned, and the heart of the overseer was of lead, while the anguished bride-elect of the victorious warrior had now added to the horror of union with an idolatrous man the torture of love for another.

While the house of the captain of the Guard was being wreathed with flowers, and the singing maidens stood waiting at the gates with lotus crowns and stringed instruments garlanded with wreaths of green, the overseer, in his sumptuous festival garments, sought the Hebrew girl. She sat amid her maidens in silent despair. The overseer bowed low before her.

"Dismiss the maidens," he said, in their own speech, and, made cunning by her extremity, she rose hurriedly. "Is it indeed true that the lord of the house is near?" she said in Egyptian, misleading them. "Then to the first of my maidens who sees the shining of his armor will I give this ring of rubies. Run, now, to the upper windows and watch."

The Egyptian girls dropped their work and hurried up the short stair to the flat roof, round which was a high wall, pierced by small openings. The overseer stood moodily looking upon the ground. The Hebrew girl drew near timidly and clasping her hands upon her fluttering bosom, where jewels flashed with her panting breath, looked up into his young and clouded face.

"Is there no escape for me?" she asked in trembling tones. "Must it be either the knife or the marriage-bed of the idolater?" The overseer started violently.

"I have said it, and I am not afraid," said the girl, her great eyes darkening and her nostrils sounding tensely.

The overseer paused a moment. "There is no escape," he said slowly. The girl gave a small, stifled groan. "It will not be so very bad," she said, quivering. "Just a little pain, and safety, and thou, some day, wilt tell my people of me? That I was true." And then, before the overseer could anticipate her movement or guard her from herself, she threw herself into his arms, clinging about him and sobbing "Farewell!"

There was a burst of song from the gates, a cry from the maidens, the overseer wrenched the thin, clinging fingers from his neck and tried to tear them from his rich garment. They had a vise-like, frantic grip.

There was a rush of the maidens, a tramp of a heavy foot beyond the curtain; in vain the overseer whispered, "The captain of the Guard is here."

With one frenzied wrench he slipped from the gorgeous robe and dashed through the inner entrance, just as the maidens scurried laughing down the stone steps to claim their reward, and the parted curtains gave admission to the captain of the Guard.

The girl stood in the center of the chamber, her face white and drawn, in her hands the brilliant robe of the overseer, in her eyes a horror unspeakable. The captain of the Guard advanced with a quick glance about him.

"He was here?" he said. "This is his robe?"

The girl suddenly dropped it with a faint cry. She began to see horror and danger ahead.

"You are not hurt?" said the captain of the Guard, gently, touching her shoulder. She shook her head. Then he turned to the maidens.

"Go to the dance!" he said, sternly, "and send me here four of my soldiers who wait without."

The moment the curtain fell the Hebrew girl awoke from her trance of terror. In few and stumbling Egyptian phrases she tried to tell the truth, asking for swift death, and handing her pitiful little dagger to the captain of the Guard. He pushed it aside.

"Peace, girl!" he cried shortly. "'Tis a pleasant and joyous home-coming." Then, as the soldiers noisily entered, he said grimly: "Take this robe to him who was overseer. 'Tis well he fled before I entered to slay him; 'tis better that the maiden is brave and strong

Fables For the Fair.

A LITTLE work called "Fables for the Fair," by Josephine Dodge Daskam, is attracting amused notice in London, where it is published. Here is an example of the fables:

"There was once a woman who had the opportunity of marrying either of two brothers she preferred. Since they had both of them good points she decided to consult their sister as to which in her opinion would make the best husband. 'I think,' she said, 'that I shall take John. He is so good.' "'But,' said the sister, 'he gobbles his soup and sugars his lettuce. To say nothing of buttering his bread in slabs. We have never been able to teach him better.' 'But he reads Browning so beautifully,' cried the woman. 'You will hear him eat soup oftener than you will hear him read Browning,' said the sister."

Then, as to the other brother, "I am sure he would give his life for me," cried the woman. "If you will pause and consider," replied the sister, "you will realise that the probabilities of his being called upon to do that are very few indeed. Whereas the fact that he is very careless about brushing his clothes will be daily apparent to you."

The book is full of good things, among them the fable of a singer who sang "Annie Laurie" in a muslin gown to a country audience. "Goodness alive!" said they, "is that all? Our Jenny knows that piece." But the rival wore silver brocade and sang in German and French, whereupon the country paper remarked that "it was a real pleasure to hear old favorites rendered with such spirit." This teaches us that when in Rome we should do as the Romans don't.

Then there is the fable of the woman who could not help herself:

"There was once a woman who had never learned how to swim, although she went in bathing every day in the summer. She had a friend who had acquired the art with some trouble, and was very proud of her proficiency in it. 'It is absurd,' said this friend, 'to live near the water and not swim. It makes you very attractive to good swimmers if you can go out with them and they do not feel that you are a drag on their pleasures. What would you do in case you fell off the pier? Now watch me!' With these words she dived off into the water and swam about by herself. 'It is a good thing to have a woman swim so well,' said one of the men near by. 'Now if any of the children fall into the water she can rescue them.' Just then the woman who could not help herself uttered a scream and fell into the sea. Instantly five men leaped in to rescue her, and spent the rest of the day resuscitating her and enquiring how she was, leaving the swimmer to dive by herself. This teaches that nothing succeeds like distress."

On the 'Gyptian Railway.

FIRST TOURIST—Isn't this lovely? Just think! Pharaoh lived here, and — and Cheops, and — and Moses! It makes your head swim, doesn't it?

Second Tourist—I expect it's the bad air. It hurts my head, too. Is that the Nile over there?

"Mercy! I suppose so. Isn't it dirty? It doesn't seem as if Cleopatra could have rode in her barge to meet Marc Antony down that horrid stream, does it!"

"No, it doesn't. But that was a long time ago, wasn't it?"

"I believe so. I've seen the play, but I don't remember just when it was."

"See that crocodile basking in the sun!"

"Is he basking? Oh, Maud, that reminds me. How are you going to have your new basque trimmed?"

"Mercy, there's the Sphinx!"

"What's the Sphinx?"

"Why, it's a thing that asked you riddles, you know. Dear me, I'm not sure whether that's the Sphinx or one of the Pyramids. Just look at all those children! They must be going in for swimming."

"No, dear, it's the effect of the mild climate."

"Look there! That must be the desert. But I can't see any caravans. Perhaps it isn't a desert. Perhaps it's a mirage."

"What's a mirage, dear?"

"Oh, it's something they see in deserts. Everything is upside down, you know."

"Isn't that awful? Oh, see that handsome native? What a picture! He must be a sheikh at least. What's he doing?"

"He's playing on the concertina and passing his hat."

"What a shame! Isn't it nice to travel on a railroad where they don't have any smoke or cinders?"

"Yes, and do you notice what a balmy odor comes in at the window?"

"Yes. Isn't it fragrant? So spicy. Can't you smell the cloves? Ah-a-a, I like to breathe it in."

"So do I. I'll ask the conductor what it is. There he is. Conductor, please!"

The conductor—Yes, ma'am?

"Conductor, where does that spicy smell come from?"

"From the locomotive, ma'am. We use nothing but mummies for fuel on this line, ma'am."

One of Tom Reed's Retorts.

"No matter what you may say," declared Representative Babcock of Wisconsin to Chairman Payne of the Ways and Means Committee when discussing the Babcock proposition to put all steel products on the free list, "I am right, and I know it, and when a man is right he is in the majority." "Just so," replied Payne, "but you remember that Tom Reed used to say, 'God and one make a majority, but many a martyr has been burned at the stake while the votes were being counted.'"

The Real Reason.

A visitor to Dublin refused the services of a driver because of his ragged clothing. "Ah, sur," replied the Jarvie's friend, "you must excuse him, sur; he can't help it."

"Why can't he help it? Why does his wife not mend his clothes for him?"

"Ah, your honor, he has no wife."

"Then why doesn't he get another coat?" "He can't, sur, I assure you he can't."

"Why can't he?" "Well, sur, it has been tried once or twice, but it can't be done. He is so very ticklesome that divil a tailor in Dublin daar lay a tape on him."

The Isle of the Lush Bananas.

A millionaire and a beggar suffered shipwreck and both were cast upon an uninhabited island which abounded in bananas. The millionaire, whose property was all in railroads, did not lose a cent by the shipwreck, but the poor beggar saved only the shirt on his back—which, indeed, was the only shirt he had had for longer than he could remember.

When they found themselves on the shore the millionaire nodded affably to the beggar and said: "I don't remember to have seen you before, but I suppose you must have been on the steamer. Second cabin?"

"No, stowaway. It's cheaper."

"Ah, yes. I hadn't thought of that. Well, this shipwreck is something of a leveler, and we might as well be friendly and see how we can help each other until we are rescued. What can you do?"

"I? Oh, I can beg."

"I'm afraid that in the absence of inhabitants that is a useless accomplishment," replied the millionaire.

"Well, what can you do, yourself?"

"I can buy," said the millionaire.

"Umph!" said the beggar.

"A very just remark," said the millionaire. "I see that we are on the same footing and the outlook is discouraging."

"That is just where I fail to agree with you," said the beggar. "For the first time since I can remember I can live without begging. See, the island is full of bananas."

"But," said the other, "bananas don't agree with me."

"You should have bought a better digestion when your money had purchasing power. Still, if you don't like fruit, there are fish. I see them leaping in the cove there, and we can make fire with your spectacles for a burning-glass."

"But fish almost poison me. I never eat them."

"Well, you are difficult. But there is a small bird."

"I never eat them without the accompaniment of a cold bottle. Still, I suppose I could go a small bird if you caught it and cooked it."

The twain spent months on the island and the beggar grew fat while the millionaire became as thin as an ascetic.

One day, while the millionaire watched the beggar making a meal of weak fish and fried bananas he said: "I would give all my millions (if I could get at them) for your appetite."

"There have been times," said the beggar, "when I would have jumped at your offer, but as we seem out of the track of steamers I won't even consider it. And to tell the truth, I don't believe that all your millions would make these fish any more delicate to my palate nor would seven millions buy so luscious a banana in New York as this that is now slipping over my tongue. But as for you, if you could buy my appetite it would be cheap at any price, for I am happy and fat and you are starving and sad. A word of advice. Next time you begin life see to it that you get an appetite for nourishing things along with your money, for there is more food in the world than there are places where money is valuable."—Charles Battell Loomis in "Saturday Evening Post."

Mark Twain on "Gentlemen."

Commenting on Mrs. Astor's alleged statement, that "without a college education no man can be a gentleman." Mark Twain says that "perhaps Mrs. Astor, when she uses the word 'gentleman,' does not have the same meaning in view that we rude people have." He thinks she probably means "a leader of cotillions; a spick and span dandy, who knows enough to observe the ordinary rules of politeness when he is on parade, and who has a valet at home to tell him what clothes are proper to wear." Twain's idea of a gentleman is "a kindly, courteous, unselfish man, who thinks first not of himself, but of his fellow-man; not one of those 'chappies,' who are in reality the most selfish men on earth," and he adds: "Take the men of prominence in the United States to-day and pick out the true gentlemen. I'll venture that nine out of ten of them never had a high school education, let alone a college education. Why, the first gentleman I ever knew was an old California miner, who could hardly write his own name. He was a '49er, and he and his partner had struck it rich in the early days. The old man had neither chick nor child, and he had worked hard all his life, and when he did get his money he hardly knew what to do with it. He didn't try to jump into society, or to push his way with the 'big fellows' there. He continued to live with the people he had associated with all his life, and many an act of kindness was done, many a wandering son and father saved, many a sorrowing woman's burden lightened and her life brightened by an unknown donor whose identity was only known to a few. It was different with his partner. He had a wife and two daughters with social aspirations, and after a whole lot of pushing and hauling and shoving they landed in society. The expense was too much of a drain on the husband's purse, and he speculated, with the inevitable outcome. He lost his entire fortune and shot himself. Then it was the true gentlemanliness of the old man showed itself. The widow and her daughters had no one to turn to but him, and he did not disappoint them. He saved their home for them when everything else went under the hammer, and he maintained them in it in all the regal style to which they were accustomed, although he still lived in his old lodgings. He lived long enough to see both of the girls well married and the mother comfortably settled for life. Then he died in a charity hospital in San Francisco. He had spent every penny he owned on the family of his partner. That is what I call a gentleman."

BUCKHORN POWER HAS BEEN SOLD

Is Now Owned by the Burleigh Falls Company

SO A TELEGRAM SAYS

A Big Deal in Water Power That will Interest Peterborough

Special to The Times.

Newark, N.J., June 11.—Mr. J. Alexander Culverwell of Toronto, Managing Director of the Central Ontario Power Co., which has power concessions near Peterborough, to-day announced that he has purchased outright Buckhorn Falls, in the same neighborhood. The falls are only 18 miles from Peterborough.

The company now owns Burleigh Falls, where five thousand horse power is being developed and transmitted to Peterborough. The acquisition of Buckhorn Falls has been contemplated for some time by the company. At Buckhorn Falls, two thousand additional horse power will be developed by the company, and transmitted to Peterborough and the surrounding towns, as soon as machinery can be installed.

The company's head offices are in Toronto. The further extension of the enterprise is only a matter of negotiating for further supplies of power in a district which is rich in water power. [illegible]

TWO NEGRO BOYS LYNCHED

Charlotte, N.C., June 11.—A mob of about fifty men broke into the jail at Salisbury at 1 o'clock this morning, took out two negro boys, Harris and James Gillespie, charged with murdering a white girl, and lynched them. They were hanged to a tree on the outskirts of the city. Their bodies were riddled with bullets.

THE EFFECT OF LYNCHINGS.

In justice to President Roosevelt, let it be said that he has at last vigorously denounced lynching. So far he is an improvement on his pious predecessor, who on the very scene of the lynchings morally connived at them by his silence. But words, however, strong, will have little effect on the passions of a Texan mob. Something effectual evidently must be done if a murderous collision of races is not to be the end. Yet it is extremely difficult to say what can be done when the powers of Government are so limited as are those of the Government of the United States, and with such a lack of statesmanship as there is now at Washington, where regard for national interests is lost in a sectional struggle for commercial self. The social antagonism between the North and South has not been obliterated by the reconquest of the South, and it still suggests misgivings as to the ultimate stability of the Union.

NORTH MONAGHAN.

The Council of the Township of North Monaghan met as per adjournment of the last meeting.

All the members were present, the Reeve presiding. The minutes of the last meeting were not read.

The committee appointed to estimate the cost of the crib-work and filling in of washout on the Drain Road, reported.

It was moved by Messrs. May and Smith, that Commissioner Revington be, and he is hereby, instructed to provide and crib and fill in the washout on the Drain Road by day labour in the same manner as other work is being performed throughout the township. The Council to supply the timber, etc., and the work to be under the supervision of a Committee consisting of the Reeve and Chas. May and Smith. This was carried.

It was moved by Messrs. May and Smith, that a committee consisting of Messrs. Madill, Smith and Dobbin meet a committee of Cavan Township Council for the purpose of inspecting and repairing any necessary places of the Cavan boundary road.—Carried.

By-law No. 510, entitled a "Bylaw to confirm an agreement with the Peterborough Radial Railway Co., by which the franchise to erect a street railway within the Township and operate the same for a term of years," was introduced and read a first and second time. The third reading of this by-law was deferred until next meeting of the council.

The clerk forwarded the list of statute labour commutations for each division for the year 1902, as follows; Road Division, No. 1, 400 days, $302.25, less snow shovelling acct., $83.25, total, $219; add bal, not spent, 1901, 75 cents; leaving total of $219.75. Road Division No. 2, 188 days, $141; less snow shovelling acct., $28.25; total, $112.75; less overspent 1901, $10.75; leaving total of $102.00; Road Division No. 3, 222 days, $166.50; less snow shovelling acct.,$30.15., total $136.35; add bal. not spent 1901, $4.02; leaving a total of $140.37. Road Division, No. 4, 250 days, $187.50, less snow shovelling acct., $12.50; total $175; and bal. not spent 1901, $132.90; leaving grant total of $306.90.

These lists were accepted and ordered to be delivered to the several Road Commissioners.

Council then adjourned until Monday, July 14th, at the town hall, at 1.30 p.m.

The adjourned meeting of the N. Monaghan Court of Revision met on Saturday, June 7th. The following alterations were made to the assessment roll for 1902; R. Kline, assessed part 1 or 2, $500; J. Madill, assessment reduced, $100; N. W. May assessed as occupant; J. Ferguson, assessed as occupant. Mr. R. Lillico, appeared before the council asking for a reduction in his assessment on lot 1 on 11th con. but owing to irregularities in the appeal no action was taken in the matter. The roll was then confirmed and the court adjourned.

KEENE.

—The residents of this village celebrated the close of the Boer war in a most enthusiastic manner on Monday last. In the afternoon the school children formed into line and marched around the streets making all the noise possible and this was augmented by cannon crackers and various other plans. In the evening a very large display of fire works was given in the school grounds and at other places in the village. Flags were flung to the wind from a number of poles and all expressed very great pleasure at the close of the war.

—A large and influential committee have charge of the commuted statute labor and will improve our streets by laying down concrete walks, using tile drains in place of open or half covered ditches, and helping with trees. This is all right and proper, but while horses, cows, sheep, pigs, geese, &c., are allowed to come into the village for the night and break down the trees, and leave our streets worse than the average barnyard, it seems very foolish to try and fix up. The few milk cows would not cause much damage but the very large number of young cattle should be shut off.

—Messrs. Anderson & Skinner are agents for the Str. Rainbow and purpose to run fortnightly half day trips during the summer; the first was on June 10th.

—There is some talk of a concert and display of fireworks on Coronation Day It is a good thing so help it along.

OTONABEE.

The late David Henderson.

Mr. David D. Henderson enterde into rest on Thursday morning, June 10, at the family residence, lot 24, con. 8, Otonabee. Bright's disease, from which he had suffered for some time, was the cause of death. The deceased, who had been a successful farmer, was married in January, 1871, to Helen Brydon, who, with four remaining children, still survives him. The children are Walter, of Maple Creek, N.W.T., Susie, William and John at home. Of his brothers and sisters the survivors are Mrs. James Renwick, of Ashburnham, Mrs. A. Thompson, of Thornbury, Mrs. W. D. Johnston, of Otonabee, James E., of Grand Rapids, Mich., and John, Jane and Maggie, of the old homestead, Otonabee. Deceased was a member and office-bearer of Keene Presbyterian church. In politics he was a Reformer. He will be deeply mourned, having been a loving husband and highly esteemed by friends and neighbors. The Times extends its sincere sympathy to the bereaved family.

A Story of Bret Hart.

The London Daily Chronicle tells the following story about Bret Harte. It seems that during his early years he had an engagement to attend the opening of a new saloon in Market street, San Francisco. The interest did not begin till after 11 p.m., and Mr. Harte was late in getting back to The Chronicle. The night editor had gone, leaving word that Mr. Harte was to hand in his half-column to the foreman printer without editorial revision. Mr. Harte had taken particular pains with his copy, which was really funny. Beginning in grandiloquent terms he described the new premises accurately enough. Then he came on to the good cheer, then to more good cheer, his praise of the refreshments piling up stage by stage, till it wound up in incoherency. It was an exact portrayal of the stages of a man's mind passing from exhilaration to intoxication. Looking for his article next day Mr. Harte found half-a-column of descriptive matter as dull as ditchwater. He inquired. "Well, Mr. Harte," said the foreman, "I killed it. You must have had a terrible skinful last night. It's lucky the old man wasn't about when you got back, for if there's anything he's down on it's drink." Poor Bret Harte, who expected San Francisco to laugh over his little article, went sadly away—the more sadly as at that time of his life he was a teetotaler!

Blue Jackets Popular.

No wonder our bluejackets are popular, says a notice of a book recently published by Mr. Basil Thomson, relating incidents of travel in the Pacific islands. Mr. Thomson declares that if he were set the task of winning the confidence of suspicious and hostile natives he would ask for an escort of the first naval petty officers that came to hand, and consider the work done. Here is a charming story of how they won confidence:—"Returning from a walk late in the afternoon, we heard sounds of merry-making in the village square, and found the whole population sitting convulsed with laughter at an entertainment provided by their visitors. It appeared that the shore party, returning to their boat, had discovered a band of urchins playing catch with oranges, and seized upon the opportunity for teaching the new British subjects the British national game. With sticks for wickets and cocoanut butts for bats, they soon had the game going, and when we came up a boy of eight was bowling to a bearded engine-room artificer, who was going through the antics of clown-cricket, to the huge delight of the onlookers. The little boys positively wept when the boat came to carry away their new-found friends."

The King of the Tongans once told Mr. Thomson that it was because the English joke with the Tongans that they were such good friends, and he told him this lovely story in illustration. A French flagship arrived in one of the island's ports at the moment when H.M.S. Tauranga was there, and the natives wondered which of the two ships would be the first to acknowledge itself to be the inferior of the other. The English captain went first to the French ship, and so the natives said, "See, the Englishman admits his inferiority." But they did not speak thus on the next day. Eighty French soldiers landed, and also one English marine, who used to carry the letters to the postoffice. The French soldiers marched proudly in lines of four, and the natives thought the English marine would be abashed when he met them. What was their surprise to see the marine actually waiting for the French soldiers, and when they came up to him "he put himself at their head and marched so bravely in his red coat that the Tongans cried out, 'Lo, a King is approaching us with his bodyguard!'

"The face of the French officer was not good to look upon, for when he called upon his men to stamp the ground and let the marine go on, he also stamped the ground, and when they pressed forward to pass him he quickened his steps and kept with them as if he was indeed their leader. Nor was it better when they passed the guard-room and saw even the Tongan sentry dissolved in laughter, for the marine behaved as if he was too exalted to know his friends, save for a secret sign that he made to them with one eyelid. So they went on together to the boat. The rumor of this thing was carried throughout Tonga, and the people thought more of this marine than of the French Admiral and all his men."

Dipping Lambs.

Lambs usually need dipping when they are two or three months old, for the purpose of destroying ticks. Even the strong and vigorous ones have a few ticks about the head and neck, which retard the growth of the animal. For a small flock a common sized washtub or caldron will be large enough for the bath. In this pour a solution of steeped tobacco juice and powdered sulphur. Add sufficient cold water to bring the bath to a proper temperature. One part strong tobacco juice and two parts water, with a reasonable amount of sulphur, make a good bath, though one need not follow any rigid rules as to the proportions. Many use some sheep dip already prepared. To aid in saving the dip, provide a board two feet wide and six feet long, with narrow cleats nailed on each side. Let one end of this project over the tub while the other end should rest on some object a few inches higher.

In dipping lambs be careful to thoroughly saturate every part of the body except the face (the head and neck need special attention). Then lift it out onto the drainage board and squeeze the wool till most of the dip runs back into the tub. The tobacco soon kills ticks or drives them off, while the odor of the sulphur adheres to the wool for a long time. Ticks don't like it, and will stay away as long as it remains. The dipping should be done in pleasant weather, otherwise the lambs are liable to chill. We dip about June 1, when some of the lambs weigh sixty pounds or more. It takes a trifle over a quart of dip for each lamb. A quart and a half would be none too m[illegible] were it convenient to furnish that [illegible] by close economy ca[illegible] [illegible] less.—H. White, in Ohi[illegible]

Humor of the Hour.

A short time ago a well-known writer of London, remembering that he had never read the non-canonical books, went out in search of a copy, and in one bookshop after another drew blank. At last he went to his own particular newspaper shop, which also dealt in Bibles and light literature. "Have you the Apocrypha?" he asked. For a moment the young woman behind the counter was puzzled. Then, brightening, she said, "Is it a weekly or a monthly?"

The young Lieutenant answered. "Save me a berth on transport."—Chicago Chronicle.

Mark Twain is said by those who know him in his home life to be many things of excellence besides a humorist; among them, a model host, a loyal husband, a gallant framer of fine compliments. A friend who spent the evening in that family circle not long since tells this incident as apropos:—

When, after dinner, coffee had been served for three before an open fire, the conversation turned upon the subject of the author's critics. When Mrs. Clemens had grown vehement in her denunciation of those who had called her husband "selfish," he interrupted:

"But I am selfish, my dear. I will prove it to you and our visitor here. Mary"—calling to the servant—"close that door, please."

"Yes," said Mrs. Clemens, drawing up her chair a little closer to the fire, "let us keep out all the cold."

"Now, there you are," he added. "I was not afraid the cold would get in, but that some of our coziness would get out."—New York Times.

A would-be golfer recently sent an order to his bookseller for all the works on the royal and ancient game which he could find. In the course of a few days the consignment arrived, and among them was one called "Stockton on Tees." The Rev. Dr. Swallow, who has recently been very much in the eye of the world because of his trial before his fellow-Methodists on charges growing out of accusations against the late President McKinley, tells a story about George Alfred Townsend, who writes over the nom de plume of "Gath."

"What does that name mean?" Dr. Swallow was asked by a young lady of his parish.

"Why, the letters are the author's initials," answered the clergyman; "G. A. Townsend."

"But what does the H stand for?" the other persisted.

"That's where he is going to when he dies," came from the doctor.

The questioner was visibly impressed.

"Is he such a very bad man?" she asked, almost in a whisper.

"Certainly not," replied Dr. Swallow. "The H stands for heaven."—New York Times.

"Please, sir, mother says I must never have anything to do with horseracing."

MOST WONDERFUL OF PIANO PLAYERS.

The Cecilian

There are many piano-players offered to the public—all said to be perfect. But after having played on the Cecilian Piano-Player it will be at once pronounced the one "Perfect" player The tone is such that people are charmed from the first note.

It is so simple in construction that anyone, without the ability but with the desire to play some of the most classical and difficult compositions of the greatest masters, finds no difficulty whatever when using the Cecilian.

It is completely under the control of the operator, responding to the slightest touch—and the tone can be moderated according as the player desires.

The power of individual expression in the Cecilian is really wonderful—astonishing people whenever it is heard

It has been endorsed by leading musicians in different parts of the country and is the delight of all who know it.

This piano-player is on daily exhibition at our handsome warerooms, and is worthy a visit from every lover of beautiful music.

KEENE.

—The residents of this village celebrated the close of the Boer war in a most enthusiastic manner on Monday last. In the afternoon the school children formed into line and marched around the streets making all the noise possible and this was augmented by cannon crackers and various other plans. In the evening a very large display of fire works was given in the school grounds and at other places in the village. Flags were flung to the wind from a number of poles and all expressed very great pleasure at the close of the war.

—A large and influential committee have charge of the commuted statute labor and will improve our streets by laying down concrete walks, using tile drains in place of open or half covered ditches, and helping with trees. This is all right and proper, but while horses, cows, sheep, pigs, geese, &c., are allowed to come into the village for the night and break down the trees, and leave our streets worse than the average barnyard, it seems very foolish to try and fix up. The few milk cows would not cause much damage but the very large number of young cattle should be shut off.

—Messrs. Anderson & Skinner are agents for the Str. Rainbow and purpose to run fortnightly half day trips during the summer; the first was on June 10th.

—There is some talk of a concert and display of fireworks on Coronation Day It is a good thing so help it along.

OTONABEE.

The late David Henderson.

Mr. David D. Henderson enterde into rest on Thursday morning, June 10, at the family residence, lot 24, con. 8, Otonabee, Bright's disease, from which he had suffered for some time, was the cause of death. The deceased, who had been a successful farmer, was married in January, 1871, to Helen Brydon, who, with four remaining children, still survives him. The children are Walter, of Maple Creek, N.W.T., Susie, William and John at home. Of his brothers and sisters the survivors are Mrs. James Renwick, of Ashburnham, Mrs. A. Thompson, of Thornbury, Mrs. W. D. Johnston, of Otonabee, James E., of Grand Rapids, Mich., and John, Jane and Maggie, of the old homestead, Otonabee. Deceased was a member and office-bearer of Keene Presbyterian church. In politics he was a Reformer. He will be deeply mourned, having been a loving husband and highly esteemed by friends and neighbors. The Times extends its sincere sympathy to the bereaved family.

Inflamed Nose and Throat

And such diseases of the respiratory organs as Bronchitis, Weak Lungs, Cold in the Head, and Nasal Catarrh are treated with marvellous success on strictly scientific principles by Catarrhozone. The medicated vapor of Catarrhozone quickly traverses every air passage possible to be reached by any treatment. All soreness, pain, congestion and inflammation are at once dispelled and by means of the healing powers of Catarrhozone, the vitiated tissues are quickly restored. Where Catarrhozone is used, colds last only ten minutes, coughs half an hour, and Catarrh, Consumption Asthma and Bronchitis flee as from fire. A trial will convince anyone of the startling merit of Catarrhozone. Costs $1.00; small size 25c. At Druggists or Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

A Story of Bret Hart.

The London Daily Chronicle tells the following story about Bret Harte. It seems that during his early years he had an engagement to attend the opening of a new saloon in Market street, San Francisco. The interest did not begin till after 11 p.m., and Mr. Harte was late in getting back to The Chronicle. The night editor had gone, leaving word that Mr. Harte was to hand in his half-column to the foreman printer without editorial revision. Mr. Harte had taken particular pains with his copy, which was really funny. Beginning in grandiloquent terms he described the new premises accurately enough. Then he came on to the good cheer, then to more good cheer, his praise of the refreshments piling up stage by stage, till it wound up in incoherency. It was an exact portrayal of the stages of a man's mind passing from exhilaration to intoxication. Looking for his article next day Mr. Harte found half-a-column of descriptive matter as dull as ditchwater. He inquired. "Well, Mr. Harte," said the foreman, "I killed it. You must have had a terrible skinful last night. It's lucky the old man wasn't about when you got back, for if there's anything he's down on it's drink." Poor Bret Harte, who expected San Francisco to laugh over his little article, went sadly away—the more sadly as at that time of his life he was a teetotaler!

Blue Jackets Popular.

No wonder our bluejackets are popular, says a notice of a book recently published by Mr. Basil Thomson, relating incidents of travel in the Pacific islands. Mr. Thomson declares that if he were set the task of winning the confidence of suspicious and hostile natives he would ask for an escort of the first naval petty officers that came to hand, and consider the work done. Here is a charming story of how they won confidence:—"Returning from a walk late in the afternoon, we heard sounds of merry-making in the village square, and found the whole population sitting convulsed with laughter at an entertainment provided by their visitors. It appeared that the shore party, returning to their boat, had discovered a band of urchins playing catch with oranges, and seized upon the opportunity for teaching the new British subjects the British national game. With sticks for wickets and cocoanut butts for bats, they soon had the game going, and when we came up a boy of eight was bowling to a bearded engine-room artificer, who was going through the antics of clown-cricket, to the huge delight of the onlookers. The little boys positively wept when the boat came to carry away their new-found friends."

The King of the Tongans once told Mr. Thomson that it was because the English joke with the Tongans that they were such good friends, and he told him this lovely story in illustration. A French flagship arrived in one of the island's ports at the moment when H.M.S. Tauranga was there, and the natives wondered which of the two ships would be the first to acknowledge itself to be the inferior of the other. The English captain went first to the French ship, and so the natives said, "See, the Englishman admits his inferiority." But they did not speak thus on the next day. Eighty French soldiers landed, and also one English marine, who used to carry the letters to the postoffice. The French soldiers marched proudly in lines of four, and the natives thought the English marine would be abashed when he met them. What was their surprise to see the marine actually waiting for the French soldiers, and when they came up to him "he put himself at their head and marched so bravely in his red coat that the Tongans cried out, 'Lo, a King is approaching us with his bodyguard!'

"The face of the French officer was not good to look upon, for when he called upon his men to stamp the ground and let the marine go on, he also stamped the ground, and when they pressed forward to pass him he quickened his steps and kept with them as if he was indeed their leader. Nor was it better when they passed the guard-room and saw even the Tongan sentry dissolved in laughter, for the marine behaved as if he was too exalted to know his friends, save for a secret sign that he made to them with one eyelid. So they went on together to the boat. The rumor of this thing was carried throughout Tonga, and the people thought more of this marine than of the French Admiral and all his men."

Dipping Lambs.

Lambs usually need dipping when they are two or three months old, for the purpose of destroying ticks. Even the strong and vigorous ones have a few ticks about the head and neck, which retard the growth of the animal. For a small flock a common sized washtub or caldron will be large enough for the bath. In this pour a solution of steeped tobacco juice and powdered sulphur. Add sufficient cold water to bring the bath to a proper temperature. One part strong tobacco juice and two parts water, with a reasonable amount of sulphur, make a good bath, though one need not follow any rigid rules as to the proportions. Many use some sheep dip already prepared. To aid in saving the dip, provide a board two feet wide and six feet long, with narrow cleats nailed on each side. Let one end of this project over the tub while the other end should rest on some object a few inches higher.

In dipping lambs be careful to thoroughly saturate every part of the body except the face (the head and neck need special attention). Then lift it out onto the drainage board and squeeze the wool till most of the dip runs back into the tub. The tobacco soon kills ticks or drives them off, while the odor of the sulphur adheres to the wool for a long time. Ticks don't like it, and will stay away as long as it remains. The dipping should be done in pleasant weather, otherwise the lambs are liable to chill. We dip about June 1, when some of the lambs weigh sixty pounds or more. It takes a trifle over a quart of dip for each lamb. A quart and a half would be none too m[illegible] were it convenient to furnish tha[illegible] [illegible]ut by close economy can ge[illegible] [illegible]h less.—H. White, in [illegible]

Humor of the Hour.

A short time ago a well-known writer of London, remembering that he had never read the non-canonical books, went out in search of a copy, and in one bookshop after another drew blank. At last he went to his own particular newspaper shop, which also dealt in Bibles and light literature. "Have you the Apocrypha?" he asked. For a moment the young woman behind the counter was puzzled. Then, brightening, she said, "Is it a weekly or a monthly?"

Mark Twain is said by those who know him in his home life to be many things of excellence besides a humorist; among them, a model host, a loyal husband, a gallant framer of fine compliments. A friend who spent the evening in that family circle not long since tells this incident as apropos:—

When, after dinner, coffee had been served for three before an open fire, the conversation turned upon the subject of the author's critics. When Mrs. Clemens had grown vehement in her denunciation of those who had called her husband "selfish," he interrupted:

"But I am selfish, my dear. I will prove it to you and our visitor here. Mary"—calling to the servant—"close that door, please."

"Yes," said Mrs. Clemens, drawing up her chair a little closer to the fire, "let us keep out all the cold."

"Now, there you are," he added. "I was not afraid the cold would get in, but that some of our coziness would get out."—New York Times.

The Rev. Dr. Swallow, who has recently been very much in the eye of the world because of his trial before his fellow-Methodists on charges growing out of accusations against the late President McKinley, tells a story about George Alfred Townsend, who writes over the nom de plume of "Gath."

"What does that name mean?" Dr. Swallow was asked by a young lady of his parish.

"Why, the letters are the author's initials," answered the clergyman; "G. A. Townsend."

"But what does the H stand for?" the other persisted.

"That's where he is going to when he dies," came from the doctor.

The questioner was visibly impressed. "Is he such a very bad man?" she asked, almost in a whisper.

"Certainly not," replied Dr. Swallow. "The H stands for heaven."—New York Times.

A school-teacher put the following problem in arithmetic to his class:—

"If one horse can run a mile in one minute fifty-five seconds and another a mile in two minutes, how far would the first horse be ahead of the other at the end of a race of two miles?"

A scholar returned the question with the attached:—

"Please, sir, mother says I must never have anything to do with horseracing."

MOST WONDERFUL OF PIANO PLAYERS.

The Cecilian

There are many piano-players offered to the public—all said to be perfect. But after having played on the Cecilian Piano-Player it will be at once pronounced the one "Perfect" player The tone is such that people are charmed from the first note.

It is so simple in construction that anyone, without the ability but with the desire to play some of the most classical and difficult compositions of the greatest masters, finds no difficulty whatever when using the Cecilian.

It is completely under the control of the operator, responding to the slightest touch—and the tone can be moderated according as the player desires.

The power of individual expression in the Cecilian is really wonderful—astonishing people whenever it is heard

It has been endorsed by leading musicians in different parts of the country and is the delight of all who know it.

This piano-player is on daily exhibitiou at our handsome warerooms, and is worthy a visit from every lover of beautiful music.

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

Local Happenings Picked Up Here and There by the Times.

NOTE—The Times requests its readers to contribute items of news to its columns. Anything that is phoned or sent in writing to the office, of a nature suitable for publication, will be received and published.—Ed. Times.]

—Lindsay is to have a Carnegie library.

—The County Council will meet on Tuesday next.

—The public school examinations are now under way.

—Quite a number of Stony Lake cottages are now occupied.

—Bass and maskilonge fishing will begin on Monday in the upper lakes.

—The band will give their second open air concert this evening in Victoria Park.

—The members of St. George's church, Hastings, will run an excursion to Peterborough on Thursday next, by steamer Rainbow.

—Once again: How about celebrating Coronation Day in Peterborough? Let something be done at once. The great British Empire, of which we form a goodly part, does not crown a King every year.

—The Dominion Government has decided that June 26th, Coronation Day, is to be observed as a public holiday throughout the Dominion and the Governor-General has issued a proclamation to this effect.

—Hastings Star—One of our local hotelkeepers advertised in our last issue for a wheelbarrow which had been taken from the hotel barn, with the customary warning "save further trouble as he is known" attached. The morning after the paper was published two wheelbarrows were found in the hotel yard. Who says advertising does not pay?

Coronation Footwear

Mr. John Kylie, the enterprising Hunter street boot and shoe merchant has just received a fine line of the new Coronation boots and shoes. These goods are the newest and nobbiest in the market, and are of superior make. Mr. Kylie also gives attention to custom work as well as repairing. Call and see him.

Hurry up the Railway

We fear the delay in getting our Street Railway started will prevent a lot of business coming our way this year. Several excursions over the Grand Trunk intended for points down the river by steamer are holding back in anticipation of the completion of the railway. Once the road is completed picnic and excursion parties will be transferred from the station by the street railway to the boat below the locks. We hope our street railway friends will therefore lose no time, so that the public living on the line of the Grand Trunk may be accommodated this season.

Gentlemen Who are Bald

Or have thin hair, should call on Prof. Dorenwend, at the Oriental hotel, on Saturday, June 14th, until 4 p.m., and see his wonderful devices in toupees, and wigs worn on over 65,000 heads. SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

NOTE—The Times requests its readers to furnish the paper with items of a personal and social nature either by phone or in writing.—Ed. Times.]

—Miss Ida Jackson, town, is visiting friends in Emily.

—Mr. Wm. Bamford will leave town Saturday to assume his new duties.

—Mr. D. W. Dumble, K.C., has been spending a few days at his Stony Lake cottage.

—Miss Barron, Toronto, returned home yesterday, after spending a week with Mrs. C. B. McAllister, at "The Pines."

—Mrs. Charles Matthews with Miss Marion and Miss Helen, are visiting with Mrs. T F Matthews, Water street.

—Mrs. Jas. Mills and daughter, Miss Majorie, of Norwich, are visiting Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Cressman, Brock street.

—Miss Josephine Delaire, London street, returned yesterday from Rochester, N. Y., where she has been visiting relatives for several months.

—The Hon. Senator and Mrs. McHugh, of Lindsay, were in town yesterday attending the funeral of the late Mrs. Edward Phelan.

—Mr. J. H. McClellan returned last night from the annual meeting of the English Church Synod, at Toronto, to which he was a delegate from All Saints' Church, Peterborough.

—Mr. Percy Campbell, who carried off honors in first year classics, and Miss Maggie Hamilton, who won honors in first year modern languages, at the Toronto University examinations, are receiving the congratulations of their friends.

Grocers' Early Closing

We are pleased to note that a movement is on foot to close the grocery stores at six p.m. every night, except of course Saturdays, and evenings preceding holidays. The leading grocers, it is said, are almost unanimous in favor of such a movement. The trouble, however, is in getting what is known as the smaller "corner" grocery to come into line. If many of these can not be induced to shut up their shops the movement may fall through in consequence. If the purchasing community would assist by doing their buying before six o'clock there would be little difficulty experienced.

Laid at Rest

The remains of the late Mrs. Phelan were followed to their last resting place yesterday morning by a large number of sorrowing relatives and friends. Services were held in St. Peter's Cathedral, where Solemn Requiem High Mass was celebrated with His Lordship Bishop O'Connor in attendance. The Mass was celebrated by Rev. Father Phelan, son of the deceased. Rev. Father Scanlan, of Grafton performed the offices of Deacon and Rev. Father F. O'Sullivan, of Lindsay, those of Sub-deacon. Rev. Dr. O'Brien was Master-of-Ceremonies. In the Sanctuary were seated Rev. Father Nolan, Redemptorist, of Erie, Pa., Rev. Father Fitzpatrick, of Ennismore, Rev Father McColl, Rev. Father John O'Brien and Rev. Father O'Connell of the Cathedral Clergy. Letters of regret at being unable to be present were read from Rev. Father Murray, Cobourg; Rev. Father Scollard, North Bay; Rev. Father Kelly, Trout Creek; Rev. Father Collins, Bracebridge; Rev. Father McCloskey, Campbellford; Rev. Father Lynch, Port Hope and Rev. Dr. Teefey, of St. Michael's College, Toronto. At the close of the Mass His Lordship Bishop O'Connor gave absolution. Interment took place in the Roman Catholic Cemetery. The pallbearers were: Messrs. S. Belcher, H. LeBrun, B. Morrow, T. Fortye, P. P. Young and James Kearney.

Across the Continent

"The Passenger Department of the Canadian Pacific Railway has issued a very pretty folder entitled "Across the Continent by the Imperial Limited." This splendid fast service will begin on Sunday, June 15, and will be continued during the summer. The Imperial Limited will leave Montreal Sundays, Wednesdays and Fridays, and will make the run of 2,906 miles to Vancouver in ninety-seven hours. The Imperial Limited trains, both in their design and construction, it is believed, approach nearer perfection in railway equipment than anything previously reached. The cars are solidly built, are wide-vestibuled throughout, and in their arrangement and appointment it is apparent that the comfort of the traveler has been aimed at in the most marked degree. Each train consists of two or more palace sleepers of the most modern type, a tourist sleeper, a dining car and a baggage car.

A DOURO WEDDING

Nuptials of Mr. T. J. Forsyth, a Miss Lottie Kavanagh

At St. Joseph's Church, Douro, on Tuesday morning, a very interesting wedding took place, when Miss Lottie Kavanagh, daughter of Mr. Richard Kavanagh, was married to Mr. T. J. Forsythe, of Dummer, Rev. Father Kelly, officiating.

The charming bride was attired in a becoming gown of castor taffeta cloth, trimmed with silk and applique and wore a white picture hat. Her boquet was composed of white carnations. Miss Mary Moher, of Peterborough, prettily attired in a fawn suit and cream picture hat, and carrying a boquet of pink carnations, performed the duties of bridesmaid, and Mr. S. J. Grisdale acted as best man. After the nuptial knot was securely tied the wedding party drove to the residence of the brides' father, where everything was in keeping with the festive occasion. A sumptuous wedding dinner was partaken of by the guests, who numbered about seventy, after which dancing and other amusements were engaged in. Many presents both useful and costly testified to the popularity of the bride. The happy couple left in the evening for Norwood, which is to be their future home. The Times extends its heartiest congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Forsythe, and wishes them abundant happiness and prosperity.

FARMER'S BIG PIC-NIC

Jubilee Point the Scene of a Large Gathering Yesterday

The Entire Fleet of Steamers Taxed to the Utmost to Carry the Crowd—A Splendid Day's Outing—Some Good Speeches

The farmers' annual pic-nic to Jubilee Point yesterday was a great success, an exceedingly pleasant as well as profitable day being spent. The pic-nic was held under the auspices of the Farmers' Institutes of East Durham, East and West Peterborough, and East and West Northumberland.

The steamer City of Peterborough left the Peterborough wharf at 8 a.m. with a large number on board, followed half an hour later by the North Star. The trip down the river was delightful in the extreme, and was thoroughly enjoyed. The steamer Beaver brought a large number from Hastings, while the Water Lily and Rainbow also added their quota. After satisfying the appetite, whetted by the delightful sail, the party proceeded to enjoy themselves. The younger class hastened to the dancing pavillion, and indulged in the hazy waltz, while their friends took in addresses, which were delivered by prominent speakers on topics dear to the hearts of the agriculturist.

The chair was ably filled by Mr. M. E. Elliott, of Smith, who made a lengthly and stirring speech on the growing and cultivation of the sugar beet. Mr. T. E. Bradburn, of Peterborough, was then called upon and dealt at some length with the advantages this district offered for the sugar beet industry and the establishment of a factory here.

Mr. Andrew Elliott, Galt; Duncan Anderson, Rugby; Richard Honey and Mr. O'Riley, of Norwood followed and expressed their views on the question and the advisability of erecting a factory in this district.

Prof Harcourt, of the O.A.C. Guelph, arrived in Peterborough on the noon train and drove to Hiawatha and was paddled over to Jubilee Point but arrived too late to address the gathering.

During the afternoon a programme of athletic sports was run off, which excited much interest and amusement.

At 4.15 the Water Lily moved for home, followed by the other steamers in regular order. Much credit is due Mr. Wm. Collins, the efficient secretary, for the way he performed his duties. Mr. Collins spared neither time or expense in making the pic-nic a success. Mr. Dan Foley, the manager of Jubilee Point Hotel, is also deserving of unstinted praise for the satisfactory way in which he handled the crowd; while Capt Lane, of the City of Peterborough, and Mrs. Lane, the stewardess, also deserve the thanks of those who travelled by that fine boat.

CHAMBERLAIN SPEAKS ON PEACE TO COLONIALS

Britain's Hopes Fulfilled and Her Hands Unfettere

LORD KITCHENER REPORTS FIGHTING AT FRASERBURG

Several Killed in Engagement After Peace Had Been Concluded

Special to The Times.

London, June 12.—Colonial Secretary Chamberlain spoke this evening at the Corona Club, which is a gathering of eminent representatives of the British colonies. He said that through the peace settlement the British had obtained all they had hoped for and their hands in the future would not be fettered. The Government, he added, had been generous to its late opponents in regard to everything concerning personal and private matters, but had given up nothing in substance. It had done nothing to prejudice the ultimate solution of the South African question, to which it looked as its justification for the war. Continuing, Mr. Chamberlain said:—"I am sure we are delighted by the way these terms are accepted by our late opponents. If those feelings prevail we are at the opening of an era of prosperity such as that country has never known."

KILLED IN FIGHT AFTER PEACE.

London, June 12.—A casualty list issued by the War Office shows that four men were killed in a fight 36 miles east of Fraserburg, Cape Colony, on June 3, three days after the conclusion of peace. Gen Kitchener cables that since his last despatch the total number of arms surrendered by the Boers has been 2,648.

MUST SURRENDER BY JULY 10.

Cape Town, June 12.—An extraordinary issue of the Official Gazette published to-day fixes July 10 as the limit in which Boers or rebels who surrender will receive the benefit of the peace terms. All rebels surrendering before that date will be merely disfranchised for life, and will not be subject to trial or punishment. Exception is made in the case of field cornets and justices of the peace, who may be tried and fined or imprisoned, but they will not be executed.

Rebels who hold out after July 10 will be subject to the extreme penalty for high treason.

LEYDS IS SILENT.

Brussels, June 12.—Dr. Leyds, the Boer representatives, absolutely declines to see interviewers. Affairs at the former Transvaal Legation are in a state of chaos. Preparations are being made to remove the archives.

SURRENDERS AT MAFEKING.

Pretoria, June 12.—Commandant Kemp and a number of Boers have surrendered at Mafeking. Commandant Kemp says that he is reconciled to the new situation.

KILLED ON THE TRANSPORT.

Ottawa, Ont., June 12.—A message was received by the Governor-General from the Casualty Department to-day stating that Melvin Gextro, of the 4th Canadian Mounted Rifles, had been accidentally killed while at sea on board the troopship Winnifredian, on June 6th. He enlisted at Newcastle, N.B.

The same cable states that R. C. Redswell and I. M. Sale, of the 2nd Canadian Mounted Rifles, were dangerously ill of enteric fever, the former at Pietermaritzburg and the latter at Klerksdorp. Redswell enlisted at Medicine Hat, N.W.T. Sale enlisted at Revelstoke, B.C.

SANG "AULD LANG SYNE."

London, June 12.—A despatch from Lord Kitchener, dated from Pretoria yesterday, announces that Von Tonder's and Van Heerden's commands, having with them 400 rifles, have surrendered near Ventersdorp camp, south-western Transvaal. At a concert subsequently, the burghers sang "Auld Lang Syne," and "God Save the King."

Further surrenders of 610 rifles and 26,000 rounds of ammunition were also announced.

Britain and the Empire

London, June 12. — The Mail and Empire says: In spite of a spirited show of resistance from the Liberals, as voiced by Lord Rosebery, a decided drift away from the policy of free trade is observable in the sentiment of Great Britain, though the direction which it seems to be taking is toward protection for the empire rather than the kingdom. It is allying itself with the scheme of imperial federation which shall bind the colonies to the mother country with closer ties of commercial interest, and thereby contribute to the political solidarity of the widely extended empire upon whose flag the sun never sets and whose drum beat is heard around the world.

Suppose something like a British Zollverien should be established, encouraging commercial intercourse between the members of the imperial federation and discriminating against other nations, a policy of protection for the empire as a whole, with free trade or liberal reciprocity between its parts. What would be the effect upon Great Britain and what upon the rival nations? The British empire would take its place among protective nations, giving first thought to its extended domestic interests, and seeking foreign markets for a surplus over the needs of its own subjects, pursuing the policy that has been derided in England ever since the triumph of Cobdenism.

Items of News

Wilkesbarre, Pa., June 12.—It was learned at the office of the Lehigh Valley Coal Company to-day that an attempt was made on the life of Superintendent Thomas Thomas of the William A. colliery of the Lehigh Valley Company at Old Forge, north of this city last night. Crowds have been gathering twice daily on a hill overlooking the colliery and stoning the men at work within the enclosure. The day and night superintendents are taken to and from the place on a locomotive. Last night the night superintendent reached the colliery safely. Soon after Superintendent Thomas came out. When about 200 yards from the breaker he says several men in ambush fired at the locomotive, but it was travelling rapidly, and was soon out of range. The officials say about ten shots were fired. The Miners Union is doing everything possible to have its idle men keep the peace.

WAS HANGED JUNE 10.

St. Petersburg, June 12. — It became known to-day that Hirsch Lekert, who made an unsuccessful attempt on the night of May 18 to assassinate Lieut.-General Von Wahl, Governor of Vilna, was hanged on Tuesday, June 10.

As Governor Von Wahl was leaving the circus at Vilna, midnight, May 18, Lekert wounded him with a revolver in the hand and foot. Gen. Von Wahl was formerly chief of police of St. Petersburg, and had a great deal of trouble with the students.

Boston is Their Mecca

Boston, Mass., June 12.—Next week will be communion week with the Christian Scientists. Hundreds of people from all over the country will attend the services in the mother church in Boston. Several hundred have arrived here, and at least 4,000 more are expected. Mrs. Mary Baker Eddy, the founder of Christian Science, will be here for Sunday's services and will also take part, if her health permits, in the annual meetings to be held during the week in the mother church and also in Tremont Temple, where public meetings on a big scale are to be held.

Mgr. Corrigan's Successor

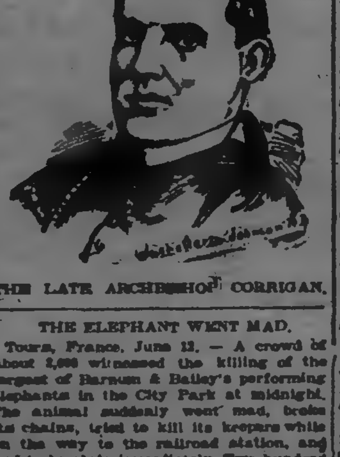
Nominating a Prelate to fill the Vacancey

Bishop Farley and Mc Donnell one Likely Subjects

Special to The Times.

New York, June 12.—The Bishops of the Roman Catholic province of New York are assembled today for the purpose of selecting three names to be forwarded to Rome from which possibly the successor of the late Archbishop Corrigan of New York, may be made. The prelates who attended the meeting held at the archiepiscopal residence included Bishops McFaul of Trenton, Gabriels, of Ogdensburg, Burke of Albany, McQuaid of Rochester and O'Connor of Newark. The conference was preceded by religious services in the cathedral. Bishop Farley celebrated solemn requiem pontifical mass, and Bishop McQuaid preached the sermon.

While the Bishops are pledged to secrecy, the belief exists that the three candidates are Bishop Farley, Bishop McDonnell and Vicar General Mooney. It is doubtful if the result will be authoritatively learned until fall, when an official announcement will be forthcoming from Rome.



THE LATE ARCHBISHOP CORRIGAN.

THE ELEPHANT WENT MAD.

Tours, France, June 12. — A crowd of about 2,000 witnessed the killing of the largest of Barnum & Bailey's performing elephants in the City Park at midnight. The animal suddenly went mad, broke its chains, tried to kill its keepers while on the way to the railroad station, and had to be slain immediately. Two hundred men tugged at the rope which strangled it.

Managua, Nicaragua, June 12. — The Momotombo Volcano is now quiet. It is only emitting vapors.

Now that the Boer war is settled, England can once again turn to her eternal job of pacifying the Emerald Isle.

CANADIAN ROUTE SUPERIOR TO SUEZ

The Hong Kong Contingent Pleased with the Great Imperial Highway

CHINA TO ENGLAND, 32 DAYS

If Necessary, However, this Time Could be Reduced to Twenty-Six

Special to The Times.

Montreal June 12.—Major Chapman, commanding the contingent from Hong Kong, Captain James and Lieut. Armstrong called on Mr. Robert Kerr, passenger traffic manager of the C.P.R., this morning, and expressed themselves as highly gratified with the Canadian route from the East. One of the officers had been already by the Suez route, and stated that the Canadian route was much superior.

Mr. Kerr informed them that they would land in Liverpool thirty-two days from the date of their sailing from Hong Kong, but if necessary that time could be very greatly curtailed, in fact to twenty-six days, which compares very favourably with the Suez route, the shortest time on record being thirty-three days. The sea voyage occupied fifteen days, the Empress calling at four Chinese ports en route. Five days were consumed in crossing the continent, and eight days is calculated from here to Liverpool. Besides, they stopped off at Calgary and Winnipeg, and will spend three days in Montreal.

TOOK A SPECIAL TRAIN

Returned Klondiker Didn't Want to Wait Three Hours at a Station

Special to The Times.

Indianapolis, June 12.—When gold was discovered in the Klondike a tinner named Frank Levy went to the "diggings" and opened a saloon. He sold whisky at from $1.50 to $3 a drink and invested his profits advantageously and returned a short time ago a millionaire. Yesterday he was visiting friends in Washington and when he got ready to return home he found it was three hours before the train was due. He immediately chartered a special train to take him to Petersburg, a distance of 30 miles, rather than wait for the regular train.

BODY RECOVERED

Lad Who was Drowned at Hull Under Queer Circumstances

Hull, Que., June 12.—Word was received in Hull yesterday morning of the finding of the body of Benjamin Richer, the 15 year old lad who was thrown into the Little Nation River above St. Andre Avelin, on May 23rd, by Joseph Deschatelets. The latter was committed in Hull yesterday to stand his trial for murder. The body of his victim was found about 100 yards from the spot where he was thrown into the river by Deschatelets. The river was dragged at the time of the drowning, but no sight of the body was secured and it was concluded that it was swept out of reach by the rapid current. It was found last evening pinned in amongst rocks and logs. The news was received by Mr. H. Adelard Fortier, deputy crown prosecutor.

THE COUNTY COURT

The Ontario Bank Won its Suit Against Moore

From Friday's Times.

The case of the Ontario Bank vs Moore which has occupied the County Court since Tuesday afternoon was concluded Wednesday night, when the jury gave a verdict in favor of the Ontario Bank.

Much interest has been taken in the case by our local professional men, as it was conceded that a vital principle of banking was at stake — that of the reliability of documents and books. The main facts were that the defendant, Jas. Moore, in April, 1900, deposited $300 in the Ontario Bank, Peterborough; in May, 1900, Mrs. Moore applied at the bank for the money, but was informed that her husband's signature would be necessary to its withdrawal. The teller drew out a cheque and made a mark showing where it should be signed, and handed it to Mrs. Moore to procure the signature. Shortly afterwards Mrs. Moore again appeared at the bank with the cheque, not signed, however, but endorsed. The bank officials thinking it was the evident wish of Mr. Moore that his wife should get the money, paid Mrs. Moore $150, which she said was all that they then required on a cheque signed by Mrs. Moore for her husband and herself, to which was attached the endorsed cheque of Mr. Moore. In October, 1901, Mr. Moore called at the bank and asked for his $300, which through an error was paid to him a second time on his assurance that he had never drawn any part of his deposit. Upon discovering the error the bank immediately wrote Mr. Moore, when both he and Mrs. Moore denied the signatures of the cheque he endorsed and of the cheque she signed.

This was the ground of the action to recover $150 wrongfully paid defendant twice.

The bank proved the genuineness of several signatures of both Mr. and Mrs. Moore and then tendered expert evidence to prove that the disputed cheques were signed by the same parties. Mr. W. H. Shaw, an expert from Toronto, was the principal witness in this regard, and his evidence was demonstrated by crayon drawings before the court.

The bank in this case did not express any wrong intention on the part of Mr. and Mrs. Moore, but the evidence showed in several instances where the memory of both was at serious fault. This was the view evidently taken by the jury—that they had drawn the money and had forgotten the fact.

The bank was represented by their solicitor, Mr. A. P. Poussette, K. C. The defendant was represented by Mr. Sherry, Norwood.

THE BOERS ARE BITTER TO THE EUROPEANS

Say French and Germans Encouraged Them to Prolong War--Lynch makes Irish Weary

Special to The Times.

Pretoria, June 12.—In all, 10,225 Boers have surrendered up to date. Many are youngsters of 11 years old and upward. The majority of them are under 30, though some of the burghers who have surrendered are septuagenarians.

Reports from all the districts say that the burghers are increasingly friendly. The only bitterness observable among the leading Boers here is against France and Germany. They declare the war was protracted unnecessarily, owing to hopes held out by the French and German press. Some of the Boers are so incensed that they have expressed the hope that some day they will fight on the side of the British against one of these powers.

The anticipated friction between the surrendered Boers and their former comrades of the National scouts has not materialized to any extent.

The Boers admit that they received ammunition through Portuguese territory.

MADE THE IRISH WEARY

tle sympathy from the Irish party, the members of which were disgusted by his letter to the Speaker of the House of Commons, apologizing for the part he took in the Boer struggle. The Irish party knows nothing of his plans or motives to challenging arrest, and regards his action with some doubt. It has been suggested that he was in communication with the British Government before he arrived.

LEYDS WINDING UP.

London, June 13.—The Brussels correspondent of the Times says the late Transvaal agency in Rue de Livourne will shortly be rented as a private dwelling. Dr. Leyds is now busy with the final work of liquidation. The rumor is untrue that the Boer delegates to Europe or the personal of the late agency are about to take the oath of allegiance before the British Minister.

Items of Interest

LOST IN A STORM.

East London, Cape Colony, June 13.—The Norweigian bark Atbara, from Hamburg March 18 for East London; the Swedish bark Aurora, from Gefle, October 15, for East London, and the German bark Eliz Link, from Bremerhaven, about February 1, for East London, have been wrecked during a heavy southeast gale. All the crew of the Atbara were drowned except the captain, who was ashore. The crews of the two vessels were saved. The coast is strewn with wreckage and portions of the barks' cargoes.

BEHIND IN MINISTERIAL SUPPORT.

Sarnia, June 13.—The London Conference of the Methodist Church raised $129,894 for ministrial support last year, which left a deficit to be provided out of the Sustentation Fund of $4,000. The total value of church property is $1,941,633, and the total debt $300,000.

A suggestion was made that each conference have a man to devote himself to mission work within its boundaries. The proposal was sent on to the General Conference.

NAUGHTON ALIVE AGAIN

Chicago, June 12.—A Chicago man, believed to have been among the dead buried on a Transvaal battlefield, has been heard from. To his mother and sisters, who have mourned him as dead, his appearance is like a resurrection. When the ambulance corps which left Chicago for the Transvaal returned two years ago, Thomas Naughton was among the men of the corps reported dead. This report was accepted as final until last night, when a cable message from United States Consul Hollis to John T. Keating, president of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, brought the news that Naughton was one of the Chicago men now at Lorenzo Marques awaiting funds to secure passage home.

SHIP'S CREW IS MISSING.

Vancouver, B.C., June 13.—The steamer St. Mary arrived at Perth, Australia, with three men of the Dutch bark Geertruida Gerarda, which left Java on March 22nd in ballast for New Castle. The ballast shifted, and the bark was thrown on her beam ends, all the crew, with the exception of the three men rescued, left the bark in boats. The boats have not been heard of since.

SPENCER DENIES THE REPORT.

Montreal, June 12.—Mr. C. W. Spencer, general superintendent of the Eastern Division of the C.P.R., denies that report from Winnipeg that he is negotiating with Messrs. Mackenzie & Mann to assume the management of the Canadian Northern Railway.

BREAD FAMINE IN WOODSTOCK

Woodstock, June 11.—There is a bread famine on in Woodstock. It was in its most acute from Saturday night, when not a loaf of bread could be had for love or money. The latter was freely offered by disappointed residents. The Hamilton Conference is the cause of it. The descent of three hundred and fifty bread eaters on the city has done the trick. Yesterday's supply of bread was limited, and some of the bakers had only one loaf where two were wanted. The scarcity of the staff of life has had the effect of making the busy housewife get out the "bake pan" and manufacture biscuits, and there has been a great run on sodas.

LOST BY FIRE AT WHEELING

Wheeling, W. Va., June 12.—The plants of the Exley-Watkins Catsup and Preserve Company, the Wheeling Mattress Company, and the Acme Box Company, were burned to-day. Three buildings, 500,000 feet of lumber, two box cars and several stables and buildings were consumed. The loss is $150,000, partly covered by insurance. About 500 persons are thrown out of employment.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

A Protestant clergyman was very anxious to introduce some new hymnbooks into his church and arranged with his clerk that the latter was to give out the notice immediately after the sermon. The clerk, however, had a notice of his own with reference to the baptism of infants to give out; accordingly at the close of the sermon he rose and announced that "All those who had children whom they wished baptized were to send their names to the clerk at once." The clergyman, who was deaf, assumed that the clerk was giving out the hymnbook notice, and immediately rose and said: "And for the benefit of those who haven't any, I would like to say that they may be obtained at the vestry any day from three to four o'clock; the ordinary little ones at twenty-five cents each, and special ones with red backs at fifty cents."

RESETTLING SOUTH AFRICA

Britons Being Rushed to the New Colonies to Repair War's Ravages

London, June 12—Even before peace with the Boers was officially announced England had begun to carry out her plans for resettling South Africa with her own people. Months ago, under official promoting, the immigration associations of London set about bearing a hand with the settlement problem.

The Colonial Immigration Society began it by sending out a delegation of several hundred women to Cape Colony, for distribution at various points where female help could command high wages and loyal English feminine influence could do the most good.

The Scottish Settlers' Association, an organization originally formed in Rhodesia, under the patronage and with the assistance of Cecil Rhodes himself, has taken up the work almost as quickly and even on a greater scale. Four months ago a band of 100 Scotch farmers and laborers was sent out to the Orange River Colony to settle there on the land vacated by burghers.

The association was in such a hurry to get its men on the ground that it sent them a little too soon. When they arrived in the new colony it was found that local conditions were hardly ripe for their reception, and Mr. Rhode's assistance had to be sought. He solved the problem by providing the Scotchmen with grants of land from his own farms in Cape Colony.

Now that peace has been declared, preparations for extending the scope of the work are being made. The capital of the association has been raised to half a million dollars and English and Scotch agriculturists are to be rushed to South Africa to people the new colonies, to read just the balance of population there and, by outnumbering the Boers, to render impossible even the faintest chance of a recurrence of a rebellion against British authority.

COLONIAL AID.

Lord Salisbury and the statesmen of England have been moved on many occasions recently to speak of their appreciation of the assistance given during the South African war. Giving credit to colonial troops is right. The colonies have proven that they are not only dependencies but that they can render valuable aid to the mother land when an emergency arises. They have demonstrated to the world that when England goes to war she is backed by the colonies who can furnish her with men who can ride and shoot and endure and stand up against the fire of the enemy. Better soldiers were not on the field in the South African war than those of Canada and Australia. They displayed courage and tact, and when driven to it showed they could put up a stiff fight against tremendous odds. The young volunteers excelled their comrades of the permanent English army because they were fighting on account of the love they bore Great Britain while their comrades of the permanent corps worked as a matter of business.

In dealing with the subject the Montreal Star says: "The Empire will be much the stronger for the consolidation of South Africa. The removal of the Transvaal oligarchy from the flanks of our African possessions will leave us far freer to guard our interests elsewhere. But much as that will do to better the position of the Empire, the patent and undeniable fact that the great self-governing colonies are to be hereafter considered as a part of the military resources of the British people, will strengthen our position in the world immensely more. Britain's Colonies are neither burdens nor responsibilities in the light of these new conditions but allies and the sources of military reinforcement."

Across the Continent

The Passenger Department of the Canadian Pacific Railway has issued a very pretty folder entitled "Across the Continent by the Imperial Limited." This splendid fast service will begin on Sunday, June 15, and will be continued during the summer. The Imperial Limited will leave Montreal Sundays, Wednesdays and Fridays, and will make the run of 2,906 miles to Vancouver in ninety-seven hours. The Imperial Limited trains, both in their design and construction, it is believed, approach nearer perfection in railway equipment than anything previously reached. The cars are solidly built, are wide-vestibuled throughout, and in their arrangement and appointment it is apparent that the comfort of the traveler has been aimed at in the most marked degree. Each train consists of two or more palace sleepers of the most modern type, a tourist sleeper, a dining car and a baggage car.

MOUNT PELEE.

The newspaper reports of the greatest disaster the world has ever seen, caused by the overflow of the volcano at Mount Pelee have been exaggerated in many instances. This has been discovered by scientists who have been hunting for news about the crater in question It was said that the eruption blew off the whole top of the volcano; that the topography of the island had been changed; that molten matter poured from the crater, and that, in fact, there had been a cataclysm which had made Pelee unrecognizable by those who were familiar with its shape.

Professor Heilprin, who was sent to Martinique by the National Geographical Society of the United States, has been all around the crater and he has failed to find many of the phenomena reported by the correspondents. He says it is positively known that there has been no flow of molten matter from the crater; that there has been no subsidence of the mountain; that the height of Mount Pelee is unchanged; that the crater does not contain a cylinder cone; and that there has been no cataclysm and no topographical alteration of the country.

"Look at that bicycle," said a lady as she identified a machine in a cloakroom, and saw that it had been badly knocked about and was quite useless for riding purposes.

"Yes, ma'am, I've been looking at it," said the official.

"Why, it is all smashed to pieces!"

"Yes, ma'am."

"Well, what do you propose to do about it?"

"I'll report to the foreman, ma'am, and he'll report to the station master, the station master to the general manager, and he to the board of directors, and in three or four years a solicitor will call upon you to ask you why you didn't travel with your bicycle in a properly made case. That is the way we do."—London Answers.

"Henry!" said Mrs. Enpeck in a tone of voice that was meant to command attention.

"Yes, my dear," meekly answered Henry.

"I'm actually ashamed of you," said the strenuous half of the aggregation. "Are you aware that you deliberately yawned while Mrs. Neighbors was here this evening?"

"Of course I am, my dear," replied the unhappy man. "You certainly didn't expect me to sit all evening without opening my mouth, did you?"—Chicago News.

Russell Sage, so often represented in the newspapers as a man who wears a cheap suit, eats apples for lunch, and with no time for anything but the making and amassing of money, has another side to his character. He has been known, more than once, to give to charity; he can appreciate a good joke, and has even been known to make one.

A friend called to see him a few days ago, and in the few minutes he remained incidentally asked the financier his opinion of Cecil Rhodes' will.

Mr. Sage replied that he did not consider Rhodes' idea of the unification of the English-speaking peoples a practical one, and that if any alliance came about between the United States and Great Britain it would not be for sentimental reasons, but rather through commercial and financial interests.

"Then, Mr. Sage," said his questioner, "you think if any closer political relations are established between John Bull's monarchy and Columbia they will be the result of great industrial schemes engineered by such men as J. Pierpont Morgan?"

"Yes—what one might call it a Morganatic marriage," chuckled Uncle Russell.—New York Times.

PETERBOROUGH, JUNE 14, 1902

THE NORTHWEST PROVINCES

There is an influx of population going on in the Northwest which will have consequences of the first importance. The province of Quebec is a member of confederation, but Quebec has insisted upon a separate nationality which will not be merged in the general population. We need not enlarge upon the political and social significance of this attitude, but it is the Hon. Mr. Tarte who tells us frankly that this separated people, living under conditions which make for a remarkable fecundity, will, before long, become a majority throughout the Dominion. The prediction would be fulfilled were it not for what is happening just now in the Northwest. There is no longer any doubt about it—the western provinces are being filled up by English-speaking people from the United States and England. In the course of time, these fresh young provinces will become powerful; they will dictate the policy of the country; they will hold the balance of power by reason of numbers and wealth and influence. We have in the Northwest, a considerable number of foreigners who will need some time for assimilation, although ultimately they will speak the English tongue, and become British citizens in texture as well as in name, but the movement from the United States and the Old Country is of what might be called ready made citizens—men and women who are ready for all our institutions, who understand the genius of the British constitution—[illegible] a departure which will be fruitful of consequences. This movement is bound to grow; the country will be thickly populated, and we shall find, in time, that permanence will be given to the the British idea in our customs, laws and aspirations. We desire all the provinces to grow in wealth and numbers, but we hail this new movement as guaranteeing conditions which have, apparently, been threatened by certain alleged leaders of our French-Canadian friends, who frankly avow their vision of a great country which shall express the French ideal from the Atlantic to the Pacific. It will neither be Quebec nor Ontario which shall dictate the policy or the legislation of this country—it will be the giant provinces in the west whose wealth and numbers shall overshadow the older members of confederation. This movement will be watched with interest.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

John Bull will now proceed to sew up the hole in his pocket.

* * * *

The rumor is revived that the German Emperor may come to the United States next year. The wish is father to the thought in American social circles.

* * * *

The generosity of England in dealing with the Boers will apparently have the effect of making the Boer leaders England's best friends in South Africa.

* * * *

The number of Boer prisoners in British hands has been exaggerated. Counting those in St. Helena, Bermuda, South Africa and elsewhere the total number is officially stated to be [illegible], of whom [illegible] are under 16, and [illegible] over 60 years of age. Naturally these are heartily glad that the war is over, especially that the exiles will soon be restored to their native land and their families. There is also said to be great rejoicing in the concentration camps among the women and children.

Poor Oom Paul! This man has set on his glory and there is none so poor as to do him reverence. He cajoled his own people and lied to them and deceived them, and in the hour of danger he ran away with all the money he could lay hands on. He spent [illegible] in bribing newspapers and in the propagation of an anti-British sentiment in Europe and America, and though he undoubtedly accomplished something in this particular, for it is always easier to foment suspicion and distrust than it is to allay hatred; but he has come to the length of his tether at last and he is alone and deserted and his whilom friends are now deriding or making sport of him. His condition is infinitely worse than of ex-President Steyn, as the latter stuck to the ship till the very last, and when he could fight no longer he gave up his sword like a brave though beaten man, and he will carry with honor to his grave the respect of his enemies as well as the love of his friends. No wonder poor old Kruger is speechless.

Labor is making bold demands upon capital all over this continent at the present writing. The country is prosperous; trade is brisk; great corporations are making money; labor takes note, and reminds capital that profits are only possible through the co-operation of the workingman, who has found himself compelled to pay from fifteen to twenty per cent more for his necessaries than he was in the habit of doing two years ago. Labor asks for higher wages, and labor strikes when the demand is refused. And labor strikes with great promptitude, and is not afraid to stay out; and at this moment many important industries have been brought to a standstill through this uncompromising attitude. And the experience is that labor is disposed to be as tyrannous as capital, if not more so. Labor societies are officered by men who are not noted for sagacity or a judicial frame of mind. The head orders a strike, often without sufficient thought; the men turn out; there is a dead silence over vast spaces where formerly the wheels of trade and industry hummed pleasantly; there will be suffering and want and probably violence, and in the end, after an enormous waste of money, the men will go back at the old rate. Not always, but this is often the case. And in any case the strike is a savage protest.

The Political Situation

London, June 8.—The recount in the East Middlesex election case conducted before Judge Edward Elliott, was concluded this morning, and resulted in Dr. Routledge being declared elected by 21 majority over Captain Thomas E. Robson. It was found that, in two Westminster divisions, Nos. 6 and 10, the deputy returning officer, through ignorance, had numbered all the ballots on the back, and counsel for Capt. Robson claimed that these should all be thrown out. This would have given Robson about 20 majority. Judge Elliott, however, decided not to disfranchise the 224 electors in these divisions, and the ballots were counted, thus electing the Liberal candidate, as stated. The argument in the case was brief.

GROSS MAJORITY REDUCED.

Welland, June 7.—The recount in Welland reduces the majority of Gross (Liberal) from 121 to 112.

TIE IN NORTH PERTH.

Stratford, June 7.—The recount of the votes in the recent election in North Perth is taking place at the Court House here to-day before Judge Barron. A. B. Aylesworth, K.C., and B. T. Harding represent Mr. John Brown (Liberal) and R. E. A. DuVernet and James Steele represent Mr. Monteith (Conservative.) Up to adjournment for lunch, the Stratford votes had been gone over, with the result that the Judge allowed four votes for Monteith that had been rejected by the deputy returning officers and five for Brown, and threw out one vote that had been counted for Monteith. This leaves the court a tie so far.

IN WEST HURON.

Goderich, June 7.—In West Huron recount on adjournment at 6 o'clock, Wingham, Blyth and Ashfield, and East Wawanosh Townships, had been completed, with a gain of one vote to each candidate. The remaining places have 15 spoiled and rejected ballots to consider.

BRUNET PLEADS GUILTY.

Montreal, June 7.—Arthur Brunet pleaded guilty to-day to ballot-stuffing and will be sentenced on Tuesday.

WHO SHALL NOT VOTE

To the Editor of The Times:

Sir,—Will you please answer the following, through the columns of your valuable paper:

1.—What are the qualifications of candidates to the Legislative Assembly?

2.—Who are disqualified from voting?

3.—Are Indians permitted to vote?

Thanking you in advance, I am, etc.,

A VOTER.

Ans.—1 No qualifications in real estate are necessary.

2. Those who shall not vote are: Judges, Officers of Customs, Clerks of the Peace, County Crown Attorneys, Registrars, Sheriffs, Deputy Sheriffs, Deputy Clerks of the Crown, Crown Timber and Land Agents, Postmasters in cities and towns, Stipendiary Magistrates, Police Magistrates in cities having a population over 30,000, and officers employed in the collection of duties of excise; neither shall a woman be allowed to vote. No prisoner under sentence, or inmate of poor house or insane asylum shall vote.

3. Yes, under certain conditions.

Items of News

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., June 9.—The four coal and iron policemen, charged with the shooting of the boy Charles W. McCann at the Stanton Colliery on Thursday night, were given a preliminary hearing to-day, and were committed to jail for a further hearing, when the result of the boy's injuries shall be definitely known. The only witness was a physician who attended him. He grew worse last night and it is feared cannot recover.

TEN MINES CLOSED.

Roanoke, Va., June 9.—According to advices received by the Norfolk and Western Railway, which controls the output of the Pocahontas coal fields, ten mines closed down in that district to-day. It is estimated about 500 men are out. Other mines are crippled, and are working with reduced forces. The Tug River field miners on the West Virginia side have struck. Several thousand men are employed there. The Norfolk and Western officials do not consider the strike in their territory serious. No reports of violence among the strikers have come in. "Mother Jones," the strike agitator, is on the ground.

STRIKE NOT OBEYED.

Clarksburg, W. Va., June 9.—The strike order was not obeyed in this region, and all the mines are in full operation. Less than 100 men in the district quit work.

SOFT COAL MEN OUT.

Huntington, W. V., June 9.—Advices from various points along the Norfolk and Western Railroad to-day are to the effect that almost every soft coal mine along the line is tied up, the miners generally obeying the strike order. Something like ten thousand men are out in that field.

MINE BOSS KILLED.

Huntington, W. Va., June 9.—A skirmish between mine officials and strikers is reported at Keystone. The mine boss was killed. No names or particulars are available.

Albuquerque, N.M. June 6.—Dr. C. L. Herrick, former president of the New Mexico University, and one of the most eminent geologists in the west, has carefully examined the supposed volcano [illegible] fifteen miles from Gallup. He gave a description of what [illegible] and said:—

ALL THE BOERS SAY THEY REJOICE AND SING GOD SAVE THE KING

Satisfactory Surrenders--Lore Kitchener Says 440 Burgers Have Laid Down Their Arms Around Middleburg

Special to The Times.

Cape Town, June 9.—The surrender of over 1,500 Boers has already been reported, covering various points. Commandant Fouche brought his command into Cradock, Cape Colony, consisting of 36 Free Staters and 219 rebels. Fouche is ill.

Commandant Conroy's men, on hearing that peace had been concluded, threw their hats into the air, cheered for King Edward, and sang "God Save the King."

These incidents dissipate the fear expressed that the Cape Colony commands would refuse to accede to the peace terms.

Gen. Christian De Wet is personally superintending the surrenders of the Boers in the Vredefort, Orange River Colony district.

General Schalkburger (former acting President of the Transvaal), who is the guest of the Governor of Natal, Colonel Sir Henry Edward McCallum, at Pietermaritzburg, in an address to the burghers in the concentration camp, asked them to make the best of the situation and to forget and forgive the past. He pointed out the uselessness and hopelessness of continuing the struggle, urged the Boers to accept and act in accordance with the terms of surrender, which he intended to uphold. He desired them to work for the good of South Africa.

London, June, 9.—Lord Kitchener in a despatch from Pretoria, dated yesterday, announced that the British Commissioners in the various districts report that 1,154 Boers laid down their arms on Thursday. Afterwards the Commissioners addressed the Boers, who gave three hearty cheers for King Edward. The best possible relations exist between the Boers and the British, and there has been no hitch in the proceedings anywhere.

Vredefort Road, Orange River Colony June 7.—General Christian De Wet, addressing the inmates of the concentration camp here, explained the circumstances leading to the termination of hostilities, and urged the burghers to do their utmost to show Great Britain what good colonists the Boers can make. The speech made a favorable impression.

General De Wet's wife will rejoin the General here to-day.

Amsterdam, June 9.—It is reported here that Mr. Kruger has declined the facilities offered by Great Britain for his return to South Africa, but has accepted Queen Wilhelmina's proffer of a Dutch vessel to convey him to South Africa when he decides to return there.

London, June 9.—Lord Kitchener, in a despatch from Pretoria, dated to-day, announces that the Progress in the surrender of Boers is entirely satisfactory. Four hundred and forty burghers have laid down their arms at Middleburg, Transvaal. They brought in a pom-pom complete with ammunition and indicated the hiding places of a howitzer and a Maxim gun.

Two hundred and eighty-nine Boers have surrendered their arms at Standerton, Transvaal, and Lord Kitchener confirms the report that 255 Boers, of whom 219 were rebels, surrendered at Cradock, Cape Colony.

Many more surrenders are expected to-day. All the Boers who surrendered in Cape Colony expressed themselves as being rejoiced at the fact that peace had been arranged.

BOERS RUSHING IN.

Cape Town, June 9.—The surrender of over 1500 Boers has already been reported, covering various points. Commandant Fouche brought his commando into Cradock, Cape Colony, consisting of 36 Free Staters and 219 rebels. Fouche is ill.

"Here there is a fold and fault which is interesting because of the metamorphosis that is going on. From cracks in the sandstone overlying the lignite there is issuing a constant stream of heated air, carbon dioxide, sulphurous oxide and vapor. The solfataric action may be attributed to the slow oxidation of shales in the presence of water. From this point eastward, is a series of cracks that have been filled with iron and lime and serving still further to show that, along this fold and break, water at one time ascended."

Dr. Herrick does not believe there is any possibility of dangerous eruption from this crevice.

There was a burglary last night at Niagara Falls and four men supposed to be the culprits were pursued to Niagara-on-the-Lake where three of them were captured. The fourth man hid himself on the Corona, and crossed the lake to Toronto. In the meantime the Niagara police telephoned to the Toronto detective department, and detectives Black and Forrest went down to meet the steamer when she steamed up to the dock. The gang planks were watched, and the man wanted was caught. He was arraigned before Police Magistrate Kingsford and remanded verbally for a day to await a frontier officer. Inspector Stark received no particulars of the burglary. The prisoner calls himself Scott.

The Burglaries.

A despatch from Niagara Falls says the men entered the residence of Mrs. M. Ferguson and ransacked the place from cellar to garret, there being no one at home but a servant girl, who heard them and locked herself in her room. She claims they were in the house nearly two hours and cannot say what booty they carried off.

The next place visited was Land's drug store, but Mr. Land awakened with the noise made by a jimmy prying a window open. Mr. Land chased them off. The residence of Mr. J. T. Henderson in that town was entered and a watch and some change was removed from Mr. Henderson's clothes in the bedroom, where he was asleep.

The next place entered was the residence of Town Treasurer Mr. W. J. McMurray, on the river front, where they took from Mr. McMurray's trousers, lying across the foot of his bed, some fifty dollars.

Edwardsville, Ill., June 7.—Early this morning a riot started between striking moulders and non-union men employed by the American Steel and Foundry Company. As a result five men, two negro non-union workers and three white strikers were shot, two of the latter mortally. The names of the injured are not obtainable, as they were hurried away to places of safety by their friends.

The trouble started at five o'clock, when a train load of employees of the steel company who had not struck reached Granite City. As the men were going through a narrow lane to their work in the mills they were threatened by the strikers, and then assailed with stones.

Revolvers were brought into use, and several shots were fired by both parties. Two non-union men, negroes, and three white strikers received wounds. Two of the latter were shot in the back and it is believed they will die as the result of their wounds.

Liverpool, June 7.—The report is fully confirmed that the Cunard Steamship Company has begun the formation of a British shipping combination. The Beaver Line, of which Sir Alfred L. Jones is the head will join forces with the Cunard Line.

Sir Alfred is the most energetic organizer of English shipping. He is the head also of the Elder Dempster Line and the British West Indies.

The Allan Line will support the new combination, which meets with the warm approval of the Colonial Office.

The objects of the scheme are two fold, firstly, to meet the Morgan combination on American ground, and, secondly, to arrange a new and fast service to Canada which will be subsidized largely by both the British and Canadian governments; but nothing will be done regarding the subsidy question until the meeting of the colonial Premiers on the occasion of the coronation.

The leaders of the new scheme say they recognize that the fight for freight will be severe. The British combination will not be hampered so much by Mr. Morgan's control of the American railways as by the fact that the principal freight steamers are in the hands of its opponents.

It is denied that Mr. Morgan offered the Cunards £11,000,000 for the company. The offer did not approach that figure.

A Hamburg correspondent telegraphs that shipping men there believe that the Cunard company will come to a working arrangement with the Union and Castle lines in order to secure a monopoly of the African trade, and that the result will be the establishment of new lines from the United States to Africa.

WHALEBACK VESSEL CUT IN TWO AND NINE MEN PERISH IN THEIR BUNKS

Duluth, Minn., June 9.—The whaleback steamer Thomas Wilson, Capt. Cameron, master, was cut almost in two by the steamer George G. Hadley, Capt. Fitzgerald, master a half mile south of the Duluth Canal to-day, and nine men, mostly of the night crew, who could not get out of their bunks before the vessel sank, perished.

The victims are: Aaron Trips, cook;—Frank, second cook, Superior James McDougall, oiler, West Superior; James M. Frazer, oiler, Manitoulin Island; Joseph McGraw, wheelsman, Sault Ste. Marie, Mich.; John Campbell, lookout, Greenleaf, Mich.; John Carey, deckhand, St. Catharines, Ont; Thomas Jones, deckhand; William Roebuck, fireman, Port Hampton.

The Wilson was coming toward the canal, and the Hadley going out, both loaded.

Just before reaching the canal, and when about opposite the Wilson, the Hadley was given orders by a tug to go to Superior. Immediately, she sheered off for the Superior entry, and crashed directly into the Wilson.

The Wilson went down so quickly that the next instant after the collision her crew could be seen throwing off their clothing and jumping into the water.

In the interval before she sank, she seemed to be supported entirely by the Hadley's prow which was sticking through her plates.

The plunge released the Hadley, and the latter swung back with a tremendous jerk. As the whaleback went beneath the water, she spouted like a submarine explosion from the compression of air in her.

The life-saving crew picked up the men in the water.

The Wilson was loaded with ore and belongs to the Pittsburg Steamship Line, the fleet of the United States Steel Company. The Hadley carried coal.

MUST HANG ON FRIDAY

Benson Murderer of Eric Marrotte, Will Get No Reprieve

Montreal, June 9.—Thorvald Hansen the murderer of little Eric Marrotte in Westmount, must expiate his crime upon the scaffold on Friday morning of next week. In spite of all the efforts by his counsel, Mr. Mathieu, the Department of Justice has decided that the law must take its course and news to this effect was received by the authorities to-day.

The news will be received by Hansen with no surprise, for he has given no evidence that he expected or even hoped for a moment that there was any chance for him. Since his conversion to the Roman Catholic faith he has been faithful in his religious duties and those who have come in contact with him say that he is quite prepared for the end and that he will go to the scaffold without a murmur.

It is expected that word will be received from Radcliffe to-morrow announcing that he will be on hand for the execution. The gallows used will be the same upon which Lapiaine met his fate a few months ago.

ONE LANGUAGE ONLY

There Will Be No Conflict Over This in South Africa

London, June 9.—The Pretoria correspondent of the London Times settles the question of the dual language in South Africa. He says the chief concession regarding the language only amounts to granting such reasonable facilities as would be granted anyhow, and does not interfere with the status of English as the sole official language. That is as it should be.

WHAT HE SAW AT ST. PIERRE

Capt. McDonald of the Collier Sterling Reports on His Martinique Visit

Norfolk, Va., June 7.—Capt. McDonald, commanding the United States collier Sterling, reported to-day to Admiral Cotton, commanding the Norfolk Navy Yard, what he saw at Martinique on May 20, when the second eruption of Mont Pelee occurred.

The Sterling, which was the first relief ship to reach the island after the catastrophe, was lying at Fort de France. Capt. McDonald said that on May 20 Mont Pelee began to send up a great column of black smoke, which swiftly spread for miles about. Shortly afterward volcanic dust, closely resembling dry cement, began to fall upon the deck of the collier thirteen miles from the crater. This, although the crew tried to sweep it into the sea as fast as it fell, soon covered the collier's deck four inches deep.

Next came a shower of mud so hot that it burned inflammable matter it touched. This was followed by a rain of hot stones. The collier made ready to go to sea, but soon the stones ceased falling and the volcano became quiet.

Capt. McDonald said he afterward visited St. Pierre. He saw near the St. Pierre bank a man who had apparently been a prosperous business man sitting in a chair in his office. In his hand was his watch, open, as though to take the time of day. Death evidently came without warning, as there was no sign of a struggle and no marks were upon the body.

Capt. McDonald said that when he sailed the people of Fort de France were in momentary expectation of another outburst from the volcano.

BRITISH GARRISONS CONTROL NIGERIA.

London, June 5.—Reuter's Agency is informed that the Imperial Government has decided upon the establishment of a British garrison on Lake Chad, and that the post of resident in that region has been offered to an officer who has lately done distinguished service in the remoter regions of Northern Nigeria. The command will be known as that of Upper Bornu, and its headquarters will be at Kuka, the old capital, at present an unoccupied ruin owing to the depredations of the Rabah. The garrison at Kuka, which is situated at least 600 miles distant from Lokoja will probably number two companies of the West African Frontier Force.

The rich province of Bornu, will, for administrative purposes, be divided into two provinces—Upper Bornu, with headquarters near Lake Chad at Kuka, and Lower Bornu, with headquarters at Gujba—the point where Fadr-el-Allah is stated to have been killed by the French, on the direct road to Lokoja, and about 150 miles from the lake. Captain J. K. Cochrane has been appointed resident at Gujba, and the garrison will consist of a company of the West African Frontier Force. By this arrangement the whole of the vast area from the Niger to Lake Chad will be effectively occupied by British garrisons under white officers.

Colored Murderer Hanged

Macon, Ga., June 9.—B. G. Howard, was hanged in the county jail shortly before noon to-day. The crime for which he paid the death penalty was the murder of Henry Hammond, a saloon keeper and dance hall proprietor. Howard shot Hammond with a pistol because Hammond put him out of the saloon for being disorderly. Howard fled, but was captured in Opelika, Alabama, and brought back to Macon.

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned and endorsed "Tender for Gymnasium, Military College, Kingston," will be received at this office until Monday, 9th June, inclusively, for the erection of a Gymnasium at the Royal Military College, Kingston, according to plans and specification to be seen on and after Wednesday, May 28th, at the Department of Public Works, Ottawa, and at the office of Arthur Ellis, Esq., Architect, Kingston.

Tenders will not be considered unless made on the form supplied and signed with the actual signatures of the tenderers.

An accepted check on a chartered bank, payable to the order of the Minister of Public Works, equal to ten per cent. (10 p.c.) of the amount of tender, must accompany each tender. The check will be forfeited if the party decline the contract or fail to complete the work contracted for, and will be returned in case of non-acceptance of tender.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

For Farmers.

In an experiment conducted in Staffordshire, England, to test the relative value of different root crops for sheep feeding, the results were as follows:—(1) Globe mangels; (2) kohl rabi; (3) Long Red mangels; (4) Tankard mangels; (5) Swedes.

Sir Walter Gilbey considers it "an alarming fact" that American and Canadian breeders are now going to France and Germany to buy their breeding stock. We cannot afford to lose patronage for our studs from abroad, and the whole question deserves the consideration of horse-breeding societies.—Farmer and Stockbreeder.

Currant bushes should be sprayed with white hellebore in order to destroy the currant worm. As hellebore is a poison some growers object to it. It is claimed that if wood ashes are dusted over the bushes, first spraying with cold water, the worms will be destroyed. It is at least a harmless remedy and is worthy a test trial by those having currant bushes.

The Department of Agriculture at Washington, D.C., has issued a statement that there is no such thing as manufactured comb honey. Geo. W. York, President of the Chicago Beekeepers' Association, says:—"The truth is that, when you find honey in the comb, you may be absolutely certain that the bees, not man, put it there. It may vary in color; it may vary in quality; all flowers do not yield the same honey; but it was all stored by the bees."

An acre of grass land, according to experiments, gives off not less than 6,400 quarts of water in twenty-four hours, and an acre of sunflowers would give a relatively greater quantity. In fact, swamps have been reclaimed and malarial marshes rendered inocuous by planting sunflowers or eucalyptus trees, which are great pumpers of water, and also exert other influences counteracting baneful conditions of air, earth and water.

Sheep on the Farm.

A correspondent of The Ohio Farmer gives some of the reasons why sheep are a fine thing for the farmer to raise. They pay for their raising in profitable fleeces. They are easily transferred from one inclosure to another and restrained by fences that would not hold cattle or pigs. Their light tread and their dislike to mud warrant their access to fields where the trampling of cattle and tearing of hogs would not be tolerated. They waste less food in proportion to the quantity consumed than any other animal, and will hunt out and utilize much that would otherwise be lost. They work for a living by keeping the farm clean from weeds. No animal returns more fertility to the soil in proportion to the amount exacted for its support. They produce a pound of mutton cheaper than a hog will a pound of pork.—Southwestern Stockman.

Tobacco Stem and Dust.

The waste material from the cigar factories is a good fertilizer, containing both nitrogen and potash, but it has so many other valuable qualities that the farmer and gardener should not fail to obtain some every year. Placed around the squash vines in the hill, it almost surely drives away the fly which is the mother of the borer, and scattered along the onion rows it serves the same purpose for the little black fly that causes the onion maggot. In fact, nearly, if not quite all the insects which damaged our plants and trees by laying an egg of which the larva will be a borer, and thus cannot be reached by poisonous sprays, will be repelled by the use of tobacco stems or dust around the stem of the plant. The claim has been made that the borers that infest our apple and peach orchards can be driven away by winding tobacco leaves around the trunk of the tree, just above where the borers usually enter them. When this is wet the juice that runs down not only makes it unpleasant for the fly to stay there, but if she deposits a few eggs when the tree is dry, the first wet day is likely to send down a decoction strong enough to destroy the vitality of the eggs or kill the young larvae. We do not claim it to be sure, in all of these cases, as something will depend on the weather, but with frequent showers to keep it wet, it will greatly reduce the trouble from these insect pests.—American Cultivator.

The Horse's System.

It may be of use to call attention to the fact that the digestive system of horses differs a great deal from that of our domesticated ruminants—viz., cattle and sheep; whereas the latter are able to consume a large amount of food at one time, the horse—owing to the comparatively small size of its stomach and intestines—is able to consume only a small quantity of food at one meal. In saying comparative size of the horse's stomach and intestines, this refers to the comparison with the stomach of ruminants; as compared with the stomach and intestines of carnivorous animals—such as the dog—the stomach of the horse is large. I have already mentioned the fact that cattle and sheep are able to digest fibre much better and make much better use of it than horses. Besides this difference, there is another important point in which the mode of feeding the former differs from that of the latter. Whereas cattle and sheep are able to live and do comparatively well on poor and bulky foods, such as straw or roots, horses cannot deal satisfactorily with large quantities of these, even when doing no work; they cannot, like cattle, draw the amount of nourishment they require from poor foods by consuming large quantities of them. In their case, the necessary amount of food material must be provided in a more concentrated form. It is in these two points that the chief difference lies in the feeding of horses, as compared with that of cattle and sheep. There is, however, a third point—namely, that in feeding horses we wish to produce work; whereas in feeding cattle, sheep, or pigs we have in view the production of flesh, fat, milk, or wool.

THE KING'S CORONATION

Foreign Potentates and Their Suites Make London Lively

GORGEOUS ROBES ORDERED

An Indian Prince Brings an Idol Valued at a Quarter of a Million Dollars

Peeresses Using all Their Ingenuity to Evade the King's Strict Orders as to Dresses to be Worn in Westminster Abbey

London, June 11.—As the date of the coronation approaches London is assuming a beautiful aspect, the early extent of which is to no little degree due to the peace rejoicings.

The Indians and other foreign princes in Oriental costumes in the royal carriages are sights to which London is becoming daily accustomed. The feeding of the same notabilities almost drives the court functionaries to despair.

The most orthodox of Hindu potentates, the Maharajah of Jeypor, who is living in stately confinement at Moray Lodge, has commanded a complete renovation of a neighboring slaughter house even to the flooring, which is now exclusively devoted to killing animals required by the Maharajah and his suite of 230 persons. All the slaughtering operations are conducted by Hindu butchers, who enshroud the slaughter house with amusing secrecy, much to the disappointment of the local residents.

Brought His Own Idol.

The Maharajah brought a large golden image of the Hindoo god Krishna, worth $250,000. One room is set apart as a temple, where pagan worship is carried on daily. His baggage included 20 huge stone tanks of Ganges water, as all his food must be boiled in water from the sacred river. The Maharajah also carries a six months' supply of certain delicacies hard to find in the English markets.

Strict Orders Evaded.

Despite the strict orders issued regarding the uniformity of the dresses to be worn by peeresses at the coronation service, there will be countless variations that art and money can devise without actual disobedience to the royal commands.

All the dresses must be white, but many ladies, determined to make their dresses distinctive of the occasion, and to preserve them as heirlooms, are having gowns embroidered with coats-of-arms, national flowers and other devices. These are being executed in gold and silver, here and there touched with the forbidden colored silk, in order to bring out the badge of a clan or an ancient heraldic quartering.

Gold Embroidery in Vogue.

Gold embroidery down the sides of dresses and on shoulder straps is also much employed, many persons exactly copying pictures of the costumes worn by their ancestors on the occasion of a previous coronation. The Countess of Shrewsbury, mother of the Earl of (poie fame, will appear, in an exactly similar dress to that worn by the Countess of Eglingtoun, when George III. was crowned.

Coronets Hard to Manage.

One of the greatest present anxieties of the peeresses is how to keep the coronet on the head. It cannot be too firmly fixed, for it has to be quickly taken off and then replaced, in accordance with the ritual of the service.

The jewelers have been inventing all sorts of devices to overcome the difficulty. One form punched holes in the sides of the coronet so that a hat pin could be inserted. Another attached to coronets elastic bands of the exact tint of the wearer's hair. Others gave it up and told their customers they must dress their hair to suit the stability of the coronet, rather than their looks.

Another serious point is how the peeresses are to carry their costly coronets when the service commands that they be uncovered. An ingenious jeweler devised an arrangement of crossed bands of narrow, white silk, inside the coronet in which the peeress slips her wrist and carries her headpiece as she would an ordinary hand satchel.

The correct method, however, according to the authority of old prints of previous coronations is to hold up the coronet between the finger and thumb.

King's Golden Robe Ready.

The King's golden robe has finally been completed. It is a gorgeous garment, shaped like a priest's cope, composed of the finest cloth of gold, and elaborately embroidered in rich colors. Unlike the cloaks in which previous sovereigns were crowned, it has no opening at the arms and shoulders, in order to allow the passage of the anointing oil. Twenty to thirty girls of the Royal school of art needlework spent three months in making the robe.

His Majesty has now ordered that an old royal barge, built for George II, be made seaworthy. This magnificent relic, with its elaborate canopy and high stern will once more be floated, and the King's "Jolly Watermen" who wear brilliant scarlet liveries, have been ordered on duty at Windsor, where the castle lake, after many years, will soon be the scene of a royal water pageant.

A DEEP DISAPPOINTMENT

The bitterness of the German press regarding the terms of peace with the Boers may proceed partly from disappointment. So long as the Boers kept the field the hope was indulged by Germany that Britain would come to such terms as would restore the republic their autonomy, and thus leave the way open for future German aggrandizement in South Africa, with these republics as a basis. This hope is dashed to the ground by the formal reunion of British and Dutch under the Union Jack, and the prospect that under the favorable terms arrived at, the Boers may settle down into contented and loyal subjects of Great Britain. How annoying this must be to the overcrowded nation whose salvation lies in expansion of Empire, with nearly every avenue blocked, and the expectation of an outlet for German energy through the Transvaal blasted forever!

BABIES CAUGHT ON A RAILWAY BRIDGE

The Little Tots in Perilous Position, and One Killed

LITTLE GIRL HUNG OVER RIVER

And Thus Escapes, While Her Baby Brother is Instantly Killed

Special to The Times.

Woodstock, June 9.—There is desolation in the home of Christopher Babb, foreman at the Canada Furniture Company's factory, who lives on Dundas street west, and yet there is thanksgiving, for the terrible bereavement which visited them almost as suddenly as a lightning stroke, might have been a double one.

The two elder girls of the family, Mabel and Edith, aged 9 and 7, respectively, started out after breakfast after flowers at the Eleventh Line bridge. The two younger children, Bernard, aged 3, and Hilda, 5, were left behind. The two babies decided to follow their elder sisters a little later.

Supposing Mabel and Edith had gone to the C.P.R. bridge, which is situated a few hundred yards west of Dundas street, the little ones climbed over the cattle guard and began to walk down the track. Some boys were fishing in the river just below the bridge. The little ones toddled along on the track above, and though the boys called to them not to do so, they started to cross the bridge. Just as they were about half way over the shrill whistle of a locomotive sounded from the west and presently the boys on the river bank were horrified to see a heavy freight come dashing down the grade. The engineer saw the children on the bridge and whistled continuously but going to the grade he could not stop, though he made every effort to do so.

The poor little things on the bridge were evidently overcome with terror. They turned to fly from the approaching danger, but, weakened with fear, they frequently fell. Just as the big locomotive was almost upon them, little Bernard, in his baby terror, crouched down, grasping the iron rails with his baby hands, the front of the engine struck him on the head, crushing his skull.

The little girl, with wonderful presence of mind for one of her tender age, managed to pull herself to the edge of the bridge, and there she hung over the river, while the train thundered past.

The boys who had been fishing found the baby boy lying in a pool of blood beside the track, unconscious from a terrible wound in the back of his head, but the girl, though nearly ready to drop into the river, was unscathed.

THE CROWN PRINCE OF SIAM TO VISIT THIS COUNTRY

He will Probably Land at New York, and After Visiting Washington Come to Ottawa

Special to The Times.

Washington, D.C., June 10. — Crown Prince Maha Vajiravuch, son of the King of Siam, will visit the United States directly after the coronation of King Edward VII. The Siamese Minister has asked whether it would be agreeable to the President to receive him, and Secretary Hay has given assurances that the President and this Government will be delighted to do so. He will also visit Canada.

The present King of Siam has always maintained a friendly attitude toward the United States. More than 50 years ago treaties were made between Siam and the United States under which that country was opened to foreign intercourse. These treaties were negotiated by J. H. Chandler, of Camden, N.J., who spent 47 years at Bangkok, first as Consul General of the United States and later as instructor and confidant of the present King.

The father of the present King early recommended to his people friendly intercourse with the people of the United States. He was the first ruler to purchase American machinery.

The present King sent a costly exhibit to the Centennial Exposition at Philadelphia, in 1876, and presented the exhibit to the United States Government.

PELAGIC SEALING

The U. S. law prohibiting the importation of sealskin garments into that country the past five years has had no perceptible effect in preventing pelagic seal hunting in Behring Sea as was intended by its passage. It is now proposed by the Committee of Ways and Means to kill all seals in the Prybiloff Islands, except 10,000 females and 1,000 males, unless means can be devised to put a stop to pelagic sealing. The bill proposed by the committee authorizes the President to open negotiations with Great Britain for a review of the existing regulations in order to preserve the seal industry from extinction, failing which the drastic remedy before mentioned shall be put in force. The New York Evening Post remarks that there is little doubt that Great Britain will accede to the proposal. There is little doubt that she will see the necessity of some radical change in the rules; but the question how to enforce the rules will be the most difficult one to deal with. As the number of the catch diminishes on both land and sea, the interest of either country in protecting the herd diminishes also. Neither one has much motive now to keep a fleet patrolling Behring Sea, and it is a debatable question whether any force that can be spared from the navy of each can prevent pelagic sealing as long as the seals are numerous enough to tempt men to go after them.

TO SETTLE MINE STRIKE.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., June 10 — President Mitchell left here to-day for New York, where he will meet Carroll D. Wright, the United States Commissioner of Labor, to-day at the Manhattan Hotel. He expects to return to this city to-morrow morning.

Mr. Mitchell went to New York at the request of Mr. Wright, with whom he was in communication to-day. Mr. Wright it is believed will directly represent President Roosevelt. According to Washington despatches, Mr. Wright and Senator Hanna have had a conference with the President during the last two days on the strike situation in the anthracite field.

Whether Mr. Wright carries a plan for peace is not known at this time.

ELOPED FROM WOODSTOCK

W. E. Smith, a Baker, and Miss. Minnie Wilkins

Both Have Disappeared and Have Probably Gone Together

Woodstock, June 11 — Many people in this city would like to know the whereabouts of Baker W. E. Smith, who has been carrying on a bakery business on Wellington street north for some years. Principal among those who would like to hear from Smith is his wife, who, with four children, seems to be deserted.

Smith told his employes they could have a holiday because they had worked on Monday, the day signing of peace was celebrated. Then he went to the house and told his wife he was going to London to see a friend of his there, whom he used to board with.

"I'll be back to-night," he said to his wife as he kissed her good-bye.

He hasn't been seen since. Neither has Miss Minnie Wilkins, who worked in the bake shop.

When Smith didn't get home at night his wife went out to the bakery to see if the bread had been set for next day. It hadn't been. Instead she found a note scribbled on a piece of wrapping paper to the effect that he was going away for six months. He was sorry, he said in the note, he had to go out among strangers to earn a living after working so hard, but he had got behind with people and there was nothing else for him to do. He would be back in six months, however.

It is alleged that Miss Minnie Wilkins, the girl who has also disappeared, went to E. W. Sage's grocery, corner of Finkle and Main streets, and ordered about five dollars worth of groceries in Smith's name to be put up in a packing box and sent to the G.T.R. station. The groceries were sent to the station.

Somebody got them there, but where they were taken no one knows.

Since Smith disappeared it has transpired that he owes a lot of people in town. A great many hold three dollar bread tickets, which they got from him for $2.25, by paying for them in advance. They are "out" the $2.25.

Several days ago Smith purchased a $12 silver set from Mr. Leadbeater, paying down one of the $2.25 tickets as a deposit. He has the silver set and Mr. Leadbeater the bread ticket.

Chief Zeats said that no complaint had yet been laid against Smith.

A peculiar incident to-day cropped up in connection with the supposed elopement. Since midnight someone went into the Smith stables and took away two delivery horses, two delivery wagons and a set of single harness. No one knows positively who it was, but they might make a good guess.

FALLEN IDOLS

Correspondents of United States papers are beginning to talk in a manner that indicates that they realize that their readers cannot much longer be made to view the Boer leaders as heroes, to be worshipped and revered. Some of the U. S. papers that a short time ago were violently pro-Boer are found dealing with Steyn as a great blunderer—a man who threw away his people's liberty and his country's existence in the hope of grasping all British South Africa. As for Kruger, he is being handled without gloves. The correspondent of such an Anglophobe paper as the Chicago Chronicle, treats him as a cowardly poltroon and self-seeker. In a recent letter he thus speaks of the man who a few months ago was the centre of admiration of the British haters.

Kruger is held responsible for the war, and all the suffering it has entailed. If it had not been for his obstinate and unreasoning hatred of the outlanders, which led him into the denial to them of all political and many business privileges, there would have been no cause for Great Britain's interference in the affairs of the republics. His desertion of his brethren in the hour of their greatest humiliation has alienated all sympathy for him that existed here and has likewise turned his own people against him. It is not likely, therefore, that his future will concern anyone in particular. He has but a few years at most to live and is amply provided for. His private fortune, most of which he managed to convert into cash and take with him to Holland, is said to be considerably in excess of $1,000,000 dollars and with the well known frugality of his habits, he can manage to get along very comfortably on the income from that that amount during the remaining few years of his life and leave enough behind to keep his family from want.

Mr. Kruger is not the heroic figure he once was, either in Europe or South Africa. While it is an undoubted fact that he would have been of little service to his people if he had remained, his flight from the Transvaal at the most critical stage of its affairs, is looked upon in the light of a base desertion. Some people claim that it is heroic to die for one's country. "Oom Paul" doubtless thinks it nobler—or perhaps more comfortable to live comfortably far removed from danger of hardship. Once an idol, he has been overthrown and his name is now only heard accompanied by some term of obloquy.

Neither of the men who were most to blame for all the bloodshed and loss of the war rank high in the scale of mankind. The world would not have suffered much if they had stayed the fate they brought upon so many of nobler stuff. Those who remember the Pharisaical Kruger, with his grossly familiar references to Diety, plunging his people into the vortex of ruin, then gathering up his millions and fleeing to Europe, leaving his wife to the enemy's mercy, and his people to shift for themselves, while he luxuriated in safety, will never apply to him the term, hero.

Farm Notes.

Care should be exercised in the use of poisoned solutions for spraying, as many insects that are friends of the farmer may be destroyed. Bees have been exterminated in some sections by spraying, though something depends upon the kinds of plants sprayed.

We clip from an exchange the following directions for killing lice on cattle—Dust the animals thoroughly with fresh insect powder; rub in well, or else part the hair so the powder will reach the pests. In about a week, dust again to kill any mites that might have hatched. The other is: Make a strong tea of cedar twigs; wash the lousy animal with this tea; this last is effectual in cleansing buildings, coops, roosts, poles, etc., of lice.

No greater mistake is ever made than to suppose that by selecting the largest eggs from the basket for hatching improvement of the poultry is sure to follow. There is no makeshift in this industry. Careful selection of the breeding stock, males and females, alone will insure that grading up so desired by every breeder. There is no room today for slipshod methods in poultry culture, and the breeder who does not select a breeding pen from his best birds and keep them by themselves does not deserve and cannot hope to maintain the quality of his stock.

More pigs are lost in the summer season from improper feeding than from any other cause. They are compelled to consume foods that are not conducive to thrift, and which lead to disease in the herds. Some feeders keep slop in barrels, which ferments until sour, having a very disagreeable odor, the pigs being fed largely upon the slop. This kind of food is more injurious in summer than in winter, as it induces bowel disease. The best slop is milk and bran, freshly made, with grass, vegetables and plenty of pure water, which will induce growth and keep the pigs in good condition.

Use a Good Sire.

If there is one thing more than another which pedigree breeding has taught it is the value of using a good sire. It takes a long time before this lesson can be universally appreciated. There are some breeders whom nothing but adversity will teach; others are willing to profit by the experience of the many, and are ready to adopt the lessons which can be obviously deduced. It is a pity that in these times of enlightenment and advanced ideas the simplest lessons cannot be absorbed by small breeders. It is with the small breeder that the future lies, and the sooner he adapts himself to a more successful policy the better will it be for himself and for the breed which he favors. It is not enough to have a well-bred sire. That certainly is a primary consideration, for, as every breeder knows, there is nothing more perplexing in breeding than the frequency with which atavism occurs. It is satisfactory to note, however, that when characteristics have become more fixed by years of registered breeding, breeders are more and more coming to regard it as essential that the trumpeted merits of good back breeding should be displayed in the animal itself. The old principle that like produces like is truer now than it was fifty years ago, because of the increased prepotency of line bred stock. Nothing condemns the policy of a breeder more effectively than the use of an indifferent horse on good mares, or, for that matter, moderate bull on better cows. As a rule, the farmer is not deficient in useful breeding mares or roomy sows, but it would form painful reading to learn how often he had misused his trust by the use of an indifferent sire. It is a very safe rule to patronize a sire better than the females. There is everything to gain and nothing to lose. The initial cost is a mere bagatelle, compared with the difference in price of the progeny. It is a misfortune that many farmers expect too much of their mares or their cows. This, at all events, seems a reasonable deduction from their policy when they use very indifferent sires. The point we wish to accentuate is that it pays to use a good sire. It is short-sighted policy to expect too much of the dams.—Farmer and Stockbreeder.

Sore Mouths in Horses.

A sore mouth in a horse is frequently the cause of his not feeding properly. In cases where a horse has lost his appetite or does not redily eat his food it is well to examine his mouth, if the fact of his being off his feed cannot be traced to any apparent cause. A sore mouth may be due to several causes. In young horses it is generally due to teething troubles, which make the mouth more or less tender and interfere with the feeding. In such cases the only thing to be done is to provide the food in a state which will permit of its being easily chewed and masticated. The oats should be crushed, bran mashes and roots should be given, and the hay should not be hard, and free from woody stems.

In older horses the permanent molars are sometimes the cause of a horse not being able to chew his food, and of his having a sore mouth. The molars sometimes have sharp edges and points which hurt the inside of the cheeks, and cause considerable pain when the horse is eating. In this case they require filing with a rasp, but this operation can only be performed by a skilful hand. At other times a horse may be prevented from masticating his food properly by one of the molar teeth being longer than the rest, which prevents the molars in the upper jaw from coming into contact with those in the lower jaw. In this case again professional advice is required.

Lampas not infrequently is the cause of a horse having a sore mouth. Lampas consists of an inflamed condition of the roof of the mouth or of the palate, and is caused by various means. In young horses it is due often to the growth of the teeth, while in older ones it is caused through indigestion or by irregularities of the molar teeth. The treatment accordingly varies and depends on the cause of lampas. Ignorant grooms and stablemen sometimes suggest burning as a remedy. This is of course a cruel and perfectly inadmissible remedy, and one which should not be adopted on any account.

Another form of inflammation of the mouth is known under the name of "stomatitis."—Farmer and Stockbreeder.

The New York Sun the other day printed a list of "fifty best American poems," whereupon a Princeton professor immediately wrote to the editor complaining of the failure to include any of Dr. Henry Van Dyke's poems. Surely, he wrote, there should have been a place for that exquisite masterpiece of his, to which The Sun referred last fall, containing these never-to-be-forgotten lines:

Recent dispatches from Holland represent Kruger as heart broken over the final outcome of the South African war, and it is doubtful if he will derive much comfort from the generous terms which the British government proposes to extend to him.

There is no more pathetic figure in history than this of the old man of the republics of South Africa that have been finally overwhelmed by the British Empire. There he sits in his exile, a solitary individual, out of touch even with the men in whose hands the control of affairs in his country passed after the capture of his capital by the British forces had made his position at home untenable. After that, there was nothing for him but surrender to the enemy or to seek refuge abroad, because his age and physical feebleness made it impossible for him to endure the hardships of life on the kopje or the veldt.

He left South Africa with hopes of securing intervention to save his country from being overwhelmed; and we can imagine his bitter disappointment as one European court after another turned the cold shoulder, or in polite diplomatic phrase informed him and his agents that anything beyond the tender of good offices was incompatible with their duty as neutral powers. When he became convinced that no nation on earth would risk antagonizing the boasted mistress of the seas on behalf of a remote and feeble state, the iron must have entered his soul, and if he did not see the inevitable and it was because his narrow-mindedness could not conceive of any surrender so long as a single Boer remained with strength enough to lift and sight a rifle.

Had Oom Paul been a statesman of the modern type he would have perceived that resistance was useless after the fall of Pretoria and Johannesburg, and would have hastened to make the best terms possible to save something from the wreck, and to avoid useless effusion of blood. But his model was Moses rather than Napoleon. He could not bow the knee to Baal, and so the war went on until younger Boers, more imbued with the modern and the practical spirit, took the responsibility and made terms over his head, leaving him alone in his picturesque isolation, to wear out the feeble life among a kindred people, warm in sympathy, but powerless to aid his lost cause.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Mrs. Harriet Lane Johnson, niece of President Buchanan, and mistress of the White House when the Prince of Wales visited America as "Baron Renfrew," has not been forgotten by Edward VII, of England. She is now in London and will witness the coronation by invitation of the King. While in Washington in 1860, the Prince enjoyed a visit with Miss Lane to a fashionable boarding school for young women, and rolled several games of tenpins with her and the pupils. These civilities were in small part returned when Miss Lane was a guest in the British Legation at [illegible] with the Prince, but the reception and splendid treatment which he received at the hands of the President and his niece were ever remembered by the future King. A Washington correspondent notes that King Edward has seen to it that every social distinction awaits the American woman who made pleasant his visit to the American capital more than a third of a century ago.

COUNTY COURT IN SESSION

PRESENTMENT OF THE GRAND JURY READ

The Case of Kenny vs. Dosse Decided in Favor of Kenny

From Thursday's Times.

The court gave a verdict of $119.25, in the defendant's favor, in the case of Kenny Vs. Dosse.

THE GRAND JURY.

At noon yesterday the Grand Jury brought in the following presentment:

We, the Grand Jury, beg leave to submit the following report—

We desire to congratulate your Honour and the County upon the absence of crime, as shown by the fact that there are no criminal cases before the county court to engage our attention.

While we welcome your Honour to Peterborough, we would express our regret at the circumstances which make your presence necessary, namely, the ill-health of His Honour Judge Weller, who is thereby rendered unable to discharge the duties he has fulfilled so efficiently in the past, and we trust that in the near future his health will be fully restored.

We would also desire to reciprocate Your Honour's congratulations upon the restoration of peace by the termination of the war in South Africa, a fact that should bring rejoicing throughout the Empire, and bring to the late Republic the blessing of good and stable government, such as we enjoy in this favoured country, which we are proud to regard as the best country in the world.

We have examined the jail premises, and find everything perfectly in order, but regret to note the presence of one or two persons who are guilty of no crime, and therefore should not share the penal confinement of criminals. One of these is a person partially paralyzed and fitted for hospital treatment, and another of unsound mind, who should, we think, be cared for in a proper asylum, and another who we believe is able and should be made to work. The number confined in the jail at present is nine.

We also visited the House of Providence in Ashburnham, where shelter is given to 66 persons, of which 30 are advanced in years and 18 are children, all apparently well cared for.

We also visited St. Joseph's Hospital and found there 36 patients, all well and properly cared for.

In the Nicholls Hospital we found 17 patients, also all well and properly cared for.

We would also strongly recommend and urge the necessity of providing a County House of Refuge for the shelter of these poor and infirm persons, who, for lack of proper accommodation, are compelled to mingle with criminals in the county jail, and we would suggest that the adjoining counties unite in building and maintaining at some convenient point, a suitable institution, where these poor and infirm people can be properly cared for.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

CORNELIUS YOUNG,
Foreman.

Grand Jury Room,
Peterborough, June 11th, 1902.

His Honour addressed the Grand Jurors briefly in reply, after which they were dismissed.

The case of Ontario Bank vs. Moore was then taken up.

San Francisco, Cal., June 12.—Vessels arriving from Hawaii report volumes of smoke over the summit of Mauna Loa far above the active volcano Kilauea. One vessel reports that Kilauea is showing signs of activity.

As the island of Hawaii has been shrouded in rain clouds, it is difficult to tell clearly where the smoke comes from, but it is evident from many reports that the volcanoes have become active.

The last eruption of Mauna Loa was in July, 1899. Kilauea has not been active since early in the '90s.

New York, June 11.— A special cable to The Herald from London says—It was stated in the lobby of the House of Commons yesterday that an officer of the United States army was at the present time in London, enrolling recruits for service in the Philippines from the ranks of seasoned soldiers who are now returning from South Africa. The matter next week will be mentioned in the House of Commons in the form of a question, by one of the members.

The Curl

A Love Story of France.

By ETHEL WHEELER.

We were sitting on the terrace of an old French chateau, sipping coffee and smoking cigarettes. It was a hot autumn afternoon. The tapestries of the woods were worked in the faded colors of decay; they rustled with the sentiment of the lost, the past, and the dead. The warm sun had raised a wavering veil of moisture about them, and in allowing for its influence one was inclined to exaggerate the definition of leaf-tint underneath—that delicate definition, incident on the sparseness of autumn, which charges the smiling abundance of summer with the first exquisite thinness of renunciation, to sharpen later into the hard features of winter asceticism.

Beneath the tobacco smoke my old friend's face showed shriveled and wrinkled with a like delicacy of line. Its sentiment of expression was almost one with the sentiment of this essentially French moment of the year. The woods were sad, but they were more happy than sad; with them it was the time of dreams, and they were haunted by the fragile loves of a vanished spring. The sorrow that was in them was plaintive, wistful—almost a tender impersonation: theirs was the sentiment of sorrow, its iridescence and play, unconscious of any depth or darkness of suffering.

It was forty years since I had met Louis de Brissac. In Paris, as young men, we had been close friends. I had gone over to study in the French capital, and from the very first Louis had won me to him by the charming romance of his friendship for me. Since that time, during the long years in India, men had come near to the fibre and core of me through mutual danger and mutual endurance; I had felt the stir of those silent friendships whose most open manifestation is a firmer handgrip, an understanding eye glance. Beside these hidden vital emotions the memories of my Paris friend were as pale-colored as his autumn woods, but yet in these far-off memories there was a sweet fragrance which the robuster attachments lacked. Louis had written to me regularly for years and years: I had whole boxes of letters in his fine, pointed handwriting. He was expansive, and thought no detail too trivial for my interest: not only was I familiar with the administration of his estate down to the minutest particular, but also his whole mental life, with all its philosophic doubts and conjectures, was laid open before me. The letters were written with flow and lucidity; they were full of keen observation and admirable criticism of life and books. But partly through lack of time, partly through difficulty of composition in the French language, and mostly through constitutional self-repression, my replies were, I fear, somewhat bald and brief. Then, during a period of extended travel, I missed several of his letters, and, having no incentive to write to him, I let the correspondence end.

On my return from India the London doctors advised me to try the waters at Vichy, and thither I repaired, intending to find out if my old friend still lived in the neighborhood. On the very first evening I came across him unexpectedly. I had dropped into the Cercle Prive to watch the gambling, and amid the grasping and repulsive faces of those present my attention was attracted by an old man of great benevolence of aspect. I could not be mistaken. I knew him at once, in spite of his white hair and his wrinkles. The peculiar charm, the dash of melancholy happiness, that had always belonged to Louis were there still, more marked than ever. He was playing the game with a childish pleasure—staking deliberately, but not high. He had evidently set a limit to his losses, for presently he came over, with a pleasant word to a friend or two, toward the window where I was standing.

"Louis!" I said, touching his arm.

He looked at me for a moment quite blankly. Then his face grew irradiated. "Richard!" he said, pronouncing the name French fashion. "It is Richard—my friend Richard Wright! My poor Richard, but how you have changed!"

I smiled. "Well, it is forty years," I replied.

"And to meet you here!" he continued. "I always dine here when I come to Vichy on business. And I play a little. It is excitement. If you win, excitement; if you lose, more excitement. . . . My friend Richard Wright! . . . I am overwhelmed! . . . You must come home with me to-night. Why, I insist—I absolutely insist. My carriage is here. There is a room ready for you. It is too great happiness to have you with me at the Chateau de La Tour."

There was no resisting the pressure of his invitation, his faithfulness of friendship. I consented, though quizzically, half doubtful what manner of welcome I should receive from Madame or Mademoiselle de Brissac. I supposed, of course, that Louis had married in the long interval since we had ceased to correspond—that he had children. But I was wrong. I found the chateau presided over by an old butler and his wife, who superintended the servants.

And so, on the next day, looking out on that delicate autumn landscape, so full of vague and lovely regrets, I felt impelled to break our silence with the remark, "So there never was a woman in your life?"

A greater sweetness came into my friend's face. "Yes, Richard, there was—and is," he replied. "I will tell you about her when we go in. You will think it—you may think it—rather a delightful story. Perhaps you will only laugh at me. . . . And you, my friend—you have never married, either? No, no . . . do not answer me. I see I have touched pain. I would not have you speak out of a sore wound. I want to know no more. Forgive me—forgive me!"

"You are—happy in her?" I asked in a low voice.

"But you must hear the beginning—you must see," said Louis. "Tell me, did my last letters make mention of any hobby of mine?"

I reflected a moment. "A hobby?" I repeated, a little puzzled.

"Why, yes: one must have a hobby—birds' eggs," said Louis. "It is a hobby full of poetry, of romance, of sentiment. When I was young, it took me out into the open woods, out in the springtime, out in the early morning. Every specimen I collected made me more exquisitely aware of the marvels of creation, and woke in me new wonder for nature's supreme artistry of color and curve. Have you ever pondered over a bird's egg, Richard—over the frail brittleness that encloses the germ of sublime music? As the crinkled shell is characteristic of the crisp ocean—as it is thin, but of infinite resistance, and shaded mainly with the yellows and red hues of sand—so the bird's egg is characteristic of the softer contours of the land, and memories of leaves and skies are blended in the greens and blues of its shell."

"That seems to me . . . just a little fanciful," I protested, "but to tell the truth, I have not given the subject any attention."

"I will show you my collection presently," said Louis. "I am arranging and classifying it now. Of course I am too old to get any more specimens myself, and I fear to employ the village lads, lest they should be lacking in wise discretion. But believe me, Richard, on the most bitter winter's day my birds' eggs are potent to bring the spring vividly before me. Within these fragile cases, I whisper to myself, there lives in essence the whole magic of spring—its crystal-clear calls, its high and liquid notes, its flash of lark mounting into the sky, all its varieties of faint flutterings among new leaves. I touch my eggs and say, 'Thrush, finch, wood-dove;' and the pressure of woven nests grows round me, and I see the green-cradled babyhood of birds."

"I wonder," I said, "that you ever found the will to take and blow the eggs?"

"Ah," Louis replied, "you are too prosaic. I take but one egg of many; with us scientific interest does not necessarily kill sentiment. And the birds do not resent it; they have been kind to me, kind beyond expression. They have given me a gift. I have told you this that you may be in the right mood to understand. Come in, now; I will show you."

Together we went into the chateau. It seemed to me charged with an atmosphere of old-world sentiment, conventionalized by the lines of ancient perpendicular wall papers, of panels and parquets of oak—dim hand-worked tapestries reproduced within the rapture of autumnal decay. A sombre richness had grown about the greens and blues of the threads, like an emergent shadow; there was the pallor of exhaustion in the blanched yellows and waning whites. Everywhere huge potpourri of roses reproduced about the corridors the sentiment of the lost, the past, the dead; giving for the passionate beauty of June an attenuated sweetness, grown a little sickly in heavy confinement. Louis led me up the stone staircase to a long, bare room, arranged as a museum, with a number of cases containing birds' eggs. It was inconceivable to me how anyone could extract a dream of springtime from so arid a spectacle. Louis drew me over to a table upon which stood a casket jeweled with small turquoises; this he opened with a key. Within lay a curl of golden hair tied with a piece of faded blue ribbon.

"She is with me always," he said dreamily; "her sunny presence pervades the house; I almost think, at times, I see her flitting up and down the staircase. Before, I was lonely—lonely and often bitter—but since she came all has been changed."

"Your dead wife," I said reverently, for the moment forgetting.

"No, no; I was never married. I told you that. But I did not tell you why. There was consumption in our family. I consulted a doctor after you left Paris. . . . I did not think I was justified"—

I grasped Louis' hand. "My friend, my friend, how could I guess at so deep a tragedy?" I exclaimed, deeply moved. Here indeed was courage, heroism. "I fancied—forgive me—I fancied you had not known real suffering. My own case . . . I have loved, too."

"But . . . let me finish. I think you mistake. I never loved . . . in the flesh," he interrupted hastily. "That would have been terrible, terrible. I could not have conquered a great passion. I think I should have killed myself." He touched the curl. "I never saw her," he went on. "I found this . . . just as it is now . . . tied up with blue ribbon . . . in the nest of a bird. That is my romance, Richard—the whole of my romance."

"But—I don't understand!" I gasped.

"It gave me something tangible to build upon—a lock of hair, brought me in that tender way by the bill of a bird, associated with all that is dear and beautiful and wonderful to me. I think: this bit of sunshine in the soft moss of a nest, a golden pillow for wee feathered things. She would be pretty, with such hair! She has blue eyes and gentle ways; she has changed a little during the long years she has been with me, but always she is young, always she is sweet and lovable, with golden hair. Her gentle companionship has grown dearer to me, and dearer; her voice is the blended voice of all birds, and the lightness of the birds is in her step, and their timidity, and soft, nestling ways."

"But it is a dream!" I exclaimed.

"Perhaps. Still, there is the curl," he said. Then he put his hand on my arm. "It puzzles you," he continued, with a whimsical smile. "No Englishman is like that: you are material, and must have the substance; you do not understand that a dream has as actual an existence as a reality. We have the better of you, dear Richard, in this: we have found one secret of happiness."

"If there had ever really been a woman," I began.

"I know. This could not have happened," he said gravely, "it could never have happened—in that case, and I should have suffered—like you."

I took up the curl, examining it curiously. At one time I had given some study to physiology. "But this is not woman's hair," I remarked, without thought.

Louis grew pale. "Not woman's hair!"

Then I realized the mischief I had done. I cursed myself inwardly that in a moment of recklessness I had shattered the whole fabric of his life's dream. It is, of course, easy enough to tell from a lock of hair the age and sex of the owner when it was cut off, and it was quite evident that this curl had been taken from the head of a young child. But why had I not had the wit to keep the discovery to myself? Why must I burst in with my crude science upon this delicate, incomprehensible romance?

"Not woman's hair!" repeated Louis.

"It is the hair of a child—of a young child—about seven years old," I said dully. "Oh, Louis, I should not have spoken."

He looked dazed, bewildered. The next moment he was wringing my hand ecstatically. There were tears in his eyes. "Richard, Richard," he cried, "I had never thought of that—a child! We pass the time . . . for loving women, and sometimes I have felt . . . lately . . . that an old gray-haired curmudgeon like myself has no right to let his fancies run forever on golden-haired maidens. But a child, a little girl—one is never too old to love a child! It is what the chateau wants beyond all else—childish laughter, the patter of childish feet. Oh, Richard, think what you have given me—a little child, to be with me always till I die! It is good—it is good that you came!"

He leaned on me, almost overcome. But I . . . I could not understand. Only in my heart was a great void—a pitiful cry for that childish laughter [illegible] should never hear.

It was twilight when we reached the staircase. The wind was in the tapestries on the walls. They rustled like a shower of falling leaves. Suddenly Louis touched my arm. And down at the bottom of the stairs, amid the fantastic movings of the hangings, I thought for one moment I saw a brief vision of a little golden-haired child.—"Atlantic Monthly."

An Acrostic of Gems.

There was formerly a very pretty fashion in the setting of gems which was so quaint that it deserves to be remembered. It consisted in so setting the gems of a wedding ring that the initial letters of the gems, read in acrostic style, would give the name of the bride. Sometimes, when the names presented difficulties in gem-type, they were set up so as to form a motto on the same plan. The most interesting example of this peculiar fashion is that connected with the name of Rachel, the famous actress. Someone made her a present of a diadem in which were six jewels. The stones were so set that when read acrostically they gave not only the actress's name, but also the initial letters of the principal parts she had played. Put in proper form and translated into words, it was as follows:

R uby,	R ozana,
A methyst,	A menaide,
C ornelian,	C amille,
H ematite,	H ermione,
E merald,	E milie,
L apis lazuli.	L aodice.

The column on the left gives the lady's name from the initials of the gems, and the column on the right shows her six principal roles, so that the gems indicated not only the name, but the occupation also.

The Maxims of Nizam.

There are two kinds of men who, by their personal appearance, instantly attract the attention of women—the very handsome man and the very homely man. The fellow of average appearance seldom counts.

A woman can always instinctively detect insincerity in a man—except when she is in love.

So long as men are men, and women are women, no man will ever meet a woman without both—perhaps unconsciously—casting up the chances of eventual matrimony.

Women seldom speak from experience—for the simple reason that they rarely profit from experience. They are much more likely to talk of their experiences.

This idea of "living on a desert isle" with one woman for life is all very well in its way—and it is a plan that appeals to a certain form of insanity—but a time would always come to any man who might attempt this when he would be glad to sit down and chat socially with his mortal enemy.

Most men think that women are fools; probably because they would like to have them so. This would give the majority of men so much more of an opportunity.

Women get more out of incidents than men do—because their lives are made up of incidents. They are not capable of undergoing a protracted experience.—Albert Lee in "Smart Set."

Fifteen Laws of Book-Borrowing.

An English magazine reprints some curious laws of book-borrowing—originally found in a copy of the "Lettres Fanatiques," 8vo., 1739, now in the British Museum. The complete text in ancient law Latin was published in the "Athenaeum" of December 23, 1893. Prescribed some century and a half ago by one Francis Vargas, Marquis of Macciucca, to frequenters of his library, the book lover of any age will find little to cavil at in their simple provisions, which run as follows:

"I. Do not steal the book.

"II. Do not cut or stab it.

"III. For Heaven's sake draw no lines about it, within or without.

"IV. Do not fold, crumple or wrinkle the leaves.

"V. Nor scribble on the margins.

"VI. All the ink required is already on the pages; do not defile them with more.

"VII. Let your book marker be of perfectly clean paper.

"VIII. The volume is not to be lent to anyone else on any consideration.

"IX. Keep mouse, worm, moth and fly away from it.

"X. Let no oil, fire, dust or filth come near it.

"XI. In a word, use the book, don't abuse it.

"XII. Read and make what extracts you please, but

"XIII. When read don't keep it an unreasonable time.

"XIV. See that the binding and cover are as they were when you received them.

"XV. Do this, and however unknown you shall be entered in the catalogue of my friends. Omit it, and however well known your name shall be erased."

A Canadian Herd Record.

The following letter is published by Hoard's Dairyman:—

Enclosed you will find a brief report of our dairy of twelve cows for the year 1901:—

No. lbs. milk for year..........	62,580
No. lbs. cream from same......	8,544
No. lbs. skim milk	54,036
Cream was shipped to Montreal and averaged me about 78 cents a gallon of 10 lbs., or.	$670.80
54,036 lbs. skim milk, 20 cents..	108.07
Total...	$778.87
Average milk per cow...	5,215 lbs.
Average money per cow	$64.90
Average of milk per hundred lbs.	$1.24½

You will see that I value the skim milk at 20 cents per hundred. I consider it worth this to me to feed at home. My cows are grade Durhams and Jerseys. We have a silo; have used it seven years, and consider it the cheapest feed we can raise here. Had about four acres last season, and had 65 double loads to put in silo. Thought we had nearly 60 tons. Am feeding it twice a day in winter, and find our cows do just as well. I have water in stable. Cows have only been out once this winter. Stable is well lighted, and has a ventilator in it. Cellar under stable, and in this way think we save the liquid manure.

The Story of the Black Dog.

By C. K. BURROW.

The following mysterious story is taken from C. W. Burrow's new book, "Patrick of the Hills." The narrator is an elderly lady, Mrs. Charteris, who relates the incident as an example of Irish folk-tale, but who more than half believes it:

MY grandfather, Patrick Gavan, of Fermoy, was a quiet man to look at—slight, neither tall nor short, with a face that was always pale, dead pale, and eyes that never flinched from man or devil. But, though he looked quiet, he was as wild a roystering fellow as ever stepped on two feet, ready to do the first thing that came into his head, good or bad; it was his misfortune that the bad came the easiest. He had a way with him that made him welcome wherever he went, and many a man, and many a woman, too, rued the day that Patrick Gavan's black eyes first crossed theirs. Well, he married at last, and took his bride to the house on the banks of the Blackwater. She was a lovely, sweet creature, gentle and timid, as you may see from her portrait there; they were as badly matched as tiger and fawn, and she soon began to droop. He was not unkind to her; my grandfather never ill-used a woman; but after a time he took to his old ways, and she just sat down and watched and wondered where it would end. He was a terribly hard drinker, but his head was so strong that he himself seldom got drunk, and one of his delights was to get together a dozen of his wildest neighbors at a great dinner, and see them go under the table one by one. When this kind of thing was going on, his wife would sit in her own room and listen and tremble; once she had tried to get in, but the door was locked, which frightened her more than if she had seen the poor fools soaking their brains within. She crept back to her little oratory and spent the night on her knees, praying for herself, husband and the child that was to call him father.

When the child was born, and for a month after, my grandfather was quiet as a lamb; that was the happiest time of the woman's life, for he would carry the boy up and down, and up and down, never tiring, while she watched him from the bed she was too weak to leave. She thought to herself that her prayers were answered, and that Patrick was a changed man; and he saw what was in her mind and kept a tight hold on himself; but after a time the devil got him by the throat again, and he must needs be at the old tricks.

The fancy that took him was to have one of his dinners, and he arranged it all without letting a word reach his wife; but, in case she should hear, he invited Father Coghlan, the priest who had christened the boy, with the rest. When the night came the poor sick lady was lying up in her room, and he went to her before the guests arrived—I dare say feeling remorseful at heart—and sat down with the boy on his knees.

"Is it cold?" she asked.

"Yes, and with snow on the ground," said he.

"I'm sorry for that."

"Why, mo chroidhe?"

"Nothing," she said, and stretched a thin hand to him across the bed. He took it in his and kissed it. "It's a cold little hand," he said.

"As cold as a snowflake," said she, and smiled softly, and asked for the boy. He laid him on her breast, the child that was to be my father, and she closed her eyes and seemed to sleep. Then he went down to receive the mad guests.

After the eating was over and the wine carried in (those were the claret-drinking days, you must remember), my grandfather locked the door, as usual, and clapped a brace of loaded pistols on the table. "The man who stirs from this room," said he, "before the last bottle's empty, knows what to expect."

Everyone there, except Father Coghlan, was used to this business of the pistols. The priest looked from them to the locked door and back at Gavan with a queer light in his eyes, but he said nothing—only rubbed his chin and drew his under lip back over his teeth.

Well, the drinking began, and went on hour after hour. My grandfather sat pale and upright at the head of his table, while the air grew hotter and the fumes of the liquor reeked stronger and stronger; the table was all splashed and dabbled with wine, men's beards were wet with it; some of them fell forward with spread arms and slept; others slipped to the ground and lay there like logs.

I know this is not a pretty story for a woman to tell, but it's true, and I can see it all. God help the men, I say, who did such things!

There Patrick Gavan sat, and his own glass was never empty; neither was the priest's, but when he raised it it was only to moisten his lips. All the time he watched my grandfather, and ever his face grew harder, and gray with a kind of bitter sadness. At last Gavan saw that he was not drinking, and rose.

"Father Coghlan," he said, "drink."

"A host does not command his guests," said the priest.

"I command mine," cried the other.

"I shall not drink, and I bid you open that door and let me go."

My grandfather caught and balanced one of the pistols in his hand.

"You can't frighten me," said the priest. "I command you, in God's name, to open that door, and let me leave this hell's kitchen!"

"Drink!" said Gavan, setting a hair-trigger.

At that moment Father Coghlan lifted a warning hand.

"Hush!" he said, "I hear a cry!"

"It's the wind."

"It's no wind, but a child or a woman."

"I hear nothing. Drink!"

As the last word left his lips, there came a hurried scratching at the door; a minute later it sounded under the window. The two men looked at each other, the priest had gone as pale as death, but he stood ready, with the fingers of one hand clasped tightly round a cross which he wore. The scratching went on, and my grandfather moved to the window and opened it, still carrying the pistol in his hand. A black dog leaped into the room, and a breath of cold air followed him. The dog's coat was dry, and his feet were dry, and he made no marks upon the polished floor.

The creature ran around and sniffed at the drunken sleepers, turned aside from the priest, and then paused before Gavan, with his eyes shining like coals, and his tongue lolling out at the side of his mouth. It was no dog of my grandfather's, nor had he ever seen it before.

"Go to hell!" he [illegible] and fired full at its head. [illegible] snapped, and there the d[illegible]ood, watching, with his w[illegible]xed on Gavan, and his [illegible] quivering. Just then they both heard a cry, clear and small as the call of a peewit; the dog lifted his black head, and in a second had jumped through the open window without a sound.

There was no need for the priest to speak again; in a flash my grandfather had the door open, and they both ran upstairs to the wife's room. She was lying dead, with the child asleep on her breast, and on her hand, as plain as letters in a book, was a red mark in the shape of a dog's tongue.

You might have supposed that this would change my grandfather's life. Well, it did, for some years. He looked after the boy, taught him to ride as soon as he could walk, gave him all the freedom that was good for him, and perhaps more, and saw him grow up into a fine healthy lad who could hold his own in any exercise of skill or endurance, and had a sound brain as well. But I think it must be the hardest thing in the world for a man who has once led the kind of life my grandfather was used to to leave it altogether behind him. When the boy no longer needed his personal protection, and the occupation of teaching him had passed to other hands, he began to cast back to the old ways; and if these had been bad in the young man they were ten times worse in the old. Yet he had a curious delicacy in everything that affected my father, gave him good counsel from the deeps of his own experience, and concealed from him the unsound places in his own life. But the lad heard stories and kept his eyes open, and knew many things which his father would have given his heart's blood to conceal. The boy, however, had a clean, upright soul, and his mother's strain to the good; and so escaped the fire.

One day my grandfather rode back with his horse all a-foam from a place some twenty miles away, where he had been on no good errand. Times and customs had changed for the better, and there were no young men to fill up the place of the dead who had been his fellows in his wicked carousals. But there were still five or six left, and these he had bidden to a dinner; my father, he thought, was away, but during the day he had returned, and, hearing what was afloat, had made up his mind to slip into the butler's little room, which opened out of the dining-room, when the servants were dismissed.

When Patrick Gavan reached home it was already evening; he had ridden hard and far, and was in no condition to enter upon the night's work, but that fact made him the more determined to see it through. He dressed hurriedly, and by the time the guests were to arrive he was ready. But the hour struck and passed, and no guests came; and then, turning to the calendar, he found that he had made a mistake in the date, and that that day's preparations should have been made for the morrow. However, he sat down to table, where all the covers were laid, and had every course served, and the wine brought in; and when the time came, he sent the servants away, locked the door, and laid the pistols beside him.

It was winter again, and the night was still and cold. The house was as quiet as an empty room, so that the sound of the Blackwater running at the foot of the garden could be heard where my grandfather sat. He shivered, and threw more logs on the fire, which already blazed like a furnace; then he began to drink.

The hours slipped by until it was past midnight, at which time Gavan rose and addressed each empty place in turn, as though his friends were there, asking them to drink with him; but there were only six places laid, and he called twelve names, and the last that he called was Father Coghlan's.

"Father Coghlan," he cried, "drink!"

He stood with his glass raised, and his gaze fixed at the level of a man's eyes, his pale face set in a grim smile. He saw the priest before him as plainly as I see you, and he must have heard him speak as well, for after a time he said:

"I hear nothing. Drink!"

And then, on a sudden, there came a scratching at the door. The glass slanted in his hand and some wine splashed upon the table; but he steadied himself with an oath, drank, and sat down; still looking toward the place where the priest had sat. Presently the scratching ceased, but a moment later it sounded from beneath the window. At that Gavan's jaw dropped, and a sweat broke out upon his white face, but he did not stir. The scratching went on, low at first, and then louder and fiercer, until it seemed like a voice calling to him to open; after a time it drew him to his feet and a few paces toward the window, and as it increased it drew him farther, until at last his hand was on the bar of the shutter; and he threw the shutter back and opened the window, and a black dog leapt into the room. His coat was wet, as though he had swum the river, and his head was wet, but he made no mark upon the floor. His eyes were blazing, and his tongue was lolling out of his mouth; but there was no sound of breathing nor any sign of moisture about the jaws.

My grandfather walked back to the table, took up a pistol, and sat down. The dog ran around the room, sniffing at every vacant place, and then paused before Gavan. He took a steady sight and pulled the trigger; the lock snapped, and there the dog stood still, with his wicked eyes on my grandfather's face.

And then my father, who was watching all this from the little room, heard a clear, shrill cry, though whether Gavan uttered it he could not tell, and the black dog ran past the chair and around it, the pistol fell, and the creature was across the floor and out of the window quick as the shadow of a flying bird.

The boy broke out of his hiding-place, hot with terror. Patrick Gavan was dead, and on his right hand was a red mark in the shape of a dog's tongue.

Michael J. Fleming, a prominent lawyer of Pottsville and formerly principal of the Donaldson High School, related the following anecdote:

"One day at school I gave a very bright boy a sum in algebra, and, although the problem was comparatively easy, he couldn't do it. I remarked:

"'You should be ashamed of yourself. At your age George Washington was a surveyor.'

"The boy looked me straight in the eyes and replied:

KILLED IN TORONTO

Thomas Guerin, of Peterborough Killed in Toronto on Tuesday

Toronto Globe—Thomas Guerin, a boilermakers' helper, employed in the Grand Trunk's shops, at the foot of Brock street, Toronto, was run down and fatally injured by a shunting engine about noon yesterday. He left the shop to get his dinner and walked down the track a short distance, apparently intending to cross to the water front. He waited to go behind a moving freight train, and after it had passed he stepped in front of the light engine which was backing in the opposite direction. It knocked him down and he was terribly injured in the head and upper portion of the body. The ambulance removed him to the Emergency Hospital, but he died soon after reaching that institution. Internal injuries, it is thought, caused his death, but the facts will be made known at the inquest which Coroner Johnston has called for to-morrow afternoon.

Guerin was 23 years of age and resided with his brother Adolph at 190 Dufferin street. He was unmarried, and came to Toronto from Peterborough.

The deceased was a son of Mr. Adolph Guerin, who resides in the south end of the town. He went to Toronto about a year ago.

ODE TO BURLEIGH FALLS

The following poem was handed in for publication in this g. f. g. At the the risk of breaking the press we let it go:

I have struck a weary streak,
Burleigh Falls
I'll be with you in a week
Burleigh Falls;
Underneath your spreading trees
Soothed by song of bird and breeze
May I rest a little, please,
Burleigh Falls

I have mentioned you in song
Burleigh Falls,
Said your winters were too long
Burleigh Falls,
I have also stated how
Men wear snow shoes when they plow
Until June—forgive me now,
Burleigh Falls

Days I think of now and then
Burleigh Falls
That will never come again
Burleigh Falls
When I wearied in the quest
life's childhood joys—the best—
And you cradled me to rest
Burleigh Falls

So when summer suns are here
Burleigh Falls
Just about this time of year
Burleigh Falls
Through the cost it does frustrate
I'm inclined to pull my freight
For your rocks I always prate,
Burleigh Falls.

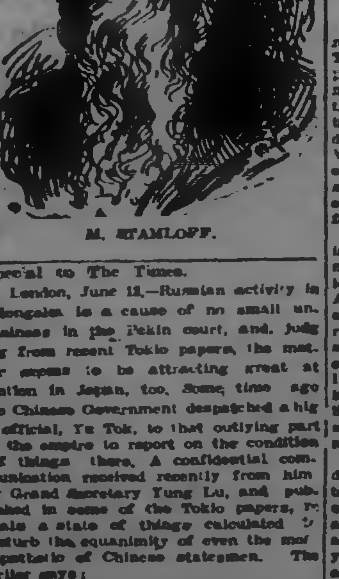
WAR CLOUD DARKENS IN THE FAR EAST



M. STAMLOFF.

Russian Activity in China Causing Great Uneasiness

An Ominous Outlook for the Peace of the World

A Despatch Says that War Cannot Be Long Delayed

Special to The Times.

London, June 12.—Russian activity in Mongolia is a cause of no small uneasiness in the Pekin court, and, judging from recent Tokio papers, the matter seems to be attracting great attention in Japan, too. Some time ago the Chinese Government despatched a high official, Yu Tok, to that outlying part of the empire to report on the condition of things there. A confidential communication received recently from him by Grand Secretary Yung Lu, and published in some of the Tokio papers, reveals a state of things calculated to disturb the equanimity of even the most apathetic of Chinese statesmen. The writer says:

"Since the boxer trouble of the year before last the Russian Government has spared no pains to purchase the good will and gratitude of the Mongolian chiefs by lavish and constant presents of food stuffs, garments and money. The Russian policy, in this respect, is, indeed, in striking contrast to the irregular and uncertain payment of our own stipulated subsidies to these chiefs. According to a rumor current along the routes I have travelled thus far, Prince Tuan and Gen. Tung Fuh-siang (the proscribed leaders of the Boxer movement) are said to have been present in these parts, impressing upon the people the water decadence of the Middle Kingdom and extolling the prowess of Russia. Whatever may be the truth of this story, I have myself been the witness on several occasions, of the presence in these parts of a number of Gen. Tung's followers. I have also seen repeatedly parties of Russian soldiers moving about in several places. There are schools in many places where the natives are learning the Russian language * * * At Lin-Tsai, Kian-Nin (impossible to locate on the map but apparently in the parts adjacent to the Russian border) and some other places, I have seen a large number of Russian settlers * * * In other sections of the country, also, it is noticeable that there is an increasing tide of popular leaning toward Russia. This, I believe, is the result of ignorance on the part of natives as to the mighty power of the Middle Kingdom, and it is therefore urgently important that the dangerous tendency in question should be checked by the despatch of a strong force of troops, drilled according to the foreign fashion. It is my earnest hope that your excellency will at once consult with Viceroy Yuan on this subject."

Does Russia intend to relinquish Manchuria? What means the recent conflab between the Czar and the French President? Why did the latter visit St. Petersburg, and what was the object of the meeting? In the light of events that war is coming and that quickly, few who have watched the trend of events in the East, it is easily understood. T in the East will deny.

Why Britain was Anxious for End of War

Special to The Times.

London, June 11.—The Asiatic preoccupations of Great Britain are responsible in great part for the termination of a wasteful conflict in South Africa. The engagement recently entered into with Japan calls for a free hand, for there is very little doubt in the opinion of competent observers that the outbreak of hostilities between Russia and Japan is merely a question of opportunity, when Japan might might not be able to avail itself of if England's teeth were still fixed in South Africa. The progress of Russia in Persia also has to be met and counteracted in some way, and the prestige of Great Britain all over Asia restored. The attention of the Government, too, is urgently demanded by the imperilled maritime supremacy of Great Britain, without which England sinks to the position of a fifth-rate Power, and the colonial navy she is creating would have no reason for being.

These last considerations, coupled with the others, constitute powerful motives for the peace just concluded, as also for the exercise of a generous toleration of the Boers after they have laid down their arms, and for loyalty to the colonial rebels when they submit. The existence of the British Empire may be dependent upon it.

TWO TRIPS TO PELEE

An American Scientist Visits the Crater's Mouth

DURING A TERRIFIC STORM

Sat on the Edge of the Crater Enveloped in Rain Clouds and Speculating Upon Strange Detonations

Perilous Trip Down Gorges—Met Kennan and Party at Acier and Decided to Return Upon a Second Trip of Discovery

Special to The Times.

Fort de France, Island of Martinique, June 9.—Professor Angelo Heilprin, president of the Philadelphia Geographical Society, who is here for the National Geographical Society, came into Fort de France last night from his explorations of the crater on the summit of Mont Pelee. Professor Heilprin is well and in good spirits; He has rested from the fatigues of his last trip and is ready for more work.

New Crater Located.

The following important points have been settled by Professor Heilprin:

The location of the new crater has been accurately determined; it is positively known that there has been no overflow of molten matter from the lip of the crater; there has been no subsidence of the mountain, and the height of Mont Pelee is unchanged; the crater does not contain a cinder cone; there has been no cataclysm and no topographical alteration of the country. The period of violent eruptions has probably ended, although the volcano may continue quietly active for a long time to come.

Prof. Heilprin's Expedition.

Referring to his expedition, Professor Heilprin said to-day—

"I left Fort de France with Mr. Leadbetter the morning of May 29, and reached Acier at 7 o'clock in the evening of the 29th. We visited Vive and Basse Pointe. The latter place has been entirely destroyed by the overflow of the local streams. Mud flowing into the beds of the rivers there caused this overflow. Many important usines are seriously menaced by the floods.

"May 31 we made our first ascent of the volcano. We left Acier at half-past 5 and Vive at half-past 7 o'clock in the morning. The party consisted of Mr. Leadbetter and myself and three colored boys. We were on muleback. At an altitude of 700 metres we began the ascent of the Arete. We passed along its east side and slightly to the north of the mountain.

On the Crater's Lip.

"We arrived at the lip of the old crater, the former site of Lake Palmiste, at 11 o'clock. Here it began raining. Rain clouds and the clouds from the volcano enveloped us and we could not see ten feet. A terrific thunderstorm had begun, and we sat on the edge of the crater for some time, speculating whether the detonations we heard were of thunder of from the volcano. As we afterwards found the River Fallaise to be boiling, the detonations were probably volcanic. We could not tell how near we were to the crater, as, either from local attraction or the electrical conditions our compass refused to work. Its variation was about twenty degrees to the eastward, but later we found that it acted normally at the lip of the new crater. The colored boys with us were horribly scared.

Perils of the Trip

"We finally groped our way down that awful arete through gloomy clouds of rain, and amid great electric discharges. At every step we dislodged the rain-soaked ashes and were in danger of being precipitated down the hideous gorges on either side.

"The extreme top of the volcano is covered with cinders, scoriae, bowlders and angular rocks, which had been ejected from the volcano. Further down the mountain is covered with ashes and mud and these are thick on the arete. On our way down we saw the river Fallaise rushing along with great velocity and full of steam and mud. We reached Acier well, but soaked, caked with mud, and very much disappointed.

"At Acier we met Mr. George Kennan and his party, and determined to attempt a second ascent the next day, June 1. The ascent made this day with Mr. Kennan was more trying and difficult than the one I had previously made with Mr. Leadbetter. The day was intensely hot, and it was raining. When we reached the old crater it was again enveloped in vapor. The temperature of the basin of Lake Palmiste, taken three inches below the surface, was 124 degrees Fahrenheit.

"Between lifts in the clouds of vapor we could see the new crater, of which Mr. Varian made an excellent sketch. Suddenly the vapor cleared away and we made a dash forward. We reached the edge of the new crater, and from where we stood we could have dropped stones into the white mass within. The new crater is a crevasse running north and south and expanding into a bowl. This crevasse nearly rifted the mountain. It runs transversely to the old crater, and might be called a huge gash. From it volcanic matter has been freely erupted.

A Sublime Spectacle

"As we stood on the edge of the crater a sublime spectacle began. I now have some conception of what is going on inside the earth, and have been a spectator of nature's interior work. We were assailed with a noise. Far below there was a hissing of steam like that of a thousand locomotives, as well as violent detonations.

The principal output of the crater, while we were there, was steam. The phenomena were limited and were not essentially different from those of other volcanoes in action. Positive assurance was gained that no molten matter has flowed over the lip of the new crater. Several observations taken with the aneroid barometer showed that the height of Mont Pelee had not been changed.

No Eruption of Lava.

"I agree with Professor Robert T. Hill the geologist of the United States Government, that Mont Pelee erupted no lava, and that there has been no cataclysm or any serious topographical alterations. No cylinder cone was visible in the crater. What was taken for a cone is a pile of ejected rocks. Perhaps the bottom of the new crater may contain a cinder cone, but we could not see down only about 150 or 200 feet. I believe, however, that the crater is very much deeper than this.

"I do not know the exact material of which the pile of rocks in the centre of the crater is composed, but it seems to be matter which has been ejected from the crevasse. This pile of rocks has no vent. I think Mont Pelee has freed itself from the interior pressure, and that the volcano is not liable to further violent eruption. It is not safe, however, to make predictions about volcanoes.

Problems in Pelee's Eruption.

"The eruption of Mont Pelee on May 8 was unique in that it resulted in the greatest destruction of life and property ever known by direct agency of a volcano. The phenomenon of the explosion of flaming gases is probably new, but a careful study of observations is necessary before an opinion can be reached. The electrical phenomena are also new. They probably did not play the chief role in the destruction of St. Pierre, but were developed by and aided the other forces. I have specimens which show the effects of the bolts of lightning. The latter were small and intense and penetrated within the houses of the city. For rapidity of action and for lives destroyed Mont Pelee holds the record among volcanoes.

"When we got back to Acier we found Mr. Jaccaci and Mr. Leadbetter, who had stopped at the arete, and had descended before us. Early in the morning of June 2 Mr. Kennan and his party left for Fort de France. Mr. Leadbetter and I went to Morne Rouge to study topographical details, and from there we came back to Acier and Fort de France.

"I shall now join Mr. Kennan in exploring the Leprecheur region."

THE FERNIE DISASTER

Inquiry into the Cause of the Recent Explosion—Four More Bodies Recovered

Fernie, B.C., June 11.—The adjourned inquest into the recent disaster was resumed this morning before Coroner Trites, before whom working plans of the mines were produced.

James Wallace, a shot firer, who worked in Beaver deeps, where it is suggested the explosion might have taken place, testified that the locality was during the morning shift all clear of gas, and that he could have taken an open light to the Beaver face without fear. He remembered a blower in the deeps on one occasion, but this amounted to nothing. He could not account for the explosion. He had worked in the Nanaimo Mines, and there was as much gas there as here. Water was taken in carts and thrown about with buckets to lay the dust. There was a large quantity of dust on the haulage. The new machinery recently introduced raised a good deal of dust, but witness had never withheld a shot on account of dust from the machines. Black powder and dynamite were the usual explosives used. In answer to Mr. Blakemore witness said: "If I had been told that an explosion took place that day I would say that it could not be so from what I saw. Any dust was at least two hundred feet back from the face workings." A year ago gas had been found in the mines, and after that safety lamps had been introduced.

One of the Survivors.

John Doble, fire boss, swore that the faces were clear of dust and gas within a radius of twenty yards of the working faces in the No. 3 mine, to which the explosion expended. He was in the mine at the time of the explosion, and felt a great blast of wind coming towards him. He and 23 others came out alive. The explosion came from the south side of the No. 2 stope in the No. 2 mine. He had never known gas amounting to anything to exist in No. 3 mine. There was no dust in the No. 3 mine, had lots of water, in fact was all wet with the exception of a small district on the right or south side of the slope. He had never reported the existence of dust, and had never seen a fire. Witness had been engaged in coal mining for twenty years in Scotland and Pennsylvania. In Scotland they never sprinkled the dust.

A Bereaved Father.

Hugh Diggs, a rope splicer and electrician, exhibited a good deal of feeling, he having lost one of his sons in the disaster. He had seen no gas in Beaver deep, but had seen gas in No. 3 mine, and had lighted it on one occasion, and it had taken half an hour to put it out. He had never seen any gas in the No. 2 mine, but the dust was ankle deep in the main roadways, but never nearer the working faces than 300 feet. He could not give any explanation of how the accident happened. He was outside at the time of the explosion, and saw a great cloud of dust, but no fire, coming from the entrances of the Nos. 2 and 3 mines. His son and a "trapper" had opened lamps in the main air shaft, and he believed this was often done, but never in the mine workings. He thought if the overcast had been built four feet higher it would not have carried away, and that the fan which continued working would have supplied air with might have saved the lives of several of the miners. He never at any time reported to anyone that he thought that dust was dangerous. He would always damp on the roadways of Beaver deep, and the road leading up to it from the main roadway was damp.

Tim McCarthy, bratticeman (a ventilator worker), worked in the No. 2 mine at Beaver deep, and saw nothing dangerous, and knew nothing about the cause of the explosion. He once noticed a small fire caused by a shot at the entrance to No. 1 room in the machine workings.

George Allison, timberman, worked in the No. 2 mine, and never noticed gas or dust. He noticed a fire started once by a shot.

D. R. McDonald, timberman, worked in the No. 2 division of the No. 2 mine in the machine section. There was no machine working in that section on the day of the explosion. The mine was clear of gas generally during the day. That section was very dusty in the main roadway, but he could not give the cause of the accident. The main roadway was 300 feet away from the working faces. He believed the machines were dangerous, and had twice seen fires started from the machine workings. There was a considerable amount of dust, and it was not sufficiently watered. He admitted to Mr. Macdonald that the roadways, which were in the same condition as on the day of the accident, had been reported by him to be on May 5 in good order. He thought that powder was not a safe explosive in gaseous mines. In Nova Scotia they have discontinued the use of powder, because of the gaseous condition of the mines. He had thought the mines dangerous, but had never said so to anybody, and had lost a son in the explosion.

The inquest was again adjourned.

At 12.30 yesterday a fire broke out at Michel, having been communicated from a conflagration in the neighboring woods. Twenty-six of the companies' houses were burnt, doing damage to the value of about $25,000. The tipple was on fire, and one fan was burned out, but the timbers at the mine entrance were left, and the tipple was ultimately saved. The output at Michel will, therefore, not be interfered with for more than a day or two.

More Bodies Taken Out

Four more bodies were taken from the mines to-day, making 134 altogether, and it is likely there are four more yet to be recovered.

BUCKHORN POWER HAS BEEN SOLD

Is Now Owned by the Burleigh Falls Company

SO A TELEGRAM SAYS

A Big Deal in Water Power That will Interest Peterborough

Special to The Times.

Newark, N.J., June 12.—Mr. J. Alexander Culverwell of Toronto, Managing Director of the Central Ontario Power Co., which has power concessions near Peterborough, to-day announced that he has purchased outright Buckhorn Falls, in the same neighborhood. The falls are only 18 miles from Peterborough.

The company now owns Burleigh Falls, where five thousand horse power is being developed and transmitted to Peterborough. The acquisition of Buckhorn Falls has been contemplated for some time by the company. At Buckhorn Falls, two thousand additional horse power will be developed by the company, and transmitted to Peterborough and the surrounding towns, as soon as machinery can be installed.

The company's head offices are in Toronto. The further extension of the enterprise is only a matter of negotiating for further supplies of power in a district which is rich in water power.

DEAD BABY IN A BOX.

THE BODY OF AN INFANT FOUND BURIED IN SAWDUST

The Infant was Wrapped in a Copy of the Times—Inquest Held Last Night

While Mr. Matthew McMahon, an employee of the Dickson Company, was at work in the lumber yard adjoining the mill yesterday he discovered the body of a newly born infant. He at once notified the Chief of Police, who informed Coroner Gray, who, after consulting with County Crown Attorney Wood, ordered an inquest to be held.

The body was that of a female. It was in a box, and was headless. It was removed to the undertaking establishment of D. Belleghem, and prepared for burial.

THE INQUEST.

At the inquest held last night a jury composed of Messrs. McFadden, Miller Ryan, Hutchinson, Good, Brown, Savigny Hall, Cooney, Brooks, McGregor, Cobb, Kindred and Bradburn was impanneled.

Evidence was heard from Chief Rezzel, Mr. Frank Mann, of Belleghem undertaking establishment, and Dr. Young, after which an adjournment was made until Monday evening June 16th at 8 p.m.

RECRUITS FOR UNCLE SAM.

New York, June 11.—A special cable to the Herald from London says—It was stated in the lobby of the House of Commons yesterday that an officer of the United States army was at the present time in London, enrolling recruits for service in the Philippines from the ranks of seasoned soldiers who are now returning from South Africa.

The matter next week will be mentioned in the House of Commons in the form of a question by one of its members.

TWO NEGRO BOYS LYNCHED

Charlotte, N.C., June 11.—A mob of about fifty men broke into the jail at Salisbury at 1 o'clock this morning, took out two negro boys, Harris and James Gillespie, charged with murdering a white girl, and lynched them. They were hanged to a tree on the outskirts of the city. Their bodies were riddled with bullets.

THE EFFECT OF LYNCHINGS.

In justice to President Roosevelt, let it be said that he has at last vigorously denounced lynching. So far he is an improvement on his pious predecessor, who on the very scene of the lynchings morally connived at them by his silence. But words, however, strong, will have little effect on the passions of a Texan mob. Something effectual evidently must be done if a murderous collision of races is not to be the end. Yet it is extremely difficult to say what can be done when the powers of Government are so limited as are those of the Government of the United States, and with such a lack of statesmanship as there is now at Washington, where regard for national interests is lost in a sectional struggle for commercial self. The social antagonism between the North and South has not been obliterated by the reconquest of the South, and it still suggests misgivings as to the ultimate stability of the Union.

The Day of Miracles not Past

A Toronto "Star" reporter investigated the case of Mr. Geo. Warner, and found after thirteen years of almost total deafness, he had been cured by inhaling Catarrhozone.

This proves that where Catarrhozone is employed, impaired hearing and deafness can be cured. Catarrhozone always brings quick relief, and is warranted to give lasting satisfaction. All sufferers from Impaired Hearing, Deafness, Head Noises and Ringing in the Ears, are advised to inhale Catarrhozone and derive the great benefit it is capable of affording. ELECTRICITY FROM AIR

Further Particulars of the Latest Discovery

POWER AS FREE AS AIR

A Tremendous Industrial Revolution will Follow the Discovery

Confirmation of the News of the Invention—It will Render Valueless Hundreds of Millions Worth of Property Used for Power

Special to The Times.

London, June 12.—The report of the greatest scientific discovery of the age has been confirmed. The new invention which is nothing more or less than the using of atmospheric electricity without chemicals or dynamos, and applying it without any motive force. The discoverer is a Spaniard named Figueras, an engineer, and for many years professor of physics at St. Augustin's College, Las Palmas, and long known as a scientific student.

Hitherto he has jealously guarded the secret, fearing that a premature revelation might rob him of his reward, even now, while he professes to have entirely succeeded he remains silent regarding the exact principles of his discovery.

He says, however, that he has invented a generator which can collect the electric fluid, is able to store it and apply it to an infinite number of purposes, for instance, in connection with ships, railways and manufactories. He says he expects the effect of his discovery will be a tremendous economic and industrial revolution.

He will not give the key to his invention but declares that the only extraordinary point about it is that it has taken so long to discover a simple scientific fact.

The people of the Canary Islands consider Prof. Figueras to be very able, and they firmly believe that his invention is genuine. He had his appartus made in separate parts in Paris, Berlin and Las Palmas, and fitted them together himself.

The firm in Berlin which supplied some of the parts was curious enough to send to the Canary Islands an emissary to try to draw out the professor, but the attempt was unsuccessful.

Prof. Figueras is shortly going to Madrid and Berlin to patent his invention.

A German electrical company is reported to have offered a very large sum for the invention, while the syndicate in Barcelona has also made a generous offer. Neither advance has been accepted. This the correspondent adds, is all that it is possible to obtain at present.

No opinion can be expressed as to the value of the discovery until further details are known.

The Mail says that it has learned from other sources that Prof. Figueras has constructed a rough apparatus by which he obtains a current of 550 volts, which he utilizes in lighting his house and driving a 20 horse power motor.

He is shortly coming to London with a perfected working apparatus. His inventions comprise a generator, motor and sort of a governor or regulator. The whole apparatus is so simple that a child can work it.

Lightning Remedy for Cramps.

Some people have cramps pretty often, others only now and again. But when you do have them it's a mighty quick relief you want. Polson's Nerviline is as sure as death to relieve cramps in five seconds—it's instantaneous, just a few drops in sweetened water and the pain is gone. Buy a bottle of Nerviline today and keep it handy. Nerviline is a common household necessity and only costs 25 cents.

NORTH MONAGHAN.

The Council of the Township of North Monaghan met as per adjournment of the last meeting.

All the members were present, the Reeve presiding. The minutes of the last meeting were not read.

The committee appointed to estimate the cost of the crib-work and filling in of washout on the Drain Road, reported.

It was moved by Messrs. May and Smith, that Commissioner Ravington be, and he is hereby, instructed to provide and crib and fill in the washout on the Drain Road by day labour in the same manner as other work is being performed throughout the township. The Council to supply the timber, etc., and the work to be under the supervision of a Committee consisting of the Reeve and Chas. May and Smith. This was carried.

It was moved by Messrs. May and Smith, that a committee consisting of Messrs. Madill, Smith and Dobbin meet a committee of Cavan Township Council for the purpose of inspecting and repairing any necessary places of the Cavan boundary road.—Carried.

By-law No. 610, entitled a "Bylaw to confirm an agreement with the Peterborough Radial Railway Co., by which the franchise to erect a street railway within the Township and operate the same for a term of years," was introduced and read a first and second time. The third reading of this by-law was deferred until next meeting of the council.

The clerk forwarded the list of statute labour commutations for each division for the year 1902, as follows: Road Division, No. 1, 403 days, $302.25, less snow shovelling acct., $32.50, total, $269; add bal. not spent, 1901, 75 cents; leaving total of $269.75. Road Division No. 2, 188 days, $141; less snow shovelling acct., $28.25; total, $112.75; less overspent 1901, $10.75; leaving total of $102.00; Road Division No. 3, 222 days, $166.50; less snow shovelling acct. $20.15, total $146.35; add bal. not spent 1901, $4.00; leaving a total of $150.37. Road Division, No. 4, 250 days, $187.50, less snow shovelling acct., $12.50; total $175; add bal. not spent 1901, $132.00; leaving grant total of $[illegible].

These lists were accepted and ordered to be delivered to the several Road Commissioners.

Council then adjourned until Monday, July 14th, at the town hall, at 1.30 p.m.

The adjourned meeting of the N. Monaghan Court of Revision met on Saturday, June 7th. The following alterations were made to the assessment roll for 1902: R. Kline, assessment part 1 or 2, $600; J. Madill, assessment reduced, $300; N. W. May assessed as [illegible]; J. Ferguson, assessed as [illegible]. Mr. R. Lillico, appeared before the council asking for a reduction in his assessment on lot 1 on 13th con., but owing to irregularities in the appeal no action was taken in the matter. The roll was then confirmed and the court adjourned.

APPEAL TO THE BOERS

Text of the Address to Burgers in the Field by Their Leaders

Advised to Become Good Citizens — Thanked for Their Sacrifices and Suffering

Pretoria, June 11.—Following is the text of the last letter of Boer leaders at Vereeniging to the burghers in the field, when peace was signed:

"Brother burghers and countrymen,—We feel it to be our duty to address a word of thanks and farewell to you on ending our struggle. It is our duty to inform you that peace has now been concluded, in a manner and on the terms set forth in an agreement signed by the two governments, and on the grounds set forth in a resolution this day adopted by the burgher assembly at Vereeniging. We heartily thank you for your heroism, for your sacrifice of so much that was dear and beloved by you, for your obedience, and for your faithful discharge of duty, all of which serves the honor and glory of the Afrikander people. We counsel you all to acquiesce in this peace; to conduct yourselves quietly and peacefully, and to obey and respect the new government.

"Further, we would inform you that the head of the commission has been appointed by the representatives of the two states for the purpose of obtaining money and means to provide as far as possible for the widows and orphans whose husbands and fathers have given their lives in the struggle for freedom and justice, and whose memory will ever remain in our history.

"We also here express heartfelt sympathy with those who mourn, and pray God to give them strength to bear their cross.

"We would also speak a word of praise and thanks to our women and children, who have so heroically borne the most bitter sacrifices and suffering. Now there is peace, and although not the peace such as we longed for, yet let us abide where God has lead us. We can with clear conscience declare that for two and a half years our people carried on the struggle in a manner almost unknown in history. Let us now grasp each other's hands, for another great struggle lies before us, for the spiritual and social prosperity and welfare of our people.

"Casting aside all feelings of bitterness, let us learn to forget and forgive so that the deep wounds caused by this war may be healed.

SHOT HIS WIFE'S FRIEND

Incensed Husband Found Them in a Pleasure Resort - Wanted to Expose the Pair

Special to The Times.

Harrisburg, Pa, June 10.—Shortly after 6 o'clock this evening people on Third street, near Reilly, were startled by screams from a party of two men and a woman in a carriage, followed by the sound of a shot. Directly afterward one of the men fell out of the carriage, and an officer ran up to arrest the whole party. The man on the ground was George Ritter, an iron worker, and the other two were Joseph Redmond and his wife.

Redmond had heard from the neighbors when he came home this afternoon that his wife had gone out driving with Ritter, and it added fuel to the flame made by stories he had been told before concerning his wife and Ritter. He jumped on his wheel and went to Rockville, where he found the two in a resort. Compelling them to get into the carriage, he also took a seat, his intention being to drive the pair to the business place of his brother to expose the woman and her friend. When they arrived at the brother's business place Ritter refused to stop the horse and kept on down the street. This so incensed Redmond that he drew his revolver, and, it is said, shot Ritter through the hand, following it up by beating him with the butt of the revolver. Ritter is at the hospital, so badly injured that it is thought he will die. Redmond disclaims intentional shooting, saying his revolver went off as he was beating Ritter.

GOLD IN ONTARIO

Indications are that Rich Gold Deposits Exist in This Province

The Bowmanville Statesman says that it is probable there is gold in the vicinity of Newcastle harbor. R. H. McCalphin, formerly of G.T.R. at Newcastle, killed a chicken recently that had a solid gold nugget weighing nearly 1-2 oz. in its gizzard. Mac claims that the fowl picked the gold from a load of gravel hauled from Newcastle harbor. The Dominion Government has been spending considerable money on this public convenience for the benefit of the Clarke farmers, and Mac's chicken got a few nuggets, no doubt. This nugget is worth $8.50. This incident explains why a fewmen have been strolling on the sand east of the pier this spring. There is more gold there.

That gold exists in paying quantities in many parts of the Midland District, we have not the slightest doubt. The Cordova mines, in Peterborough county, employing several hundred men, is proof of this. Recently at Stony Lake, quartz was picked up and found to be exceedingly rich in precious metal. It is only a matter of time —and a very short time at that, until our mineral wealth is known.

Wheat Outlook Good

Special to The Times.

Duluth, Minn., June 10.—The favorable weather conditions of the last few weeks have given a most encouraging turn to the prospects for the spring wheat crop in the grand wheat-raising states of Minnesota and the Dakotas. The prediction, according to reliable reports, are for a large crop. Last year's wheat acreage in the three states was about 14,000,000 acres; this year's will be a few hundred thousand acres less. But while wheat will be shortened a trifle, the abundant moisture of the spring will aid the crop in growth. There will be a far larger crop this year of other grains than wheat, if the present promise is fulfilled. The flax crop is estimated for the three states at a little over 3,000,000 acres of land.

The World's Peace

Special to The Times.

Tokio, Japan, June 11 — The Osaka says: While the contracting powers in the new alliance are Great Britain and Japan on paper, there is also the unofficial American support of the alliance. It is an alliance of the three Powers which hold the balance of power in the Far East, in commerce, in navigation and in naval and military strength. These three powers can defy the world, and we do not hesitate to assert that their alliance is sufficient to guarantee the peace of the world. The mist of uncertainty which hung over the Far East since the China-Japan war has been dispersed.

THE CORONATION BAZAR

Opened in London by Her Majesty Queen Alexandra

The Americans Take the Lead and Occupy the Most Conspicuous Places in the Building—Promises to Be an Immense Success

Special to The Times.

London, June 10 — The Queen at the Botanical Gardens this afternoon opened the great coronation bazaar in aid of charity. The magnitude of the present undertaking, which lasts two days, quite eclipses the similar affair held at Kensington two years ago in aid of the sufferers from the war. Although much space in the great conservatories has been given up to the bazaar, the enterprise has attained such huge proportions that vast marquees have had to be erected along the great walks in the gardens. The stalls are attended by titled personages and the elite of London's society. It is hoped to realize $500,000 from the undertaking.

Occupying the most conspicuous position in the entire bazaar is the American court, which consists of six stalls and two exhibitions. The principal stall is the Embassy stall, with Mrs. Choate at the head, assisted by Mrs. Adair and all the ladies connected with the Embassy. Another interesting stall is that presided over by Consuelo, Duchess of Manchester, who has with her among others, Lady Essex, Mme. Von Andre, Mrs. Dudley Leigh, Mrs. Smith Barry, Lady Lister-Kaye, and Mrs. Jack Leslie, all American women. Mrs. Bradley Martin has a stall, at which she is assisted by Lady Craven and a large circle of friends. Others who are holding stalls are Mrs. Herbert Eaton and her sister, Mrs. Alfred G. Vanderbilt, Mrs. Hagreaves Brown and Mrs. Hugh Reed Griffin. One of the most striking exhibitions is that of Mrs. Arthur Paget's stall. It is a display of jewelry, and including cherished family heirlooms, new tiaras, ropes of valuable amounting in all to about $15,000,000, pearls and glittering diamonds. Assisting Mrs. Paget are the Princess Hatzfeldt and Lady Cunard. All three are Americans. Cora Lady Strafford presides at a beautiful exhibition of miniatures, silver and other works of art. She is assisted by Miss Pauline Astor, Mrs. W. Burns, Mrs. Lulu Harcourt and Mrs. Phipps.

Among other fair Americans assisting in various ways are Mrs. Ronalds, Mrs. Mackay, Mrs. Ritchie, Mrs. Foxhall Keene, Mrs. Padelford, Mrs. Chauncey, Lady Dufferin, Lady Grey Egerton, Lady Naylor-Leyland and Mrs. George Cornwallis-West.

Items of Interest

Lake Park, Minn., June 11. — A tornado swept through the county 12 miles north of here yesterday afternoon, cutting a path two miles wide and three miles long. Nine farm houses were destroyed and ten persons are reported dead. The church at Spangle was demolished. Further details have not yet reached here.

London, June 11. — Reuter's Agency learns that no news has yet been received of the return of Colonel Morland and his force from Lake Chad. This is giving rise to some surprise, as the expedition was due back at Lokoja at latest May 15, when Colonel Morland was to relieve General Sir Frederick Lugard, who was to leave about that date on his way to Las Palmas for the purpose of being married. Telegrams have been received announcing that General Lugard delayed his departure until the 19th inst., when he sailed for Las Palmas. The last personal communication with Colonel Morland was in February, when Mr. William Wallace, C.M.G., the Deputy High Commissioner, bade him good-bye at Bautchi, after the peaceful subjugation of that slave-raiding centre and the installation of a new Emir by Mr. Wallace.

Colonel Morland then started on his long journey to Lake Chad, involving a further march of over 300 miles through country absolutely unknown to the British. Colonel Morland had with him fifteen white officers, two doctors, and 400 West African Frontier Force, with two millimetre guns and two Maxims. After leaving Bautchi Colonel Morland was to proceed to Gujiba where Fadr-el-Allah was killed, about midway between Bautchi and Lake Chad, and it is known that on the way there he had some stiff fighting. After leaving a garrison and a resident at Gujiba, Colonel Morland was to proceed direct to Lake Chad or to strike south via Yola, as the political situation might determine.

News lately reached Ibi, the British post on the Benue, of a tragic affair near the Anglo-German frontier. It appears that the officer commanding a German expedition in that region, during an altercation with the Emir of Banya, who had declined certain demands made by him, seized the chief by the throat, whereupon the after ripped him open with his knife. The officer's aide-de-camp, who was standing by, at once shot the Emir dead, whereupon one of the latter's head men killed the German aide-de-camp on the spot. Fighting ensued, and eventually the town was destroyed.

Some fresh details of Fadr-el-Allah's death, which have come through a British source, show that, after a desperate fight of several hours at Gujiba, Fadr-el-Allah was severely wounded, and was persuaded by his people to escape on horseback. He died the same night, and was buried in a tributary of the Gongola River. In order to prevent his body falling into the hands of the French his chiefs dammed off a portion of the stream, where they dug a deep grave, moved the stakes, so that the waters once more resumed their course over the grave of the fallen leader.

Brockville, June 11.—U. S. Immigration Inspector Crawford stopped a party of seven Italian navvies from crossing to Morristown, N.Y., this morning. They landed recently at Montreal, but failed to provide themselves with the necessary passports issued by the U. S. Board of Immigration Examiners. Mr Crawford conveyed the party back to Montreal, and if he can locate the steamship company which landed them in this country they will be sent back to sunny Italy.

Brockville is now one of the principal points along the frontier used by agents of foreigners to smuggle the different prohibitive nationalities across the line. The chief traffic is in Assyrians. David Korry, a Brockville Syrian, was arrested at Morristown yesterday by a United States marshal, charged with smuggling from Syrians who later on were overtaken and arrested at Watertown, N.Y. Korry is held at Ogdensburg for examination on $5000 bail.

BOER AS A WARRIOR

British Military Officialdom Now Doing Some Wondering

And Have Partly Come to the Conclusion That They were not so Brave After All

London, June 11,—Now that the South African war is over, the military Briton is beginning to revise his opinion of the militant Boer and to wonder whether the latter was so very much of a fighter after all.

A writer in the United Service Magazine discusses the Boers on commando and doesn't think much of them. He has a good opinion of the Boers generally, as law-abiding, thrifty and easily contented farmers, and doesn't even think their religious tendencies hypocritical. But this is what he says about the Boer on the firing line:

"The defects of the Boer as a warrior resolve themselves into one great defect —a lack of that chivalrous, daring intrepidity which is not only an ornament, but an absolute necessity to a first-class soldier, and which, when combined with a cool head, tends to make a fighter well-nigh invincible.

"In the field the prudence of the Boer is such as might well be called downright cowardice were it not that his unwarlike character and that his ideas about courage—so utterly different from those of the average European—at most forbid our passing too harsh a judgement.

"The Boer not only lacks that 'devil' which makes the desperado dangerous but also does not understand that decent feeling which will make one man sacrifice his life for another.

"What we call courage and pluck the Boer calls foolhardiness and mere show-off. He saddles his horse and starts on commando with the one predominating idea of trying not to get hurt, and he acts according to his resolution regardless as to consequences.

"This is the average Boer as a fighter and is not an enticing picture. All the qualities dwindle into nothing through one great defect."

There are few non-military Englishmen however, who take this writer's view or even appreciate it. The great British public is mighty glad that the war is over and is thoroughly content to pay full tribute of respect and admiration to the fighting farmers who for nearly three years have held out against the concentrated military might of the whole British Empire.

COUNTERFEITER ON TRIAL

Ottawa, Ont., June 10. — The alleged counterfeiter, Francis Martin, was brought before the police magistrate this morning, charged with having in his possession tools for the purpose of manufacturing counterfeit coins. Inspector Hogan, of the Dominion police, asked the magistrate for a remand for a week, and this was granted. The tools found on him consisted of dies for making 25-cent pieces, but they had not been quite finished. The police had been on the look-out for him for some time, having received information which led to the capture. Prisoner was previously in difficulties in connection with the discovery of plates for counterfeiting the Banque Nationale notes, and after that got into trouble for running an illicit still.

SHOT OR HANGED

London, June 11. — The War Office has published a Blue-book of nearly 300 pages relating to the administration of martial law in South Africa.

From this it appears thirty-two persons were hanged or shot in Cape Colony between March, 1901 and January, 1902. The offences included high treason, murder, robbery arson, train-wrecking, marauding, "disgraceful conduct of a cruel kind and being in possession of expanding ammunition.

The report of the trial of Commandant Scheepers (sentenced to death by hanging, but shot on January 18 last) is given in full. The accused was charged among other things with placing prisoners in the firing line, but he declared that the 1,300 prisoners taken by him had always been treated with the greatest respect, and that he had received letters from British officers thanking him for his kind treatment.

During the trial a telegram was received from the father of Lieutenant Grant, 12th Lancers, who was among Scheeper's prisoners, asking the president of the court if the fact that Scheepers had spared his son's life in time of great excitement could be pleaded in mitigation of sentence.

The instructions regarding martial law issued by the Deputy Adjutant-General for Cape Colony are framed in a moderate spirit. Regarding arrests for seditious speaking, it is laid down that it is not necessary to take notice of every loose or unguarded expression of people of no consequence. "A feeling of sympathy with an enemy of their own race," it is observed, "unless it finds expression in some act of disloyalty, is not to be considered an offence."

Armed rebels are to be treated as enemies, and if taken prisoners must be tried by military courts.

The condition of Cape Colony in April of last year may be gathered from Lord Kitchener, who, in a message to the Governor of the colony, said:

"I am driven to the conclusion that considerable numbers of the inhabitants are now taking part in rebellion, and the state of disorder has grown serious. Only prompt and severe punishment can stop the spread of the evil and prevent general anarchy."

New York June 9.—As a result of the penalty which the Cape Colony Boers who assisted the Boers of the South African republics and the Orange Free State may be called upon to pay by the terms of the peace agreement, an effort may be made to find homes for some of them in the United States. W. D. Snyman, of Cape Colony, who fought with the Boers, and who has been working in the United States for the Boer cause during the past year, said regarding the terms of surrender:

"The colonial Boers are to be punished. I am a colonial Boer, born a British subject, and I am liable to imprisonment for from five to ten years if the terms as published are correct. I am acquainted with President Roosevelt and shall see if there is not a way for some of our people to come to this country. I think there is a great opportunity for us here. There are few here now, but in Portugal there are a good many colonials, and they probably will not want to return to South Africa now. They are men well born. If the United States government would open the way they would be glad to settle in some state like New Mexico, Arizona, Texas or Colorado. They would make good citizens; no one need to be ashamed of them. I shall use every effort to open the way to bring them here."

Mr. Snyman's son, who fought with him in South Africa, has just passed his examination for admission to Columbia university.

REWARDS TO GENERALS

Successful Generals Given Fortunes by Britain

Kitchener Profits Most— Enormous Sums That the Empire Has Paid Out as the Cost of Its Many Wars.

Special to The Times.

London, June 11.—The prompt appropriation of a money reward for Lord Kitchener by Parliament is in accordance with precedent. Successful generals have always been handsomely treated as far back as the time of Alfred the Great. Lands, fortunes annuities, and titles have been bestowed upon them by the sovereign, the Parliament, and the people. There is no military pension system in Great Britain. Civil officials are pensioned after long and faithful service, and the Sovereign has a yearly allowance from Parliament from which he is allowed to pay annuities and pensions to distinguished authors, poets, painters, scientists, and others who have promoted the welfare and the happiness of their fellowmen.

NO PENSION SYSTEM

Some of this money is given to the widows and orphans of soldiers who have shown extraordinary bravery or done extraordinary deeds, but there is no general pension fund for disabled veterans of the British army or for widows or orphans.

In 1900, when it was found difficult to get recruits for the army in South Africa, Parliament attempted to stimulate enlistments by voting a sum of money to pension the families of those who were killed or permanently disabled. But it was stated that they were intended to be rewards for loyalty and efficient service, and could be discontinued at any time at the pleasure of Parliament.

The amounts allowed are very small. The widows of quartermaster-sergeants, hospitals sergeants, and sergeant-Majors receive $10 a month, those of color-sergeants $8, sergeants $7.30, corporals $6, and privates $5. Orphan children of soldiers receive 50 a week to the age of 16, when they are considered old enough to take care of themselves.

No pensions whatever are given to officers or to their widows or orphans, although those who desire to take advantage of the retired list receive half-pay for the remainder of their lives, subject, of course, to be called into active service if needed.

GRANTS TO LEADERS.

Lord Kitchener has already received a grant of $150,000 for his services in Egypt, five years ago, which gives him $400,000 in all, the largest reward ever given a British soldier. After the Afghanistan campaign, Lord Roberts received a gift of 75,000; Lord Wolseley received $100,000 after the Ashanti campaign and $150,000 after the Egyption campaign.

During the reign of Queen Victoria the following annuities were granted to victorious generals, which are unparalleled in the generosity of nations.

	A year.
Lord Hardinge	$25,000
Lord Seaton, for three lives	10,000
Lord Keen, for three lives	10,000
Lord Gough, for three lives	15,000
Lord Raglan, for three lives	10,000
Lord Clyde	10,000
Sir W. F. Williams	5,000
Sir H. M. Havelock	5,000
Lord Napier, for two lives	10,000
Sir W. Nott	5,000
Sir G. Pollock	5,000
Sir A. Wilson	5,000
Sir J. Outram, two lives	5,000

In addition to these several hundred grants were made of from $500 to $4,00 a year.

THE COST OF WARS.

This has been the most expensive war Great Britain ever fought, both in money and in blood, and has verified the prediction of President Kruger at the beginning about the size of "the butcher's bill" she would have to pay. The total money cost has exceeded a billion dollars. No nation that pretends to have an honest Government is taxed so heavily as England is to-day, yet there is comparatively little complaint. Taking the financial and industrial depression into consideration, it is extraordinary how cheerfully and willingly the Britons carry their load, and when they realize that 4 per cent. interest on a billion dollars or more has been added to their former burdens perpetually their loyalty will have to endure another strain.

Since the year 1700 England has spent $3,500,000,000 in carrying on wars. In the Statesman's Year Book for 1902 you will find an interesting tabular statement showing how the public debt has piled up since the reign of William III., when it was only £664,263, and what each of the wars has cost. Since that period Great Britain has been constantly fighting either European powers or semi-barbarous people for the purpose of conquest, and, while she is now the largest real estate owner among nations, the property has been acquired at an enormous cost.

London, June 11.— The correspondent of the Times at Bloemfontein says the surrenders in the colony are proceeding satisfactory. One of the first signs of the era of peace is the removal of the barbed wire fences between the blockhouses, which is going on everywhere. These rolls of wire will doubtless be given at a valuation to the Boers to replace their fences. The correspondent hopes the blockhouses, especially the stone ones, will not be destroyed, as they are quite a feature of the landscape, like the great towers of Scotland and Martello towers on the south coast of England, and are historical monuments worth preserving.

BECAUSE FORMER IS WEAK

Woodstock, June 11. — The Hamilton Methodist Conference meeting here yesterday discussed a resolution to memorialize the General Conference, which meets at Winnipeg in September, to adopt a resolution to merge Wesleyan Theological College of Montreal into Victoria University of Toronto. The motion was lost by an overwhelming majority.

Once again one hears of the activity of British agents in the shipment of four-footed animals from our Gulf ports to South Africa. The shippers are former British officers, now Texan ranchmen. They are not sending out cavalry remounts and pack mules, however, but young breeding cattle wherewith the Boer farms are to be restocked. It is expected that the number to be transported from Galveston to Natal will reach 50,000 head. This is an employment for British army transports against which even the valiant Governor of Louisiana will not be able to offer objections. The promptness with which the British Government is proceeding to heal the ravages of war is certainly commendable.

ENGLAND AND THE U. S.

Our Friends Over the Border Kicking Over the Boundary Line

They Think The Matter Should Have Been Fought Out in 1846—How the Yankees Would Have Divided the Continent

Special to The Times.

New York, June 11—Leslie's Weekly laments that the United States did not fight it out with Great Britain in 1846, and establish the ownership of British Columbia, so that Canada would not now have a port on the Pacific coast. It says that the United States' title was based upon the discovery of the Columbia River by the Yankee skipper, Captain Gray, in 1792, by the exploration of the Columbia and its tributaries in 1805-6, by the erection of Astor's fur-trading factory at Astoria in 1811, and by the treaty with Russia in 1824, in which Russia promised to plant no colonies south of the present Alaska, and the United States promised to establish none north of Alaska's southern line. Britain's claims were based on glimpses which Drake got of the Pacific coast region of the present United States and Canada, little over three centuries ago, by some discoveries by Cook and Vancouver a little over one century ago, and by possession of part of it by the British fur-trading corporation, the Hudson's Bay Company.

A popular war-cry of the Democrats in the campaign of 1844 was "Fifty-four-forty or fight," the allusion being to the southern boundary of the present Alaska, which is in latitude 54 degrees, 40 minutes. The Americans claimed all up to that line, while the British claimed everything down to a point below the mouth of the Columbia. The talk about fighting subsided soon after Polk's election in 1844, especially as Britain seemed to be preparing for war, and a compromise was reached on the forty-ninth parallel in 1846, which is the present northern boundary of the State of Washington.

"If," says the Weekly, "the United States had persisted in its claim of the territory up to 54 degrees 40 minutes, and had been able to maintain it in the war which appeared to be coming, England would have been shut out from access to the Pacific on this continent, the United States would have had, ever since the annexation of Alaska in 1867, an unbroken stretch of territory along the Pacific from the southern line of California up into the Arctic regions, and the boundary controversy with England and Canada which is now on, and those which have taken place in the past sixty years in the same locality, would all have been averted."

It all turns on that "if" and the ability "to maintain it." Possibly the result of a war in 1844 or 1846 would have been to give British Columbia to the United States, and possibly Great Britain would have possessed not only British Columbia, but Maine as well, at the end of the war. The opinion in this country is that the United States got by treaty in 1846 a great deal more than she was entitled to on both coasts, and infinitely more than she could have obtained by war. At any rate it does not appear that Britain was afraid of the encounter. Another point worth considering is this: If the United States had made war on Britain in 1846, what would have been Britain's attitude in 1861, when it was in her power to help the South and permanently disrupt the Union?

NEWS NUGGETS

New York, June 11.— The Israelite Alliance of America held its second public meeting yesterday in the Educational Alliance Building in East Broadway to protest against Russia's refusal to admit Jewish American citizens to her territory. The resolution passed at the first meeting in the Temple Rodolph Sholom, urging the Government of the United States to put an end to such discrimination against the Jews, was also adopted at this second meeting with an enthusiastic chorus of "ayes" and no nays.

Joseph J. Corn, President of the alliance, presided, and a Catholic priest and a Protestant Episcopalian joined the Jews and their rabbis in appealing for equity in Russia for all American citizens, regardless of religion.

Nissim Behar, who in the interest of the Israelite Universelle has travelled the world over, working and talking in behalf of persecuted Jews, said:

"You may ask what we can do, and say that Russia is a great and powerful empire. The pen and the voice which direct public opinion in this country are greater than Russia. You who live in New York City, the head and heart of the civilized world, can do much by teaching your follow citizens. Teach your children that millions of their people are persecuted and that they would suffer, too, should they go to other lands, and with time and patience you will do the work. And you may be sure that the Gentiles will help you."

RUSSIAN PERSECUTIONS

John DeWitt Warner said that it was absolutely necessary for Russia to retain the friendship of this country, and that that act would furnish the lever by which the United States can compel the Czar to treat all American citizens alike.

Rabbi David Blaustein, superintendent of the Educational Alliance, said that this country should also demand of Roumania justice for the Jews in that country.

Meyer Goldman, an American citizen of Cincinnati, who went to Russia in 1888, but was arrested as soon as he got over the border, in spite of his passports, and was then driven from the country because he was a Jew, told of his experience.

When the Rev. Dr. H. Pereira Mendes began to speak an aged, long-bearded Hebrew, whose object in life is to establish five-cent kitchens all over the East Side, threw a bunch of roses at him from the audience. The rabbi broke a rosebud from its stem and based his speech on that. He said that the bud was developed in accordance with the subtle and unknown laws of God, and so became fragrant and lovely, but that if God's laws are violated the bud withers and perishes.

"And so with Russia," he added, "if she disobeys the laws of God she will perish and cease to be a nation."

In conclusion, Rabbi Mendes said that the alliance must ask the Government to speak just as freely in behalf of the Jews as it had for the Cubans who were persecuted by Spain.

Congressman Goldfogle said that the question was not one of race or religion, but of pure Americanism. "The badge of American citizenship," he said, "should enable any man, regardless of his creed, to travel anywhere in the world unrestricted and unmolested."

VLOCANOES OF THE WORLD

Inteersting Facts Concerning Volcanoes and the Causes

The Volcanoes of Iceland are in Perpetual Activity—The Europeans Loss of Life and Property by Eruptions

Special to The Times.

New York, June 9 — The terrible catastrophe of St. Pierre has directed attention to other volcanos, of which about a thousand are known. Of these, three hundred and twenty-five are now active. Those now quiescent are not all extinct; any one of them may, at any time, renew an activity which, so far as is known, is but suspended. Vesuvius was considered by the ancient world as extinct until the period of the destruction of Pompeii. From 1306 to 1631 this volcano was again quiescent — during a period of three centuries.

The volcanos of Iceland are in perpetual activity. Etna, Vesuvius and Stromboli are now intermittently active. The volcanos of Spain were very active in the province of Murcia in 1819. The Azores, the Canaries, the Cape de Verde Islands, Isle de Bourbon, the Philippines, Java, Japan, Hawaii, Mexico, Central America, Ecuador and other States along the Andes, Terra del Fuego, are countries containing volcanoes perpetually active. The Azores and the Hawaiian Islands are, in fact, nothing but volcanos rising from the sea. Alaska contains several active volcanoes, and the Northwestern States of the Pacific include mountains that have become quiescent in very recent times. A glance at a map of the world on which the volcanoes are marked will give a vivid idea of their distribution. This is not a random one, as a map will clearly show.

Quiescent volcanoes that are becoming active usually give warning by earthquakes. This was not the case in Martinique. The crater begins by pouring out huge volumes of smoke composed of gases and steam, and then come volcanic ashes, pumice, and every now and then volleys of incandescent porous stones — lapilli and possolana. Globular masses of white-hot lava are thrown out in spiral-like forms, accompanied by explosive sounds. Through the clouds above the crater lightning flashes, and the clouds themselves are illuminated by the glare of the lava beneath. The lava itself may be thrown out by explosions or it may open ways through huge fissures through the side of the mountain. In very violent eruptions the whole head of the mountain may be blown off, or the mountain may be riven apart, as at Krakatoa. The volcanic ashes are sent out in vast quantity, and, being light, are carried to enormous distances.

The ashes of Vesuvius have fallen in Constantinople. The ashes from St. Vincent in 1812 darkened the whole sky at Barbadoes; those from Sumbawa in 1815 were carried 700 to 800 miles in large quantities. The ashes from Krakatoa in 1883 filled the upper air and produced the red sunsets of that year, which continued for months. The gaseous products of a volcano are deadly. In Java the neighborhood of an active crater has been found covered with the dead bodies of wild animals—tigers, deer and the like. It was, no doubt, waves of noxious gas that killed thousands at St. Pierre. Some faint idea of the energy of volcanic forces may be had by considering the pressures necessary merely to maintain a column of lava at the level of the summit of a high mountain. Teneriffe is 3,710 metres in height. A pressure of about 1,000 atmospheres is necessary to make the lava flow from out its crater. The Martinique volcano was 1,350 metres high and the pressure was at the minimum, 400 atmospheres.

London View of the Proposal to Increase the Canadian Militia

Boer System Ideal in Effectiveness for Defence of the Colonies

Special to The Times.

Ottawa June 9 — Whether or not the Boer system is destined to revolutionise European war, says the London Chronicle, there can be no question of its ideal effectiveness for colonial defence. That is at least what Canada believes, and she has lost no time in acting upon the conviction. The measure submitted by Mr. Borden to the Dominion Parliament at Ottawa proposes to raise the militia in that part of the Empire to a hundred thousand rifles. This means that the practical strength of the force will be increased nearly threefold at a stroke and the step is taken in circumstances which make it one of the most significant developments in the military expression of the imperial idea. Where Ottawa leads, Melbourne, we may be confident, will not be slow to follow, and if the Canadian model were imitated with any degree of closeness, the years a far larger and more systematically trained fighting reserve than eally trained fighting reserve than that possessed by the mother country itself. To appreciate the policy of the Dominion two things must be remembered. In the first place, this scheme, as may be usefully noted by retrograde Radicalism at home, is the work of a Liberal Cabinet, and represents the robust patriotism of the whole Canadian people. In the next place, it is remarkable that the minister for defence at Ottawa brought forward his proposals almost simultaneously with the announcement that Lord Dundonald had been appointed to the command of the Canadian militia. That nomination was in itself of the first interest and importance. No officer has shown a more alert and complete insight into the lessons of the war than the leader of the mounted brigade in Natal. Since he led the advance into Ladysmith, Lord Dundonald has shown, in a series of most lucid and valuable speeches, that he has a powerful and seasoned faith in the imperial future of citizen soldiership of organized on right lines.

With vast talent and equal eccentricity, his ancestor, better known by his earlier title of Admiral Lord Cochrane, was believed by many close judges to have been inferior in naval genius to Nelson alone. His descendant has revealed so many reminiscent traits of original mind and enterprising instinct as to suggest that should opportunity offer, his ability in the field is not unlikely to prove worthy of the fame afloat won by the gifted sailor whose name he bears.

In any case Dr. Borden's bill will provide the re-organizer of the militia in the Dominion with sufficient material to work upon. At present there is a broad distinction between the nominal and the actual liability for defence purposes of the king's subjects in North America. By the act of 1886 all the male subjects in Canada between the ages of eighteen and sixty are liable to be called upon in case of emergency. As a matter of fact, however, only about thirty-five thousand men, have hitherto been trained annually, and their instruction has been conducted more or less upon the traditional lines of old-world practice. A "peace effective," so to speak, of a hundred thousand men, directly organized in the light of the experience gained in the South African war, and including a very large mounted element—the term "militia" being inclusive for Canadian purposes—this will be an incomparably more striking matter.

The Dominion, in short, is about to turn its citizen force into an army in earnest. Its enormous space of unfilled territory will afford Lord Dundonald as much liberty for the practice of extended tactics upon the most ambitious scale as any part of the world could provide, and the vista of possibility opened up before him is obviously one of the most attractive imaginable to any keen professional intelligence. From the assault at Paardeberg to the heroic stand of the little outpost in the recent repulse of Delarey, the Canadians have proved that they are inspired by the spirit of splendid soldiership, and possess for all military purposes the very root of the matter in them. How should it be otherwise? They have been nurtured and braced in one of the most vigorous climates of the globe, amid scenes as inspiring as any on the face of nature. They are sprung from the two great fighting races, England and France, whose blended qualities should produce a breed combining fire and staying power in a unique measure of admirable union. And what we have, of course, to look to, in addition, is the fact that the reorganized Canadian militia is evidently intended to form a training machine, passing men through its ranks who will build up a reserve practically including the great majority of the male population. If such a system were adopted by the colonies in general and the mother country in particular, it is no exaggeration to say that the problem of Imperial defence would be solved. Every part of the King's dominions would be its own security, and the total number of men who had received a modern education in the use of their rifles and their wits, would form an inexhaustible reservoir of fighting material for the common purpose of Imperial policy. It need only be pointed out, for instance, that on the ratio of military to population, contemplated in the new Canadian measure, the mother country would be training annually some eight hundred thousand men, apart from the regular army.

The coronation conference between Mr. Chamberlain and the Colonial premiers will carry this question further, and it is evident that the Canadian precedent must form something like a decisive point of departure for ultimate developments, such as, in one form or another, must become universal throughout the empire.

RUSSIAN POLICE HAVE ODD POLICY

Oranize Lectures to Entrap Alleged Conspirator Against the Government

Correspondent Explains How So Many Strikes Occurred This Year in Czar's Domains

Moscow, June 9.—In connection with the assassination of M. Sipiaguine, the Russian minister of the interior, mention has been made of the new workingmen's policy inaugurated by M. Zoubatoff, chief of the secret police of Moscow, with the approval of Chief of Police Trepoff. Authentic information received here shows this policy to be one of the oddest and most revolutionary ever taken by the Russian government.

Last autumn, on the ostensible initiative of workingmen, a number of university professors and teachers began lecturing to audiences of workingmen on the question of labor legislation and various other allied subjects. It soon became apparent that the lectures had been organized by the secret police, whose tools the alleged workingmen's leaders were, and all the lecturers except one ceased their discourses. These lectures served as being introductory to the organization of labor unions, or friendly societies, statutes for several of which have just been confirmed by the ministry of the interior.

POLICEMEN AS MEMBERS.

As characteristic of these statutes is that they permit, as members of the societies, policemen and priests, it is provided that the funds of these organizations may not be used to support strikes. Workingmen's meetings, conducted by police, in temporary tea rooms, were allowed to discuss the eight-hour movement, freedom of organization, liberty of instituting strikes, and other matters hitherto held to be seditious.

The government scored an immediate success. The secret, radical movement was out-trumped. Every man was invited to openly demand what he had preached stealthily, and rumors were circulated that the government intended buying factories and turning them over to the workmen. The government's victory attained its maximum when 35,000 workingmen peaceably celebrated on February 19, (old style), the anniversary of the emancipation of the serfs, in the sacred Kremlin, the police officials carefully selecting the participants and giving tickets, in batches of 100, to regular and secret police and spies. Thereupon the governor general of Moscow, Grand Duke Sergius, received a delegation of workingmen and promised paternal solicitude for their welfare. Celebrations in commemoration of Emancipation day had been strictly forbidden heretofore.

TIRE OF MERE TALK.

So much for the bright side. From the beginning disadvantageous features cropped out, and the working people quickly tired of mere talk and demanded results. Early in the year strikes began in numerous factories. These were followed, in some cases, by incendiary fires, while machinery was smashed in Daniloff cotton mills by a mob led, it is asserted, by police agents.

A most extraordinary phase of the situation began late in February. Although the government tried to hush the affair up, the following story has been absolutely authenticated. Rumors in regard to the matter were current in St. Petersburg and they were verified by an investigation made on the ground. A French company operates silk mills here, employing, ordinarily, 5,000 men. One day two pretended workingmen, named Krasivsky and Jilkin, leading organizers of the lectures and of the friendly societies, demanded admittance at the works, for the purpose of discussing the differences between the company and its employees. Manager Goujon, a French citizen, refused to allow them to enter. The two men, who were in reality police agents, reported to the nearest police again, who demanded that they be admitted, with the same result. Chief of Police Trepoff then called M. Goujon to the telephone and peremptorily ordered that the men be allowed to enter the mills. The manager declared his willingness to comply if Trepoff sent a order. The chief answered that M. Goujon should obey instantly and the written order would bbe forthcoming.

"Very well," replied M. Goujon, "since you promise it, I will admit themen."

FRENCHMAN IS BANISHED.

Trepoff, thoroughly enraged, then shouted that M. Goujon would have to leave Moscow within twenty-four hours.

The two agents were finally admitted to the mills, and, after a discussion, demanded that the company pay the employees 40,000 roubles on disputed wage adjustments, the workingmen having charged that inequitable measurements had been made of work completed. M. Goujon refused to accede to this. A factory inspector attached to the finance minister declared that the demands were unfounded, but, nevertheless, the two agents called out 700 weavers, whom Goujon immediately paid and dismissed. Chief Trepoff hired a vacant workshop to lodge the idle men and their families, and gave them money regularly, in order, it is claimed, to make the strike a success. He also sent notice that the mills would be inspected, and threatened that if a single infringment of the regulations was found that M. Goujon would be imprisoned. The sanitary inspectors, however, found nothing amiss. Thereupon M. Trepoff summoned M. Goujon and his associates and threatened to ruin them if they refused compliance with his desires.

"If the demands were legal I would gladly submit," responded M. Goujon, adding that not only would he not take back the 700 persons in question, but would also dismiss 2,000 others employed in the preparatory stages of the work.

purpose is not known, but in the meantime the manufacturers stoutly declare they will not resume operations until the actions of M. Trepoff are disavowed. They do not much object to a long shut down, owing to a business being excessively bad. The Goujon affair has taken on an international aspect, owing to the manager having appealed to the French embassy for protection.

The trade union movement has also advanced beyond the wishes of the police. A delegation of workingmen recently went to St. Petersburg to ask permission for the formation of labor unions on the British model. The ministry of the interior, however, flatly refused their request.

The finance ministry has recently given the labor question close attention, and has elaborated proposed laws regarding employers' liability for accidents, medical assistance for working people, the opening of new industrial establishments, and freedom of organization and strikes.

Subordinate importance is attached here to placards denouncing "foreign devils," the example of the mill workers in Tver, where this movement originated, not having been followed elsewhere.

MAY CHANGE BRITISH NORTH AMERICA ACT

Premises Are Against Any Reduction of Provincial Representation

IN THE FEDERAL PARLIAMENT

Maritime Statesmen Who are on Their Way To the Coronation Ceremonies

Special to The Times.

Montreal, June 7 — An interesting group at the Windsor to-day was that composed of Hon. G. H. Murray, Premier of Nova Scotia; Hon. L. G. Peters, Premier of Prince Edward Island, and Hon. L. J. Tweedie, Premier of New Brunswick. In conversation with a Star representative they were all very enthusiastic in praising the Governments of their respective countries, but grew reticent when asked if the different Maritime provinces were going to lose the number of the representatives in the Federal House owing to a decrease of population. As Premier Murray remarked, it would be a very serious matter for any government to undertake to decrease the number of the representatives of any provinces. When the British North America Act, calling for representation, was drawn up it was impossible to see all the difficulties that might arise. The Premiers thought that there might be some amendment or change made, rather than any of the provinces should lose a representative. They will sail for England together on board the S.S. Parisian.

The New York Sun the other day printed a list of "fifty best American poems," whereupon a Princeton professor immediately wrote to the editor complaining of the failure to include any of Dr. Henry Van Dyke's poems. Surely, he wrote, there should have been a place for that exquisite masterpiece of his to which The Sun referred last fall, containing these never-to-be-forgotten lines:

" In spring time, the birds upon the tree
Sing tweedledum, tweedledum, tweedledum dee."

A MARVELLOUS MEDICINE

'No Cure, No Pay,' is the Newest Proposal of the Proprietors of Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills

Editor Morning Times

Sir,—We make the following proposal: Any one who is a subject of rheumatism (no matter how long standing), or any blood disease, as enumerated below, and will give Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills a fair trial, and do not find a perfect cure, we will refund the money paid for the pills. If no substantial improvement is observed, we will in addition, pay $10 in cash on satisfactory evidence being supplied us to this effect.

We have yet to know of a single case where these wonderful pills have not been almost entirely successful in effecting a cure. CANADA CHEMICAL CO.

Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills are a positive and certain cure for la grippe, rheumatism, asthma, paralysis, catarrh, eczema, coughs, backache, indigestion, all stomach and liver troubles, female complaints, even when the diseases have been standing for many years, the most stubborn cases will yield. Price 50 cents per box. For sale by Ormond & Walsh. The Canada Chemical Company will forfeit $10 for any case that these pills do not help.

THE "STANLEY" PREFERRED

The Government Purchase Two of These Superb Instruments

The Stanley Piano Company are to be congratulated on the fact that the Ontario Government has purchased two of their instruments for the public institutions. One of their finest styles was shipped to the Institute for the Blind, at Brantford, another to the Asylum for the Insane at Hamilton, and a third was sent to the Ladies Seminary, in St. Jean Point, Joliet, Quebec. In each case the merits of the "Stanley" were critically tested by skilled musicians in competition with a number of other leading makes of pianos, and the fact that our own local "Stanley" was selected in each is not only a high testimonial to the company but complimentary to the town where it is manufactured.

TO THE ADVERTISER

Do you realize that it would be easy for you to increase your business to the extent of several thousand dollars a year?

Do you know that hundreds of people living in the country surrounding Peterborough never see your name in the newspaper they read; that they don't know why it would be to their advantage to deal with you?

Do you know that these people are sending to Toronto for goods they could buy from you, if they knew you wanted to sell them?

Do you realize that the merchants of Toronto and Montreal are reaching out for the trade of this, and other towns; that they are spending thousands of dollars in advertising, to tell people who ought to buy from YOU all about their goods?

Are YOU telling the people about YOUR GOODS, and the LOW PRICES at which you sell them?

You CAN NOT do so thoroughly, if you don't advertise in THE TIMES, because THE TIMES reaches people whom you can't reach through any other medium.

At least 60 per cent. of the people living in the surrounding country read "THE TIMES" and NO OTHER newspaper. These people have money to spend and will spend it in Toronto because they think they can buy more cheaply there than here, if you don't secure their custom.

Use THE TIMES to tell them you can give them better bargains than they can get in Toronto.

You'll make money, you'll increase your business, you'll get new customers if you advertise in THE TIMES.

We are going to make THE TIMES the best daily paper in Eastern Ontario. We have made arrangements to improve the local news service and to push the paper to the foremost place in the front ranks. We want you to advertise in THE TIMES because it'll pay you to do so. Every dollar you spend for advertising in The Times will return with good interest added.

Remember—No matter how much business you are doing now—YOU CAN DO MORE if you advertise in THE TIMES.

TRY IT AND SEE IF YOU CAN'T.

Michael J. Fleming, a prominent lawyer of Pottsville and formerly principal of the Donaldson High School, related the following anecdote:

"One day at school I gave a very bright boy a sum in algebra, and, although the problem was comparatively easy, he couldn't do it. I remarked:

"'You should be ashamed of yourself. At your age George Washington was a surveyor.'

"The boy looked me straight in the eyes and replied:

"'Yes, sir, and at your age he was President of the United States.'"

—Philadelphia Times.

"And she isn't married yet? Goodness, she's well preserved! she is the same Birdie Hoppindyke she was fifteen years ago."

"No, she's not the same. She spells it 'Byrdye' now."—Chicago Tribune.

Anecdotal.

It is recorded of Mr. W. S. Gilbert that on hearing of the title of Henry Arthur Jones' new play, "The Princess's Nose," he remarked, "I hope it may run long."

United States Senator Hoar received word the other day that a friend, who had been supposed to have appendicitis, was suffering not from that ailment, but from acute indigestion. "That is good news," said the Senator. "I rejoice that the trouble lies in the table of contents rather than in the appendix."

Samuel Rogers, the poet, told of an Englishman and a Frenchman who had to fight a duel. That they might have a better chance of missing one another, they were to fight in a dark room. The Englishman fired up the chimney and brought down the Frenchman! "When I tell this story in Paris," added Rogers, "I put the Englishman up the chimney."

James G. Blaine used to tell this story: Once in Dublin, toward the end of the opera, Satan was conducting Faust through a trap-door which represented the gates of Hades. His Majesty got through all right—he was used to going below—but Faust, who was quite stout, got only about halfway in, and no squeezing would get him any farther. Suddenly an Irishman in the gallery exclaimed, devoutly, "Thank God, hell is full."

When Moses Coit Tyler, the celebrated professor of history at Cornell, was an instructor at the University of Michigan, he had charge of a class in English that assembled at 8 o'clock a.m. One raw February morning at roll-call, he read the name of "Mr. Robbins," a member of the class, without getting an answer. "Mr. Robbins," he repeated in a slightly louder voice. Still no reply. "Ah," said the instructor, with a quiet smile, "come to think of it, it is rather early for robins."

Once during a heated debate between Senator Joseph B. Foraker, of Ohio, and Senator Joseph W. Bailey, of Texas, the question of law in Texas and law in Ohio came up. The passage became warm. Foraker, by way of a parting shot, told Bailey that if he would come to Ohio he would learn a great deal of law that he did not know. "If there is so very much law to be learned in Ohio," remarked Bailey, "I must advise the Senator to spend all his spare time there. He needs it."

A somewhat apocryphal anecdote of Sir Wilfrid Laurier is going the rounds of the United States press. During the last general elections, it is related, a Quebec Liberal, whose acquaintance with Sir Wilfrid was only political, sent this telegram to his leader, who was in Ontario on a speech-making tour: "Report in circulation in this county that your children have not been baptized. Telegraph denial." To which despatch the Premier sent this reply: "Sorry to say report is correct. I have no children."

Dr. MacNamara, in his collection of child stories, tells one concerning that wonderful dream of Jacob's and the angels going up the ladder to Heaven. "Please, sir," asked one of the boys in the class to which the story was being rehearsed, "why did the angels want to go up the ladder when they had wings?" This nonplussed the teacher, who took a strategic movement to the rear by saying, "Ah, yes! Why? Perhaps one of the boys can answer that." And one did. "Please, sir," said he, "because they was a-molting."

Thomas A. Edison is deaf, but, like many whose hearing is defective, he sometimes understands what is said when it is least expected. There were visitors one day at his laboratory, to whom, as usual, he was polite, although busy, and he patiently answered many questions unnecessarily shouted at him. Finally, one of the visitors, the humorist of the party, said to another: "I bet he'd hear if we ask him to have a drink." "Yes," said Edison, looking directly at the man and smiling, "I would; but no, thank you, not to-day."

The late Lord Dufferin was fond of relating an amusing experience which occurred when he was returning to Ireland from a diplomatic mission to be married, and his engagement to the beautiful Miss Hamilton had just been announced. He landed one evening on the platform of a small country station near Clandeboye, and hired a driver to take him the four or five miles, but he was so muffled up that the driver failed to recognize him. Presently Lord Dufferin asked: "Any news about here?" "No news," grumpily replied the man, "except that the beautiful Miss Hamilton is going to marry that ugly fellow, Dufferin!"

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

Local Happenings Picked Up Here and There by the Times.

NOTE—The Times requests its readers to contribute items of news to its columns. Anything that is phoned or sent in writing to the office, of a nature suitable for publication, will be received and published.—Ed. Times.]

—Lindsay is to have a Carnegie library.

—The County Council will meet on Tuesday next.

—The public school examinations are now under way.

—The usual June rush for marriage licenses has set in.

—Quite a number of Stony Lake cottages are now occupied.

—The headquarters of the Durham Field Battery has been changed from Port Hope to Cobourg.

—Bass and maskinonge fishing will begin on Monday in the upper lakes.

—The band will give their second open air concert this evening in Victoria Park.

—Once again: How about celebrating Coronation Day in Peterborough? Let something be done at once. The great British Empire, of which we form a goodly part, does not crown a King every year.

—The Dominion Government has decided that June 26th, Coronation Day, is to be observed as a public holiday throughout the Dominion and the Governor-General has issued a proclamation to this effect.

—Hastings Star—One of our local hotelkeepers advertised in our last issue for a wheelbarrow which had been taken from the hotel barn, with the customary warning "save further trouble as he is known" attached. The morning after the paper was published two wheelbarrows were found in the hotel yard. Who says advertising does not pay?

—Campbellford Herald.—Some of the newspapers in the Midland district are giving much prominence to the fact that a maskinonge weighing 44 pounds was caught last summer in the Bay of Quinte. It's a large fish but small in compared with one caught some years ago in Bradley Bay southeast of Campbellford, a maskinonge that weighed 72 pounds, and 60 pounds when dressed for the table

—Here is a pointer to some of the Peterborough church workers; A church social in Western Ontario grew a crowd because it had been advertised that all the women present would wear bloomers. A lot of old and hardened sinners, who hadn't seen the inside of a church since they were christened, attended and found every blooming beauty in the bunch wearing a large red rose pinned to her belt.

—In the Division Court at Stratford last week, His Honor Judge Barron gave an interesting decision. A girl by the name of O'Donoghue, employed at the Albion, sued the proprietor for part of a month's wages and succeeded in recovering her claim. His Honor held that a servant girl could leave at the end of a month, without notice, and recover her wages.

—"It was during this feature of the programme" says the editor of a contemporary, in writing up a wedding, "that the only specially emotional feature of the evening occurred. J. J. Anderson, father of the bride, who never before had shed a tear, found several of them rolling down his sunburned cheeks as he came forward to kiss the bride, remarking that she was his 'last baby.' Immediately several of the ladies began to shed tears, everybody was somewhat excited, and in the slight confusion the writer hereof found himself embracing a lady who stood conveniently near and who proved not his wife. He immediately apologized to the lady and was forgiven He apologized again, later on, to his wife, with no very definite returns up to this date."

Girls Wanted.

Long Service Meda!

From Tuesday's Times.

Yesterday morning Mr. George R. Whiten, photographer, received from Ottawa the long service medal issued to the members of the Canadian militia who have served 20 years or more. Mr. Whiten was for over 24 years a member of the 35th Battalion, whose headquarters are at Orillia. He naturally feels proud of his position.

Calvary Camps

The cavalry camp at Niagara will be held on June 24. The following regiments will take part: Governor-General's Body Guard, Toronto Mounted Rifles; 1st Hussars, London; 2nd Dragoons, St. Catharines. The 3rd Dragoons, Peterborough, and the 4th Hussars, Kingston, will camp at the Valleyfield Commons on the same date. It has been stated that there would be no camp for infantry regiments this year, but that officers and non commissioned officers would assemble for instruction in September.

Coronation Footwear

TWO PRETTY JUNE WEDDINGS

ROXBURGH—MEHARRY.

From Thursday's Times.

It was a pretty wedding that was celebrated yesterday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Meharry, 180 London Street, when their daughter, Miss Lettie E., was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to one of Norwood's most popular young men, Mr. John R. Roxburgh.

The bride was charming dressed in a gown of white taffta, trimmed with point lace and chiffon, wearing the conventional veil and carrying a magnificent bouquet of white roses. She was given away by her father and attended during the ceremony by Miss Annie M. Locke, of Belleville, who wore a dainty gown of pale blue organdie and carried a bouquet of pink roses. Mr. Gerald Roxburgh, of Norwood, brother of the groom, assisted as best man.

The beautiful and impressive marriage ceremony was performed by Rev. J. P. Wilson, pastor of George Street Methodist Church, assisted by Rev. F. D. Roxburgh, of Smithville, brother of the groom.

Miss Lila Meharry, cousin of the bride, rendered the wedding march very effectively.

The guests, numbering about sixty, were composed of the intimate friends. After the ceremony the wedding party sat down to a daintily served wedding breakfast, after which the happy young couple left on the 7.20 C.P.R. train for their future home in Norwood. The bride's popularity in Peterborough is evidenced by the many valuable and costly presents she was the recipient of. The groom, who is a son or Mr. W. E. Roxburgh, of Norwood, is an enterprising young business man, and is well and favorably known in Peterborough. May the blessings of prosperity and the joy of wedded bliss be ever attendant upon them as they journey onward in the hearty wish of The Times.

COONE—MARK.

From Thursday's Times.

A pretty wedding took place yesterday afternoon at one o'clock at the home of the bride, Havelock, when Mr. Wesley L. Coone, a successful young merchant of Manilla, claimed for his bride Miss Maggie A. Mark, one of Peterborough's most popular and estimable young ladies.

The ceremony took place in the Methodist Church, which was beautifully decorated with flowers for the occasion, Rev Mr. Bell resident Methodist Minister officiating, assisted by Rev. Mr. Joliffe. The bride looked charming in a dress of cream de chene with trimmings of lace and chiffon, and also wore the conventional white veil and carried a boquet of cream roses. She was assisted by her niece, Miss Mark, who was bewitchingly attired in a dress of white muslin and also carried a boquet of pink roses. The groom was attended by his brother. After the ceremony the happy couple held a reception in the church. There were a large number of guests present, including several from Peterborough and other places. The newly married couple left on the four o'clock train amid showers or rice and good wishes. On their return from their honeymoon trip, Mr. and Mrs. Coone will take up their residence in Manilla.

The wedding presents were numerous and costly, testifying to the popularity of the bride.

A DOURO WEDDING

Nuptials of Mr. T. J. Forsythe to Miss Lottie Kavanagh

From Friday's Times.

At St. Joseph's Church, Douro, on Tuesday morning, a very interesting wedding took place, when Miss Lottie Kavanagh, daughter of Mr. Richard Kavanagh, was married to Mr. T. J. Forsythe, of Dummer, Rev. Father Kelly, officiating.

The charming bride was attired in a becoming gown of castor taffeta cloth, trimmed with silk and applique and wore a white picture hat. Her boquet was composed of white carnations. Miss Mary Moher, of Peterborough, prettily attired in a fawn suit and cream picture hat, and carrying a boquet of pink carnations, performed the duties of bridesmaid, and Mr. S. J. Grisdale acted as best man. After the nuptial knot was securely tied the wedding party drove to the residence of the brides' father, where everything was in keeping with the festive occasion. A sumptuous wedding dinner was partaken of by the guests, who numbered about seventy, after which dancing and other amusements were engaged in. Many presents both useful and costly testified to the popularity of the bride. The happy couple left in the evening for Norwood, which is to be their future home. The Times extends its heartiest congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Forsythe, and wishes them abundant happiness and prosperity.

COUNCIL IN SPECIAL SESSION

A By-Law Authorizing the Execution of an Agreement with the Street Railway Co. Passes Its Several Readings

From Tuesday's Times.

The Town Council met in special session last night, when there were present Mayor T. H. G. Denne and aldermen Edgcumbe, Shortly, Roger, Rush, McGregor, Morrison, Clinkscale, Batten and Corkery.

COMMUNICATIONS.

The minutes of the preceding meeting were read and confirmed.

From S. R. Armstrong, Secy.-Treas. of the Water Commissioners, asking as directed that the Council authorize an expenditure not exceeding $1,000 for the extension of water mains on Antrim and Water Streets.

In reference to the above communication, Mayor Denne explained that the work for which this money is asked will return in revenue of ten per cent. The act authorizes the town to expend $5,000 each year for water works extension purposes without submitting a by-law to the people. This matter was referred to the Fire, Water and Light Committee and the Town Solicitor.

From E. M. Elliott on behalf of the Council of Smith asking for the use of the horse road roller in repairing the river road. This request was granted, free of charge.

From Town Solicitor E. H. D. Hall, enclosing declarations as to the publication of the necessary notices of the Radial Railway Co's By-law.—Received.

From T. Hurley Co. asking that Rubidge street be opened to Reid Street.—Referred to the Board of Works.

ACCOUNTS.

The following accounts were referred to the Finance Committee.

R. H. Leary	$ 12 00
F. Smith	2 50
W. J. Kennedy	1 00
C.P.R. Telegraph	75

ST. RAILWAY CO.

A by-law authorizing the execution of an agreement with the Peterborough Radial Railway Company passed its first, second and third readings.

Ald Roger suggested that a time limit be fixed for the Railway Co. to sign the agreement. Mr. Geo. Hatton, the Company's solicitor replied that Mr. Bonn is expected in town this week, when he (Mr. Hatton) understands the agreement will be signed.

Council then adjourned.

LOCAL NEWS-LETTERS.

DOURO.

A very pretty wedding took place at St. Joseph's Church, Douro, on 3rd instant, when Mary, eldest daughter of Mr. Humphrey Crowley, was united in marriage to Mr. Harry O'Rourke, of Deseronto. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Kielty, in the presence of a number of relatives and friends. The bride who was becomingly attired in a dress of white silk organdie, was assisted by her sister, Miss Annie, who was also gowned in white organdie, and Mr. George Goodburn, of Deseronto, assisted the groom. The happy couple left on the 9.15 train for their future home in Deseronto, carrying with them the hearty good wishes of a very large circle of friends.

Everybody in Otonabee reads The Times.

—The members of the W. A. of St. Mark's church intend holding a tea and social in Stewart's Hall, Otonabee, on Tuesday, June 17. Rev. E. A. Langfeldt will give a lecture on "A trip on the St. Lawrence River," illustrated by lime-light views. Admission to tea and lecture, 15c.

—On Sunday, June 15th, at 2p.m., a thanksgiving service will be held in St. Mark's church, when Rev. Mr. Langfeldt will preach a patriotic sermon.

—The Dickson Company's first drive of the season is now nearing Lakefield.

KEENE.

—The residents of this village celebrated the close of the Boer war in a most enthusiastic manner on Monday last. In the afternoon the school children formed into line and marched around the streets making all the noise possible and this was augmented by cannon crackers and various other plans. In the evening a very large display of fire works was given in the school grounds and at other places in the village. Flags were flung to the wind from a number of poles and all expressed very great pleasure at the close of the war.

—A large and influential committee have charge of the commuted statute labor and will improve our streets by laying down concrete walks, using tile drains in place of open or half covered ditches, and helping with trees. This is all right and proper, but while horses, cows, sheep, pigs, geese, &c., are allowed to come into the village for the night and break down the trees, and leave our streets worse than the average barnyard, it seems very foolish to try and fix up. The few milk cows would not cause much damage but the very large number of young cattle should be shut off.

—Messrs. Anderson & Skinner are agents for the Str. Rainbow and purpose to run fortnightly half day trips during the summer; the first was on June 10th.

—There is some talk of a concert and display of fireworks on Coronation Day It is a good thing so help it along.

OTONABEE.

The late David Henderson.

Mr. David D. Henderson entered into rest on Thursday morning, June 10, at the family residence, lot 24, con. 2, Otonabee. Bright's disease, from which he had suffered for some time, was the cause of death. The deceased, who had been a successful farmer, was married in January, 1871, to Helen Brydon, who, with four remaining children, still survives him. The children are Walter, of Maple Creek, N.W.T., Susie, William and John at home. Of his brothers and sisters the survivors are Mrs. James Renwick, of Ashburnham, Mrs. A. Thompson, of Thornbury, Mrs. W. D. Johnston, of Otonabee, James R., of Grand Rapids, Mich., and John, Jane and Maggie, of the old homestead, Otonabee. Deceased was a member and office-bearer of Keene Presbyterian church. In politics he was a Reformer. He will be deeply mourned, having been a loving husband and highly esteemed by friends and neighbors. The Times extends its sincere sympathy to the bereaved family.

—Mr. Robert Sheridan met with a very painful accident this week, by which he lost one of the fingers of his right hand, and so injured another that it will be of little use to him. Mr. Sheridan was working at the mill at the time the accident occurred. The Times hastens to join in extending its sincere sympathy.

—Mayor Smith, our genial and popular Chief Magistrate, is doing all he can to induce people to come over to this side of the river to reside. Already appearances indicate that we will get a goodly share of the general prosperity.

—While it is true that we are dependent on Peterborough for our supply of water and light, it is not true that we have nothing to offer in return. We would indeed be in a sorry plight if these necessities of life were shut off; but we could retaliate by shutting Peterborough off its supply of Calcutt's lager! Just fancy what Peterborough would be like without its lager.

THE LATE MRS PHELAN

One of Peterborough's Most Esteemed Citizens Passes Away

From Wednesday's Times.

The news of the death of Mrs. Edward Phelan, which took place on Monday night, will be received everywhere with sincere regret. The deceased lady had been ailing for some time, suffering from rheumatic complaint. About ten days ago Mr. Phelan was taken ill with grip, and it was while attending her husband that the deceased overtaxed her strength and became seriously ill Everything that medical skill could do was done, but without avail, and she peacefully passed away about midnight.

Death at all times is sad, but when it takes away from our midst one whose graces and goodness are everywhere known One who is beloved far and near, it is particularly so. The deceased lady was a native of Cork, Ireland, where she was born about seventy years ago. She had lived in Peterborough most of her life. When three or four years of age she came to Canada with the family of her father, the late John Sullivan. She was united in marriage to Mr. Phelan fifty years ago. One of the sad features of her illness and death, is the fact that for some time past Mr. and Mrs. Phelan and their family have been discussing arrangements for the celebration of their golden wedding anniversary next month.

Mrs. Phelan was a consistent Christian woman, and was ever foremost in doing good. A faithful and loving wife, a loving mother and a true friend, she will live for years to come in the hearts of the people.

Mrs. Phelan leaves behind her a husband and three sons:—Mr. Harry Phelan town; Rev. C. J. Phelan, of Young's Point and Mr. Walter Phelan, at present of Toronto. Other relatives of Mrs. Phelan living are her sisters, Mrs. Atchison, of Le Roy, N.Y.; Mrs. P. J. McCauley, Trenton; Mrs. John Corkery, Hamilton township; and Miss Maggie, an unmarried sister, living with a brother, Jeremiah Sullivan, in California.

The funeral will leave the family residence, corner of Simcoe and Stewart Sts, to-morrow, Thursday morning, at 9 o'clock, and proceed to the Roman Catholic Cemetery for interment.

Laid at Rest

From Friday's Times

The remains of the late Mrs. Phelan were followed to their last resting place yesterday morning by a large number of sorrowing relatives and friends. Services were held in St. Peter's Cathedral, where Solemn Requiem High Mass was celebrated with His Lordship Bishop O'Connor in attendance. The Mass was celebrated by Rev. Father Phelan, son of the deceased. Rev. Father Scanlan, of Grafton performed the offices of Deacon and Rev. Father F. O'Sullivan, of Lindsay, those of Sub-deacon. Rev. Dr. O'Brien was Master-of-Ceremonies. In the Sanctuary were seated Rev. Father Nolan, Redemptorist, of Erie, Pa., Rev. Father Fitzpatrick, of Ennismore. Rev Father McColl, Rev. Father John O'Brien and Rev. Father O'Connell of the Cathedral Clergy. Letters of regret at being unable to be present were read from Rev. Father Murray, Cobourg; Rev. Father Scollard, North Bay; Rev. Father Kelly, Trout Creek; Rev. Father Collins, Bracebridge, Rev. Father McCloskey, Campbellford; Rev. Father Lynch, Port Hope and Rev. Dr. Teefey, of St. Michael's College, Toronto. At the close of the Mass His Lordship Bishop O'Connor gave absolution. Interment took place in the Roman Catholic Cemetery. The pallbearers were: Messrs. S. Belcher, H. LeBrun, D. Morrow, T. Fortye, P. P. Young and James Kearney.

The Late Matthew Walton

From Tuesday's Times.

The demise of Mr. Matthew Walton, of Oshawa, is announced. The deceased was 86 years of age, and at one time was a resident of Peterborough County. He was the only surviving brother of Robert Walton, Esq., town. The funeral will leave the Grand Trunk depot on the arrival of the noon train to-day, and proceed to Little Lake cemetery.

G. H. THURSTON DROWNED.

Grant Howard Thurston, formerly of Toronto, was drowned in the right arm of the Fraser River, near Vancouver, on Saturday afternoon.

His home was in Vancouver, where he was engaged with his father in the leather business. He went out riding on Saturday, and his horse backed into the river while crossing a bridge.

Mr. Thurston was born in Toronto 30 years ago, and went West with his father in 1883. He had two sisters and six brothers. One of the latter, Mr. W. D. Thurston, lives at 73 Hazelton avenue.

ESCAPE FROM DROWNING

Two Young Men Upset Out of a Canoe on Sturgeon Lake

From Wednesday's Times

Messrs. Harry Tims and Allan Dougal, of the Bank of Montreal staff, Lindsay, narrowly escaped drowning on Sunday last, says the Post. They visited friends at Sturgeon Point on Saturday night, and being anxious to reach Lindsay for supper and attend church in the evening they started out in Mr. Dougal's canoe against a strong northwest wind and a heavy sea, to make the trip. When near the first cut they hoisted the sail, and next moment a gust of wind came, and almost before the boys knew what had happened they were struggling in the chilly water. Fortunately the compartments and floated. The boys managed to hold on and drifted ashore near Pleasant Point, after being in the water for nearly an hour. While floating they managed to take off nearly all their clothing. These articles were lost.

Their friends at the Point being anxious to know if they arrived at Lindsay, telephoned here, but the boys could not be found. Fearing that they were in the water their bank comrades here got Mr. Joe. McConnell to steam up the Laura Mace to go the Point. As the yacht was just about to be locked through Messrs Tims and Dougal made their appearance very wet and very cold. The boys say they will not soon forget their experience, and will never again attempt to sail in a canoe in a heavy sea.

ENNISMORE PIC-NIC

The Annual Pic-nic Tuesday Was a Great Great Success

From Thursday's Times.

Notwithstanding the rain, the annual Ennismore pic-nic on Tuesday at Tara Grove, was a great success.

The popular priest of the parish, Rev Father Fitzpatrick, assisted by a strong committee of faithful workers, did everything in their power to make it pleasant for those who attended. The Ennismore orchestra, furnished music for dancing, no charge being made to "trip the light fantastic," while a splendid programme of sports, for which valuable cash prizes were offered, was run off and eagerly competed for.

During the afternoon, Hon. J. R. Stratton delivered a spirited address, in which he thanked the electors in general and the people of Ennismore in particular, for their support in the late elections

It has been said that no hospitality is so cordial or so effulgent as that of the Irish race. This was well proven on Tuesday. From the beloved pastor down to the most humble individual, there was a welcome for the stranger who appeared.

A STARTLING STORY COMES FROM BOSTON

Said That Major E. L. Bond Living in Mexico

NOT BURNED TO DEATH

An Extraordinary Story That is Causing an Immense Sensation

Major Bond was one of the Best Known Business Men in Montreal, and had Friends Everywhere Throughout Canada

Special to The Times.

Boston, June 13 — The Boston Herald publishes a story that Major E. L. Bond, of Montreal, who was reported as having been burnt to death in his country house on Lake Champlain, in December last, is alive in Mexico. The charred remains of a man were found in the ruins, and a coroner's jury returned a verdict that they were the remains of Major Bond. The widow was left insurance policies estimated at from $60,000 to $100,000. These were paid, and the event considered closed. The insurance people found, however, cause to reinvestigate. First, they learned that obligations against Bond to the amount of fully $80,000 had become due since his death. These claims were for money due banks and for papers he had endorsed for one or another of the concerns he was interested in.

A few days later one of the companies learned that a piece of property in Montreal, which had been deeded to Mrs. Bond by her husband just previous to his death, and which was estimated to be worth fully $20,000, had been offered to a purchaser for $12,600. This was considered strange, especially when it was considered that the widow was amply provided for. These and other little things which came up from time to time caused the insurance company to begin an investigation.

A watch was set on the partner of Major Bond, and it was soon learned that he was conducting a correspondence with a man in Mexico, an unusual part of the world for a Montreal insurance agent to be looking for business in, it was thought. The next step was to enlist the co-operation of the clerks in the post office. Through the connivance, it is said, of one of these clerks, the detectives secured a letter received by Bond's old partner, and its contents are said to have satisfied them that the "late" Major Bond is now alive and well, and living in or near Soccorro, Mexico, to which place he is supposed to have fled from his burning summer house. By disappearing, he is thought to have figured on escaping from his maturing obligations, which had piled up so fast with his alleged extravagant manner of living. It is thought that his wife wished to dispose of her property in order to join her husband.

The detectives of the insurance company are said to be in Mexico at this time, and, if their quest is successful, a sensation of more than ordinary vigor will be sprung on the staid old Province of Quebec, throughout whose confines Major Bond was well known.

BULLER AND COLONIES

How the Old Warior Treated the Colonies Offers of Help

IN THE WAR'S EARLY STAGES

A Lesson Taught the General in His Early Days Which He Probably Forgot

Special to The Times.

London, June 13.—In the second volume of the London Times' History of the War, the attitude at the beginning of the war, of the British war authorities in respect to the colonial troops is thus set forth.

Already in July some of the colonies had expressed their eagerness to send a contingent in case of war with the Transvaal. These offers were repeated at the end of September, and were welcomed with gratitude by the nation. In the war office they were, however, by no means regarded in the same light. The military authorities believed that they had an amply sufficient force in every arm for their purpose. They thought the colonials would be difficult to manage and little use, an encumbrance rather than a help. If they could have had their own way they would have accepted none of these offers. It was only in deference to the strongly expressed wish of the government that Sir Redvers Buller consented that small detachments representative of each self-governing colony should have the privilege of accompanying the army.

In explanation the Canadian Gazette (London, England) says:

From our own knowledge we may say that this is an accurate statement of the case. We believe that a political member of the ministry made an express visit to Aldershot to interview Gen. Buller on the subject of these colonial offers. The general was somewhat contemptuous. What would colonials know about real warfare? Why hamper fighting men with a crowd of toy soldiers!—it was in some such spirit as this that he put forward his views. It was represented to him, that for political, if for no other reasons, the offers must be accepted. "Very well, then," he said in effect, "let us have as few as possible, fit them up into units of about one hundred and twenty-five men each — infantry, mounted infantry, or cavalry, but unmounted men preferred." The Times puts the official reply in these words: "In view of numbers already available, infantry most, cavalry least serviceable."

Ottawa, June 13.—The Citizen, discussing the above, adds:

We are afraid that these facts will not tend to increase Canadian regard for the grim old warrior who led the army against the enemy entrenched in the hills on the north bank of the Tugela river. And we are amazed that Buller had not a better opinion of colonial troops—at least of Canadians for he had some experience of our boys.

In 1870 Wolseley's little army was crawling through "New Ontario" on its way to Fort Garry. Boats for the expedition were being taken up the Mattawa river. A company of the Fourth Sixtieth Rifles (regulars) left Calderon's landing one day at noon with a brigade of boats. The next morning No. 2 company, of the First Ontario Rifles —Canadians —left the same place with another brigade of boats. Shortly before noon the Canadians overtook the British regulars, and were amazed to see the "engineering" operations adopted by the regulars to get their boats up a stiff rapid. Two men were put in a boat with poles, to keep the course. A tracking rope, attached to the boat's stem, was passed around a tree which had been barked to enable the rope to slip, and the whole company of regulars were pulling back on the shore end of the rope, wasting nine-tenths of their power in the friction that tree afforded. This extraordinary operation was superintended by Capt. Buller.

The Canadians looked at the rapid, Guessed they could climb it without "tracking," got out their poles and walked their boats up the rapids without the least difficulty.

That was Gen. Buller's first defeat, and he should have been able to learn from the incident that Canadian colonists were not far behind the regular soldiers of Great Britain in some things.

Wolseley—then colonel in command of the expedition—learned to admire the Canadian colonists; but it seems that Capt. Buller was never able to overcome his horseguards and pipeclay prejudices in favor of the machine soldier.

DESTROYED BOER CROPS

One Way the British Used to Bring Enemies to Time

Interesting Letter From a Canadian Trooper—High Living on the Veldt

Special to The Times.

Ottawa, June 12—Trooper Jim Scott is evidently not weary of South Africa judging by the pleasant tone of the following letter received by his mother:

Wildebeestfontein, April 30th.

Dear Mother,—I have been on the march for over a week and have had no chance to write you. We expect to leave here to-morrow for Klerksdorp. We have had no fighting since the big fight on the 31st, but are doing our best to bring the war to a close by starving the Boers so they will have to surrender. We have been destroying corn fields for over a week. We have destroyed thousands of acres of corn and mealies (Kaffir corn) and many fields of melons and pumpkins. On the 23rd inst., about 3 o'clock in the afternoon, we camped at Hartebeestonein and Ernie Holland and I were sent out to get wood for the cook. We started towards the village, which was deserted with the exception of a few women and children, and to our surprise we ran into a very large orange orchard with piles of ripe fruit. We ate all we could and filled three oat-sacks full and by the time we had finished gathering oranges and lemons there was a wagon down for the wood. We tore down three verandas from the deserted houses and loaded the wagon. We had about 30 bags of oranges. We have been working like farmers gathering corn, pumpkins and melons. I think we will rest for a few days when we reach Klerksdorp. I washed myself this afternoon (the first time for a week). I tell you it made me feel all right. We are having winter now. It is very chilly at night, but scorching hot in the day time. It is very pleasant, we are getting very little rain, plenty to eat, and just enough work to keep a fellow healthy. I think I am gaining in weight and am nearly as sunburnt as a Kaffir. Our troop is in charge of a sergeant just now, who is a splendid fellow. There are plenty of deer, rabbits and partridge here. We often get a shot at them; to-day we saw two deer and some of the officers chased one for miles on their horses, but failed to shoot it. There is a large number of Highlanders camped near us; they are fine fellows, but the continual hum of the bagpipes is so tiresome. They are playing now and have been for over an hour. Every morning they play for an hour and a half. I think the pipers must be made of wind. One of my best friends, Wm. Leslie, died of fever. We miss him very much. I am in the best of health and have been since I landed in Africa, with the exception of a few days when my horse fell on me. The rest of the Ottawa boys are well.

Cause of Splitting Headaches.

Poisons accumulate in the blood and spread every moment to all parts of the body. The brain becomes congested, nerves irritated, and the result is that awful headache.

Ferrozone is nature's own remedy for headaches; it is a blood strengthener and purifier of uncommon merit, a lasting potent tonic, and the greatest invigorant and health maker known. WATER BOILING IN DEPTHS

Professor Jagger Says Return of Settlers Would Result in Many Deaths from Asphyxiation

Special to The Times.

Kingstown, St. Vincent, June 13. — During the great eruption of Mont Pelee, Island of Martinique, yesterday, the detonations were heard in the neighboring islands and heavy clouds of smoke issued simultaneously from the Soufriere volcano, on this island, which alarmed the inhabitants.

The island of St. Lucia was obscured by dust to a distance of three miles and the steamship experienced difficulty in finding the harbor of Castries.

Pitch darkness prevailed here.

The three Americans — Professor Jagger, the geologist of Harvard University; Dr. Hovey, assistant curator of the Museum of Natural History, New York, and George C. Curtis, who ascended the Soufriere on May 31 — made another ascent on Thursday.

Took a Barometer Along.

They entered a dense dusty fog, which impeded their progress as they made their way up the precipitous trail, around the awful cliffs, with extraordinary courage and perseverance and once more reached the edge of the crater, on the east side, reaching an altitude of 3200 feet above the sea, carrying with them an aneroid barometer.

They heard water boiling and spattering in the depths of the crater, but nothing could be seen through the fog though the party waited a considerable time. The ascent occupied five hours.

The return of settlers to the devastated area is discouraged by Professor Jagger, who is of opinion that the crater, continuing active, may emit poisonous gases at any moment, without warning and cause the death of many people from asphyxiation.

Pelee Looks Like a Furnace.

Baltimore, Md., June 13.—Captain J. W. Duff, of the British steamship Esdale, which has arrived from Rio Janerio reports that on May 29 he passed near Mont Pelee. On that date the huge mountain was still emitting great volumes of smoke and fire, and occasionally from the crater issued volumes of molten rock and sand.

First Officer William Adams said that from a distance the reflection on the sky looked very like that produced by a large blast furnace in an iron foundry. "First it would flare up," he said, "and then the reflection would gradually die out, until not a trace of it could be seen. A few minutes of darkness and then the flame would burst out again. As the ship drew nearer the outbursts became more vivid, and the effect produced was indeed grand.

Sea Lit up for Miles.

"At each flaring up the sea would be lighted up for miles with a lurid glow which would give way to an almost intense blackness as the flame was swallowed up in the yawning crater, where it gained force for the next outburst. A few minutes after each eruption a distinct rumbling noise, like the detonations of a distant thunderstorm were to be heard. For miles after passing the burning fountain our decks were intermittently lighted up by the reflection, and daylight came upon us before we entirely lost sight of Mont Pelee.

"For miles about Martinique and adjacent islands the sea appeared to be acting strangely. At times it appeared short and choppy as if some giant hand were churning it up into a frenzied tumult."

How They Met

A funny story was told The Times the other day about a little girl who asked her father:

"Pa, where were you born?"

"In Montreal, my dear."

"And where was mama born?"

"In Toronto, my dear."

"And where was I born?"

"In Lindsay, my dear."

"Well," said the little dear, "isn't it funny how we three people got together?"

Permanent Cure for Neuralgia

Experienced sufferers state that no remedy relieves neuralgia so quickly as a hot application of Polson's Nerviline, the strongest liniment made. Nerviline is certainly very penetrating and has a powerful influence over neuralgic pains, which it destroys almost at once. Nerviline is highly recommended for Rheumatism, Lumbago, Sciatica, and Toothache. Better try a 25c bottle. It's all right.

SHAH'S HOBBY IS SURGERY

Persia's Ruler Likes to See Patients Operated Upon

Special to The Times.

Paris, June 13.—Young Mrs. Shangley, of New York, who was introduced to the Shah of Persia, in Paris two years ago, recently took several gondola rides with him in Venice.

She says the Eastern potentate converses intelligently about music and scenery, and is especially interested in the marvels of modern science. He expresses great admiration for physicians and described several surgical operations performed under his eyes by his European physicians, of which he has three.

The Shah's present hobby is to have his capital searched for cases requiring surgical help and have them taken to his palace where he watches the operation. The patients are generously cared for thereafter.

Mrs. Shangley says the Shah is extravagantly fond of bon-bons, and sometimes eats three pounds in a day. Mrs. Shangley won his friendship by giving a genuine American candy-pulling party one evening at the Shah's apartments at a hotel in Venice. The potentate was amazed to see the flexible mass worked into a pretty combination of vivid colors.

On His Way to London to take Part in Coronation Ceremonies

Special to The Times.

London, June 13.—King Leopold, of Belgium, arrived at Paris from Dover today on his way to London to take part in the coronation ceremonies.

Queen Alexandra is delighted with the beauty of the dresses made in India for the coronation fetes under the supervision of Lady Curzon. The Queen has sent to Lady Curzon an autograph letter expressing her pleasure.

The Rt. Hon. Richard Seddon, Premier of New Zealand, has arrived at Madeira en route to the coronation celebration. In an interview he said he would have preferred more rigid terms of peace in South Africa.

KING'S VETO ON DRESS REHEARSAL

Thinks it Would Lessen the Dignity of the Ceremonial

Special to The Times.

London, June 13.—King Edward has vetoed the suggestion to have a dress rehearsal of the coronation procession and ceremony in Westminster Abbey, thinking that it would lessen the dignity not as a brilliant show but an act of great solemnity.

Undoubtedly he has had private rehearsals of his own part of the ceremony in Buckingham Palace where a private ballroom is fitted up as a small fac simile of the sanctuary of the Abbey, where the crowning will take place.

WILL ASK BRITAIN TO PAY

An American has a Million Dollar Claim to Settle

It was Against the Boer Government, However, and Now Uncle Sam Wants England to Pay It.

Special to The Times.

Washington, D.C., June 13 — Now that the Boer war has been brought to a close the State Department will take under consideration the advisability of submitting to the British Government for settlement the claim of R. E. Brown, of Philadelphia. Brown alleges that he was denied justice by the Transvaal courts, that a mine which he legally owned was seized and that he has been damaged to the extent of $1,000,000.

This is the only claim in connection with South Africa which remains to be disposed of. Sixteen claims for deportation has been either settled or rejected, and the State Department has accepted as final the action of the British Government. The celebrated flour claims were disposed of some time ago. Brown now insists that his claim be taken up and pressed, and it is expected that Solicitor of State Penfield, under instructions from Secretary Hay, will carefully examine it.

Confiscated by Kruger's Order.

In his brief, filed with the Department, Brown alleges, and he supports his allegations with proof, that the Supreme Court of the South African Republic declared, in the face of opposition from President Kruger, that his title to the mine was valid. Kruger overruled the decision of the court and removed one of the Judges and appointed to the vacancy a man who was prepared to do his bidding. The court then reversed its former decision and decided against Brown, with the result that his mining property was confiscated.

Might Set Costly Precedent.

If the South African Republic were in existence officials say there would be no doubt that the claim would be immediately presented and vigorously pressed. But the South African Republic is not now in existence, and it is a serious question whether the United States shall take up and press for settlement against a conquering nation claims which had arisen under the Government of the conquered State.

There are now on file in the State Department claims against Spain arising out of personal and property injuries which occurred under Spanish rule, and these have been submitted to the United States for settlement. The State Department has not been disposed to consider them, holding that the obligations of the United States only began when it assumed possession of the Spanish East and West Indies.

If this Government were to press the Brown claim against Great Britain a precedent might be established which may cause payment by the United States of several hundred thousand dollars to persons claiming damages as a result of Spanish cruelty and oppression in Cuba and the Philippines.

TROUBLE FEARED WITH THE CAPE PEOPLE.

His Majesty Makes Tactful References to His New Subjects--Unity of the Empire

Special to The Times.

London, June 14.—King Edward held a special court at Buckingham Palace to-day for the reception of addresses from the Lord Mayor, Sir Joseph C. Dimsdale, and the coronation, and from the London County Council, congratulating his Majesty on the restoration of peace. The King took the occasion to express his sentiments on the subject more fully than heretofore, and the tactful recognition which he made of the sterling qualities of the Boers will doubtless materially aid in the work of appeasement in South Africa.

His Majesty, surrounded by the household, received the city dignitaries in the throne room, and, replying to the Lord Mayor's address, said:

"I thank you in my own name and in the Queen's for your loyal and dutiful address, and the congratulation you tender us at the close of the war in South Africa. I heartily join in your expression of thankfulness to the Almighty God for the termination of the struggle, which, while it entailed, on my people at home and beyond the sea so many sacrifices, borne with admirable fortitude, has secured a result which will give increased unity and strength to my Empire. The cordial and spontaneous exertions in all parts of my dominions, as well as in your ancient and loyal city, have done much to bring about this happy result.

"You give fitting expression to the admiration universally felt for the valor and endurance of the officers and men who have been engaged in fighting their country's battles. They have been opposed by a brave and determined people and had to encounter unexampled difficulties. These difficulties were cheerfully overcome by steady and persistent effort, and those who were our opponents will now, I rejoice to think, become our friends. It is my earnest hope that by mutual co-operation and good-will the bitter feelings of the past may speedily be replaced by ties of loyalty and friendship, and that an era of peace and prosperity may be in store for South Africa."

Subsequently, in response to the address of the London County Council, the King spoke as follows:

"I thank you for your expressions of loyalty and affection towards myself and the Queen. I rejoice with you at the thought that the victory which has crowned the perseverance and bravery of my forces will pave the way for the extension to the regions newly added to my Empire of that system of government, which, with God's blessing, will bring South Africa the peace and prosperity that in every quarter of the globe followed its establishment. The readiness with which my subjects throughout the Empire have borne their part in the arduous campaign now happily at an end cannot fail to draw them still more closely together in bonds of loyalty and affection, and I confidently believe that the good feeling which is being displayed by those who were so recently our opponents augurs well for the future of that vast country which has been added to the dominions of the Crown."

TROUBLE FEARED WITH CAPE PEOPLE.

London, June 14. — The Times' Cape Town correspondent says the town corporation has resolved to present Viscount Kitchener with a sword of honor.

It is noticeable, he says, that in all press comments from distant up-country districts and large centres a tone of cordiality toward the Boers prevails. It is generally observed that the trouble now will be with Cape Colony people, and not with those of the two Republics. Only two newspapers in South Africa oppose the suspension of the Cape constitution.

It was announced here to-day that 864 Transvaal Boers surrendered yesterday, bringing the total of surrenders for all the colonies up to about 12,000.

A STRIKE PROBABLE

Toronto Street Railway Men May be Ordered Out on Monday

Toronto June 13.—There will be no conference between the Toronto Railway Company and the committee of the Street Railway Employes Union, as matters stand at present. The company absolutely refuses to receive the committee as union men. The Board of Directors of the company met in the head office this morning, with President Mackenzie in the chair. The meeting was short, sharp and decisive. The request of the men was laid before the board, and it is understood that the members were unanimous in refusing to confer with a committee of union men.

A STRIKE IMMINENT.

It requires no stretch of imagination to say that a strike is imminent, and that in the near future.

As a last resort, D. Dilworth, Detroit, chairman of the International Convention, who arrived in the city last night, sent a letter to the company this afternoon by special delivery, asking for a conference either with himself or with a committee of the union. If a favorable answer is not received within reasonable time, probably to-morrow, a mass meeting of the men will be called for Saturday night. There seems little doubt as to the decision which will be reached at that meeting.

"If the company refuses to meet us," said Mr. Dilworth at noon, "the company will be surprised to see how soon the men will come to a decision."

MEN DETERMINED.

"Yes," added Mr. Macdonald, the local organizer for the union, "and the men are thoroughly organized, and have resolved to stand by their organization, or die in the effort."

Once all hope for a conference is given up, a speedy turn in affairs is predicted, and there seems little doubt in the minds of the union's representatives that a strike will be declared.

"It is said," observed The News reporter, "that in the event of a strike the company has something up its sleeve which will surprise the men."

"We have something up our sleeve, too, ready for them, replied Mr. Dilworth and we have just as many sleeves as they have."

STRENGTH OF UNION.

Organizer Macdonald stated that out of some 950 employes of the Toronto Railway Company, over 800 belong to the union, more than half of these having joined within the last six weeks or two months. "Nearly two years ago," he continued, "the company would not receive us; they said, 'You do not represent the men.' Now we come to them thoroughly organized, as one man, and yet the company refuse to meet us."

At the company's office, however, it was stated on this point that the company had always, as at present, refused to meet the men as representatives of a union, but were always willing to receive them individually or as a body of employes.

Mr. Macdonald also pointed out that the union's constitution was especially severe on members who were found guilty of any misdemeanor, and were just as anxious to rid the company's pay roll of all but reliable and trustworthy men.

PATTI GETS BOX OF SNAKES

Famous Singer Thrown Into Hysterics By Cruel Joke

Paris, June 14 — Patti had a terrible shock this week. Some fool sent her from Mentone a box containing three snakes, each about a yard long. She thought she was getting a nice present, and on opening the box and seeing but dry moss confidently ran her hand to the bottom into a cold, slimy, wriggling mass.

She uttered a cry, and ran into another room and was hysterical for two hours. The snakes escaped and crawled about under the furniture until finally they were killed. They were not poisonous reptiles.

ITEMS OF NEWS

Montreal, Que., June 14.—Thorvald Hansen, the man who murdered little Eric Marrotte to obtain nine cents last October, at West Mount, paid the penalty of the law to-day. The condemned man was preceded to the scaffold by Sheriff Hon. J. R. Thibaudeau and Governor Vallee of the Gaol, in their robes of office and was followed by Radclive, the official hangman, Father Meloche, who received Hansen into the Roman Catholic Church some weeks ago, accompanied him and stood by to support him as he moved up the steps. No support was necessary, as he walked with a firm tread and took his place under the fatal noose, without a tremor of excitement noticeable on his features. Radclive moved him into proper position, while Father Meloche spoke to him, and shook his hand, bidding him adieu. The accused man has aged considerably since his incarceration and his bald head and gray fringe of hair and moustache gave him a pathetic appearance. Dead silence reigned as the executioner, after whispering a word to the condemned man, put the black cap on his head and let go the rope. Everything was done so quickly and quietly that the onlookers hardly realized that the man was being launched into eternity until the body was seen dangling there. The muscles of the hand twitched a little, and the whole body quivered from reaction of the muscles. Dr. R. P. Benoit, Gaol Physician, held the pulse of the hanging man until life was entirely extinct.

As soon as the trap had been sprung Radclive ran down the steps and disappeared in the gaol, while Father Meloche knelt praying on the scaffold, and the Sheriff and the Governor stood on either side of the steps, waiting till the end. The crowd dispersed quickly, while the body was cut down and the usual inquest was held by Coroner MacMahon.

The execution took place in the presence of a large number of spectators and the roofs of the buildings around the gaol were also crowded with people.

Adverse criticism was caused by the heavy sale of tickets of admission. Before the execution many tickets were offered for sale at the gates of the gaol, the prices ranging from 50c to $1. An investigation will probably be made.

The crime of which Hansen was executed was the murder of a boy whom he heard jingling coppers in his pocket, which coppers he wanted, in order to further indulge his craving for whisky, under the influence of which the crime was committed.

PETERBOROUGH, JUNE 14, 1902.

RUSSIAN LABOR REVOLUNION

A correspondent of a London paper, writing from Moscow, says that a curious feature of the agitation among the working classes in Central Russia is the anti-foreign character which it is assuming. In some of the revolutionary placards issued by the labor leaders the populace is exhorted to do away with the "foreign devils," a phrase apparently borrowed from the Chinese "Boxers." The line of argument adopted is that foreign capitalists, engineers and managers have invaded the country for no other purpose than to make money out of the toiling Russian masses. Oppressed work-people are told to remember that lead and steel are cheap. This outcry against the foreigners is regarded as the more surprising, because the movement is at all events partly of foreign origin. The most active agents in rousing the Russian workman to a sense of his miserable situation have been the hundreds of well-educated men who have abandoned their own careers in order to live among the people and teach them, not only to read and write, but the doctrines of revolutionary socialism. This teaching, however, would have had little effect, possibly, had it not been that in most of the mills and factories the hands came in contact with foreign workmen, from whom they heard of the rights and liberties enjoyed by the laboring classes in other countries. How deeply they have appreciated the lesson is shown by a report, on what is said to be good authority, that a deputation of Moscow workingmen have waited upon M. de Plehve, the new Minister of the Interior, armed with a translation of the rules of one of the English trades-unions, and requested permission to form themselves into similar organizations. In the event of refusal they threatened to call a general strike in all the factories of Moscow. Much, evidently, depends upon whether M. de Plehve shall decide to give vent to some of the pent-up force that threatens an explosion, or to persevere in the old policy of sitting on the safety-valve.

ELECTRIC POWER DIRECT FROM AIR.

It is now claimed that electricity from the atmosphere can be directly utilized without chemicals or dynamos, making a practical application of it without the need of employing any motive force. The discoverer of this secret is Senor Clemente Figueras, engineer of woods and forests in the Canary Islands, and a noted professor of physics. He asserts he has invented a generator by which he can collect electric fluid so as to be able to store it and apply it for infinite purposes — for instance, in connection with shops, railways and manufactures. He says he expects its effect will be a tremendous economic and industrial revolution. He will not give the key to the invention, but declares that the only extraordinary point about it is that it has taken so long to discover a simple scientific fact. He intends shortly going to Madrid and Berlin to patent his inventions. In addition to the discovery the Daily Mail says that, according to letters received in London from his friends in Teneriffe, Senor Figueras has constructed a rough apparatus by which, in spite of its small size and defects, he obtains a current of 550 volts, which he utilises in his own house for lighting purposes and driving a motor of twenty horse-power. His inventions comprise a generator, a motor and a sort of governor or regulator, the whole apparatus being so simple that a child could work it. disturb the nerves. If the engines get

AS TO ENGINE SPEED.

The question, can a locomotive engine haul a train at a speed of 150 miles an hour, has been asked of a number of engine men on different railways. The answer was, on all hands, that possibly an engine can be built to make the speed, but it would be a terrific strain on the man who ran it. One engine man said:—"The general public has no idea of the strain on the engine man, and the faster the speed the greater the strain. When you get up to fifty miles an hour you are going the pace that makes young men old. When an engine man on one of the fast trains that run into this city leaves his seat he is often nervous and worn out. He is sometimes in the condition that in a woman would be called hysterical.

"There are men on this road, in fact on all roads, who will not take a fast passenger run. They are splendid freight runners, but when they get on a passenger train they cannot make the time, and no matter how much they dislike to do so, they have to go back to a freight train. The engine man has to keep his eye riveted on the rails ahead of him. He must be prepared to see any danger that may suddenly present itself, and he must be watching for signals at stations and in blocks.

"This is a terrible strain on the nerves of his eyes, and it is found to tell on a man before long, especially if he has a great deal of night running. At night the shadows bother him a great deal, and many an engine man has been badly scared by them. In fact, everything about running an engine tends to rack the brain and disturb the nerves. If the engines get to running 150 miles an hour a new set of men with new kinds of constitutions must be secured to run them."

SOME TESTIMONY AS TO THE MERITS OF SICHE GAS.

All the Plants Below Were Giving Good Satisfaction till June 1902.

"The Only Light!"

The Windsor House, Bala, Muskoka, July 29th, 1901—To whom it may concern: This is to certify that I have had in use the Siche Gas Machine running seventy lights for the past five weeks, on some occasions running five hours at a stretch, and I found the best of satisfaction. On no occasion during that period have I experienced the slightest trouble. Its simplicity is complete, and its superiority to other machines in my opinion unquestioned. I consider it the ONLY light. (Signed) William McDivitt, Prop.

(Mr. McDivitt called on us the other day, while in Toronto on the Hotel Men's Deputation, and fully endorsed the above testimonials as more than borne out by his experience with the Siche since last July. Mr. McDivitt has one of the best known Muskoka hotels, keeps lights going constantly and till the "wee sma' hours" and hence what satisfied him will satisfy anyone.)

"Cheaper Than Oil!"

Beaumaris, Ont., Oct. 8th, 1901. The Siche Co., Toronto. Gentlemen: Your directions as to taking care of the Siche Gas Machine while not in use received; accept thanks for same. I will not store it for next year, as we leave the summer cottage "Steubenden" for home next week

I will say we have had no trouble, the lights very satisfactory. Better and steadier lights than electric. It has been two months since we installed the plant, and I would not want to go back to lamps. Taking the volume of light in making comparison, it is cheaper than oil. Respectfully, Mrs. W.F. Davidson.

(Mrs. W. F. Davidson, of Steubenville, Ohio, one of the principle residents of Beaumaris, the leading summer cottage resort in Muskoka).

"The King of Gas Machines."

Tiverton, Ont, Feb 19th, 1902. The Siche Gas Co., Toronto. Gentlemen: I put one of your Siche Acetylene Gas Machines in my house last September, and it has given me the best satisfaction. The simplicity of charging and cleaning it, and the great light-giving quality of it make it one of the best gas generators I have ever seen. I investigated a good many generators for making acetylene gas before purchasing, but am now satisfied I have the King of gas machines in the Siche. Yours truly, (Sgd) W. H. Urick, Prop. Mansion House, Tiverton, Ont.

"Best Plant in Town."

Gore Bay, Ont., Feb 21st, 1902. — The Siche Gas Co., Toronto. Dear Sirs: The gas plant you installed for us last fall is giving entire satisfaction, and is acknowledged to be the best plant in town. (Sgd) James Fisher.

(This machine is installed in a new stone block, and lights the stores of J. K. McGregor, druggist; Hurst & Burk, bankers, and J.N. Waite, general store. Upstairs it lights the Central Telephone office, Public Library, and dentists' doctors' and law offices. The machine is a style I., "Mailing Catalog.")

The Siche System is Absolutely Safe and its Installation Decreases the Fire Hazard

We append two certificates:—

THE SICHE GAS CO.,
83 York Street, Toronto.

Gentlemen,—

After carefully inspecting your apparatus for the generation of gas from calcium carbide, I have pleasure in giving my opinion that the machine is thoroughly practical, convenient, simple and and safe.

Your principle of making extremely small quantities of gas in rapid sequence, as required by the demand of the burners in use, is undoubtedly the sound one, and I believe the Siche machine solves the problem of acetylene lighting, removing, as it does, practically all the danger of fire or explosion.

Yours Truly,
WILLIS CHIPMAN,
M. Am. Soc.C.E.
M. Can. Soc. C.E.

(Mr. Chipman is so well known that it is almost superfluous to state that he is the leading consulting sanitary engineer of Canada, an honorary graduate of McGill in Engineering, and a specialist in Water Works, Sewerage Works, Gas Works, and Electric Light and Power Plants.)

Mr. G. C. Robb, Chief Engineer of the Boiler Inspection and Insurance Co. of Canada (also Consulting Engineer) says:

Toronto, May 7th.

J. H. Chewett, Esq.,
Toronto.

Dear Sir,—

I have seen some of the "Siche" Acetylene Gas Machines in use, and have carefully examined the design and method of operation. In my opinion the machine is simple, convenient to use, and not likely to get out of order. The means for charging it and for cleaning are simple and effective.

The machine is automatic in its action, and while it cannot store up any large quantity of gas, yet it produces it as fast as called for by the number of lights in use. When the lights are put out the production of gas ceases. The pressure of gas is limited, and can be adjusted to prevent any excess of pressure beyond that necessary for the proper combustion at the burners. For these qualities I judge it to be a machine that will be easily cared for and chine that will prove to be easily cared for and safe to use.

Yours Very Truly,
GEO. C. ROBB.

This SYSTEM has been fully approved by the CANADIAN FIRE Underwriters' Association and may be installed without increase of insurance rates. The SICHE machine is the only one that is not required to bear the stigma, "Dangerous," as a warning against approaching it with a light.

CLAIMS.

There are three claims "New York" "Chicago" and "San Francisco."

SITUATED.

Yavapai Co., Arizona.

EXTENT.

The area of the three claims is 600 feet by 4500 feet.

ORE BODY.

Out-croppings show on the surface 200 feet to 450 feet wide and 4600 feet long, (nearly one mile)

DEPTH.

Shaft is down over 100 feet in ore from the surface and there is ore fully 70 feet above where the shaft starts.

CROSS-CUTS.

Cross-cuts on shaft of fifty feet each are entirely in ore, so also is thirty-foot Tunnel.

ORE IN SIGHT.

By expert calculations there is TWO MILLION TONS OF ORE IN SIGHT NOW,

ASSAYS.

THE BLACK ROCK MINING Co. equally high in Copper, with some silver. Total values running as high as $56.00 per ton.

COST.

Ore can be mined and treated on a proposition of this class, at less than $3.00 per ton by present processes.

The largest producing mines today pay big dividends on ore averaging from $3.00 to $8.00 per ton. This is only made possible by the enormous bodies of ore such as are found on the "Chicago" "United Verde" "Oro Grande" and other similar mines.

The "United Verde" with an original capital of three million dollars pays to its stockholders in cash profits about Two million dollars every month, or in other words pays back it's entire capital every six weeks.

THE BLACK ROAK MINNNG CO., LIMITED, will without doubt pay dividends of at least one per cent. a month before the end of the year. Now is the time to get in while stock is low. Only 10c. per share.

Curious Bits of News.

All princes are not drones. Duke Karl Theodor of Bavaria recently performed his four-thousandth operation for cataract at his clinic in Munich. His wife acted as his assistant.

The English stockholders in Marconi's wireless telegraph company value the inventor's life so highly at this critical period of his experimentation that they have had him insured for $750,000.

The sale of oleomargarine in the United States is increasing rapidly, and one of the causes of the growing sales is said to be the large amount of free advertising that it has received from the debates in Congress and the State legislatures and the newspapers, in consequence of the efforts made to suppress it.

A much-valued distinction has been conferred upon the proprietors of a large cigar factory at Havana. The firm have received an order from England to furnish the cigars for the royal banquet which is to be held after the coronation of King Edward. The order includes three sizes and amounts to several thousand cigars. A unique feature is that there is no stipulation whatever as to the price, this matter being left entirely to the judgment of the manufacturers.

Court etiquette and religious scruples have had an amusing tussle at The Hague. The trouble arose when the daughters of Dr. Kuyper, the Premier, were invited to the first court ball of the season. Low-necked dresses were commanded, but the Misses Kuyper decided that decollete dresses were inconsistent with their religious principles. They applied for a dispensation, but received a curt reply from the mistress of the ceremonies, who declared that time-honored customs of the Dutch court must be adhered to. Dr. Kuyper made direct representations on the subject to Queen Wilhelmina, with the result that a compromise was arranged. The Misses Kuyper will stay away from the ball, but will take tea with their sovereign in high-necked dresses the same afternoon.

The "Tailor and Cutter," which has been accustomed to describe Joseph Chamberlain as the pink of fashion, has this to say of the Colonial Secretary in a recent issue: "We are sorry to note that Mr. Chamberlain is developing quite a stoop, and fear he is losing some of his old-time smartness. It is true that his monocle is still in its old place, but we miss the familiar orchid, and, as we have examined his garments, we could not but feel that conservatism was sadly apparent, for there was much in them that was not up to date." Mr. Chamberlain's coat lapels, says the "Tailor and Cutter," are plain, heavy, and disfigured by a long, gaping breast-pocket, like some ugly wound, calling for assistance. The washing vest of Mr. Chamberlain, the paper adds, was quite out of harmony with his coat, while his trousers were wide and unshapely.

The Millionaire and the Pie.

One time a millionaire found himself at nightfall in a small town that was ministered to by no railroad. And he had in his pocket a one-hundred-dollar bill and in his stomach a sense of hunger.

And he went to the only store in the town to buy food for himself. Now the keeper of the store was a man of much caution and narrow mind.

"I am as hungry as my stomach knows how to be," said the millionaire affably. "Sell me that veal pie."

As he spoke he laid down the hundred-dollar bill.

The cautious storekeeper picked it up and looked at it with doubt mingled with distrust and accompanied with dubiety. Then he said: "My veal pie is worth ten cents to me, but I never heard of such a bill as that. Give me one with another picture on it, for this one is not worth a veal pie, I am sure."

And the millionaire said:

"My friend, it so happens that this evening finds me with no other picture bills upon my person nor yet any coin. The bill is surely worth a hundred of the ordinary, every-day kind. But that is neither here nor there."

But the storekeeper shook his head sourly.

"Nothing will recompense me for the veal pie but money that I can understand. There may be hundred-dollar bills, but I never saw one before. I know the worth of my veal pie, and if you have ten cents you can eat it, but if you haven't you can't."

"But I have not ten cents," said the millionaire; "so let us put it on another basis. Give me the veal pie out of charity, for my stomach is not used to being put off."

"Now we're on familiar ground," said the storekeeper, as he sliced a piece of cheese and ate it; "I have seen beggars many times, and as I never saw one so well dressed as you are I doubt you. You cannot be a beggar. Your clothes betray you, and even if you were one I would not help you as I do not believe in encouraging mendicancy."

"You are difficult beyond a doubt," said the millionaire, raising his eyebrows and shaking his head. "I have it. Let me work for the veal pie. I am strong. Have you no boxes that need unpacking, no goods that need to be shelved?"

Said the storekeeper, looking at the clock: "I have never insulted the frame that the Lord gave me by calling in others to do that which I can do myself. My boxes are unpacked and my goods are shelved. If you have ten cents you can take the veal pie, but be quick, for it is the hour of closing."

Then the millionaire felt in his vest pockets and found a counterfeit dime which he had received in change the day before. And rendered desperate by his hunger he gave the storekeeper the dime and received in exchange the veal pie. For to the near-sighted storekeeper the coin looked good.

As for the millionaire, he ate the pie like a shipwrecked mariner. And the near-sighted storekeeper dropped the counterfeit into his till with contentment.—Charles Battell Loomis in "Saturday Evening Post."

Scene: A collapsed building. "Kape alive, Mike! We're rescuin' ye." Voice from the debris—Is big Clancy op there wid ye? "Sure he is." "Ast him wud he be so kind as t' step aff the roofins. I've enough on top av me widout him." —Brooklyn "Life."

St. Pierre.

Shaken Martinique, with her extinguished capital, holds the world's interest still. What manner of city was it which in two or three awful minutes ceased to be? As graphic a description of the gay little city of romantic memories which has been blotted out was given to The London Daily Mail, and is here reproduced in part :—

St. Pierre was one of the most picturesque of towns. In shape it followed the semicircular form of the shore, and its main streets ran parallel with it. But there was so little room between the mountains behind the town and the sea that when it increased in size it had to climb the slopes behind.

And so as you approached the town you saw before you terrace upon terrace of picturesque houses, creamy tinted with red-tiled roofs, backed up against the palms and dense foliage of the tropics which clothe the Mornes with never-fading green. Away behind to the north stands the great mountain called Pelee, lifting its head into the misty veil of cloud which hangs above it, the mighty forces of a volcano burning within. It is this treacherous sentinel which has burst forth, dealing death and destruction, and turning the beauty of nature into a vast crematorium.

The windows of the St. Pierre houses were without glass or frames, and had simply heavy wooden blinds with movable slats, closed by shutters, which kept out the driving rain. The houses along the Rue Victor Hugo, the principal street, had terraced courtyards at their rear, enclosed by solid stone walls overlooking the harbor, where the ships of all nations were wont to float. The depth of water close in shore is so great that large ships could be moored almost under the eaves of the houses. In these courtyards, which were filled with roses and fruit-bearing fig vines trailing over trellis, were bathing pools filled with the Gouyave water which came down from the mountains and supplied St. Pierre with pure drinking water also.

The end of the Rue Victor Hugo was ignominious. After gradually narrowing down it became merely an alley, so full of all abominable smells that it won for itself the name of the "Street of a Thousand Smells." All the streets of this ill-fated town were narrow and very poorly lighted at night by a few ancient lamps, so that by 9 o'clock in the evening the town fell into complete obscurity, and one might well imagine himself in some mediaeval French town.

But during the day the Rue Victor Hugo was filled with what has been called "a population of the Arabian Nights." So dazzling a combination of color, barbaric in its intensity, could scarcely be found elsewhere—certainly not in the Caribbee Islands. Yellow in all its vividness predominated in turban, foulard, and gown. Pink, green, purple, blue, in stripes, plaids and figures, wrapped about the lithe bodies or gracefully wound about the well-poised heads—such was the first impression one's eyes received of the native population of Martinique.

Nowhere does that distinctive article of adornment, the turban, play so important a role as among the creole women there. A mere head-covering in Barbados or Antigua, in Martinique the stiffly-starched, gaily-colored "Madras" becomes a distinctly ornamental headdress, and it is worn with a certain coquettish grace which proclaims the lingering trace of true French blood in the dark current in the veins.

The beauty of the Creole is proverbial, and even the common people share to a certain extent in this beauty. The mulatresse capresse, or metisse, differs as much from the negresses of Jamaica or Barbados as the pure Caucasian type differs from them. These people have in many cases, in too many, a curious mixture of blood, ranging from the "saccatra," almost pure negro, to the so-called "sang mele," almost pure Caucasian—a mingling of races which lends to them the warm beauty of the tropics, together with the refinement of feature of their sisters. The most beautiful of all, however, are those who have the blood of the three races, Carib, negro and white, the blending of the old Indian with the two usurping races lending a charm of color and feature as rare as it is beautiful.

When visitors cast anchor off St. Pierre a signal gun boomed out. Immediately the ship was surrounded by a shrieking, frenzied mob of boatmen, waiting to convey one to shore, mingled with a swarm of half-naked diving boys, all equally excited and equally anxious for stray coppers. A language which was not French nor English, but unknown and unintelligible, greeted the ear, and was poured forth with that extraordinary volubility and extravagant gesticulation which seem to be necessary concomitants of any transactions among peoples having a drop of French blood.

Personal violence seemed imminent, and one hesitated to trust his property, much less his life, to the mercy of such repellant carriers. All this, however, was but momentary, and one was soon set safely down in the quaint streets of old St. Pierre. The best time to see St. Pierre used to be at the carnival season. Then the Creole nature—its passion for song, dance, gaudy colors and barbaric pageants—asserted itself. The people used to take possession of the streets of the city, which were given up to a series of processions, fetes, crowds of maskers and gay dancers, presenting a scene which was unrivalled.

Men and women, light of nature and warm of blood, dressed in fantastic costumes, and personating devils, animals or grotesque figures which came under no special category, used to fill the narrow, steep streets of St. Pierre on Mardi Gras with a gorgeous, hurrying, jostling, shanting, dancing pandemonium of joyous gaiety.

It is over such vivacious scenes as these that the molten pall of death has swept.

Cucumbers, squashes and melons prefer rich soil and an abundance of well-rotted manure. Old sawdust, or rotten wood, mixed with the manure, is said to be serviceable. It will be an advantage to allow cucumbers to grow on stakes or bushes, the same as peas. Tomatoes may also be fastened to stakes. One of the best plans is to grow cucumbers along a fence if the location is not too shady.

Making Poultry Pay.

Poultry-keeping will pay the man who has poultry at heart, just the same as farming pays the man who has farming at heart, only a much larger profit for the money invested.

Farming never paid the man who had a desire to drive a huckster waggon for the village merchant, or for the man who had some other pursuit at heart more than farming. The man who expects to make poultry-keeping pay must have a desire for that particular work. Of course he can be engaged in some other pursuits and make a success at poultry-keeping, but he must have a love for the business or he can never claim a grand success. There are thousands of men who are making fortunes at raising poultry, who are largely engaged in banking, railroading or some other profession as well, but they have a fancy for fowls or they would never have admitted them in their lines.

In former years I was engaged as a representative of a well-known commercial establishment, which required me to travel largely over the rural districts of our country, and where I noticed a farmer who kept all buildings in a high state of preservation, with well-painted doors on hinges, well shingled, all fences up to standard, all corners free from obnoxious weeds, no harvesting machines or waggons standing under shade trees, no farming implements of any kind standing or strewn where they were last used, I decided that sort of man would make poultry-keeping pay, and pay handsomely.

Speaking from a life spent on a farm, I will say one cannot possibly keep up all ends on a farm. But one can keep it neat and attractive and in a profitable condition. And this question is forced on the poultry-keeper. He cannot keep up all ends, but he can keep them clean, neat and attractive, and this is the secret of poultry-raising. If houses and yards are not kept clean and free from vermin great losses are sure to follow. A few years ago a neighbor requested me to send and get him a setting of White Wyandotte eggs. Knowing the disposition of the man—although he was a good-natured fellow, as all lovers of poultry generally are—I knew it would be money sunk for him, but I complied with his request, and ordered a setting from a well-known White Wyandotte breeder, a breeder I knew would send out nothing but choice eggs for hatching. The eggs came in fine condition, were put under the natural hen, and out of thirteen eggs seven chicks were hatched. A splendid hatch it was! A great many would suppose this a poor hatch, but if we can get seven chicks out of every thirteen eggs throughout the season we will have no "kick" coming. In about two weeks I called on my neighbor, and not a single chick did he have. All the blame was laid on the breeder, as usual. But I insisted on helping the breeder out and to look for the cause nearer home. On catching the mother hen and turning down a few fluff feathers I discovered a very good crop of lice. Lice and chicks cannot be raised togethere by any mans. This was not a surprise to me, but it seemed to be new to my neighbor. However, it lightened the load on the breeder, and if a number of poultry-raisers would look well to the cleaning of poultry houses, ridding the place of lice and disease, there would be more satisfied customers and less abused breeders.

I do not believe there is any royal road to wealth in the poultry business. Yet I am certain there is an independent living in it if properly managed. I know a breeder in Indiana who received $500 for a pen of Plymouth Rocks. Of course they had a great show record behind them, but they never could have been brought to this high state of perfection had they not been bred judiciously and by practical methods. But as we farmers are not breeding a specialty of show fowls, but utility fowls, yet keeping up to the standard requirements, we do not expect to get such fancy prices; but the aim of every up-to-date farmer should be to obtain strictly standard bred fowls, fowls that are positively from laying strain ancestors, as the egg production is the farmer's profit. A good egg yield can never be obtained from fowls roosting in treetops and on fences. But there has been a vast improvement in this respect in the last ten years, as farmers are fast learning that poultry comfortably housed during the winter season, and properly fed, will return a larger income than most any other stock fed and cared for on the farm; but the farmer that manages his poultry on the "Peter Tumble-down" plan will find poultry-keeping a total loss.

A few days ago I heard a man of this class running the poultry business down at a terrible rate. His argument was: Chickens eat their heads off three or four times each year, as his chickens had eaten with the fattening hogs all the fall and winter, and had not laid a single egg. He had been trying to get his wife to sell them, and not leave one on the farm. I was forced to say that a man who has no more sense than to expect eggs under such management should be sent to the insane asylum, as any sane person knows hens would get too fat to lay under such treatment. I believe in the corn ration, but it should be alternately fed with other grains, vegetables and animal foods. I have been a breeder of poultry for the last fifteen years, and I have never seen the time that our hens were not paying a handsome profit. I would rather have one hundred well-bred hens on a small piece of land and out of debt than to have two hundred acres and be financially embarrassed, as some farmers are. I would enjoy life better, have more money that I could call my own, and be free from the clutch of money sharks. To those who wish to enter into the poultry business for either profit or pleasure, let me say let the old mongrels of our forefathers softly down into oblivion and bury them, as I know from long years of practical experience that pure bred poultry pays a much larger profit than scrubs. They lay more eggs and mature quicker and it costs no more to feed blooded stock than it does to feed scrubs.—J. C. Clipp, Saltello, Ind., in N. Y. Tribune-Farmer.

"Is there really any danger
In a kiss?" he softly sighed,
Little planning any plot.
"Wait—I'll to the stairs and listen,
And find out," she quick replied,
"Whether papa sleeps or not."

—Smart Set.

No Comparison

A sense of proportion is an excellent thing, and an old soldier who writes to The Globe upon the subject of the recent defeat of Lord Methuen makes a very good point as to some of the comments passed by certain newspapers. He signs himself as "one who saw this brave brigade from start to finish on October 25, 1854," and writes as follows:—

"I read the account of the Boer charge on General Methuen's rear-guard taken from The Standard newspaper, London, and published in The Globe of the 18th. The Standard compares the ride of the Boers with the charge of the Light Brigade at Balaclava. The editor of The Standard must know well there is no comparison. General Methuen's column or field force of all ranks was only about 700 or so. The Light Brigade, with the brave Cardigan leading, went right through the centre of thirty thousand Russians, with sixty guns, in a commanding position, blazing away on the brigade as they were advancing down to the guns, where they had to put the Russian gunners out of the way. They tried to get away the guns, but found it impossible. Every man had to fight for his life back through cavalry and artillery, as they all closed in on them with the intention to capture or kill what was left on the retreat. The brave Cardigan, who obeyed his chief's order to advance and take the guns, knowing well at the time it was impossible, was about the last to return. From the time the brigade started until what was left returned—about 180 when the roll was called after the return—twenty minutes would cover the time. Bear this in mind: it was every man for himself to fight his way back, as they were all broken up in the rush at the guns by the Russian artillery firing on the whole, Russian and British, at the same time. Every volley carried off as many Russians as British. This statement is correct about the Russians firing on their own men. It was a surprise to see any return from the dreadful artillery fire they got from the Russians."

Brave, dashing and skilful Delarey's charge certainly was; it was exactly such a rush as many times before in the history of war has carried cavalry to victory. To persons accustomed to think of the Boers as unable to attack, accustomed also to think of the day of cavalry as over, it must be a surprise to read of such a charge. But the Boers have been moulded by two years of warfare into excellent soldiers, able to attack as well as to defend, and the loose formations of modern war offer peculiarly good opportunities to good cavalry trained to shoot from the saddle. To compare such a charge to the Balaclava charge, or to Von Bredow's "death-ride" at Vionville, when a few German squadrons shook the whole French line of battle and saved their overmatched infantry, is absurd, as my old soldier correspondent convincingly points out.

In this connection a personal reference to Lord Methuen may be introduced, showing him in a light possibly unfamiliar to the majority of newspaper readers. Lord Methuen, as is indicated in the paragraph which is quoted, is a man of a deeply devotional turn of mind. The quotation is from The Daily Graphic, and is as follows:—

"A largely attended public meeting was held last evening at Corsham (near Bath, in England)—the home of Lord Methuen—for the purpose of passing a resolution to be sent to the wounded General, expressing his fellow-townsmen's high admiration for his distinguished services to the country during the South African campaign, and their sincere sympathy with him in being wounded. The Rev. J. D. Dunlap, vicar of Corsham, presided. The following telegram was sent:—

"'Dunlap, Corsham. To Lord Methuen, Klerksdorp: Enthusiastic public meeting. Resolution sincere sympathy and speedy recovery. Shall sing your hymn Sunday.'

"Mr. Dunlap explained that the hymn referred to was 'Lead, Kindly Light,' Lord Methuen's favorite hymn, which he promised his Lordship should be sung in church the first Sunday in every month. He had received a letter from the General speaking of the comfort it gave him to know that he was remembered on the first Sunday in the month, and also in their prayers. The resolution was carried by acclamation, and it was also agreed to telegraph to Lady Methuen informing her of the terms of their message to her husband."

Some dispute has arisen as to Lord Methuen's nationality. It cannot be appraised with absolute accuracy; the family was originally Scotch, it is said, from Perthshire, and has for many years been settled in England, living in Wiltshire, at Corsham. Lord Methuen's grandfather was elevated to the Peerage in 1838; prior to that he had for many years been M.P. for his county. It may be added that Lord Methuen pronounces his name in three syllables, with the accent on the first.

The Culture of Celery.

"Celery Culture" is the title of another of the popular publications of the United States Department of Agriculture now in press, known as Farmers' Bulletins. "Little more than twenty-five years ago," says the bulletin, "the celery crop, which now forms such an important factor in market-gardening interests, was cultivated by few growers only. Celery was to be found on the menu of a few of the leading hotels, but not in many homes. Its use has spread until at present, with the output reckoned by the carloads, it is classed as a wholesome and palatable addition to the fare of all classes. All of the cultivated varieties now in use," continues Mr. W. R. Beattie, the author of the bulletin, "have been derived from the wild celery, a native of the marshes of southern England. This wild celery was for a long time considered poisonous, which was a natural supposition, as it belongs to the same family as poison hemlock." Mr. Beattie, after reviewing the value of celery from a commercial standpoint, notes the nutrition contained in the plant, which, by the way, is not so very great, but it adds a most palatable addition to the table in the winter season, when a great quantity of meat is eaten and few vegetables. It is generally considered as one of the most wholesome of vegetables.

RESETTLING SOUTH AFRICA

Britons Being Rushed to the New Colonies to [illegible] War's Ravages

London, June 12—Even before peace with the Boers was officially announced England had begun to carry out her plans for resettling South Africa with her own people. Months ago, under official promoting, the immigration associations of London set about bearing a hand with the settlement problem.

The Colonial Immigration Society began it by sending out a delegation of several hundred women to Cape Colony, for distribution at various points where female help could command high wages and loyal English feminine influence could do the most good.

The Scottish Settlers' Association, an organization originally formed in Rhodesia under the patronage and with the assistance of Cecil Rhodes himself, has taken up the work almost as quickly and even on a greater scale. Four months ago a band of 100 Scotch farmers and laborers was sent out to the Orange River Colony to settle there on the land vacated by burghers.

The association was in such a hurry to get its men on the ground that it sent them a little too soon. When they arrived in the new colony it was found that local conditions were hardly ripe for their reception, and Mr. Rhode's assistance had to be sought. He solved the problem by providing the Scotchmen with grants of land from his own farms in Cape Colony.

Now that peace has been declared, preparations for extending the scope of the work are being made. The capital of the association has been raised to half a million dollars and English and Scotch agriculturists are to be rushed to South Africa to people the new colonies, to read just the balance of population there and, by outnumbering the Boers, to render impossible even the faintest chance of a recurrence of a rebellion against British authority.

COLONIAL AID.

Lord Salisbury and the statesmen of England have been moved on many occasions recently to speak of their appreciation of the assistance given during the South African war. Giving credit to colonial troops is right. The colonies have proven that they are not only dependencies but that they can render valuable aid to the mother land when an emergency arises. They have demonstrated to the world that when England goes to war she is backed by the colonies who can furnish her with men who can ride and shoot and endure and stand up against the fire of the enemy. Better soldiers were not on the field in the South African war than those of Canada and Australia. They displayed courage and tact, and when driven to it showed they could put up a stiff fight against tremendous odds. The young volunteers excelled their comrades of the permanent English army because they were fighting on account of the love they bore Great Britain while their comrades of the permanent corps worked as a matter of business.

In dealing with the subject the Montreal Star says: "The Empire will be much the stronger for the consolidation of South Africa. The removal of the Transvaal oligarchy from the flanks of our African possessions will leave us far freer to guard our interests elsewhere. But much as that will do to better the position of the Empire, the patent and undeniable fact that the great self-governing colonies are to be hereafter considered as a part of the military resources of the British peoples, will strengthen our position in the world immensely more. Britain's Colonies are neither burdens nor responsibilities in the light of these new conditions but allies and the sources of military reinforcement."

Returned Klondiker Didn't Want to Wait Three Hours at a Station

Special to The Times.

Indianapolis, June 12.—When gold was discovered in the Klondike a tinner named Frank Levy went to the "diggings" and opened a saloon. He sold whisky at from $1.50 to $3 a drink and invested his profits advantageously and returned a short time ago a millionaire. Yesterday he was visiting friends in Washington and when he got ready to return home he found it was three hours before the train was due. He immediately chartered a special train to take him to Petersburg, a distance of 30 miles, rather than wait for the regular train.

MOUNT PELEE.

The newspaper reports of the greatest disaster the world has ever seen, caused by the overflow of the volcano at Mount Pelee has been exaggerated in many instances. This has been discovered by scientists who have been hunting for news about the crater in question. It was said that the eruption blew off the whole top of the volcano; that the topography of the island had been changed; that molten matter poured from the crater, and that, in fact, there had been a cataclysm which had made Pelee unrecognizable by those who were familiar with its shape.

Professor Heilprin, who was sent to Martinique by the National Geographical Society of the United States, has been all around the crater and he has failed to find many of the phenomena reported by the correspondents. He says it is positively known that there has been no flow of molten matter from the crater; that there has been no subsidence of the mountain; that the height of Mount Pelee is unchanged; that the crater does not contain a cylinder cone; and that there has been no cataclysm and no topographical alteration of the country.

"Not satisfied with having told us their troubles before, many of the defeated candidates are now recounting them.

BOTH HAVE MADE MONEY OUT OF IT

The Toronto Street Car Company Paid the City $140,594 Last Year

ON A FOUR-CENT FARE BASIS

Toronto, Ont. June 13.—As a city of cheap railway fares Toronto is a shining example.

In 1895 this city began its experiment with cheap fares. Some said cheap fares would mean poor service, lumbering and delapidated cars and a failure on the part of the Toronto Railway Company to pay its dividends.

It is common talk here that men in the city government, or close to it, were offered stock at that time, for nothing except their influence. Some were afraid to take it; other took the chance. Now the timid which they had done likewise and taken the stock.

Thursday, May 29, 1902, the stock was quoted at 123 1/4; on the succeeding day at 123 5-8. Brokers and other market—wise men predicted that it will soon rise to 150. And this with low fares.

The street railway and the city are working under a contract in which the city asserts its ownership of the streets and leases them to the company at $500 per mile. This brings a rental of $80,000 per year, which will increase as the lines are extended. The city puts the streets in condition to receive the rails. The company furnishes the rails and the city lays them.

The company also pays the following percentages of gross receipts into the city treasury: Up to $1,000,000, 8 per cent over $1,000,000 and up to $1,250,000, 10 per cent; over $1,250,000 12 per cent.

The city treasurer furnishes the following figures showing the gross receipts and percentages since the inception of the system:

Fiscal Year	Gross Rcts.	City's Share
1895-96........	$ 988,800.59	$ 79,104.02
1896-97........	[illegible]	82,021.54
1897-98........	1,142,870.54	94,287.65
1898-99........	1,291,086.57	109,108.65
1899-00........	1,424,829.90	122,483.06
1900-01........	1,588,281.27	140,594.11

The city engineer has authority to condemn delapitated cars. The result is that the company is running neat and substantial cars.

The following is the schedule of fares:

Work tickets, good from 6 to 8 a.m., and 6 to 7 p.m., six for 25 cents.

School tickets, good to and from public and private schools, eight for 25 cents.

General tickets, good at all other times of day, twenty-five for $1.

Sunday tickets, good on no other day, seven tickets for 25 cents.

The company is compelled to give universal transfers. A passenger may travel from any point for one fare, no matter how many times it becomes necessary to transfer.

This contract runs for thirty years from the time it was signed. Said an official in the treasury department: "If we could make a new contract now we could not get much better terms from the street railway." Both the company and the city have made money out of the cheap fare contract.

WILL BE HAPPY IF YOU ARE WELL

Paine's Celery Compound

Bestows That Health And Vigor That Makes Living Pleasure

If you are sick and out-of-sorts in June it is in your power to make yourself, healthy, strong and happy.

There is not the slightest reason why you should go through the hot summer weather feeling sickly, miserable, languid and melancholic. To be well and strong, means happiness and true joy, and this is the season when you should be bright, hearty and gladsome.

If you are sleepless, rheumatic, neuralgic, or have the shadows of disease hovering over you, if you are not as bright, energetic and strong as you were some weeks ago, the use of Paine's Celery Compound will tone up and fortify your whole system, cleanse the blood correct digestion, sharpen the appetite, and conduce to restful sleep. Thousands once in a half-dead condition owe their present good health to the use of Paine's Celery Compound. Mrs. E. Rankin, of Courtright, Ont. says—

"With great pleasure I beg to inform you of the good I have received from the use of Paine's Celery Compound. For a number of years I have been in very poor health, and lately I was advised to try your medicine. I used three bottles, and have received a world of good. My severe headaches are completely banished, and the heart disease from which I suffered for thirty years has almost disappeared. I am fully convinced that Paine's Celery Compound is all that it is recommended to be,

WORK WITH FAITH.

SERMON BY

GEORGE H. HEPWORTH.

My Father worketh hitherto, and I work.—St. John, v., 17.

I was looking over some plans with an architect the other day. He was so eccentric in some of his ideas that many people thought him mildly insane, but I discovered that he was simply religious.

"I am just as truly bound to be honest in building a house," he said, "as you are to be sincere in your prayers. If I can show when the time of reckoning comes that I have put my soul into my work I have no doubt about the welfare of that soul. I must look to my foundation to see that it has sustaining power, to my roof that it will not leak, to the arrangement of rooms and closets, to make everything convenient and comfortable rather than inconvenient and irritating, and I must do all this in the name of humanity and God."

He struck the bedrock truth of the religious life. If I could extend the principle which governed my architect to every department of activity and industry I should convert the world to the theory of the New Testament, change its complexion and make it a far better place to live in than it is now.

Every man a consecrated workman. All honest work God's work, as truly so as the work of the priest at the altar. The bricklayer, the merchant, the preacher, the woman of society, equally servants of the Most High. The winning of a livelihood by some kind of toil—whether on the farm or in the warehouse or in the pulpit makes no difference—not simply a necessity, but a divine necessity in accordance with the plan of the universe, and this toil to be engaged in with skillful hands and a loyal heart, not as drudgery but as duty, not by decree of a harsh fate but by the will of a wise and overruling Providence. The millennium would come before our prayer for it had been finished, our mental attitude would be more cheery, and a gladness would prevail as the spring sunshine does, joy-compelling and fruit-bearing.

Although our life here is temporary and we may reasonably look forward to something better, still this life is a glorious opportunity. The real difference among men is not that some are rich and others poor, for that is a mere incident, a detail, but that some accept their task with faith and others think themselves unjustly used. The poor man who endures his poverty with a heart that makes the best of what he has can find more happiness in his meagre circumstance than the greedy soul discovers in his wider field if he feeds his appetite for more. If I could make all men plan to be happy where they are instead of wearing their fretful hearts out because they are not where they think God ought to have put them, I should make the very wilderness blossom with roses and raise a floodtide of joy that would sweep round the earth bearing blessings to every home. It is not so much what you have as what you are that brings happiness. You might have all and still be miserable; and you might have little and still have heaven.

To feel that what you do is drudgery makes it drudgery. It is not the work you are doing, but your attitude toward it, that is important. If you are a king, you will dignify a trivial thing by doing it in a kingly way, and the glitter of the crown will be reflected thereon. A true Christian, finding his way to glory through the sad and hard as well as the joyous experiences of life, always under the conviction that God and the angels will come with assistance at his call, presents an ideal of work well done, of sorrows bravely borne and of a heart at peace, because duty and pleasure are two words for the same thing.

You will have trouble—make good use of it. You will have happiness—enjoy it thoroughly. You will have sorrow—let the Master share it with you. Work, if God is in it, is made easy and cheerful. Even death, if there is a home beyond to look forward to, loses its sharpest pang. Mix heaven and earth, tears and faith, life's tasks and life's hopes, and the days shall sing themselves away until the great dawn comes when you will have your reward and your rest.

Miss Caroline Corbin.

Here is the story how Mrs. Caroline Corbin became the anti-woman suffragist leader in Chicago, says an unkind Chicago newspaper. Mrs. Corbin went to school with Miss Susan B. Anthony, and not until years later the two women met in Washington.

"What have you been doing all this while?" asked Miss Anthony.

"Bringing up four boys," was the answer.

"Boys!" exclaimed the outspoken Susan. "What under the sun is a woman like you doing with four boys?"

"I don't know. Would you expect me to strangle them?"

"Bosh!" was the reply; "you should never have had them. They will grow up to be men—nothing but men!" It was then that Mrs. Corbin became an opponent of woman suffrage.

Chinese Doctors.

Chinese medical men are not compelled to pursue any particular course of study and are not able to obtain any university degree, says a doctor writing in The Chicago Daily News. Consequently doctors have no great special standing. Medicine may be practised by anyone. It is only necessary to hang out one's name as "Dr. Wang" or "Dr. Li" to become a physician. This seems easy enough, but doctors are liable to heavy penalties in the event of the death of a patient.

Chinese materia medica is extensive and nonsensical in the extreme. The native doctors have acquired an empirical knowledge of the action of certain remedies, notably of several purgatives and anodynes, but with no certain methods of diagnosis their use of these remedies is often fallacious.

A Chinese doctor feels the pulse in both wrists. He places three fingers of his right hand over the radial artery of first one arm and then the other. In the first arm he says he can tell by his first finger the condition of the spleen, which is very important. The second finger tells him the condition of the lungs and the third the state of the liver. On the other arm he detects in like manner the diseases of the heart, kidneys and stomach. He leaves the brain, the arteries, venous and nervous systems entirely out of consideration, as his books do not tell him anything about such systems. The pulse and the pulse alone, to his mind, is an indication of the locality of the disease. It is not at all uncommon for women patients to thrust an arm from the curtained bed that the physician may feel the pulse and make his diagnosis on that basis alone. If the patient recovers the doctor is credited with the cure; if the patient dies he is accused of murder. Remedies must produce immediate favorable results or the doctor is dismissed and a new one employed. I have known of eleven doctors being sent for in one day. The patient in this case pulled through after taking eleven doses, the last doctor of course getting the credit of the cure.

Several years ago I was called to see the little six-months-old grandson of the Governor of Pekin. The child was in convulsions from having eaten a quantity of indigestible material when it had only two or three teeth. Each one of a number of Chinese doctors had poured down the infant's throat, without effect, some decoction of nastiness, the last dose of which was powdered scorpions' tails. By means of chloroform, a hot bath, ice to the head and other remedies I managed to bring the infant around, much to the joy of his grandfather. If the child had died I would have been blamed with killing him, especially as I had dared to use ice, a remedy that the Chinese doctor as the cause of many fatal illnesses.

The native physicians are great benot only does not use but condemns lievers in the efficacy of counter-irritation, which they use in the form of antimonial and arsenical plasters, often creating intractable ulcers, generally both painful and useless. Their fees are exceedingly small, the usual rate in Pekin being about 30 Mexican cents (15 cents), but they frequently make up for this by providing the medicine, for which they charge in proportion to the wealth and credulity of the patient. One patient of mine paid his native doctor 30 cents for his visit and $150 for the velvety fur from a young deer's horns, which was prescribed as medicine.

If the patient recovers he often has a memorial tablet of heavy wood carved in characters setting forth the disease from which he suffered and of which he was marvellously cured by Dr. Wong or any other doctor. This tablet is hung on the wall outside the doctor's residence, and is a lasting testimonial and useful advertisement to his ability, or, more often, good luck. Some doctors have a dozen or more of these large wooden testimonials hung on their walls. A doctor's house which I often pass has boards reading thus:—"His hand touched the life returned." Another: "In diphtheria the only savior." Another: His art is great." Still another: "Due to him I live again." One day in passing this place in a cart with a Chinese friend I pointed to the numerous boards, and said, "That must be one of your great doctors, judging by the number of grateful patients he has cured." "He!" rejoined my companion with scorn. "He had every one of those boards made himself. The people he is supposed to have cured never existed."

Some doctors have recipes that were handed down to them by their ancestors, and keep them in their family, telling only one member in each generation how the nostrum is prepared. Some of these formulas have great local reputations, but they are never widely known. Since the introduction of vaccination by medical missionaries the former terrible ravages of smallpox have been very much abated; but when they cannot get vaccine matter they will vaccinate with condensed milk, believing that the milk of the cow ought to be as good as the serum, especially as its inoculation often produces a sore, due doubtless to germs of a pus-producing character introduced through the abraded surface. Tuberculosis and blood diseases are often spread by means of careless, uncleanly vaccination; but notwithstanding all the uncleanliness and the unscientific methods smallpox has decreased enormously within the last thirty years, and vaccination is thoroughly believed in everywhere.

Western medicine and western methods of treatment of disease are steadily increasing in popularity. They have been introduced by medical missionaries in all the larger cities through free dispensaries and hospitals. The natives in this way have acquired some faith in foreign drugs. Many of the purely native drug stores are now selling certain samples that the masses can use without danger, such as senna, Epsom salts and vaseline. In Shanghai, Hong Kong, Tientsin and Pekin are native drug stores where only western remedies are sold, and where a more or less full stock is carried. The late Li Hung Chang was one of the first converts to a belief in the superiority of western medicine.

MOST WONDERFUL OF PIANO PLAYERS.

The Cecilian

There are many piano-players offered to the public—all said to be perfect. But after having played on the Cecilian Piano-Player it will be at once pronounced the one "Perfect" player The tone is such that people are charmed from the first note.

It is so simple in construction that anyone, without the ability but with the desire to play some of the most classical and difficult compositions of the greatest masters, finds no difficulty whatever when using the Cecilian.

It is completely under the control of the operator, responding to the slightest touch—and the tone can be moderated according as the player desires.

The power of individual expression in the Cecilian is really wonderful—astonishing people whenever it is heard

It has been endorsed by leading musicians in different parts of the country and is the delight of all who know it.

This piano-player is on daily exhibition at our handsome warerooms, and is worthy a visit from every lover of beautiful music.

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

Local Happenings Picked Up Here and There by the Times.

NOTE—The Times requests its readers to contribute items of news to its columns. Anything that is phoned or sent in writing to the office, of a nature suitable for publication, will be received and published.—Ed. Times.]

—The 57th Regiment will probably be inspected at Belleville on the 26th inst.

—The continuous wet weather keeps the lawn mower pretty busy these days.

—The Dragoons will camp at Kingston Tuesday next.

St. Andrew's Young Men's Guild's annual excursion will take place on Coronation Day, June 26th.

—Port Hope will this coming Dominion Day present its usual program of horse races, lacrosse and football match, fireworks, etc.

—Illuminated advertisements of excursions were very much in evidence at Victoria Park last night.

—Frank Wilson assaulted Joe Wilson, and in consequence was fined $5 at the Police Court yesterday evening.

—Mr. Geo A. Duncan has been appointed bandmaster of the newly organized citizens' Band of Millbrook.

—The Woman's Auxiliary of All Saint's Church intend holding a Strawberry Festival on Mrs. J. D. Lundy's grounds, on Thursday, June 19th. Further particulars later.

The 57th Regiment Band gave its second open-air concert of the season in Victoria Park last night. A very large crowd was present, and the programme rendered was up to the usual high standard of excellence, and much appreciated by all present.

—The executive of the Young Men's Guild of St. Paul's church have completed arrangements for their first meeting since organization. The date will be Friday, June 20th. and a good programme will be furnished.

—Messrs. T. Hurley & Co., the leading real estate agents, report business good. Property is increasing in value in Peterborough, which is one of the surest signs of good times.

Hastings Star:—All the fools are not dead yet. For giving support to one of the political parties the Marmora Herald has lost one of its advertisements and several subscriptions. One would think that an editor had no right to express an opinion, if we would take the decision of some people.

—Herbert Kneedan, who lives on the boundary line between Belmont and Methuen townships, recently appeared before County Police Magistrate Edmison at Havelock, charged with stealing the working mechanism of a rifle. The accused can neither read nor write and has never been inside a place of worship. The case was adjourned till a date to be decided on by the Magistrate.

—The anniversary of the opening of the Y.M.C.A. building will be celebrated on Tuesday evening next, June 17th. A good programme will be furnished and refreshments served. The programme will include the names of Miss Belleghem, Miss Hall, Miss Davies, Mr. Legg, Masters Vernon Murphet and Herbet Mowatt and Mr. Gillegley, of Toronto, who will entertain with humourous solos, while instrumentals will be given by Miss Bradd and Mr. Stanley with the Apolle.

—Orillia Times—On Wednesday next, 18th inst., the Peterborough firemen and the band of the 57th Regiment, will excurt to Orillia. The lacrosse club will come along and a game between the old time rivals the Orillia and Peterboroughs will be one of the features of the day here. The Orillia Band and Fire Brigade are making arrangements to entertain the visitors, and the citizens are invited to assist. There will be a big crowd, and the town should give them the glad hand and the smiling countenances also, hang out your bunting and look gay. The band will give one of their splendid concerts in the Opera House in the evening.

—In Woodstock the by-laws have been amended to enable owners of lots where the sidewalk is placed outside the line of trees to sod or sow grass in the portion of street within the sidewalk adjoining such lot, also the portions between the sidewalks and the curb. They are obliged to keep the boulevard adjoining their lot free from thistles and noxious weeds and keep the grass cut and trimmed to the satisfaction of the Parks and Trees Committee. The boulevards may be protected by a fence of a nature such as the committee may prescribe. The boulevards may not be constructed in streets where they will be of inconvenience to the travelling public. Any boulevards already constructed within the provisions of the by-law are to be considered proper boulevards. The council has the power to remove any such boulevards or fence thereon without giving compensation.

Judgment for $175

The case of Sims vs. Lane, which came up in the County Court, resulted in judgment being given for the plaintiff Sims for $175. Mr. A. E. Sims, a baker of town, took action against the defendant, Mary Eleanor Lane, doing business under the name of Lane & Co., to recover $150 damages for alleged breach of contract and $40.35 wages claimed to be owing him. Dennistoun, Peck and Stevenson, plaintiff's solicitors; Stratton and Hall, defendant's solicitors.

A Street Fight

Police constable Adams was summoned to a street fight at the corner of George and Charlotte streets last evening, at 9.15, in which three men were engaged, one an Armenian. On his arrival at the scene the combatants had dispersed. Later on, however, the Armenian put in an appearance at the Police Station, and complained that, without provocation, a certain well-known citizen and seized him by the throat and throttled him. He threatens to swear out a warrant for his assailant's arrest, and the matter may be threshed out before Police Magistrate Dumble this morning.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

NOTE—The Times requests its readers to furnish the paper with items of a personal and social nature either by phone or in writing.—Ed. Times.]

—Miss Annie Hefferman is visiting in Keene.

—Mr. Gliddon's pupils are being examined by Mr. W. H. Fairclough, of the Toronto College of music.

—Miss Violet Foote, who has been visiting her aunt, Mrs. Clarke, of Napanee, has returned home.

—Rev. Father Conway, Pastor of St. Paul's Church, Norwood, has left on a three months' visit to Ireland.

—Mr. Harry Baldwin, who has been visiting Mr. Harry Grubbe, has returned to Toronto.

—The marriage of Miss Mina Fiske, daughter of Mr. J. J. Fiske, to Mr. W. P. Roper, of Montreal, will take place at Coaticook about the middle of the month.—Mail and Empire.

—Orillia Times—Mr. W. Barraclough, who recently sold out his tinshop and business here to Mr. H. T. Andrews, left for Peterborough where he will reside in the future. His Orillia friends wish him every success.

Will Celebrate at Belleville

The 57th Regiment and band have accepted an invitation to spend Coronation Day in Belleville, where elaborate arrangements have been completed for a fitting celebration of His Majesty's coronation. The military and civil authorities of Belleville are sparing no pains to make this event one to be long remembered.

Our local regiment and band will leave on the evening of the 25th and return on the evening of the 27th. The 49th and 15th Regiment will also participate in the day's demonstration.

Detroit Capitalists in Town

The following gentlemen, who are interested in the Peterborough Radial Railway Company, came to town yesterday: Messrs. R. R. Bene, E. F. Glockm and J. J. Cole, all of Detroit. Mr. T. E. Bradburn accompanied the visitors over the route of the proposed extension as agreed to between Mr. Bene and the Town. Now that the principals of the scheme are on the spot we may look forward to work on the local line being proceeded with at once. Peterborough citizens are undoubtedly anxious to see the street cars in operation once more.

We Will Not Answer It.

A reader at Lakefield writes The Times to ask how the original owner of a 100-acre tract, which has been sold for taxes, and from which the timber has been cut, can regain possession. Now, this great family journal could answer this question as well as not, but we might not answer it correctly, and a lawsuit would result. The province maintains a local staff of high-priced officials, of which Mr. D. H. Moore is the head. As it is generally supposed that the agent is not obliged to labor overtime to keep up with his work, a letter addressed to him would probably secure the desired information. At any rate, this g. f.j. don't feel like helping any Government official to earn his salary.

ENJOYED THE LAKES

The Historical Society Delegates Favorably Impressed with the Trent Waters

Secretary Hay, of the Peterborough Historical Society, has received the following letter in reference to the trip taken by the delegates from Ontario Historical Society through the Kawartha Lakes on June 5th:

Peterborough, June 6th 1902.

Messrs. the Trent Valley Navigation Co.
Bobcaygeon:

Gentleman,—The officers and members of the Peterborough Historical Society have asked me to convey to you their sincere thanks for your kindness in providing such excellent service, accommodation and lunch on the steamers "Ogemah" and "Esturion" from Lakefield to Lindsay on the occasion of the annual Convention of the Ontario Historical Society on June 5th.

Very few of the delegates had ever visited the Trent waters before, and one and all frequently expressed their astonishment and delight at the scenery, and the very comfortable and enjoyable means of transportation which has added largely to the success of the Convention.

Yours truly,
(Signed) T. A. S. HAY.
Secretary P. H. Society.

COST OF FOOD

Grape-Nuts vs White Bread, etc.

A family figured carefully on the cost of food, taking into consideration the strength and health that Grape-Nuts furnished. The report is interesting.

"We first took up Grape-Nuts because it agreed with me so well. I was suffering from dyspepsia that medicine did not relieve. I frequently laughed at the idea when some of my friends told of the use of Grape-Nuts; however, one day Wife bought a package and we found it good and it agreed with me.

We were accustomed to using white bread and oats, wheat or barley mushes boiled from two to four hours. We considered Grape-Nuts too expensive, but I noticed that when I had a breakfast of Grape-Nuts I felt fine, and other days when white bread and other cereals were used I felt weak and bloated.

One day about six months ago I said to Wife, 'I am satisfied that Grape-Nuts is the thing that makes me feel better, in between the blue spells.' Then we set down and figured awhile on the cost of living and came to the conclusion that we could live better and happier on fifteen cents worth of Grape-Nuts than on twenty-five cents worth of white bread or "cooked at home" cereals. You see four teaspoonfuls of Grape-Nuts furnish more strength to work on than large quantities of other food, so we started on Grape-Nuts in earnest using it every morning, and a wonderful change has come over me.

I am gaining in weight every day. Never have any of the old bloated feelings. Feel strong and well and can endure more hard work than I could on the old diet and this result is all without any doctor or drugs at all, but directly from using Grape-Nuts." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Recipes for many easy hot weather dishes in each package of Grape-Nuts.

KAWARTHA.

The shades of night were falling fast
When up the Lakes a stranger passed;
To dodge the dangerous rocks at night
This counsel gave he Captain White—
"Use Siche Gas."

"When through 'Hell Gate' the neat Alert
"The 'Devil's Elbow' close would skirt,
"Or shun each rock and snag and shoal
"That in her seeks to punch a hole
"Use Siche Gas."

"Oh, stay—" the Maiden cried—"and rest
"At Burleigh Falls!" "For time I'm pressed—"
He answered "—else with you I'd go
"And in the parlor, turned down low,
"Use Siche Gas."

"But really I've no time to stay
"So we must kiss and—break away,
"But, girlie, when you're safely wed
"I trust you will on your homestead
"Use Siche Gas."

"Try not the pass!" the Purser cried,
"Upon this craft no deadheads ride;"
"Kind Sir, I pay but with advice,
"And take my word,' tis worth the price,
"Use Siche Gas."

"Beware the snaky coiling wire
"That slays with fierce electric fire
"Beware the dangerous kerosene
"And crude old-style acetylene,
"Use Siche Gas."

This was the stranger's last good-night
But ere he vanished from his sight,
On Mate Gray's ear his accents fell
"Does the Mount Julien Hotel
"Use Siche Gas."

Next morning, out in his canoe
Trolling to catch a lunge or two
Fred Morgan found a gripsack old
On which was writ in letters bold
"Use Siche Gas."

"At York Street, Number Eighty-Three
"Particulars are furnished free
"By our Head-Office, in Toronto
"To all good folk, who feel they want to
"Use Siche Gas."

LYNCH RAISED IRISH BRIGADE TO FIGHT BRITISH

In London Police Court Saturday He was Remanded Till June 21--Career of Prisoners

Special to The Times.

London, June 14.—Bow-street Police Court was crowded to-day. The investigation into the charge of high treason, brought against Colonel Arthur Lynch formerly of the Boer army was elected member of parliament for Galway in November last, and who was arrested at New Haven on Wednesday, on landing there from France, was begun. Mrs. Lynch and other friends of the accused were present. The Solicitor General, Sir Edward Carson opened for the prosecution. He referred briefly to Colonel Lynch's Australian nationality, residence in Paris and departure thence to the Transvaal in January, 1900.

RAISED A REGIMENT.

The case of the prosecution," said Sir Edward, "will be that, on arriving in South Africa, Lynch took service with the Transvaal government, raised a regiment, of which he acted as commander, to fight in its behalf, and actively fought against General Buller's operations. Lynch was in Pretoria on January 15, 1900, and wrote to the Transvaal authorities, notifying them of his desire to take up arms. January 18, he signed a field cornet's certificate, describing himself as an Irishman, a British subject and as born in Australia. But he declared his willingness to fight for the South African Republic in order to maintain and defend its independence. Lynch also took the oath of allegiance as a full burgher, the certificate enabling him to do so as well as to accept a commission from the Transvaal government. Lynch then raised the so-called Irish Bridage, joined the invading army in Natal, and issued an appeal, signed 'Arthur Lynch, Colonel, Irish Brigade,' inviting Irishmen to assist the two republics."

DID IT OPENLY.

The Hon. Charles Russell (second son of the late Lord Chief Justice Baron Russell of Killowen), representing the defendant, said that Lynch had faced the proceedings like a man. What he had done, he had done openly, and he desired to facilitate the inquiry as much as possible.

After the police had furnished evidence of the prisoner's arrest, during the course of which Detective Inspector Walsh testified to finding in Lynch's pocket a visiting card of Hamilton Holt, "introducing Colonel Lynch of the Boer army to three Americans—A S Hardy, United States Minister at Berne, Switzerland: Herbert W Bowen, United States Minister to Teheran (now Minister to Venezuela), and Professor Richardson, of the American School at Athens"—and some testimony had been presented regarding Colonel Lynch's presence "on commando" in Natal, the prisoner was remanded to June 21.

CAREER OF PRISONER.

Colonel Lynch is a native of Australia, and, in that country, he made his reputation as an author and a journalist. Prior to his departure for South Africa, he conceived the idea of organizing a regiment on the military principles of Theodore Roosevelt's Rough Riders, and, to that end, he visited the United States and applied to Mr. Roosevelt for full information concerning the tactics, drill and other features of the Rough Riders' organization.

Equipped with this knowledge, the Australian set out for the seat of war in the capacity of a newspaper correspondent. It is said that he was not long on the ground when he joined the Boer force, and became a belligerent. Upon special permission from President Kruger, Mr. Lynch porganized the Second Irish Brigade, which he led in battle under the command of General Botha. His brigade fought valiantly, covering the retreat through Johannesburg and Pretoria.

On the fall of the Boer capital, the brigade was disbanded, and its commander left South Africa and went to Paris.

While he was leading his command in South Africa, Colonel Lynch was nominated for parliament, and was elected in November by an overwhelming majority, in the City of Galway District, in which he was running. At this time Mr. Lynch was in Paris. He issued an address to his constituents, in which he promised that when he took his seat he would do all in his power to promote the industrial prosperity of Ireland, and would endeavor to secure for the port of Galway a steamship line, which would ply between Ireland and the United States.

This address was pacific in tone, and was evidently written in all sincerity and without the slightest indication that Mr. Lynch considered himself ineligible for a seat in the British legislature.

Since that time, he has been carefully watched by the Scotland Yard Police. It was his first intention to smuggle himself into the House of Commons, and take the oath before the authorities could lay hands on him.

MORGAN IGNORES FRENCH LINES

Regards Them as a Negligable Quantity in His Schemes

Special to The Times.

London, June 14.—The Times Paris correspondent quotes an interview with a Government authority, who asserts that while J. Pierpont Morgan was in Paris he made no effort to see the officers of the French steamship companies, though representatives of the companies informed Ambassador Porter that they were ready to communicate with him. It is believed that Morgan thought fit to treat the French ship-owners as a negligable quantity. The authority declares that the French lines have already lost heavily through the combination. The Messageries Martime lost trade at Genoa and Leghorn, while the Trans-Atlantic in a few hours lost three-quarters of its passenger traffic. The trans-Atlantic companies were debarred from having enormous shipments because they could not enter Havre, while the big Hamburg steamships transfer passengers to the five steamboats at Cherbourg and Kuthr you almost without stopping. The Trans-Atlantic companies have lately ceased to declare dividends, employing profits in basing a sinking fund. In order to obtain the speed demanded by the Government they have been obliged to use Cardiff coal, the price of which has risen to such an extent as to increase expenses $1,000,000 yearly. When they tried to make landings at Plymouth some years ago they were exposed to so many petty annoyances that they were compelled to abandon the plan. The authority expresses the hope that Morgan's operations will open the eyes of the Government and induce it to protect shipping interests and France's general trade.

EDISON'S PRESENT AMBITION

It is to Make an Automobile Possible for Everybody

New York, June 14.—There is a street in Orange on which there are exactly eighty houses. To two of these establishments stables are attached. The other seventy-eight give no outward evidence of possessing other means of transportion for pleasure or business than the occasionally hired vehicle, the gentlemen may representatives of ever ready street cars or the legs of the persons who reside there.

If this array of facts seems to be commonplace, consider. It has led to the production of an invention which will go far toward revolutionizing modern methods of transportation. Incidentally, it has given another lesson on the value of close observation.

This statement as to the number of houses on this street in Orange is given on the authority of Thomas A. Edison, who told a Sun man the other day that he had counted them himself.

Moreover, said Mr. Edison the houses were erected at a cost ranging from perhaps $4,000 to about $12,000, or perhaps a little more. They rent for from $50 a month to twice and a half that.

Therefore they are occupied by men who do not enjoy incomes so large as to enable them to contribute to the establishment of public libraries or, except in the two cases cited, even to take their families on what the lamented Samantha Allen called "pleasant exertions" in their own "phantoms."

To the ordinary man it seems a far cry from such statistics about houses, their construction and their occupants to storage batteries, but according again to Mr. Edison it was the contemplation of the facts he had observed about this Orange street that spurred him on to the endeavor which resulted in the construction of the battery he is now preparing to submit to tests which he hopes will be final.

Mr. Edison believes that every man desires to ride around in open vehicles for the fun of the thing, or at least likes to have his family do it. The only reason there is not a barn on every one of the eighty lots on the street where he made his count is that the residents in the houses there cannot afford the expense.

Thereupon Mr. Edison takes up a yellow pad and a pencil and drawing a diagram of a building plot sets aside a little space in one corner for the barn and begins to calculate the cost of keeping a horse.

"First place," he says, "there is the man. You can't have a horse unless you keep a man to look after it. You have to feed and uniform the man, as well as pay him, to say nothing of feeding the horse.

"And then there is the veterinary surgeon and the horseshoer, and they all keep coming around.

"Now an automobile doesn't cost anything for food, and you run it yourself and don't have to hire a man, and there are no doctors coming around and horseshoers or that sort of thing. All you need is a little shed in a back yard that won't cost $30 to put up, and there you are."

Which explains one reason why Mr. Edison pursued the automobile. He says it is not his intention as yet to undertake to do anything with his new storage battery except to use it in automobiles. When that service has been developed to a satisfactory point it will be time to consider other things which may be done.

As for the battery itself, that is something else. To begin with it is not a storage battery, or at least Mr. Edison is not yet ready to call it one.

A storage battery, he says, ought to be like a gasometer, just as good after ten year's wear and use as it is when new. But the practice is just the reverse.

Nowadays storage batteries, so-called, do not last a year. They wear out. He has one at his place in Llewelly which has been used on an automobile for less than a year and it is so nearly used up now that it will not move the machine on the floor, to say nothing of taking it over a country road.

Besides, says Mr. Edison all the books say that storage batteries must be made with lead. It is impossible, according to the books, to make such a battery without lead. The new battery, however, uses only steel and nickel. Therefore, it cannot be a storage battery, for the books are right.

So far then, as the experiments with it have done, Mr. Edison is ready only to call his battery a primary battery, although it has shown some results that seem to indicate that it will be more permanent than the ordinary so-called storage battery now in commercial use. A small one, for instance has been in operation in the factory at Llewellyn for something more than a year.

It has been charged and discharged 676 times. Recently it was examined under a microscope and also weighed. No change whatever could be detected by the microscope, and the weighting showed that it had not lost one tenth of a milligram.

Tests have been made also with the battery in an automobile, and next week there will be more extensive ones. Recently a battery was fitted into a light runabout and two men were sent out to see what it would do.

They chose a rough road, for, says Mr Edison, it is no test of the machine to have it run well on the floor. They went over grades that ranged between 2 and 12 per cent.

The battery was expected to furnish power for seventy miles. When they had made sixty-two miles they returned to the factory. The battery had not run down and had lost only 17 per cent. of its power.

The next day another test was made. As before, the battery was charged for seventy miles. This time the run was over a smooth road and was continued until the machine ran down. Eighty-five miles was covered, fifteen more than had been expected.

In the tests which are to be made next week five automobiles will be used. They will be subjected to every test to which such a machine can be put on the road.

In all, 5,000 miles will be covered. If then no defeats develop which will require further experiment to remedy, the new battery will be manufactured for sale.

The battery will be made in different sizes, 20, 40 and 80-mile power. A 20-mile battery is a small thing, about a foot and a half long and six inches or so square. In the steel case there are twenty-one cells. It can be charged easily and quickly and cheaply.

The people who live in the seventy-eight barnless houses which have been such an eyesore and yet an inspiration to Mr. Edison will then have their chance to put up the sheds in the back yard and go touring for their amusement in their own automobiles.

RUSH FOR LANDS

A Great Stampede Likely to Take Place To-morrow

Special to The Times.

Pocatello, June 16.—Tomorrow the rush for lands of the Fort Hall Indian reservation will be made. The boundaries of the reserve are lined with people ready to make a dash for the land, while some have gone so far as to squat right on the reservation, determined to hold the ground at all hazards. This is the result of the decision of the general land office to open the lands under the old "rush" system, instead of under the lottery plan as was adopted by the last land opening in the Indian Territory. The entries have all been made at the Blackfoot land office and the start will be made at noon tomorrow.

The opening involves nearly 400,000 acres ceded to the government by the Shoshone and Bannock Indians. It is estimated that about 300,000 acres are agricultural or grazing lands, which will be entered under homestead, lumber, stone and mineral laws, and all of these lands will be for persons who are first in the rush. That part of the reservation lying within five miles of this place is exempted from the general opening tomorrow, and will be sold at public auction at noon July 17.

Invade London

Special to The Times.

London, June 16.—The officials of Scotland Yard and the Metropolitan Police openly express fear of their inability to cope with the many thieves of all descriptions who have invaded London for the coronation, and a statement has been issued to the public asking residents and visitors alike to exercise the utmost vigilance in guarding their personal property during the next four weeks. The citizens of London are especially warned against leaving their homes unguarded on the day of the coronation parade. The authorities believe that the invasion of crooks will be much larger than at the time of the Queen's Jubilee. The belief is based on the fact that a large advance guard of the gentry has already put in an appearance. The thieves of high and low degree confidence men, badger workers, pick-pockets and others who live by their nerve and wits believe that there will be rich picking during the coronation exercises, and they evidently want to be on the ground early.

Not only have they come from all parts of Great Britain, but from all over Europe and America as well. Of these undesirable visitors the most feared are those of America, who have long enjoyed an international reputation for their extreme cleverness and boldness in plying their nefarious trade. The Americans are considered particularly clever as hotel thieves and pickpockets. As a rule they are more intelligent and of better appearance than their European brethren and consequently it is more difficult to detect them. The London authorities rely greatly on the aid of outside detectives in running down the crooks. New York, Berlin, Paris and other large foreign cities have sent some of their best men. They re supposed to be acquainted with the expert thieves of their respective cities and will take them into custody on sight, to be kept under lock and key until after the close of the coronation festivities. Scotland Yard loudly work by lack of sufficient funds and and an extraordinary appropriation is now under advisement to provide for the proper protection of distinguished visitors now assembling in the metropolis.

Important Order by Russia.

Special to The Times.

St. Petersburg, June 14.—In official circles it is hoped that the prevailing discontent throughout the empire will be diminished perceptibly be the re- be diminished perceptibly by the remission of the arrears of taxes from the peasantry. It has been decided by the council of state to remit the amount of $12,500,000 and the ukase will be promulgated tomorrow, which is the feast of Trinity, by M. de Plochwe, Minister of the Interior.

Items of Interest

New York, June 12. — A cable from London to the Tribune says:

Col. Denison is moving too rapidly and talking too freely to suit the views of some colonials. Dr. Borden, Canadian Minister of Militia, now here for the coronation, has remarked to me: "Without reference to the merits or disadvantages of the zollverein policies advocated by Col. Denison, I have this to say, namely, that he does not represent Canada or the Dominion Ministry, but himself alone. He has no authority to speak for Canada."

Col. Denison has made a marked impression here by advocating a special tariff on all foreign goods at all British ports for Imperial defence, and Australians are showing signs of resistance to the zollverein proposals, and are contending that the plan is impracticable, since it will be unjust to ask Britain to tax herself heavily for the benefit of the colonies. If Sir Wilfrid Laurier and the Canadian Ministers are as cool and critical as Dr. Borden, Col. Denison can have little hope of influencing the conference of colonial Premiers, especially with Sir Michael Hicks-Beach as a heavy drag on the wheels of State.

The shipping question appeals more directly to Englishmen than a policy of free trade within the Empire and a common tariff outside. A well-informed Dominion official told me yesterday that no decisive action had yet been taken, but that there were strong grounds for the belief that the British Government was preparing to join Canada in an effective subsidy policy.

Spanish War Memorial.

Special to The Times.

Rochester, N.Y., June 14—Rear Admiral Coghlan and other distinguished visitors took part today in the unveiling and dedication of the Spanish war memorial in Highland Park. The memorial consists of a Spanish gun captured at the Battle of Manila Bay, to which brass tablets suitably inscribed have been affixed.

The exercises took place this afternoon and an immense gathering was in attendance. The dedication was preceded by a parade of Grand Army veterans and other marching organizations. Mayor Rodenbeck accepted the memorial on behalf of the city and addresses were delivered by Rev. Rob Roy Converse, D.D., and others.

DANGERT AND PERILS AHEAD

Paine's Celery Compound

Purifies the Blood, Fortifies the System and Provides That Vigorous Health That Resists Disease In the Hot Weather

The deadly dangers and perils of the hot weather will soon be with us.

The weak, nervous, sleepless, rundown, rheumatic, neuralgic, and those burdened with diseases resulting from impure and stagnant blood, will be sure victims of the enervating weather; they will be the first to be cut down by pestilence and epidemics.

Are you, dear reader, properly fortified in health and strength to meet the coming perils and dangers of the heated term? If not, make preparation at once for banishing the troubles that are a positive source of danger in July and August.

If Paine's Celery Compound be used at once it will give you pure, fresh blood, strong nerves, new strength and vitality and an increase in firm flesh and muscle. If you are weak, ailing, sleepless and despondent, we urge you to try the invigorating virtues of one bottle of Paine's Celery Compound. In these June days the great medicine will bring you the happiest results. Be wise today, delay not the good work.

17,000 BOERS WILL SURRENDER TO BRITISH

General Kitchener Reports the Surrender of 1,817 Boers Yesterday

Special to The Times.

London, June 14.—The Times' correspondent at Pretoria says the surrender of another four or five thousand Boers is expected on Monday. It is evident the total surrender will be near the estimate of 17,000, made by Botha during the negotiations. The totals include a good many boys and old men, scarcely considered for fighting purposes. The great friendliness which is arising between Boers and British is undoubtedly due to some extent to the revulsion of feeling, which came naturally after the extreme discomforts of campaign. There is little question that had there been no negotiations for peace the war could not have lasted many weeks longer. The Boers were evidently approaching the last stages of exhaustion. The ruggedness of many commandoes is almost indescribable, and to see Boer warriors scramble for sugar served out by the authorities, and eat it like bread, was enough to convince one of their previous privations. The only persons against whom the Boers were included to show any feelings are those who served in the National Scouts. With the end of military difficulties, the problems facing Lord Milner are rapidly springing up on every side. The organization of civil government over the vast area through it has long been prepared for it means a great rush of work. Repatriation of the Boers and their settlement on land such as the British disbanded. Troops are anxious to take up involve work. The complexity of which it is almost impossible to realize. The Export Association of British has issued a circular urging that all members join a syndicate of manufacturers which has been formed for the purpose of sending out capable commercial travellers to South Africa. The circular states that there is good reason to believe that the Government will subsidize the scheme.

OVER 1,800 BOERS COME IN.

London, June 14.—Lord Kitchener reported to the War Office to-day that 1,817 Boers surrendered yesterday in the Transvaal, Orange River and Cape Colonies.

JAPAN S OFFER ACCEPTED

Britain, Germany and France Agrees to Arbitrate a Dispute

Special to The Times.

Tokio, May 26, via San Francisco, June 14.—It is announced here that Sir Claude MacDonald, British Minister, and Count Von Arco-Valey, the German Minister, have notified the Japanese Government that their respective Government have accepted Japan's offer arbitration of the house tax portion of the treaty property question, while urging submission thereto of all the remaining points in the revised treaties, which are in doubt. Japan, however, is said to be firm in declining to extend the scope of arbitration. England, Germany and France are now included in the foreign parties to arbitration, America not being included, but coming in for the benefits of the appeal under the most favored nation clause. The Netherlands Government has signified its intention of not joining in arbitration but of abiding by its decision. The question which foreigners here desired settled is the right of Japanese to tax property, i.e., property exempted from taxation by special treaty. They are not likely to have the whole question settled at this time, but consider that a decided victory on a portion by securing arbitration on a portion of the vexed questions. The Japanese Bar Association has decided that the house tax is rightly levied on foreigners residing in the treaty reservations.

KILLED THREE GUARDS AND GAINED FREEDOM

Two Desperate Prisoners Escaped From Oregon Penitentiary

A POSSE AT THEIR HEELS

An Exciting Time in the State Prison—Men Will Be Recaptured

Salem, Ore, June 16.—Three guards at the State penitentiary were killed and one prisoner seriously wounded this morning by two desperate prisoners. Harry Tracy, a 20-year man, and David Merril, a thirteen-year man, and who were taking long chances for freedom. They escaped, and a posse of forty men is scouring the country near by for them, headed by Sheriff Durbin and Sheriff-elect Golbath.

The killed are Frank Ferrel, shop guard and S. R. Jones and Ben Tiffany, fence men. The wounded man is a life prisoner named Infram, who tried to snatch the rifle from Tracy while he was doing his deadly work.

It was 7 a.m., and the prisoners had just been marched from the cells to the foundry for their day's work when Tracy suddenly appeared with a rifle. Taking deliberate him, he shot Ferrell, who expired almost instantly. Ingram tried to snatch the rifle, and Merrill fired at him point blank. Ingram fell with a shattered leg.

Merril had whipped out a pistol and stood at Tracey's side. The two, pointing their weapons at the rest of the cowed prisoners, forced them to raise a ladder to the wall. Once outside they shot Jones, who was guarding the wall at a distance of 150 yards. Another shot hit Tiffany. Slightly wounded, he jumped down from his lofty perch and ran after the two escaping prisoners, firing as he ran.

Tracy turned, aimed coolly and with one shot killed Tiffany. Then the two escaped to the woods. To-night it is believed that the posse, which started out promptly, has the men surrounded and that their capture is but a matter of a few hours.

EENY, MEENY POETRY

Some of the Verses that put one in Mind of Youthful Days

To be Heard Almost Any Night in the Outskirts of the Town Where Children Romp and Play

Now when the windows are up, toward nightfall, especially if you happen to life in the outskirts of Peterborough, you may hear some of the wonderful, mysterious and far diffused poetry of childhood, the works of the Eeny, Meeny school, chanted by lively young rhapsodists. For example, the classic

"Eeny, meeny, miny, mo
Catch a nigger by the toe,
If he hollers, let him go,
Eeny, meeny, miny, mo."

There are variants such as "If he hollers let him go. Make him holler "Miny mo!". Invention is not absolutely dead in the case of these hallowed counting out rhymes, to our thinking among the most curious products of the human mind and reasoning in their frequent unintelligently, their deformation of phrases, or words once having a meaning, and their strange refrains the characteristics of ancient and even magical song. Obviously they are built up from the refrain, and so they are very near to the origin of poetry as some writers see it. And they are much more filling and satisfactory than most of the more aspiring and sophisticated verse. They stick to the memory like leeches. How can we forget such a masterpiece as

"Eeny, meeny, mony, mi,
Tuska, liner, beter, sip,
Huldy, guldy, bool!"

The "bool" comes out like a cannon ball. The collectors and students of this hide-and-seek poetry have a wide and pleasant field; and their labors, like those of the masters of the vast wealth of popular tales and ballads throw a brilliant light upon the essential unity in diversity of the human race.

The Times has been listening to the children count-out, and comparing their rhymes with the older versions. Take this vigorous reading of a noble poem:

"One-ery, two-ery, ickery Ann,
Phillison, phollison, Nicholas John
Quevy, quavy, English navy
Stinkum, stankum, buck!"

The final line may be a little too Swift-like, but what a rattling gait the stanza has! The American version is an improvement upon the English original, quoted above.

"Winnery, ory, occory, han,
Philliey, phollist, Nicholas, jam;
Queby, quorby, Irish Mary,
Stickery, sank, sock!"

Phillison, phollison, Nicholas, John: we are almost ready to back that line against any other in the language. From what wellhead come these mighty bucketfuls of sound? And here, in what is called "the most popular jingle of all" in Indiana, Lewis Carrol, seems to be speaking:

"Eeny, meeny, miny, mo, crachafeeny, finy, fo; Opitoojer, popitoojer, rick, bick, ban, do."

—Opitoojer, popitoojer—O, the grand words! Where do the children get em? In Louisiana the jinglers have equally grand words, such as "ominoucha," "popitoucha," words with a bewitching bedevilling suggestion of bayous, alligators and the Kalevala-Hiawatha metre. In other parts of the South there are such treasures as "appaloochee," "popalloochee," which sound remarkably like the names of Alabama rivers. From the Pacific Province comes this chant, altogether "unknown in the East," worthy to be known everywhere.

"Ching, Chong, Chinamen,
How do you sell your fish?
Ching, Chong, Chinaman,
Six bits a dish;
Ching, Chong, Chinaman,
Oh, that is too dear;
Ching, Chong, Chinaman,
Clear right out of here!

Michigan is said to be the parent of this alliterative quatrain:

"Bolika, bubilka, devil-a-ct,
Bolika, bubilka, jelilka, lot;
Red black blood of big black man,
Bolika, bubilka, Kukilus Klan."

This seems somewhat artificial, conscious and mature. It is scarcely up to the standard of the Eeny, Meeny school.

WHAT INDEPENDENT BUSINESS MEN THINK

A conference of the Boards of Trade of the Dominion was held at Toronto recently at which there were 120 delegates from different parts of Canada. It need scarcely be added that these gentlemen were representatives of the best business interests of the respective districts from which they hailed, and it is fair to assume that it would be difficult to get together a more intelligent and independent body of men who are engaged in commerce or finance in Canada. Under the circumstances it is significant that the subject of trade relations within the Empire, presented by the Montreal Board of Trade, in the form of a resolution affirming that Great Britain can best serve the interests of the Empire by giving the produces of her colonies a preference in her markets, as against the products of foreign countries, should have been enthusiastically adopted. Some of the speakers seemed to want the Mother Country to make a definite discrimination in favor of Canadian food products, but this suggestion, it was perceived, would seem very ungracious coming from Canada. The broad proposal was, therefore, made that Britain should discuss with the colonies, through delegates, the preferential treatment of imports from various parts of the Empire, and this was agreed to be recommended. A wordy contest developed over the proposal of the St. John Board of Trade to ask the government to allow the existing preferential duty on British goods only when they were imported directly through a Canadian port. It was pointed out that this attempt to force trade into a particular channel could not succeed, and Mr. Hathaway, the mover, eventually withdrew his original motion and accepted that of Mr. Munroe, of Montreal, "that in order to encourage the importation of British goods in Canada this conference desires that the preferential rebate of goods arriving by United States ports be limited to 25 per cent."

ENGLAND'S GENEROSITY

While there is no warrant for the statement that history does not prove England to have been particularly generous to a foe at the close of a war, there is some ground for the complaint that she sometimes overdoes the generosity.

When the war with the revolting colonists in North America led to the establishment of independence, the British people poured money and population into the new nation and built it up in a way that they had never attempted to do their own colonies, the excessive friendliness naturally tended to make the new nation regard themselves as the greatest nation on earth.

This friendliness was greatly misunderstood and little appreciated by the people of the early days of the Republic. This is to be found in the fact that when England had her hands full with a heavy undertaking on the continent, the United States made an excuse to declare war, and invaded Canada, with a premeditated intention of adding this country to their own. When the conquest war was over, England handed back to them the State of Michigan and the State of Maine, which had been captured by the Canadian and English forces during the period of trouble. Instead of showing any new friendship for Canada for remaining true to the flag in the dark days, the English even more than ever aided the United States—our rivals, in the way of investing capital there and giving them their own way.

Ever since the revolutionary war, England has smilingly given the United States her way in almost every territorial or other dispute. Small wonder that there should have grown up an immense number who actually believe the fairy tale that England is afraid of the United States.

It is only of comparatively recent years that it began to dawn on the mass of people in the neighboring country that England's course was dictated by real friendship and not fear. All the same, we cannot help thinking, sometimes, how much more advanced this Canada of ours would have been had it been receiving as much and as substantial aid all these years as did the colonies which shook off their allegiance.

BOER COMMON SENSE

Doubt of the good faith of the Boers is doubt of their common sense. When they began the war just closed they had a fair fighting chance of success—a much better chance than Britain dreamed. If there had been the prompt rising of the Cape Dutch on which they calculated, they might indeed, have driven the British to the sea to begin with; and then they had in their favor all the chances that complications might occur elsewhere which would compel Britain to draw off her forces before she had time to win her way slowly through to Pretoria.

But now, with Britain in possession of the Boer country, and no independent nucleus to devote its revenues to the accumulation of arms, and no free population to prepare for war in their own territory unhindered, it would be a mad folly for the Boers to rise against British rule. And the longer that British rule lasts the more convinced will they become that their is nothing in British rule to justify such a rising.

WILL PROBABLY CONTINUE

The Liberals in Ontario will probably be able to continue in power, but it must be admitted that the voters show a changed feeling—so changed a feeling, indeed, as to almost realize an overturn. The machine was powerful and ubiquitous; the men in power had the keys of the treasury; human methods were employed with effect; and Mr. Ross can go to England feeling that he can still command a large majority. A government which has been so long in power controls almost every agency which can appeal to the voter. A whole generation has grown up accustomed to a condition of things which seems as necessary as the seasons. Ramified political machinery has been set on foot, an array of men have been drawing government pay; thousands have looked to the government for a living. All these make for entrenchment in power. It would need a great dynamic force to uproot a system, which comes at last to have all the force of an institution. A very considerable body of opinion has gone on record in favor of the Conservatives, but the revulsion has not been overwhelming, and it must be overwhelming to crush a party which can count upon the "interested" support of so many men throughout the province—of men who, in turn, can influence the votes of the majority of the people.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

There will be many histories of the war, but the final history will not be written for many years to come. When it is written, it will be perfectly frank but the men concerned in the war will be all, or nearly all, dead. You cannot say the brutal thing when the man about whom you are saying it — or wanting to say it—is at your elbow, the hero of the mob will shrink, the modest fellow will have his worth appraised; the general who was acclaimed will be found fallible and inept enough. But this history, when it is written, will be profoundly interesting. It will throw a flood of light upon much that is obscure. Above all, it will give credit to the Boers for the stand they made, although it will condemn the ambition of Kruger and Steyn, who were primarily responsible for precipitating the conflict.

* * * *

The curious fact has developed that whenever the Governor-General is absent from Canada, even only for a day, his pay is deducted. On the present occasion when he visits England by the King's command, the loss of pay to Lord Minto for his two months' absence will amount to over $8,000. This will go to his locum tenens, Sir Henry Strong.

* * * *

The fact that not a single passenger was killed on an English railway last year is a gratifying showing. It does not mean, however, that there were no train accidents. In all 11 persons, railway employees, were killed, and 637 were injured of whom 476 were passengers. None of the injuries were known to have been fatal. There was a considerable mortality and a large number of casualties on or about railways due to other causes than train accidents. For these, grade crossings were chiefly responsible and almost to as great an extent was unauthorized trespass upon right of way.

Condition of Wheat Crop

Special to The Times.

Chicago, Ill., June 15.—Advices received this week from all sections of the wheat belt indicate that the yield generally will be larger than at first anticipated. In important wheat growing states the reduction in acreage compared with last year is not so great as earlier reports indicated. This is especially true in the great Spring wheat states of the Northwest. Through the Winter wheat belts of the middle states a yield nearly as large as last year is reported from most quarters. In Kansas and many points South the yield of the enormously reduced acreage will be larger than at first indicated. Abundant rains have fallen and from all sections come reports that while the straw is short, the growing grain is heading up very heavy, and an excellent product is expected. So far there is no trouble from insects.
